#1.00 Application To Amend Or Expand Employment Of Ringstad & Sanders LLP, As General Bankruptcy Counsel For Chapter 7 Trustee, Karen Sue Naylor

Docket 2757

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/27/20:

The opposing parties apparently advance three arguments, none of which is compelling.

1. The Firm has failed to maintain ongoing disclosures, particularly its relationship with Trustee.
2. Trustee has not and cannot demonstrate the cause required to hire her own law firm.
3. The Firm is not entitled to fees for trustee services

The first argument is not compelling because, as explained in the Reply, Trustee and the Firm have disclosed that Trustee is a partner in the Firm, and that fact has been fully disclosed in the Application, and on multiple occasions in this case since she joined the Firm on April 1, 2018. Specifically, Trustee points out that such a disclosure was made explicitly in the Sanders declaration attached to the application. The relationship is again established in Exhibit 2 of the Application, the Firm profile. Several fee applications in this case have also disclosed the relationship. Shenson received copies of the applications. In short, the Trustee's relationship with the Firm is common knowledge amongst the parties. This allegation is meritless.

The second argument is also not compelling. Again, the Reply effectively rebuts the allegation that Trustee has failed to demonstrate cause to hire her own firm as counsel. On page 8 of the Application, the Trustee discussed the factors demonstrating "cause" as outlined in In re Butler Investments, Inc., 114 B.R. 695 (Bankr.C.D.Cal.1990), which include as examples: (1) the estate's assets consist primarily of causes of action such as preferences or fraudulent conveyances; (2) there is little legal work to be done; (3) there is an immediate need for legal work to be done; or (4) the trustee can demonstrate that the appointment will result in a substantial reduction of costs to the estate. Id. At 699 fn.1. Although the Application does not involve an exhaustive demonstration that the Firm can meet the Butler factors, the Application does state that it is intimately familiar with the case and there will be no "learning curve," which will reduce costs to the estate, which should be obvious. The Reply expands on this point, but the court should be satisfied that the Trustee has demonstrated sufficient cause consistent with Butler.

Finally, the argument that the Firm should not receive fees for Trustee work is also not compelling. As noted in the Reply, the opposition appears to take issue with language in the Application to effect that any and all fees sought will be subject to the court's approval. In any case, as Trustee notes, what constitutes "trustee services" can vary based upon the facts and circumstances of a specific case. Trustee also notes that the character of services sometimes cannot be determined until after the services are rendered. Apparently, the point of this portion of the opposition is to imply some kind of conflict of interest. But, as Trustee notes, all fees are subject to court approval, which should be considered a sufficient safeguard for the opposing parties.

In sum, none of the arguments advanced by the opposing parties hold much water. Trustee has sufficiently demonstrated cause to hire the Firm and/or expand the scope of its representation.

Grant.

#9.00 Confirmation Of Chapter 11 Plan
(set from 4-08-20 discl stmt hrg)

Docket 66

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/27/20:

This is the hearing on confirmation of debtor's plan. It is opposed in objections filed by two creditors.

A. Bryson

The first objection comes from judgment creditor from Class 2E, Stephanie Bryson ("Bryson"). Bryson obtained a judgment against Debtor in the amount of $270,658.85. Bryson has liens on two properties located in Massachusetts, the Chandler property and the Adams property. The Chandler property was valued at $775,000 (though Bryson values it at $795,000). The Adams property was valued at $978,300 (Bryson values it at $1,240,000).

The plan proposes to pay off debt of $330,386.91 (as of 10/22/19) over a period of 180 months, with monthly "interest only" payments of $1,376.61, then a balloon payment of $330,386.91 at the end of the plan.

Bryson argues that the plan does not satisfy the best interest of creditors test. Bryson does not believe that the Debtor's liquidation analysis is accurate, due partly to the undervaluing of the encumbered properties. If Bryson's fair market valuations are used instead of Debtor's, then the result is a net positive instead of negative. Bryson concedes that after administrative costs were factored in a chapter 7 liquidation there would still be nothing left for unsecured creditors, whereas the current plan provides for at least some recovery for unsecured creditors. Despite this fact, Bryson argues that the plan still cannot be considered fair and equitable.

Specifically, Bryson argues that the 5% interest rate contemplated in the plan is not adequate to account for the risks involved. Bryson is not a lender and her Massachusetts judgment accrues interest at 12% per year. Bryson asserts that she could foreclose on the Massachusetts properties, which would pay the judgment debt in full. Bryson asserts that the plan also has feasibility issues, and the interest rate must be adjusted to account for that risk.

Bryson asserts that the plan relies on rental income from two properties in Massachusetts. Any unplanned or prolonged vacancy throws the plan into doubt. Furthermore, Bryson asserts that Debtor's financial history suggests that her projected income is optimistic to say the least. The properties are also old and may need repairs over the life of the plan. Those repairs could come at significant cost, which again, would jeopardize the plan. The supplement to the Bryson opposition states that Debtor is including a $16,000 annual bonus from her employer, Clean Energy. However, it appears that the bonus will be in the form of stock, not cash. Thus, Bryson concludes that the plan is simply not feasible and should not be confirmed. Not raised by Bryson, but of concern to the court, is what happens at the end of 180 months on the balloon? One imagines that the debtor will either refinance or sell, but the prospect of so doing should at least be explained. Interest-only, non-amortizing lien treatments are inherently riskier than fully amortizing. This is because the creditor is never put in a position of comfort on its principal, but always hangs on the precipice. There may be a further complication here in that Massachusetts rate of interest on judgment liens is reported to be 12%, which means that the balance will actually increase over time, unless it is intended that the cramdown rate supplant the state judgment rate. That point needs clarification and briefing.

This is not inherently unconfirmable, but the fundamental precept is that the risks imposed must be fully paid. In the court's view, 5% is too low to accomplish "present value" under §1129(b)(2)(A) considering this point and that

Bryson appears to be in second position, with little or no cushion. See In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Debtor argues for the prime plus approach found in Till and argues that North Valley Mall is distinguishable. But her argument is not convincing. What is the principled difference between a judgment lien and a defaulted loan? They are both 'allowed secured claims' and that is what the Code requires be given present value if paid over time. Debtor confuses resort to market data to help analyze what is present value (an economic concept informed by data) with the fact that most data available happens to originate in the loan marketplace. That is because lenders consult varied data when deciding whether to extend credit, and many factors such as collateral value and creditworthiness go into the analysis. That is a process done before the fact. But that does not change the fact that both are secured claims being paid over time so their origin seems immaterial after the fact where the court in cramdown analysis is asked to make a determination of factors in situations where no real market exists. Even if the court could be persuaded that the Till approach (which was after all about a truck loan and seemingly even less relevant) were correct, a 1.75% adjustment is still way too low.

B. U.S. Bank National Association

The real property that is the subject of this Objection is located at 33 Chandler Street, Newton, MA 02458 (the "Property"). Creditor holds a security interest in the Property as evidenced by a Note and Mortgage executed by the Debtor. Said Note and Mortgage are attached to Creditor's proof of claim (the "Proof of Claim") which was filed in the instant case as Claim No. 5-1. The Proof of Claim provides for a secured claim in the amount of $590,127.29. This amount has increased since the petition date as interest has accrued and Creditor has made post-petition escrow advances to protect its interest in the Property. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is

$617,465.04. Creditor's claim is treated in the Plan under Class "2B." The Plan provides that the Debtor will pay Creditor's claim the amount of $590,127.29, over 360 months (30 years) at 4.625% interest, with equal monthly payments of $3,034.08.

The Plan fails to provide for maintenance of property insurance and timely payment of property taxes. The Plan should specify whether Debtors intend to maintain property insurance and tax payments directly or through establishment of an escrow account with Creditor. Creditor has advanced approximately $7,597.52 for post-petition property taxes on account of the Property. The Plan does not provide for reimbursing Creditor for such advances which were made post-petition for the benefit of the estate. Such advances qualify as administrative expenses and must be cured on or before the effective date of the plan.

The Plan indicates that the value of the Property is $775,000.00. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is $617,465.04. The plan provides for a total secured claim in the reduced amount of $590,127.29. As the plan fails to provide for the full amount of Creditor's secured claim, Debtor's Plan cannot be confirmed as is, and the portion that is payable as an administrative claim must be dealt with.

C. Conclusion

The objections raise some good points regarding feasibility. According to Bryson, Debtor's own financial data demonstrate that she will not be able to make good on the plan payments. This plan appears to have a very (perhaps overly) optimistic outlook on Debtor's finances. Further, expenditures that may be necessary are not addressed at all, like insurance, maintenance, and the fact that there may be a $7597.52 administrative claim.

Chapter 11

Debtor points out that Bryson has not provided any analysis as to what the appropriate interest rate would be. Debtor also points out that under the plan, unsecured creditors get at least some recovery, whereas in a liquidation, they would receive nothing. While, of course, the court wants unsecured creditors to get something, this does not substitute for the fact that it is debtor's burden to prove not only feasibility, but that cramdown treatment is providing the present value of the objecting secured claims and that this plan is better than liquidation. This has not been done. Furthermore, Debtor asserts that the First Amended Plan provides that all secured creditors encumbering the Rental Properties will receive deferred cash payments totaling the allowed amount of their claims while retaining their liens on the Rental Properties. But this assertion is devoid of analysis and, on a true present value basis, probably wrong. As Debtor's plan seems to be premised on everything going as planned over the 15 (or even thirty) years of this Chapter 11 plan, with little or no wiggle room, and while not even apparently dealing with all likely expenses, the court requires Debtor to answer Bryson's concerns about feasibility. Given the current economic climate, Debtor should account for the realistic probability of sustained occupancy in the rental properties as well as her own employment prospects.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

The purpose of a disclosure statement is "to give all creditors a source of information which allows them to make an informed choice regarding the approval or rejection of a plan." Duff v. U.S. Trustee (In re California Fidelity, Inc.), 198 B.R. 567, 571 (9th Cir. BAP 1996). "Adequate information" is defined under 11 U.S.C. Sec. 1125(a)(1) as "information of a kind, and in sufficient detail, as far as is reasonably practicable in light of the nature and history of the debtor and the condition of the debtor's books and records, that would enable a hypothetical reasonable investor typical of holders of claims or interest of the relevant class to make an informed judgment about the plan, but adequate information need not include such information about any other possible or proposed plan."

Bryson's objections notwithstanding (though feasibility seems questionable), the DS appears to provide adequate information. It is also worth noting that the DS has not drawn any other opposition. The plan may ultimately not be confirmable if feasibility proves too speculative, as it very well might be given the current economic climate, or if cramdown is attempted and the value of the rental properties is too low as Bryson has alleged, suggesting that creditors will do better in a liquidation (the so-called best interest of creditors test). Debtor will have the burden on these issues in order to achieve confirmation, but at this stage, the DS does not appear deficient from an information standpoint, especially with the detailed risk factors analysis.

property of the estate out of the ordinary course of business. Courts have held that in order to approve a sale, a court must find that the trustee demonstrates a valid business justification, and that the sale is in the best interest of the estate. In re 240 North Brand Partners, Ltd., 200 B.R. 653 (9th Cir. BAP 1996); In re Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. 830, 841-42 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991). A sale is in the best interest of the estate when it is fair and reasonable, it has been given adequate marketing, it has been advertised and negotiated in good faith, the purchaser is proceeding in good faith, and it is an arm's length transaction. Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. at 841. The Wilde Horse court goes on to explain that good faith encompasses fair value and further speaks to the integrity of the transaction. Bad faith would include collusion between the seller and buyer or any attempt to take unfair advantage of any potential purchasers. Id. at 842.

2. Bibby's Opposition

Bibby's main opposition to this motion stems from Bibby's concerns that Debtor intends to sell all of its accounts receivable to the successful buyer even though there is already a true factoring agreement in place that vests Bibby the rights to Debtor's accounts receivable. Bibby also has a first and prior lien as to substantially all of Debtor's assets, which cross-collateralizes Debtor's pre-petition and post-petition obligations to the factor. Bibby is concerned that through the Sale Motion, Debtor proposes to transfer all of its assets, without satisfaction of the obligations due Bibby. The Sale Motion appears to contemplate a transfer of the estate's assets subject to Bibby's priority lien, but that is left unclear.

In response to these concerns, Debtor asserts and acknowledges that it does not consider the accounts receivable already factored and sold to Bibby to be property of Debtor's bankruptcy estate. Therefore, Debtor asserts that it does not intend or seek court approval to re-sell such accounts to the Buyers under the Motion. Instead, the Motion contemplates that Debtor's business will be sold as a going concern and that the sale will close not later than 120 days after entry of a court order approving the sale. (The 120-day escrow period is required for the Buyers to obtain all regulatory approvals, licenses, permits, insurance, etc. before continuing operations.) To that end, Debtor will propose a sale order that expressly excludes all cash and accounts receivable from the property sold, which apparently resolves Bibby's objection.

Regarding Bibby's concern over its lien, Debtor argues that the concern is due to an overstatement of the relief requested in the Motion, which seeks to sell the Assets subject to Bibby's lien. Debtor believes that Bibby is over secured by (1) its continued collection on the factored accounts from SeaLogix; (2) the prepetition and post-petition reserve accounts (which totaled $24,924 as of February 29, 2020), and (3) its senior lien against Debtor's bankruptcy estate (including the sale proceeds). Thus, per its request, Debtor states that it will work with Bibby "on a plan for satisfaction of the remaining obligations under the [DIP Financing Order] in connection with the proposed sale." Debtor expects Bibby to continue factoring Debtor's accounts receivable until the sale closing. Debtor will fully cooperate with Bibby towards the ending of the factoring relationship and ensure that Bibby receives full payment of its secured claim. But what the court is supposed to do with that is left very unclear.

3. Superior Driver's Opposition

Superior Drivers essentially object on the basis that the sale contemplated by the motion is conclusory and unfair because it would sell off all of the assets of Debtor to two companies affiliated with Debtor (or its principal) but leave Debtor and its principals free to conduct the business with no regard for or chance to vote by the creditors, concluding that the motion should not be approved. As an alternative, Superior Drivers requests that a ruling on the motion be postponed until Debtor proposes a plan of reorganization. Superior Drivers also points out that each of the Creditors has each filed a Proof of Claim based on their judgment collectively for over $3 million in unpaid wages, unreimbursed expenses, penalties and interest against Debtor as the successor in interest Superior Dispatch, Inc. One of the proposed buyers is co-owned by Michael Noles, the Debtor's owner and the son of Melinda Melgar, who co-owned Superior Dispatch, Inc. with her husband Cesar Melgar. Superior Dispatch, Inc. is the company that owed the Creditors $3 million in unpaid wages etc., which is the entity that that the Debtor was found at trial to be successor in interest.

As argued by Debtor, it is generally well settled, however, that § 363 sales may be conducted prior to plan confirmation so long as there is a good business reason for the sale. See e.g., In re Lionel Corp., 722 F.2d 1063 (2d Cir. 1983). "Neither the Code nor the caselaw ... requires waiting for the plan confirmation process to take its course when the inevitable consequence would be a liquidation. Bankruptcy courts have the power to authorize sales of assets at a time where there still is value to preserve—to prevent the death of the patient on the operating table." In re GMC, 407 B.R. 463, 474 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Section 363 provides that a trustee or debtor in possession "after notice and a hearing, may use, sell, or lease, other than in the ordinary course of business, property of the estate." 11 U.S.C. § 363(b). "Notably, section 363 has no carveouts from its grant of authority when applied in cases under chapter 11 for dispositions of property exceeding any particular size, or where the property is of such importance that it should alternatively be disposed of under a plan. Nor does any other provision of the Code so provide." GMC, 407 B.R. at 486. Instead, "section 363 sales of major assets may be effected before confirmation." Id. at 488; see also Fla. Dep't of Revenue v. Piccadilly Cafeterias, Inc., 554 U.S. 33, 37 n.2 (2008) ("Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings ordinarily culminate in the confirmation of a reorganization plan. But in some cases, as here, a debtor sells all or substantially all its assets under § 363(b)(1) before seeking or receiving plan confirmation.").

Further, when determining whether there is a good business reason for a

Chapter 11

§363(b) sale before confirmation, a bankruptcy court should consider all of the "salient factors pertaining to the proceeding," including:

- (a) the proportionate value of the asset to the estate as a whole;
- (b) the amount of elapsed time since the filing;
- (c) the likelihood that a plan of reorganization will be proposed and confirmed in the near future;
- (d) the effect of the proposed disposition on future plans of reorganization;
- (e) the proceeds to be obtained from the disposition vis-a-vis any appraisals of the property;
- (f) which of the alternatives of use, sale or lease the proposal envisions; and "most importantly perhaps,"
- (g) whether the asset is increasing or decreasing in value. GMC, 407 B.R. at 490 (citing Lionel, 722 F.2d at 1071).

Importantly, however, the bankruptcy court must also consider if those opposing the sale produced some evidence that the sale was not justified. Id.; see also Lionel, 722 F.2d at 1071 ("[W]e must consider whether [sale opponents] produced evidence before the bankruptcy court that such sale was not justified. While a debtor applying under § 363(b) carries the burden of demonstrating that a use, sale or lease out of the ordinary course of business will aid the debtor's reorganization, an objectant ... is required to produce some evidence respecting its objections.").

Here, Debtor argues that abundant evidence of sound business justification exists to approve this sale, and Superior Drivers has not come forward with any contrary evidence. For example, Debtor asserts that its proposed sale of office furniture, equipment and fixtures will be sold above market value for a total of $69,000. Debtor also asserts that since the petition date, Debtor has been operating on essentially a break-even basis, which makes a sale preferable to a reorganization. Debtor also foresees several obstacles toward a reorganization including: (1) the additional administrative expenses incurred to propose and confirm a chapter 11 plan (which would impede payment to other creditors), (2) operational uncertainties given the changing regulatory landscape described in the Motion (i.e., AB-5), and (3) certain obstacles to plan confirmation such as obtaining a consenting class of impaired creditors. Debtor further states that after the sale is consummated, it intends to convert its case to Chapter 7. The appointed chapter 7 trustee will have the discretion as to how proceeds of the sale will be distributed to creditors. Thus, Debtor argues that Superior Drivers' assertion that Debtor is attempting a sub rosa plan is simply incorrect. Debtor does concede that it has not yet obtained an appraisal on its assets but asserts that this should be overlooked because the sale is subject to overbidding and that, so far anyway, it has been unable to garner any interest in bidding aside from the proposed buyers despite advertisement.

Debtor also asserts that the assets it proposes to sell are subject to diminishing value due to certain regulatory changes. For example, Debtor asserts that AB-5 may soon prevent Debtor, a motor freight carrier, from using subcontractor drivers to haul its loads. If the enforcement stay of AB-5 is lifted, then Debtor could not operate without hiring the drivers as employees, which would fundamentally change the structure of Debtor's current business model and may require it to shut down. This, together with the uncertainty caused by the current coronavirus pandemic adds additional urgency to the sale. Debtor argues that the sooner the sale is approved and completed, the sooner there will be payouts to creditors. These considerations, Debtor argues, demonstrate a sound business justification for approving the sale.

The court agrees that there appears to be a sound business justification for approving the sale. However, the court is not certain about whether the buyers, as insiders of Debtor, are good faith purchasers. The motion is quite vague and mostly conclusory as to why Buyers should be approved as good faith purchasers, especially given the concerns voiced by Superior Drivers. On the other hand, a sale is likely the best chance to get something to these creditors, whereas the prospects of a successful reorganization, given the current economic climate, are highly speculative at best, non-existent at worst. Moreover, the price is so modest that, after administrative and priority claims, it seems unlikely that general unsecured creditors will get anything. Debtor also asserts that Superior Drivers' ORAP lien is subject to bona fide dispute pursuant to a present adversary proceeding (8:19-ap-01223). In that case, Debtor is seeking to avoid the ORAP lien and Assignment Order as preferential transfers. There is a motion for summary judgment that is set for hearing on April 1, 2020 at 11:00 a.m.

4. Conclusion

A few points emerge clearly. First, this motion represents a big ask, i.e. a very small price, unsupported by an appraisal, to entities affiliated with an insider, of substantially all the assets, which will likely result in little or no recovery by the unsecured creditors who are objecting. The resulting question is, is there an alternative? There might well not be, realistically. It is also clear that this case does not belong in Chapter 11 as it has been on its deathbed for months now, and its prospects for reorganization are nil. Debtor admits as much. So, what to do? The court will convert the case to Chapter 7 sua sponte and have the Chapter 7 trustee evaluate the advisability of the sale before a continued hearing on the sale.

Convert to Chapter 7 and continue sale hearing for 30 days to allow a review by the Chapter 7 trustee. An operating order pending the sale may be obtained upon request. The appointed trustee is requested to provide a short evaluation report on the sale as soon as possible before the hearing.

Chapter 7

These nominally are characterized as claims objections. The main disputed issue common to Calendar #s 11, 25, and 28 (which are discussed in a single memorandum because they overlap) are the amounts of the allowable portions of the claims as it appears these claims include accrued interest (and perhaps fees) to which they may not be entitled. Lexington National Insurance Corporation ("Lexington"), one of several surety companies that provided Foreclosure Bonds for foreclosure sales conducted by Debtor in Maryland and Washington D.C. has filed numerous objections to claims against Debtor's estate. The curiosity arises from the fact that several of the claimants have agreed to continue the hearing scheduled for February 25, out to April 7, which explains why so many matters are vacated in this case. However, three creditors, HMC Assets, LLC, as Trustee of the CAM XV Trust (Claim# 32-2), Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc. (Claim #67), and Carrington Mortgage Services (Claim # 70) have decided to press ahead in defending their claims, arguing that they are entitled to the entirety of their claims, even though Lexington has made a fairly compelling argument that they are only entitled to a portion of them, as will be discussed further below.

The BP Fisher Law Group, LLP ("Debtor") was a law firm that was primarily in the business of handling residential foreclosures in the Mid-Atlantic region. The Trust Fund Claims (as defined below) that are the subject of the Trust Fund (as defined below) and payment by the Chapter 7 Trustee pursuant to the Trust Fund Settlement (as defined below) arise out of foreclosures conducted by Debtor which allegedly resulted in Debtor receiving monies in trust that it allegedly failed to remit to the appropriate parties.

In connection with the foreclosure sales that were handled by Debtor, there are two types of parties who may possess claims arising out of the alleged misappropriation of foreclosure sale trust fund monies that were held by Debtor: (A) a Buyer who provided a Buyer Deposit to Debtor when the closing on the foreclosure sale did not actually take place for reasons not related to the Buyer's default (i.e., the Buyer Deposit was not returned to them); and (B) a lender in connection with foreclosures sales where a closing took place, an Auditor's Report was ratified, and Debtor did not disburse the net foreclosure sale trust fund monies as required by the ratified Auditor's Report.

Lexington's argues that the trust fund claims are limited to actual trust fund monies that were remitted to Debtor but not paid to rightful claimants. The Buyers are only entitled to a trust fund claim in the exact amount of the Buyer Deposit that was not returned and a lender is only entitled to a trust fund claim in the exact amount of trust fund monies that were not paid to it as set forth in the Foreclosure Court's order ratifying the Auditor's Report. Claimants are not entitled to trust fund claims for any other alleged damages or claims (i.e., no interest, attorney's fees, etc.) – their trust fund claims are limited to the exact amount of trust fund monies that were received by Debtor and later were supposed to be delivered to them. In other words, there is a difference between a genuine trust fund claim, which by its definition is limited to a certain fund misappropriation, and consequential damages claims against the Debtor.

On July 19, 2019, several months after Debtor filed its petition, the Chapter 7 Trustee (formerly Chapter 11 Trustee (the "Trustee") filed his Motion to Approve Compromise Under FRBP 9019 and attached memorandum (the "Trust Fund Motion") (Docket Entry # 146) seeking approval of a settlement (the "Settlement") with Debtor's principal and his related entity Plutos Sama Holdings, Inc. Pursuant to the Trust Fund Motion, $3,412,000 that was held in one of BP's bank accounts were characterized as trust fund monies arising out of various foreclosure sales. As part of the Settlement, BP's principal and related entity delivered $4,000,000 to the Trustee and ultimately the $3,412,000 of trust fund monies (the "Trust Fund") will be used to only pay trust fund claims, i.e., claims arising out of missing foreclosure sale proceeds that were delivered to BP in trust but never delivered to the beneficiary (i.e., a lender, Buyer, junior lienholder, or borrower, as appropriate) (the "Trust Fund Claims"). As the court reads it, this fund was never designed to be a comprehensive payment of all that victims qua creditors might be entitled to as consequential damages; it was designed purely to refund that which were never truly Debtor's monies. On August 14, 2019, the court entered the Order Granting Motion to Approve Compromise Under Rule 9019 (Docket Entry # 195) (the "Settlement Order") establishing the procedure for filing a trust fund proof of claim. Pursuant to the Settlement Order, the trust fund claim bar date was set as September 16, 2019.

Lexington persuasively argues that the Trust Fund Agreement put into place a claim process solely for Trust Fund Claims that permitted creditors whose money was being held in trust by the Debtor (but not remitted to such creditor) to file a Trust Fund Claim in the amount of the trust fund money that the Debtor held, but failed to remit to such creditor. In effect, Lexington asserts, Trust Fund Creditors are being treated differently than general unsecured creditors by way of the Trust Fund Settlement vis a vis the Trust Fund because trust fund money is not property of the bankruptcy estate. See In re Lopez Roman, 599 B.R. 87, 94 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2019) ("funds that are deposited into an escrow account by a debtor, for the benefit of others cannot be characterized as property of the estate"). Therefore, Trust Fund Claimants have a senior interest in trust fund money, but only in the actual amount of trust fund money that the Debtor was holding for Trust Fund Claimants. As such, Lexington argues, Creditors are free to assert that they have suffered additional damages as a result of the failure of the Debtor to timely remit trust fund money, but these additional damages will be nothing more than general unsecured claims against property of the estate.

As the docket for February 25, 2020 shows, there were many hearings on objections to claims scheduled. However, Lexington asserts that it has been successful in resolving many of its objections and will be filing stipulations confirming the actual claim amounts, the three creditors mentioned above being the exceptions.

As to the claims of these three creditors, Lexington argues that they are attempting to include general unsecured damage claims (e.g. interest) as part of their Trust Fund Claims in violation of the Trust Fund Settlement. Further, Lexington argues that some of these creditors are attempting to assert Trust Fund Claims for monies that do not belong to them, and that these creditors do not even know how much of their trust fund monies Debtor received and allegedly failed to remit to them. Select Portfolio (Claim #67) and Carrington (Claim #70) have not been able to confirm the exact amounts or provide adequate documentation to support their claims, which is highly problematic. Lexington has propounded discovery to fill in this missing information.

Obviously, there is a great deal more going on here than can readily be resolved in a summary proceeding like a claims objection. Lexington requests that these hearings be treated as status conferences pursuant to LBR 3007-1(b) (5), which gives the court discretion to "treat the initial hearing as a status conference." This will allow the parties to hash out any additional discovery and evidentiary issues that should be addressed prior to an evidentiary hearing scheduled for April 7, 2020. This does seem to be an appropriate suggestion, as in a case like this, more clarity and more information is preferable. All parties involved would likely benefit from treating these hearings as status conferences in contested proceedings. If the parties are unable to agree, at the continued status conference deadlines for discovery and law and motion will be set, possible referral to mediation discussed and a pretrial conference scheduled.

Continue as status conference.

#8.00 Motion To Dismiss Adversary Proceeding (rescheduled from 6-4-2020 at 11:00 a.m. per court)

Docket 13

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/3/20:

This memorandum combines two motions to dismiss as they significantly overlap in both facts and analysis. The first motion to dismiss (calendar #8) is brought by Defendant, Hamid Rowshan ("Rowshan"). The second motion to dismiss (calendar #9) is brought by Defendant, Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. ("Wells Fargo"). Rowshan and Wells Fargo may also be collectively referred to herein as "Defendants." Debtors, Fariborz and Natasha Wasoughkia ("Debtors") are also named defendants and filed an answer to the complaint on April 21, 2020. As far as can be gleaned, Debtors have not filed a motion to dismiss, nor joined either of the present motions. The plaintiff is the Chapter 7 Trustee, Richard Marshack ("Trustee" or "Plaintiff").

Trustee in his complaint, filed March 16, 2020, alleges five separate causes of action, as follows:

- (1) Avoidance of Unauthorized Post-Petition Transfer (11 U.S.C. § 549) (against Rowshan and Wells Fargo);
- (2) Recovery of Avoided Transfers (11 U.S.C. §550) (against all defendants);
- (3) Turnover of Property of the Estate (11 U.S.C. §§541 & 542) (against only Rowshan);

(4) Quiet Title To Real Property (against all defendants);

(5) Injunctive Relief (against all defendants)

1. Plaintiff's Asserted Facts

By Grant Deed recorded on August 31, 2007, with the Recorder's No. 2007-0561086, Debtors acquired title to the residential real property in Riverside County commonly known as 14343 Settlers Ridge Court, Eastvale, California 92880 (hereinafter referred to as the "Eastvale Residence") from Centex Homes. The Eastvale Residence is assigned APN 144-450-016-7 and is legally described as: Lot 8 of Tract 30893, in the City of Corona, County of Riverside, State of California, as Per Map Recorded in Book 403 of Maps, Pages 90 through 96, Records of Said County. As of the petition date described below, the Eastvale Residence was titled in Debtors' names and undeniably was property of the estate (or could clearly be made so under the strongarm powers of 11 U.S.C. §544). At the time of the acquisition, the Debtors obtained a loan from JP Morgan Chase Bank in the amount of $398,200, secured by a deed of trust against the Eastvale Residence.

On November 17, 2010, over three years after the acquisition, the Debtors filed a Petition in the Santa Ana Division (covering Orange County) of the Bankruptcy Court under Chapter 7 (hereinafter referred to as the "Petition Date"). Charles W. Daff was the initially appointed Chapter 7 Trustee (hereinafter referred to as the "Prior Trustee"). On December 15, 2010 the Debtors filed their Schedules, Statement of Financial Affairs and related documents. Plaintiff alleges that nowhere in the schedules or statement of affairs did Debtors disclose their interest in the Eastvale Residence.

The Prior Trustee filed his No Asset Report on February 7, 2011 but withdrew it on July 28, 2011 to administer litigation claims unrelated to the Eastvale Residence, of which the Prior Trustee allegedly still had no knowledge. After administering the litigation claim, the Prior Trustee filed another No Asset Report on February 13, 2012. On July 22, 2011, the Debtors filed Amended Schedules, which still did not disclose their interest in the Eastvale Residence. Debtors were granted their discharge on May 23, 2012 and the case was closed on May 30, 2012.

By Grant Deed recorded on August 20, 2013 with the Recorder's Office for the County of Riverside, the Debtors conveyed their interest in the Eastvale Residence to Rowshan (Recorders No. 2013-0406512) (hereinafter referred to as the "First Eastvale Transfer"). Contemporaneously, Rowshan refinanced the Eastvale Residence with a Deed of Trust in favor of Wells Fargo, presumably paying of JP Morgan Chase and securing a debt of $368,000 (Recorder's No. 2013-0406513) (hereinafter referred to as the "Second Eastvale Transfer").

Just a few days thereafter, by Grant Deed recorded on August 27, 2013, Rowshan reconveyed the Eastvale Residence back to the Debtors for no consideration (Recorder's No. 2013-0418283) (hereinafter referred to as the "Third Eastvale Transfer"). Then, on December 31, 2013, only five months later, the Debtors reconveyed the Eastvale Residence back to defendant Hamid Rowshan by Grant Deed for no consideration (Recorder's No. 2013-0602611)

(hereinafter referred to as the "Fourth Eastvale Transfer"). Contemporaneously therewith, Rowshan refinanced the Eastvale Residence with Wells Fargo Bank with a new first Deed of Trust encumbering the Eastvale Residence to secure a debt in the amount of $279,000 (Recorder's No. 2013-0602613) (hereinafter referred to as the "Fifth Eastvale Transfer").

By Order entered on November 27, 2018, the bankruptcy case was reopened a second time. On August 30, 2019, the court entered its Order to Appoint a Chapter 7 Trustee and Marshack was appointed as the replacement Chapter 7 Trustee on September 20, 2019. In November of 2019, Plaintiff was allegedly informed that the Debtors may have had an undisclosed interest in the Eastvale Residence as of the Petition Date. Until that time, Plaintiff asserts, neither Plaintiff, nor the Prior Trustee were aware of, nor reasonably should have been aware of said concealed interest. Plaintiff filed this complaint roughly four months later.

2. Dismissal Standards Under FRCP 12(b)(6)

FRCP 12(b)(6) requires a court to consider whether a complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). There are cases that justify, or compel, granting a motion to dismiss. The line between totally unmeritorious claims and others must be carved out case by case by the judgment of trial judges, and that judgment should be exercised cautiously on such a motion. Id.

"While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-65 (2007) A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Threadbare recitals of elements supported by conclusory statements is not sufficient. Id.

3. Statutes of Limitations & Equitable Tolling

The court notes that, with very few exceptions, the operative underlying facts are not contested. For example, it does not appear contested that, in the absence of a tolling theory, the statutes of limitations on Plaintiff's causes of action would have run out years ago. The court is, therefore, presented with a dispositive threshold issue: whether sufficient facts are pled in the complaint, taken as true, and viewed in the light most favorable to Plaintiff as the nonmoving party, as to whether grounds exist for equitable tolling. Looking only at the complaint itself, and the accompanying attachments, the court is not persuaded that sufficient facts are pled to cause the court to overlook the statutes of limitations. As will be further discussed below, equitable tolling is extraordinary relief and is to be granted quite sparingly. As such, the complaint would need to provide detailed facts in compliance with the equitable tolling standards. The court does not believe that enough facts are present in the complaint as currently written.

As thoroughly explained in Wells Fargo's motion, the doctrine of equitable tolling is considered extraordinary relief and, in the Ninth Circuit, is not liberally granted by mere assertion. On the contrary, courts in the Ninth Circuit have noted that the bar for applying equitable tolling is set "very high." See In re Dugger, 2012 WL 2086562, at *7 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2012) ("The threshold for obtaining equitable tolling is very high" and is "unavailable in most cases."). Furthermore, Plaintiff bears the burden of pleading the facts to establish the applicability of equitable tolling. Hinton v. Pac. Enters., 5 F.3d

A litigant seeking equitable tolling must establish the following: (1) that he has been pursuing his rights diligently, and (2) that some extraordinary circumstance stood in his way. Pace v. DiGuglielmo, 544 U.S. 408, 418 (2005). As the Rule 12(b)(6) standard recited above states, something more than simple legal conclusions and formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action is required in order to withstand a motion to dismiss in a case like this, where the statute of limitations is clearly expired and only equitable tolling can save the case.

Here, Plaintiff's complaint merely states that the asset in question was concealed from Trustee and that he did not become aware of its existence until November of 2019. Thus, Plaintiff concludes, equitable tolling applies and preserves the causes of action relating to the concealed asset. This is manifestly inadequate given the standard of pleading required for equitable tolling to apply. Something about Prior Trustee's relative diligence would be necessary. As Wells Fargo notes, the Complaint does not allege a single action taken by the Prior Trustee in pursuit of his required due diligence, nor any extraordinary circumstance preventing him from asserting his claims.

In rejoinder, Plaintiff argues that Wells Fargo fails to identify anything in the record which would have put Plaintiff on notice. Such an argument appears to improperly attempt to shift the burden to the Defendants and is beyond the scope of the motion. But even indulging this argument, Wells Fargo notes that the complaint in the Todd Member, LLC adversary proceeding from 2011 asserted that Debtors were concealing assets and had fraudulently made false oaths and accounts. See Wells Fargo RJN, Ex. E p. 59. Wells Fargo asserts that the Prior Trustee would have been familiar with this adversary proceeding and such allegations should have put him on notice about the probability of concealed assets.

In attempting to demonstrate that the Prior Trustee did exercise appropriate due diligence, Plaintiff points to Exhibit A attached to the Complaint, which contains what Plaintiff describes as a "very extensive" asset search report, which did not turn up the subject property. It seems that a declaration describing the search parameters would have been helpful here. Wells Fargo notes that the asset search report was a LexisNexis search by a third party rather than a proper search by a title company. Moreover, Wells Fargo points out that, as evidenced by the complaint in the Mahdavi action, the Subject Property could have been located by proper searching. In the Mahdavi complaint, the transfers of the Subject Property are documented going back to 2007. See Wells Fargo RJN Ex. R, p. 231. Although damaging to Plaintiff's position, this asserted fact is of only limited relevance at this stage in the proceedings. At a later stage, this fact might remove this case from the applicability of cases like Olsen v. Zerbetz (In re Olsen), 36 F.3d 71 (9th Cir. 1994), which stands for the proposition that the doctrine of equitable tolling may be applicable in scenarios where the trustee's delay in discovery is not for want of diligence. But that is not proper in a Rule 12 motion where we are confined to the four corners of the complaint.

The court is mindful that the equitable tolling doctrine does not require exhaustive due diligence by the Plaintiff, but the Plaintiff must plead facts evidencing reasonable due diligence. See In Re United Ins. Management, Inc. 14 F.3d 1380, 1385 (9th Cir. 1994). On the one hand, the court is generally not disposed to second-guess the efforts of a trustee. But on the other hand, the trustee, as a sophisticated party, is presumably capable of and probably expected to execute a thorough title search, such as the one apparently conducted in the Mahdavi action. The court would expect to see such facts pled. Thus, the court must conclude that, under the equitable tolling doctrine, the Prior Trustee's efforts are not sufficiently pled to allow the court to infer that the Trustee exercised appropriate due diligence to invoke equitable tolling. If other examples of the Prior Trustee's due diligence exist, they were not explained in the Complaint, nor did Plaintiff point out where such information could be found. The Plaintiff will certainly argue that the Eastvale Residence was in Riverside County, not Orange County where the bankruptcy was filed, but this does not change the fact that title was as of the Petition

Date in debtors' name. Nothing in the bankruptcy code suggests that the normal universal imputed notice provided under state recording statutes is somehow limited to only that which is readily discernable in the host county. But clearly Debtors were seriously, and possibly fraudulently, delinquent in not revealing the Eastvale Residence in either the initial or amended schedules, and they may have actively misled the Prior Trustee. Such factors, if they exist, may well tilt the balance toward equitable tolling.

As all of Plaintiff's causes of action depend on equitable tolling for their timeliness, the court's analysis could end here. However, equitable tolling has a second component, which is that the Plaintiff must also demonstrate the existence of extraordinary circumstances that stood in the way of discovery. Here too, Plaintiff has failed to plead and/or explain such extraordinary circumstances. That Debtors may have intentionally concealed assets from the Prior Trustee and/or current Trustee is evidence of Debtors' bad faith, untrustworthiness, and general contempt for the bankruptcy process, but whether it qualifies as an extraordinary circumstance as contemplated by the equitable tolling doctrine is, at best, unclear. Debtors concealing assets is, unfortunately, not an uncommon hurdle faced by trustees. As such, a trustee could be reasonably expected to conduct thorough title searches, especially when the trustee has reason to suspect that a debtor might be concealing assets, as was, apparently, the case here.

4. Injunctive Relief

The court need not address this portion of the complaint because its survival is based at on Plaintiff's success on the merits of the underlying case, The court notes that this portion of the complaint contains fairly light analysis of the factors a court considers when such equitable relief is requested. Defendants argue that injunctive relief is not a proper cause of action but is more accurately considered a remedy. As Plaintiff's underlying causes of action are barred by the applicable statutes of limitations and are not presently preserved or revived (unless the doctrine of equitable tolling can apply), the remedy of injunctive relief is also barred. See Brown v. Option One Mortg. Corp., 2010 WL 1267774, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 1, 2010) ("Finally, the remaining claims—causes of action for declaratory relief, rescission and injunctive relief—are not independent claims here, but potential remedies. Since plaintiffs have not properly pled any predicate causes of action, these claims are dismissed.").

5. Leave to Amend

The causes of action against all defendants are barred by the applicable statutes of limitations unless equitable tolling applies. The question then becomes, should leave to amend be granted? Defendants urge the court to dismiss the complaint with prejudice because, they argue, Plaintiff cannot hope to successfully plead around the statute of limitations. However, the court is more inclined to grant Plaintiff leave to amend. The Ninth Circuit is well-known for liberality regarding leave to amend when justice so requires. Morongo Band of Mission Indians v. Rose, 893 F.2d 1074, 1079 (9th Cir. 2001). The court is not ready to declare Plaintiff's case hopelessly barred by the statutes of limitations such that any further attempts would be futile.

For example, at present, Defendants have articulated an argument that the Prior Trustee likely should have discovered the Subject Property by conducting a more thorough title search. But the court is mindful that this is a motion to dismiss, not a summary judgment motion. Thus, the court remains open to the possibility that an amended complaint could plead facts demonstrating that the Prior Trustee's efforts were in keeping with reasonable standards, which, taken as true, would likely satisfy the due diligence prong. However, that would still leave Plaintiff the burden of demonstrating some extraordinary circumstance(s) that prevented the Prior Trustee from discovering the existence of the Subject Property much earlier. Plaintiff's opposition suggests that the Olsen case stands for the proposition, by implication, that concealment of assets qualifies as an extraordinary circumstance, but that conclusion may be speculative or might be strained under these facts as it suggests the concealment must be active. Maybe actively lying in response to the Trustee's clear question posed to the Debtors' at the 341a meeting or elsewhere might suffice? Can mere omission of the asset on original and amended schedules signed under penalty of perjury suffice? Why should the prior Trustee not be bound by the recording statutes and their imputed universal notice? In other, related contexts [regarding alleged BFPs] such notice is determinative. See 11 U.S.C. §549(c)

In any case, Plaintiff's opposition suggests that he may have additional claims to bring and requests leave to amend to include those new causes of action. Plaintiff should be given leave to amend the complaint to plead facts entitling him to equitable tolling on the causes of action already put forth and any new theory that can be plausibly stated.

This §363(f) motion is to sell the property commonly known as 423 Avenida Granada #16, San Clemente for $1.3 million. The motion is unopposed. However, as the court reads the motion, the proceeds will be insufficient to clear both liens of record, Shellpoint ($877,980) and Cornerstone ($930,000). Are these, in fact, two separate liens? Is the sale intended to be subject to one of the liens? There is also discussion about the debtor's homestead and reimbursement to the broker. Lacking is any helpful discussion about how § 363(f) or any of its five subsections work in these circumstances if there are, in fact, two encumbrances exceeding the price. Is the junior lienor consenting?

Docket 11

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/10/20:

This is Defendant and Chapter 7 Trustee, Thomas H. Casey's ("Trustee's") Rule 12 (b)(6) motion to dismiss the First Amended Complaint ("FAC") filed by Plaintiff, Estate of William L. Seay ("Plaintiff"). Defendant asks that leave to further amend not be granted. Plaintiff opposes the motion.

To keep this memo succinct, the factual and procedural history are significantly condensed. The FAC and subsequent pleadings contain much more comprehensive recitations of the serpentine factual and procedural backgrounds of the underlying bankruptcy case and this adversary proceeding. Only the most pertinent aspects are contained below for the reader's benefit.

1. FRCP 12(b)(6) Standards

FRCP 12(b)(6) requires a court to consider whether a complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). There are cases that justify, or compel, granting a motion to dismiss. The line between totally unmeritorious claims and others must be carved out case by case by the judgment of trial judges, and that judgment should be exercised cautiously on such a motion. Id.

"While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-65 (2007) A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly.

2. Brief Background

The following is a condensed summary of the relevant factual and procedural backgrounds as put forth in Plaintiff's FAC. On May 4, 2004, Col. Seay obtained a judgment against Debtor, Robert Ferrante ("Debtor") in the principal amount of $2,471,057.16 ("Judgment"). The Judgment was perfected against real property assets of the Debtor in Orange County by the recording of an abstract of judgment with the Orange County Recorder's Office on May 20, 2004 ("Seay Lien"). The Judgment was unanimously affirmed in the Second District Court of Appeal in 2005.

Under California law, the Seay Lien attached to all real property interests of the Debtor in Orange County whether existing on the date of recordation or acquired in the future, whether legal or equitable, fixed or contingent. (Code of Civ. Proc. § 697.340(a).) The Seay Lien gained and continues to gain interest at the rate of 10% per annum, may be renewed every five years and must be renewed every ten years. When renewed, the accrued interest is added to principal to create a new principal amount, which amount then gains interest at 10% per annum until the next renewal. The Seay Judgment was always timely renewed. Thus, on the petition date, the Judgment was $3.877 million.

Although Debtor claimed only $500 in assets, Defendant decided to pursue the case as an asset case based upon evidence received from attorney Thomas Vogele ("Vogele"). Trustee employed Vogele's law firm to act as his counsel.

Third party Remar Investments LP ("Remar") is a Nevada limited partnership which held a $2 million trust deed recorded against the Property located at 518 Harbor Island Drive, Newport Beach, CA 92660 ("the Property" or "518 Property") on December 27, 2010. (See generally, 8:16-cv-00337-MWF ("Remar Appeal"), Sept. 13, 2016 Order affirming Judgment, Dkt. 23).) The 2010 note and trust deed, executed by Debtor's ex father-in-law Oscar Chacon as trustee of the 518 Harbor Island Drive Trust, "took out" a 2009 note and trust deed of $1.5 million recorded on September 25, 2009. Id. In a consolidated adversary action both Defendant Trustee and Col. Seay alleged that Remar was Debtor's confederate and coconspirator in a scheme to enter into bogus transactions in order to defeat creditor claims and place artificially high encumbrances on the 518 Property.

Third party 518 Harbor Island Drive Trust ("Trust I") was a defectively formed Qualified Personal Residence Trust ("QPRT") created by Debtor on September 16, 1994 to hold title to the 518 Property. At the time of its formation, Debtor was in a separate Chapter 7 proceeding filed in December

1993. Debtor was the settlor, sole trustee and residual beneficiary of the Trust I. Trust I held nominal title to the Property from 1994 to 2001, and again from 2006 to 2014. (Remar Appeal, Dkt. 23.) The BAP ruled, however, that Trust I terminated in December 1998 at which time it reverted to Debtor individually. (In re Ferrante, 2015 WL 5064807 (9th Cir. B.A.P. Aug. 26, 2015) (unpublished), also at 9th Cir. Case No. 14- 1222, Dkt. 49.)

Third party 518 Harbor Island Drive Trust III ("Trust III") is a separate and expressly revocable trust self-settled by Debtor on or about March 23, 2001. Trust III continuously held record title to the 518 Property from 2001 through September 29, 2006, including on May 20, 2004 when the Seay Judgment was recorded in Orange County, California. Both the Bankruptcy Court and District Court have ruled that because Trust III was expressly revocable, the Seay Judgment attached to the 518 Property on the date of recordation, despite ostensibly different record title.

Thomas Vogele is a lawyer who practices in Orange County, California, through his law firm Thomas Vogele & Associates APC ("TVA"). On the petition date, TVA represented creditor W&W Properties. In September of 2010, TVA entered into an agreement with Defendant to act as Special Litigation Counsel to the insolvent estate on a contingent fee basis to initiate litigation to recover money and property of Debtor (and hence of the estate) that was undeclared in the Schedules.

On April 23, 2010, TVA filed a motion to dismiss the bankruptcy on behalf of W&W alleging that the Petition was a "sham," that Debtor engaged in fraudulent conduct and grossly undervalued his assets. (Dkt. 20, 21.) After the motion was denied, TVA approached Casey and offered services as Special Litigation Counsel to the Estate. According to the application to employ, Mr. Vogele represented that he had detailed knowledge of Debtor's affairs arising from his representation of W&W. TVA stated that he no longer represented W&W and had no conflict of interest. Plaintiff asserts that the relationship among and between W&W, Debtor and TVA remains opaque. But this representation is not only irrelevant to the issues in this motion, it is also belied by the order of this court authorizing the representation.

3. The Compromise Settlement and Carve-Out Agreement

Trustee and Col. Seay entered into a written agreement on April 7, 2014 aptly titled Settlement and Carve Out Agreement ("Agreement"). Under the Agreement the estate and Seay agreed to an effective 50/50 split of the proceeds of the 518 property, with half of the proceeds either free of the Seay lien or at least subordinated to recovery by other creditors. Although the parties have referred to the Agreement as a "carve out," Plaintiff now argues that the Agreement is much different than the usual 'carve out.' Plaintiff argues that, ordinarily, a secured creditor, will solicit a trustee's aid in selling an asset to avoid state court foreclosure remedies and remit some of the recovery to the estate. A carve out, he argues, is a controversial exception to the universal prohibition against sale of encumbered assets by trustees simply as a means of generating fees. In this case, Plaintiff argues that this Agreement was not solicited by Col. Seay and he derived no benefit from it. The Agreement was allegedly demanded by Trustee solely in order to raise money to pay his and his attorney's fees. The court does not accept this characterization; this was noticed to creditors as, and in fact it clearly was, a necessary inducement for the Trustee to do anything except file a "no asset" report as everything was heavily encumbered and the various obstacles created by Ferrante to administration were formidable. The 518 property was not even initially of record in the debtor's name. The 518 property was in any event heavily encumbered, by Bank of America and both the Seay and Remar liens, well beyond its value. The Trustee cannot have been expected to do anything except file a "no asset" report unless there was at least some prospect of there being something for the Trustee's primary constituency, the unsecured creditors. The fact that all the now unencumbered proceeds may be used up in fees, as Seay now argues, is indeed unfortunate but given the extremely contentious and serpentine way this case unfolded, in retrospect this is not surprising.

According to Plaintiff, the basic terms of the Agreement were that Col. Seay agreed to "defer" receipt of $1.6 million (half) attributable to his lien from the sale of the Property ("Deferred Seay Proceeds") to enable the insolvent estate the liquidity to pursue Debtor and third parties for recovery of damages and undeclared assets. In this characterization the Deferred Seay Proceeds were to be later paid back out of recoveries from litigation by Trustee along with additional fees, costs and interest which accrued. But the Agreement provides for at least a subordination, and, as it developed, there was nothing left with which to pay the subordinated half of the proceeds. The Trustee was given express authority in the Agreement not to administer assets he deemed not worthwhile or feasible to administer (as any competent trustee would) and Seay was given the express option to first acquire them, which he ultimately did for $1 (on each of two separate occasions), The court approved the Agreement by Order entered on June 18, 2014 at a hearing after notice to creditors in which Seay actively joined in support of the Agreement.

Plaintiff asserts that Special Litigation Counsel TVA did not use the Deferred Seay Proceeds to litigate the Adversary Action in good faith as required by the Agreement. Instead, Defendant abandoned all claims. He recovered nothing from the defendants in the Adversary Action. After Col. Seay objected to abandonment, the court ordered the claims sold to him on two occasions for one dollar each time. Plaintiff asserts that the only "recovery" the estate has obtained beyond that $2 is a $25,000 payment from Debtor's ex-wife Mia. But, Plaintiff argues, that amount is offset by the $62,700 payment Defendant agreed to make to Debtor to entice settlement. Debtor's estate is and always has been administratively insolvent. Plaintiff asserts that the Agreement acknowledged that the Seay Lien was valid and enforceable, had been timely renewed, was perfected by the recording of an abstract, and attached to the 518 Property on May 20, 2004. In other words, the Trustee agreed as part of the compromise not to challenge the Seay lien. The parties agreed that the Seay Lien was worth $5,521,389.49 as of the date of execution of the Agreement and was second in priority only to a $1 million Bank of America trust deed.

4. The FAC and Derived Judicial Immunity

Plaintiff filed the First Amended Complaint ("FAC") on September 5, 2019. Plaintiff in the FAC alleges 3 claims for relief against Trustee and Does 1-25:

(1) Restitution of Benefits Conferred After Unilateral Rescission of the Underlying Contract;

(2) Common Count for Money Had and Received; and

(3) Declaratory and Injunction Regarding the Proceeds in the Segregated Account

Trustee argues that all actions taken by the Trustee in satisfaction of his obligations to Seay under the Agreement were undertaken pursuant to his duties under the Bankruptcy Code and pursuant to this court's orders. Trustee argues that he is, therefore, judicially immune from this lawsuit. In support Trustee cites Wickstrom v. Ebert, 585 F. Supp. 924, 934 (E.D. Wis. 1984) for the proposition that "judicial immunity not only protects judges against suit for acts done within their jurisdiction, but also spreads outward to shield related public servants, including . . . trustees in bankruptcy..." Bankruptcy trustees are entitled to broad immunity from suit when acting within the scope of their authority and pursuant to court order. In re Harris, 590 F.3d 730, 742 (9th Cir. 2009) cert. den., 130 S. Ct. 3413 (U.S. 2010), citing Bennett v. Williams, 892 F.2d 822, 823 (9th Cir. 1989).

Trustee argues that the issue of qualified immunity is properly considered in a motion pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), and "unless the plaintiffs allegations state a claim of violation of clearly established law, a defendant pleading qualified immunity is entitled to dismissal before the commencement of discovery." Baumeister v. New Mexico Comm 'n for the Blind, 425 F. Supp. 2d 1250, 1268 (D.N.M. 2006), citing Behrens v. Pelletier, 516 U.S. 299,306, 116 S. Ct. 834 (1996) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Moreover, Trustee argues that the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has specifically applied qualified judicial immunity to the conduct of bankruptcy trustees in holding that a trustee is not liable for mistakes in business judgment. Bennett v. Williams, 892 F.2d 822, 824 (9th Cir. 1989). The Bennett court explained that the Ninth Circuit is "deferential to the business management decisions of a bankruptcy trustee" and has held trustees "immune from collateral attack for acts of mismanagement when the trustee was acting within his court authorization." Id. at 824.

According to Trustee, in this case, the Trustee sought and obtained approval for each action he undertook pursuant to his obligations under the Agreement. Trustee proceeds to chronicle each relevant action he undertook pursuant to the Agreement, and how each action received explicit court approval. Trustee also argues that the abandonment of the adversary proceedings was a valid exercise of his business judgment, and that he did, in fact, hold up his end of the Agreement by presenting Plaintiff with the right of first refusal for the abandoned claims (which Plaintiff exercised for nominal prices of $1)..

Trustee's basic proposition that trustees enjoy qualified judicial immunity is obvious and indisputable. Therefore, unless the complaint were amended to clarify that it is not the Trustee in his individual capacity who is sued, but rather the estate for which he is representative, the motion should be granted. But the Plaintiff seems to acknowledge the point and if given the opportunity, would fix the standing issues not only as to the Seay estate, but as to the Trustee clarifying he is not sued in a personal capacity but only as representative of the Ferrante estate as well. So, in the interest of efficiency, the court will address the other arguments as well.

5. Collateral Attack

Trustee also argues that the FAC must be dismissed because it is simply an impermissible collateral attack on this court's prior orders. Trustee maintains that all actions he undertook were well within the boundaries prescribed by this court's orders, including abandonment of the other claims. Thus, Trustee concludes that the FAC, which alleges breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, is simply attempting to collaterally attack the court's prior orders, including the approval of the underlying Agreement, rather than pursuing a proper remedy on appeal.

Missing from Trustee's motion is any authority that contains a fact pattern like the one at issue. As the court sees it, Plaintiff in the FAC does not argue that the court's order approving the Agreement is invalid in any way. As noted by Plaintiff, the Order only made findings of good faith in the negotiation of the Agreement's terms, not in its execution. Whether Trustee executed the Agreement in good faith, or whether there might have been fraud in the inducement, is a highly fact-specific question that cannot be answered at this initial pleading stage. Thus, it does not seem accurate to characterize the FAC as collaterally attacking the court's order. But that is not the only argument of concern to the court.

6. Judicial Estoppel

Trustee next argues that Plaintiff is judicially estopped from arguing that the Agreement was the product of duress, fraud, or undue influence because Plaintiff took the opposite position in support of approving the Agreement. In support of this argument, Trustee cites New Hampshire v. Maine, 532 U.S. 742, 749 (2001) for the proposition that judicial estoppel "generally prevents a party from prevailing in one phase of a case on an argument and then relying on a contradictory argument to prevail in another phase." As noted above, in the motion to approve the Agreement, both parties agreed that the negotiations, though tense, were conducted in good faith. Plaintiff filed papers in support of the motion to approve the Agreement. It is not clear why duress or undue influence were not argued when the court approved the Agreement. If Plaintiff felt that he was being forced to accept the Agreement against his will or better judgment, it should have been raised at the time. It was not, but instead the court was specifically urged to approve the Agreement by Plaintiff.

On this point, Plaintiff's opposition does not directly dispute Trustee's contention that Plaintiff already stated that the Agreement was the product of good faith arm's-length negotiations. Instead, Plaintiff argues Trustee's judicial estoppel arguments are vague beyond comprehension. In any case, Plaintiff argues that "good faith" is not the standard for rescission or restitution under the state statutory scheme, nor is it included in the grounds for rescission listed in Civil Code Section 1689(b)(1)-(7). Plaintiff explains further, rescission is an out-of-court remedy completed by notice, and if the statutory grounds are present the good faith of the defendant is irrelevant. Notice of rescission in compliance with the statute extinguishes the contract ab initio and all performance due thereunder. Rescission entitles the aggrieved party to then seek judicial assistance in the form of a restitution claim to recover the benefits previously conferred which the defendant refuses to return. But restitution still requires a showing of entitlement based on facts, not automatically as a matter of law.

The effect of Plaintiff's arguments in a 12(b)(6) context is left unclear. Perhaps the better part of valor is to grant the motion or strike portions of the FAC to the extent that they are based on duress or undue influence at the inception, because even though they appear to be properly pled, under judicial estoppel doctrines should have been brought to the court's attention at the time the Agreement was approved. Instead, at that time, Plaintiff apparently took the opposite position, and so cannot be heard now to argue this point. However, the FAC also seems built upon allegations of fraud in the inducement and fraudulent misrepresentation. Again, as the court reads the FAC, the alleged fraud and misrepresentations only became apparent after the court approved the Agreement. But the allegations are insufficient to meet the requirements of Rule 9. What, specifically, did the Trustee or his representatives say or do that was inconsistent with the duties outlined in the Agreement? No sufficient facts are pled in the FAC to meet the heightened standard required under Rule 9. It seems to the court that everything done was consistent with what the Agreement requires, but the court cannot preclude the possibility that Plaintiff can articulate something actionable.

7. Other Arguments

Trustee makes a few other arguments that do not really move the needle toward dismissal. For example, the court is not disposed nor required to examine a complaint in excruciating detail as Trustee requests. Furthermore, some of these arguments nearly require the court to make findings of fact, which, in this case, seems inappropriate at this early stage.

For example, Trustee's arguments regarding inconsistencies between certain factual allegations and exhibits in the record do not require dismissal of the FAC. First, the motion does not identify many of these purported inconsistencies and does not explain how such inconsistencies mandate summary dismissal. Second, Plaintiff still bears the burden of proving every element of every claim. These inconsistencies, to the extent they exist, may yet present a problem for Plaintiff, but later. Trustee also takes issue with certain allegations that cast him and Vogeles in an unflattering light. The court is not disposed to make judgment nor draw any inference based only on allegations. Trustee is well-known to the court and he need not worry about any prejudice accruing as a result of the allegations. The court will, as it must, base any judgment solely on proven fact, not on mere allegation or innuendo.

Chapter 7

As to Plaintiff's capacity to sue, Plaintiff concedes the need for a change in party and plans to obtain a stipulation to have Col. Seay's surviving spouse, Nancy Klein Seay, substituted in as Plaintiff. While at it, the capacity of Mr. Casey also needs amendment.

8. Conclusion

The only task before the court is to test the sufficiency and plausibility of the causes of action based on facts alleged. This is not a summary judgment motion. Some of the Trustee's arguments are persuasive. The Trustee should not be sued in his individual capacity as he enjoys qualified judicial immunity. The capacity of Plaintiff as estate representative must be amended as required by California law. Undue influence and duress or the like are out because Plaintiff, represented by counsel, having actively supported the motion to approve the Agreement, is judicially estopped from denying those same points now. This leaves a very narrow remaining place for Plaintiff to stand, i.e. that somehow there was fraud in inducement not discovered until after court approval, or possibly that the Agreement was breached in some way. From what the court remembers of these events the plausibility threshold is barely met, only because the court construes its role at this point is to deny the Rule 12(b) motion if, taken as true, there is any way a claim can be stated. But the Rule 9 requirements are not met insofar as fraud is concerned and the Plaintiff will have to come up with something plausible and of substance regarding the particular details of the alleged fraud. In the Ninth Circuit great liberality of amendment is afforded, and so only for this reason will leave to amend be granted...this time. But an admonition is perhaps in order: just because the estate's half of proceeds was consumed allegedly in fees does not ipso facto translate into fraud. Regrettably, this kind of very expensive administration where unsecured creditors end up with nothing is not even unusual, and every case must be evaluated in its own light. This was an extremely difficult case. The facts presented to the Trustee and his lawyers at the time of the Agreement were very daunting, and the Trustee is not to be faulted for making a calculated effort.

#16.00 Confirmation Of Chapter 13 Plan

Docket 5

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/17/20:

It is difficult to determine current status. All plan payments must be current and missing documents provided. Regarding arrearages, was this in the nature of paying the mortgagee on account of taxes advanced on Debtor's behalf? If it was paid to OC taxes directly, this was improper, as it should have been dealt with under the plan. An amended claim should be obtained from the lender either by stipulation or plan objection. No tentative.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

 VACATED  REASON: OFF CALENDAR - WITHDRAWAL OF DEBTOR'S OBJECTION TO CLAIM NO. 7-1 AND REQUEST TO TAKE OFF CALENDAR FILED 6-01-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/18/20:

1. There is a question about proper service inasmuch as the address requested by the creditor 4515 N. Santa Fe Ave, Oklahoma City... was not used in favor of addresses in Texas.
2. There is little or no admissible evidence.
3. The debtor engages in supposition such as:
 - a. because she did not take possession, she cannot be responsible... really is that what co-signing or guaranty means?
 - b. the creditor "wrote off" the debt. What, this means the debt is erased?
 - c. the value of the vehicle was more than the balance owed, ergo creditor got paid in full. Really? While this might be true it would be more illuminating if we knew what the foreclosure sale yielded, rather than rely on debtor's hearsay speculations. For example, what was the condition of the auto when it was repossessed? Continue to fix notice.

#50.10 Motion For Order Disallowing Proof Of Claim #4 Of TitleMax of California, Inc.
d/b/a TitleMax

Docket 20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/17/20:

The motion misses the mark. An interest rate on a proof of claim is not the same thing as a cramdown rate for plan purposes. But that's not how the motion reads. The court evaluates the proper interest rate in order to yield "present value" of the stream of payments, which must be an amount not less than the secured claim to be confirmable. It is not proper to fix a rate of interest different from the contract rate in a vacuum, merely as part of allowance inquiry, but only as part of plan confirmation. In practical terms based on the information given the interest is capped at the value of the vehicle unless §1325(a)(9) hanging paragraph applies, but even in that case the present value analysis trumps any contractual accrual of interest. In any case, the rate is not 3.25% (alleged prime) as this borrower would not qualify for a prime rate loan, but rather some increment above that under the principles announced in Till. Rather than waste yet more time and resources, the court will fix the cramdown rate at 5% (prime plus 1.75) absent other evidence or information. But this only works for an otherwise confirmable plan.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Chapter 13

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 2/19/20:

This is the Trustee's objection to the debtor's enhanced claim of homestead under CCP §704.730(a)(3)(B) against the property commonly known as 80 Gingerwood, Irvine, CA.

The Debtor filed a voluntary chapter 7 petition on January 17, 2019. On the filing date, Debtor indicated on his Schedule I that he was employed but temporarily disabled and that he was receiving State Disability Income (SDI) in the amount of $1,026.29 per month. He indicated that he did not expect an increase or a decrease in income within the year after filing. On this original filing, Debtor claimed a homestead exemption of $100,000.

According to Debtor's testimony, he returned to work in mid-May. In the beginning of October, he amended his Schedules I and J and disclosed that he was no longer receiving disability, that he was employed as a chain store merchandizer, and that he had a monthly net income of $835.21. On the same day he amended his Schedules, Debtor filed a motion to convert the case to chapter 13, which went uncontested. There is an underlying implication that the conversion was self-serving inasmuch as the Chapter 7 trustee reportedly showed some signs of interest in selling the Gingerwood property. But we have no real evidence of improper motive such as in Marrama v. Citizens Bank, 549 U.S. 365 (2007).

In early December, Debtor amended his Schedules I and J again. On his amended Schedule I, Debtor indicated that he was still employed but added that he was again temporarily disabled and recorded income only from state disability. On his amended Schedule J, he disclosed that he had a negative net monthly income of $292.80. A few weeks after amending his Schedules I and J, Peyton amended his Schedules A, B, and C. He indicated that the value of his property increased, and he changed his homestead exemption to $175,000. Debtor claimed this increased exemption under CCP § 704.730(a)(3)(B), which requires that a Debtor must be mentally or physically disabled and unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. The Trustee has filed a timely objection.

1. The Debtor Was Permitted to Amend His Schedules

First, we must determine if the Debtor was even able to amend his Schedules. A debtor may amend his petition, list, schedule or statement at any time before the case is closed. FRBP. 1009(a). This is liberally construed, and a debtor does not need court approval before amending his schedules. In re Michael, 163 F.3d 526, 529 (9th Cir. 1998). There does not seem to be any dispute whether Debtor was entitled to amend his Schedules, the conflict is whether he can claim this enhanced homestead exemption.

2. The Debtor Has the Burden of Proving He is Entitled to the Exemption

There is confusion in the papers over who has the burden of proof when a debtor claims an exemption. Debtor argues that the Trustee bears the burden of proving the homestead exemption was not properly claimed. This argument is consistent with FRBP 4003(c). The rule in the Ninth Circuit had been that a debtor's claimed exemption is presumptively valid and the party objecting to a debtor's exemption has the burden of proving that the claimed exemption is improper. In re Carter, 182 F.3d 1027 (9th Cir. 1999).

However, new authority has shifted this burden. The Supreme Court has held, after the ruling in Carter, that state law governs substance claims and burden of proof is substantive given its importance to the outcome of cases. Raleigh v. Ill. Dep't of Revenue, 530 U.S. 15 (2000). The Ninth Circuit, interpreting the ruling of Raleigh, found that the burden of proving state law exemptions should be governed by the appropriate state law. In re Diaz, 547 B.R. 329 (9th Cir. BAP 2016). The court in Diaz acknowledged the holding in Carter, that the burden of proof for claiming exemptions was dictated by federal rule 4003(c), but Raleigh was decided after Carter. The authority now appears to be that when a state law exemption statute specifically allocates the burden of proof to the debtor, Rule 4003(c) does not change that allocation. Id. See also In re Tallerico, 532 B.R. 774, 788 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2015); In re Pashenee, 531 B.R. 834, 837 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2015); In re Barnes, 275 B.R. 889, 898 n.2 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2002).

This court adopts the burden of proof outlined in Diaz and in accordance with California state law, which dictates the burden of proof is on the party claiming the exemption. Cal Code Civ Proc §703.580. Therefore, Debtor has the burden of proving that the homestead exemption he claimed under CCP §704.730(a)(3)(B) is valid. But is that burden carried?

3. The Preponderance of Evidence Suggests Debtor is Entitled to the Homestead Exemption.

To claim the exemption under CCP §704.730(a)(3)(B) a debtor must be: (1) physically or mentally disabled and (2) unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. A debtor's entitlement to this exemption is determined based on the facts that existed at the time the bankruptcy was filed. Debtor has provided enough evidence to establish that he does have a mental illness. First, at the time he filed his petition he was on temporary disability and was receiving temporary state disability income. Being on disability suggests that he indeed had some mental or physical illness.

Second, Debtor provided testimony from Dr. Boerlin who claims that Debtor suffered and continues to suffer from a psychiatric illness. Debtor has been a patient of Dr. Boerlin for several years and Dr. Boerlin's certification as a Diplomate in psychiatry by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology seems to qualify him to make this determination. Further, Debtor testified that in January 2019 he was discharged from Northbound, an addiction rehabilitation center, due to the severity of his mental health problems. The Trustee has not provided any evidence indicating that Debtor was not deserving of the state disability income or evidence that Dr. Boerlin's testimony is not credible. Therefore, Debtor has met his burden of proof that he did have a mental disability on the petition date.

The more difficult question is whether Debtor has met his burden of proving the second element, that when the bankruptcy was filed, he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. Gainful employment is substantial if it involves significant physical or mental activity and is gainful if it is done for pay or profit, whether or not a profit is realized. In re Rostler, 169 B.R. 408 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1994). The debtor must be physically, mentally, and emotionally able to work enough hours, at a high enough net wage, to contribute materially to his support. In re Neff, No. BAP CC-12-1664-KITAD, 2014 WL 448885 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2014).

The Trustee argues that by filing an amended Schedule I asserting employment income in conjunction with the motion to convert, the Debtor is judicially estopped from arguing that he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment (as of the petition date). These actions are suspicious, and it is possible that he is trying to take advantage of the court by claiming an ability to work at one point and an inability to work at another, whenever it is convenient for him. However, it is also possible that Debtor suffered from a mental illness at the time he filed his petition, attempted to return to work, but was ultimately unable to do so successfully because of his mental illness. The court's concern is to determine Debtor's condition at the time of filing. Returning to work and converting the case to chapter 13, several months after the petition date, is not determinative that Debtor was trying to take advantage of the court or that he was able to engage in substantial gainful employment at the time of filing. Subsequent recovery from a mental illness does not indicate that someone never suffered from a mental illness that prevented them from engaging in substantial gainful employment, particularly as here where relapse seems to have occurred.

It should be said that Debtor's arguments are not totally convincing. Debtor argues that because he was on disability at the time that he filed for bankruptcy he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. Being on disability may indicate that Debtor was not able to work at Southern Glazers Wine & Spirits however, it does not necessarily indicate that he was not able to engage in any type of substantial gainful employment. Receiving disability from one job is not determinative that he cannot have substantial gainful employment elsewhere.

But Debtor also presents Dr. Boerlin's testimony where he claims that Debtor was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment at the date of filing, which is convincing and is largely not rebutted. The timeline of Debtor's and Dr. Boerlin's relationship is concerning. The court is concerned over what Debtor's condition was on the petition date, and although he has been Dr. Boerlin's patient for several years, we are unsure of when Dr. Boerlin last saw Debtor to diagnose him. Dr. Boerlin testifies that since January 2019, Debtor has been suffering from a disability that prevents him from engaging in substantial gainful employment, but when did Dr. Boerlin make this determination? Debtor became Dr. Boerlin's patient most recently starting on February 20, 2019, which is a month after the petition. Considering Debtor was able to return to substantial gainful employment, albeit shorty, only five months after the petition was filed, it would have been helpful to know when Dr. Boerlin last saw Debtor to form his diagnosis.

Further, according to Debtor's testimony, he was a patient at Northbound rehabilitation center in January 2019, where he was supposedly discharged due to his mental illness. Why did Debtor not include any testimony from employees at the rehabilitation center to corroborate his claim?

Neither party's arguments give a clear indication of Debtor's condition on the date of filing, but the facts preponderate in the Debtor's favor. While being on disability does not prove definitively that Debtor was unable to engage in any substantial gainful employment, it does suggest mental illness prevented him from doing so. Further, while we do not have the exact timeline, Debtor was under Dr. Boerlin's psychiatric care intermittently for several years and met with him only a month after the filing. The court will defer to Dr. Boerlin's medical expertise as he indicates that Debtor was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment at the filing date because of his mental illness. The Trustee's only real argument is that Debtor is trying to take advantage of the court by claiming at one point he could work so he could get his case converted to chapter 13, but is now claiming that he was unable to work so he can claim this homestead exemption. While this inconsistency is noteworthy, it not enough to overcome Debtor's evidence. It is not inconceivable that he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment on the date of the petition, attempted to go back to work and converted his case to chapter 13, but ultimately had to go back on disability as his relapsed illness overtook him. Evidence of being on disability at the time of filing and the testimony from the seemingly qualified Dr. Boerlin persuades the court, on balance, that at the date of filing Debtor was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment, thus fulfilling the second element of the exemption.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/23/20:

In this motion creditor Joseph Samec asks that the bankruptcy case be dismissed. Although drawn on the caption of an adversary proceeding it is not at all clear that is what was intended, since the requested relief pertains to the underlying case. The grounds offered are both under title 18 (bankruptcy crimes) as well as under sections 541, 554 and 707 of Title 11. Of these only 11 U.S.C. § 707 can be said to have much relevance. Title 18 contains definitions of what can be prosecuted as crimes, but movant does not establish his standing. It would seem prosecution is the domain of the U.S. Attorney. Section 541 has little relevance as this section only establishes what is regarded as property of the estate. Section 554 governs abandonment of property of the estate and has no relevance to what movant is seeking here. Section 707 governs when a case should be dismissed or converted. This at least has some relevance to the motion. The moving papers contain a list of exaggerated or missing creditors, lawsuits pending but not mentioned, possible assets not accounted for, and generally an allegation that the bankruptcy is filed in bad faith. No evidence is offered unless the court could construe the entire motion as a declaration, since it is offered under oath. Finding missing assets or dealing with misrepresented creditors, is usually the province of the appointed Chapter 7 trustee, in this case, Thomas Casey. Or, these alleged omissions and misrepresentations could form the basis of an order denying discharge under §727(a)(2),(3),(5) etc., but that needs to be the subject of an adversary proceeding timely(?) brought by Mr. Samec (or maybe the trustee), not whatever this is. The court suggests that he retain counsel if he is serious about pursuing these issues.

#8.00 Motion To Vacate Previous Order For Relief Of Automatic Stay In Favor Of Arbitration Dated April 3, 2020 And Reinstate Stay

Docket 95

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/23/20:

Since apparently the creditor does not oppose the motion, provided some conditions are met, such as payment of fees, the court needs to hear just exactly how this matter would unfold here. This court is not an arbitration service. The court would require, at a minimum, that the issues be properly teed up in an adversary proceeding drafted with the jurisdiction of this court on "core matters" in mind. Is this about debtor's discharge at this point? Is this to be an action by debtor to obtain damages for breach of contract and fraud against Seligman relating to the sale of the business? If the latter, there is a standing question as normally litigation on property of the estate is vested in the trustee. This matter is something of a procedural mess and so the court requires the parties to think through these points and clarify procedure before this court will entertain hearing the litigation of the matter. Otherwise, why isn't this just about Seligman filing a proof of claim, and if the debtor objects, turning that into a contested matter? Discharge is a different thing altogether and needs to be brought as an adversary proceeding.

(OST Signed 6-18-20)

Docket 6

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/23/20:

The court has reviewed the opposition and it can be summarized as Lexington's strong doubt that debtor has a viable business, and so it urges the court not to allow use of cash collateral as a way of putting the debtor to a proverbial death. Even if a valid concern that should be the subject of a different motion, either one to dismiss or to convert. The court's task today is narrower i.e. to determine whether the creditor is adequately protected in its use of cash proceeds of receivables, against which Lexington holds a lien, for a finite period. In this both pleadings are lacking. The court presumes that debtor is still writing new bonds in that it has arrangements with other insurance companies so that the pool or receivables remains relatively constant. Is that the case? If the whole argument is that there is enough in the pool of receivables to cover Lexington even if no new bonds are written, even allowing for a poor realization rate, that should be plainly stated. Better explanation is needed by what is meant in debtor's offer of adequate protection confining the lien to new collateral obtained with proceeds of old collateral in which Lexington's lien exists. What does that mean in this business context?

No tentative.

#1.00 Motion For Order Approving Settlement Term Sheet Between the Debtor, Robert J. Hall and Placentia Development Company, LLC

Docket 221

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/24/20:

This is a Rule 9019 motion to approve a "Term Sheet" settlement with the major creditor, Placentia Development Company ("PDC"). It is unopposed. In summary, the terms are that all of the debtor's property will be ceded to PDC (and supplemented by a cash contribution from Mr. Hall, debtor's principal) as full satisfaction of not only PDC's claim but the estate's avoidance powers as well. Debtor makes the obvious point that this is a very challenged case, with the court having already expressed skepticism whether a dismissal or conversion should not be ordered. If debtor in this motion specified what happens next with this case, the court missed it. But, given poor alternatives, it would seem dismissal is the only thing that would make any sense. But absent from the analysis is what happens to any of the other creditors? Some discussion has already occurred suggesting that PDC has bought or is process of buying all the claims. If that is true and has been completed, there is no issue. If, however, any unsecured creditors are being isolated and abandoned, with no means of ever recovering anything, then the court has an issue. The parties have to then persuade the court that viewed from the narrow viewpoint of such a creditor, a conversion would not be a better solution, since at least there would be a trustee who might take a shot at trying to make something of the avoidance powers, or wait on an appeal or renegotiating.... something. This may not be a big issue in dollar terms, but it is big on principle.

No tentative.

#4.00 Individual Debtor's First Amended Disclosure Statement In Support Of Plan Of Reorganization

Docket 324

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/24/20:

The U.S. Trustee's objection was not timely, but Debtor still responded. So, the court will assume away the procedural issues. In response to the UST's objection: Debtor filed an amended plan (mistakenly entered as an amended disclosure statement) on June 16. Debtor also filed a separate response directly addressing the concerns identified in the UST's objection. This response includes additional proposed language that, if ultimately adopted into the plan, would likely address the UST's comments. As of this writing on (6/24), the UST has not filed anything further. No other interested party has filed a response of any kind to the DS.

The DS itself is not particularly user friendly as it does not have a table of contents, nor any accompanying brief to make the document easily navigable. Furthermore, while most of the required disclosures can be found in some form in the DS, it seems to be missing background information such as Debtor's financial history and events leading up to filing the petition. The DS has several exhibits: but the exhibits lack explanations of what they are and how they fit into the proposed plan of reorganization.

Debtor states that all disputes have been resolved, aside from the IRS and Citizens Bank Claims, which the newly added language in the proposed plan purports to address. Debtor states that the plan will pay 100% of the allowed creditor claims. When the UST commented on the DS, the court very likely would have found the DS to have inadequate information. The proposed additional language would, if ultimately adopted, likely satisfy the UST's concerns, and the court's.

Although the DS could benefit from additional background information about Debtor's case: it may not be necessary. However, the new proposed language should be integrated into the DS. In sum: Debtor's DS is not an easy document to navigate and has some technical Deficiencies, but likely nothing fatal. The UST's objection has been addressed, though the UST may not have had an opportunity to review the proposed changes. No other party in interest has objected or opposed the DS. If the UST does not comment further before the hearing, the DS can likely be approved.

Conditionally approve.

#2.00 Plaintiff's Motion For Temporary Abstention
(cont'd from 4-29-20)
(rescheduled from 4-30-2020 at 10:00 a.m. per court)

Docket 38

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/25/20:

As movant seems to acknowledge, this is not the opportune time to consider abstention. Usually the court strongly considers abstention where the parties have litigated to an advanced stage in state court, even where dischargeability is the question, under the belief that by careful findings and the doctrine of collateral estoppel, duplication can be avoided. That does not seem to be the case here inasmuch as movant admittedly needs to amend his complaint to even allege fraud or other basis that might support non-dischargeability. Consequently, since the litigation is not well along in state court (apparently) there is less reason to abstain from what is a core bankruptcy matter, i.e. dischargeability.

Deny.

Tentative for 3/12/20:

This motion is largely indistinguishable from Bagot v. Griffithe; 8:19-ap-01201. The adopted tentative ruling from that case, incorporated below, also finds application here, and the motion should be granted. See below.

"Tentative for 3/5/20:

This is the Plaintiff's motion for "Temporary Abstention" and for stay of the pending litigation in favor of a proceeding in Washington State Court. Oddly, the motion is not brought for permissive abstention under 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c) but rather under the court's "inherent power to regulate their dockets and should use it to stay litigation pending resolution of another case or arbitration proceeding where it will dispose of or narrow the issues to be resolved in that litigation." In re Barney's Inc., 206 B.R. 336, 343-44 (Bankr.

S.D.N.Y. 1997). As near as the court can determine, the standards are largely the same.

It is well established that a federal court has "broad discretion to stay proceedings as an incident to its power to control its own docket." Clinton v. Jones, 520 U.S. 681, 706-707, 117 S. Ct. 1636 (1997); see also Landis v. North American Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254-255, 57 S. Ct. 163, 166 (1936) ("[T]he power to stay proceedings is incidental to the power inherent in every court to control the disposition of the causes on its docket with economy of time and effort for itself, for counsel, and for litigants. How this can best be done calls for the exercise of judgment, which must weigh competing interests and maintain an even balance."); O'Dean v. Tropicana Cruises International, Inc., 1999 WL 335381, *4 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (federal court suspended action pending disposition of arbitration proceeding); Evergreen Marine Corp. v. Welgrow International, Inc., 954 F.Supp. 101, 103-105 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (authorized stay in federal proceedings pending disposition of related foreign action).

The Ninth Circuit has enumerated factors a bankruptcy court should weigh when it considers whether to permissively abstain from hearing a matter before it. See Christiansen v. Tucson Estates, Inc. (In re Tucson Estates, Inc.), 912 F.2d 1162, 1167 (9th Cir. 1990). Those factors include: (1) the effect or lack thereof on the efficient administration of the estate if a Court recommends abstention,(2) the extent to which state law issues predominate over bankruptcy issues, (3) the difficulty or unsettled nature of the applicable law, (4) the presence of a related proceeding commenced in state court or other non-bankruptcy court, (5) the jurisdictional basis, if any, other than 28 U.S.C. § 1334,(6) the degree of relatedness or remoteness of the proceeding to the main bankruptcy case, (7) the substance rather than form of an asserted core proceeding, (8) the feasibility of severing state law claims from core bankruptcy matters to allow judgments to be entered in state court with enforcement left to the bankruptcy court, (9) the burden of the bankruptcy court's docket, (10) the likelihood that the commencement of the proceeding in bankruptcy court involves forum shopping by one of the parties, (11) the existence of a right to a jury trial, and (12) the presence in the proceeding of non-debtor parties.

Plaintiff cites a less exhaustive five factor analysis for suspending or staying a nondischargeability action as follows: (1) The burden of the proceeding on the defendant; (2)The interest of the plaintiff in expeditiously pursuing the action and prejudice resulting from any delay;(3) The convenience of the court in the management of its cases and the efficient use of judicial resources; (4) The interests of non-parties to the litigation; and (5) The interest of the public in the pending civil and criminal litigation. In re Government Securities Corp., 81 B.R. 692, 694 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1987). See also, Southwest Marine, Inc. v. Triple A Mach. Shop, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 805, 809 (N.D. Cal. 1989).

Although the parties do not agree on which set of factors is correct, the parties do agree that not all of the above factors are applicable nor are they of equal weight. Plaintiff's most persuasive argument for abstention from this court, and one that Defendant does not dispute, is that Plaintiff and Defendant are already heavily engaged in an action in Washington state court. According to Plaintiff, the allegations in the state court action mirror those of the allegations made in this adversary proceeding. Defendant argues that this is a false assertion as there is no mention of anything in the Washington state court action that mirror Plaintiff's §727 claims, although Defendant does concede that Plaintiff's §523 claims are mirrored by the allegations in the Washington state court action. The Washington state court action was filed over a year ago and is reportedly set for trial in April of 2020. Consequently, it seems feasible for the Washington matter to proceed to trial and judgment on the issues underlying the §523(a) claims (and certain of the §727 theories involving pre-petition behavior). Provided that Plaintiff is careful in obtaining detailed and clear findings, Plaintiff can then resolve this adversary proceeding under collateral estoppel theories by Rule 56 motion. To the extent that Defendant is correct in his assertion that Plaintiff's §727 claims are not mirrored in the state court action, Plaintiff asserts that he will simply drop those claims as they will likely be unnecessary after the state court rules on the underlying claims. Plaintiff has already obtained relief from stay. Considering the resources that the parties have already expended in Washington, including pre-trial motions, discovery, etc., the parties should likely finish what they started up there. This approach would conserve resources here and would not likely result in duplication of effort.

Concerning the administrative law claims and SEC claims pending in Washington State against Defendant, Plaintiff argues that resolution of these claims will help narrow the issues even further or could even provide additional probative details, which Plaintiff argues is a proper justification for abstention. Defendant argues that these other cases should not be considered for purposes of abstention because they do not directly involve Plaintiff, but this argument is less compelling because Defendant does not attempt to argue that such litigation would not serve to narrow the issues or provide useful additional background. Defendants other arguments against abstention, including the recent withdrawal of Defendant's counsel and a vague argument regarding the purported untimeliness of this motion, do not really move the needle in Defendant's favor. Related to the purported untimeliness of this motion is Defendant's argument that this motion is premature because if Defendant's dismissal motion is granted, then this motion becomes essentially moot. Plaintiff notes that Defendant cites no authority for the proposition that dismissal of the complaint would also end the Washington state court action. Defendant's argument also ignores that complaints after Rule 12 motions can be (and very likely would be) amended if they are found to be defective.

In sum, Plaintiff has made a persuasive case for staying proceedings in this court and allowing the parties to litigate what are largely matters of state law in Washington state court, especially since the parties are on the doorstep of trial. Thus, as Plaintiff urges, the court should use its power under §105(a) to temporarily abstain or stay this adversary proceeding pending resolution in Washington state court. Plaintiff is cautioned to obtain clear and dispositive findings on the operative issues such that collateral estoppel can govern in subsequent Rule 56 motion.

Grant abstention. This adversary proceeding is stayed until Plaintiff seeks to return for a Rule 56 motion. The court will schedule a status conference approximately 180 days out for evaluation."

"Tentative for 3/5/20:

This is the continued hearing on the Defendant's Rule 12(b) Motion to Dismiss. This analysis is divided into two sections. The first section deals with the subject matter jurisdiction issue. The second deals with whether claims for relief have been plausibly stated, sufficient to survive the motion.

I. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

At the hearing on January 16, 2020, because there was only sparse authority on the subject, the court requested supplemental briefing regarding whether this court had subject matter jurisdiction over this adversary proceeding in view of the parties' various connections to the cannabis industry (in violation of the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 ("CSA")). In its tentative ruling, the court summarized and excerpted portions of relevant case law and provided its own initial ideas on this narrow issue. That tentative ruling is incorporated herein by reference. Both sides have filed supplemental briefs on the narrow issue identified by the court.

Unfortunately, the supplemental briefing has not provided a definitive answer. Instead, Defendant has, again, cited the case of Northbay Wellness Group, Inc. v. Beyries, 2011 WL 5975445 (Bankr.N.D.Cal. 2011), where the bankruptcy court dismissed the debtor's case based on the equitable doctrine of in pari delicto. However, as this court noted in its earlier tentative ruling, the Ninth Circuit expressly overruled the bankruptcy court's application of the unclean hands doctrine on grounds that the bankruptcy court failed to properly balance the parties' respective wrongdoings.

In the interim, the court's own research has located case law within the Ninth Circuit that may be useful. In Mann v. Gullickson, 2016 WL 6473215 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 2, 2016), the court had to decide whether a contract related to the medical marijuana industry in California was enforceable. The court undertook a comprehensive analysis of the enforceability of contracts containing illegal subject matter. The court noted the specific prohibitions placed on marijuana by the CSA, but also noted that enforcement of contracts containing illegal subject matter resists hard and fast rules. Indeed, the Mann court observed that "[s]ometimes the forfeiture resulting from unenforceability is disproportionately harsh considering the nature of the illegality." Id. at *6. The court, citing the Ninth Circuit Case of Bassidji v. Goe, 413 F.3d 928 (9th Cir. 2005), devised a test of sorts for determining when contracts regarding illegal subject matter may nevertheless be enforceable:

"The Ninth Circuit analyzed federal case law and California precedents... to investigate '[n]uanced approaches to the illegal contract defense, taking into account such considerations as the avoidance of windfalls or forfeitures, deterrence of illegal conduct, and relative moral culpability,' and those considerations 'remain viable in federal court and represent no departure from [federal precedent] . . . [so] long as the relief ordered does not mandate illegal conduct.' Id. at 937-38." Mann, 2016 WL 6473215 at *7.

The Mann court also noted that "[t]he federal government's concern over the CSA's medical marijuana prohibition has waned in recent years, and the underlying policy purporting to support this prohibition has been undermined." Id. at *9. Noting that several states have legalized marijuana in one form or another, the Mann court held:

Given the federal government's wavering policy on medical marijuana in states that regulate this substance, and California's expressed policy interest in allowing qualified patients to obtain medical marijuana, the purported illegality here is not one the Court finds to mandate non-enforcement of the parties' contract. Id.

Here, the plaintiff is alleging breach of contract (among other related causes of action) against Defendant in connection with a marijuana concern. The court has already opined on the gross unfairness that would result if Defendant were allowed to use the bankruptcy system as a shield from his alleged misdeeds. The court also notes that, in the event Plaintiff prevails against Defendant in this adversary proceeding, this court would not be forcing either party to engage in illegal conduct. This was a major point raised in Mann, i.e. the issuance of a remedy would not necessarily entail a resort to unlawful conduct. Not only does this approach properly involve the balancing of relative wrongdoings as required by the Circuit in Northbay, it also harmonizes with the various cases where federal courts refused to become involved at all such as In re Arenas, 514 B.R. 887 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2012), because to do so would necessarily require someone to accommodate ongoing breach of the CSA, such as by selling contraband as assets of the estate.

Defendant argues that accepting jurisdiction would require the court to intervene proactively and thus improperly in what otherwise would have been Defendant's carte blanche ride to discharge. Implicit in this is the argument that the court should leave the wrongdoers where it finds them and only unusual action by the court offensive to the CSA would interrupt Defendant's ride to discharge. But this argument is unpersuasive because it could as easily be looked at another way, i.e. the court would be issuing a change in the status quo by granting the discharge, which is not a right but a privilege, and this action is to determine whether, balancing acts on both sides, that can or should be done consistent with justice. The court is thus persuaded that it does have subject matter jurisdiction, or at least that there is no compelling reason on these facts to decide otherwise.

II. Are Claims for Relief Adequately Stated?

Plaintiff's complaint alleges claims for relief under 11 U.S.C. §727(a) (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), (7) and (12), as well as under 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(2), (4), and (6) (10 causes of action in total). By this motion, Defendant seeks dismissal of all causes of action.

A. FRCP 12(b)(6) Standards

When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). "While a complaint

Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id.

B. Alleged Factual Background

Defendant-Debtor Guy S. Griffithe is an individual who, at all times pertinent hereto, owed a fiduciary duty to Plaintiff Steven Bagot, among others, who "invested" in his companies. Defendant-Debtor allegedly made fraudulent verbal and written statements to solicit "investments" into SMRB, LLC, a Washington State licensed marijuana producer/processor business, and was a signatory to allegedly fraudulent documents underlying the non-bankruptcy litigation in Skagit County Superior Court Case No. 18-2-00544-29 and King County Superior Court Case No. 19-2-00772-9 SEA. Plaintiff provided no less than $650,000.00 to the Defendant through his alter-ego entity (Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc. ("RTSI")) for the benefit of SMRB, LLC. When Plaintiff sued to recover his "investment" and damages for Defendant-Debtor's alleged wrongful conduct, the Defendant-Debtor filed the relevant bankruptcy action as well as this motion to dismiss.

On January 9, 2019, Mr. Bagot filed a complaint with the King County Superior Court Case No. 19-2-00772-9 SEA alleging causes of action against Defendant-Debtor for fraud, negligent misrepresentation, civil conspiracy, breach of contract, unjust enrichment, conversion, promissory estoppel, breach of the fiduciary duties, breach of the duties of good faith and fair dealing, violations of Washington's LLC disclosure requirements and violations of securities laws. The trial is set for April 6, 2020. The complaint is accompanied by Ex. "A", a report by the Washington State Liquor and Cannabis Board ("WSLCB report"), which provides details of Defendant's alleged misconduct and is heavily referenced in both the complaint and the opposition to this motion. Below the court analyzes how each of the alleged claims for relief fit with this background.

B. §727(a)(2)(A)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor, with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor or an officer of the estate charged with custody of property under this title, has transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed, or has permitted to be transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed— property of the debtor, within one year before the date of the filing of the petition[.]" Plaintiff has sufficiently pled this cause of action in the complaint. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges, with the aid of Exhibit A, that Defendant intentionally transferred valuable property belonging to him which reduced the assets available to the creditors and which was made with fraudulent intent. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has transferred (to his alter ego entities, Robert Russell, entities owned by Russell, and other entities not known to Plaintiff), removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed his property, including the funds provided to him by Mr. Bagot, the oil processing machine, $1,000,000 million in product from Emerald City Cultivation, and other assets Defendant claims to have utilized (a portion of) these funds to purchase, assets provided to Defendant by other "investors," as well as Defendant's interests in Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc., Green Acres Pharms, LLC, and SMRB, LLC, among others, and the distributions he receives from those Companies' assets, in addition to other assets which have been concealed, destroyed, transferred without Plaintiff's knowledge. Plaintiff also asserts that this conduct occurred within 1-year of the petition date (June 26, 2019) as Plaintiff initiated legal proceedings against Defendant in late spring of 2018.

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor has concealed, destroyed, mutilated, falsified, or failed to keep or preserve any recorded information, including books, documents, records, and papers, from which the debtor's financial condition or business transactions might be ascertained, unless such act or failure to act was justified under all of the circumstances of the case" It is apparent that Plaintiff has adequately made this allegation in the complaint. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges in several places in the complaint the absence of adequate record keeping by Defendant as noted throughout, specifically in regard to Plaintiff's initial investment of $450,000. Plaintiff also alleges the absence of adequate records related to the purchase of the oil-processing machine and the products purchased from Emerald City Cultivation among other assets. Plaintiff also asserts that he has been attempting to obtain such documentation through discovery without success. Thus, it appears that Plaintiff has adequately alleged that Defendant failed to keep relevant records, and there does not appear to be justification for this failure, taking Plaintiff's allegations as true.

- (A) made a false oath or account;

- (C) gave, offered, received, or attempted to obtain money, property, or advantage, or a promise of money, property, or advantage, for acting or forbearing to act; or
- (D) withheld from an officer of the estate entitled to possession under this title, any recorded information, including books, documents, records, and papers, relating to the debtor's property or financial affairs[.]"

This statute requires that Plaintiff allege: (1) [the debtor] made a statement under oath; (2) the statement was false; (3) [the debtor] knew the statement was false; (4) [the debtor] made the statement with fraudulent intent; and (5) the statement related materially to the bankruptcy case. Matter of Beaubouef, 966 F.2d 174, 178 (5th Cir 1992). False oaths sufficient to justify the denial of discharge include: (1) a false statement or omission in the debtor's schedules or (2) a false statement by the debtor at the examination during the course of the proceedings. Id. at 178; In re Wills, 243 B.R. 58, 62 (B.A.P. 9th Cir.1999). Plaintiff's complaint, including the exhibits, does allege that Defendant made several intentional false statements relating to the bankruptcy case. For example, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has failed to report or disclose several assets, including the hundreds of thousands of dollars he took from Plaintiff and never provided to SMRB, LLC. Plaintiff argues, citing In re Hoblitzell, 223 B.R. 211, 215-16 (Bankr.E.D. Cal. 1998), for the proposition that a false statement or omission is material even if it does not cause direct financial prejudice to creditors. Therefore, although not presented as clearly as it could be, it appears that Plaintiff has sufficiently alleged that Defendant made false statements under oath by failing to disclose several assets known to Defendant in his bankruptcy schedules with an intent to deceive creditors and officers of the court. These specific allegations are likely enough to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements for purposes of Rule 9(b).

This section provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor has failed to explain satisfactorily, before determination of denial of discharge under this paragraph, any loss of assets or deficiency of assets to meet the debtor's liabilities[.]" Here, Plaintiff's complaint, including the additional detail in the Exhibit, has sufficiently alleged the disappearance of identifiable assets no longer available to creditors, including the funds provided to him by Plaintiff, the (funds available for) purchase and transfer of the oil processing machine, the $1,000,000 million (per month) in product purchased from Emerald City Cultivation, and other assets Defendant claims to have utilized a portion of these funds to purchase, assets provided to Defendant by other "investors," as well as Defendant's interests in Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc., Green Acres Pharms, LLC, and SMRB, LLC, among others, and the distributions he receives from those Companies' assets, in addition to other assets which have been concealed, destroyed, transferred without Plaintiff's knowledge.

Defendant does not attempt to explain the loss of these assets, but only points out that the WSLCB report makes no such findings as detailed above. The court notes that the report is lengthy, and the complaint does not make reference to any specific page or paragraph numbers where such information can be easily found. However, in sum, Plaintiff's complaint, which incorporates the WSLCB by reference, does appear to sufficiently allege a cause of action under §727(a)(5), but Plaintiff's complaint could benefit from specific pin cites.

F. §727(a)(6)

The statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless—the debtor has refused, in the case—

(A) to obey any lawful order of the court, other than an order to respond to a material question or to testify;

(B) on the ground of privilege against self-incrimination, to respond to a material question approved by the court or to testify, after the debtor has been granted immunity with respect to the matter concerning which such privilege was invoked; or

(C) on a ground other than the properly invoked privilege against self-incrimination, to respond to a material question approved by the court or to testify[.]"

Plaintiff argues that it is undisputed that as stated in the Complaint, in the King County Superior Court litigation, the Honorable Judge McHale entered an Order ordering Defendant-Debtor provide complete responses and documents in response to Mr. Bagot's discovery requests, which were due no later than June 25, 2019, Defendant allegedly failed to comply with this Order. Plaintiff also argues that Defendant did not object on grounds of privilege against self-incrimination or any other ground, Defendant simply refused to comply. Plaintiff asserts that this failure to cooperate resulted in sanctions being imposed, which Defendant apparently has also refused to pay. There is a question whether "the court" as referenced in the statute means the bankruptcy court only, or might it mean another court such as the Kings County Court. But this point is not developed in the papers. Thus, Plaintiff has likely pled sufficient facts to survive the motion to dismiss.

G. §727(a)(7)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless—the debtor has committed any act specified in paragraph (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of this subsection, on or within one year before the date of the filing of the petition, or during the case, in connection with another case, under this title or under the Bankruptcy Act, concerning an insider[.]"

As discussed above, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant committed the acts in (2), (3), and (6) within 1 year of the petition date. Also as discussed above, Plaintiff's complaint alleges various acts of misconduct during the pendency of the bankruptcy case, including knowingly providing false information in his bankruptcy schedules. Again, the question arises whether the malfeasance in another case must be one under Title 11. But the point is not developed so the pleading seems sufficient.

H. §727(a)(12)

This section states: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the court after notice and a hearing held not more than 10 days before the date of the entry of the order granting the discharge finds that there is reasonable cause to believe that—

(A) section 522(q)(1) may be applicable to the debtor; and

(B) there is pending any proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(A) or liable for a debt of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(B)."

As Plaintiff argues, the complaint details the fraudulent sale of unregistered securities by Defendant, an unregistered security broker/dealer, in Defendant's alter ego entities including Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc. and SMRB, LLC (d.b.a. Green Acres Pharms) (and possibly Green Acres Pharms, LLC, from whom the "Distribution" was paid), as well as his improper conduct while acting in a fiduciary capacity with respect to these dealings and entities. Therefore, Plaintiff has sufficiently pled the first element of this claim. With respect to the second element, there must be pending a proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony or liable for a debt of the kind described in §522(q)(1); Plaintiff's complaint provides sufficient details his pending proceeding against Defendant for, among other things, violating State securities laws and relevant disclosure requirements. Thus, this cause of action is likely sufficient to survive the motion.

I. §523(a)(2)(A)

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for money, property, services, or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit, to the extent obtained by— false pretenses, a false representation, or actual fraud, other than a statement respecting the debtor's or an insider's financial condition[.]" The debtor's intent to deceive may be inferred by circumstantial evidence under the 'totality of the circumstances' test. In re Eashai, 87 F.3d 1082, 1087 (9th. Cir. 1996). Under the relevant test, the Court "may infer the existence of the debtor's intent not to pay if the facts and circumstances of a particular case present a picture of deceptive conduct by the debtor." Id.

As discussed above, the complaint provides ample detail of Defendant's alleged fraudulent misconduct including, allegedly making false statements about his companies' financial situations, matters of ownership, etc. in connection with soliciting investment from Plaintiff. Plaintiff points out that the WSLCB report made several of these findings, all of which are incorporated into the complaint as an exhibit. In sum, there appears to be sufficiently detailed allegations, taken as true, to satisfy the pleading requirements, including those of Rule 9b.

J. §523(a)(4)

This section provides: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny[.]"

For purposes of § 523(a)(4), embezzlement is defined as "the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom such property has been entrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come." Moore v. United States, 160 U.S. 268, 269, 16 S. Ct. 294, 295, (1885). Further, as explained in Murray v. Woodman (In re Woodman), 451 B.R. 31 (Bankr. D.Idaho), "an intent to deprive the rightful owner of funds only temporarily and not permanently [does] not negate the element of [fraudulent] intent." Id. at 43. "To prevail under § 523(a)(4) for larceny, a creditor must prove that "the debtor has wrongfully and with fraudulent intent taken property from its owner. Larceny differs from embezzlement in the fact that the original taking of property was unlawful, and without the consent of the injured person." King v. Lough (In re Lough), 422 B.R. 727, 735-36 (Bankr. D. Id. 2010). (internal citations omitted)

The complaint appears to allege both embezzlement and larceny while Defendant was acting in a fiduciary capacity. Taking Plaintiff's allegations as true, Defendant obtained money from Plaintiff which he was required to – on two different occasions – provide directly to SMRB, LLC (d.b.a. Green Acres Pharms). Plaintiff alleges that Defendant not only obtained these funds unlawfully from Plaintiff, Defendant either never provided Plaintiff's funds to SMRB or improperly removed them and has failed to provide any accounting for these funds or explain their disappearance, without the consent of Plaintiff. Again, taking Plaintiff's allegations as true, Plaintiff does appear to have pled sufficient facts to survive the motion.

K. §523(a)(6)

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for willful and malicious injury by the debtor to another entity or to the property of another entity[.]" Section 523(a)(6)'s willful injury requirement is met when the debtor has a subjective motive to inflict injury or when the debtor believes that injury is substantially certain to result from his own conduct. Carillo v. Su (In re Su), 290 F.3d 1140, 1142 (9th Cir. 2002). Plaintiff's complaint is replete with allegations of knowing misconduct, including fraud, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, unjust enrichment, etc. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges that false statements in certain written materials induced Plaintiff to invest Defendant's ventures. Taken as true, the allegations in the complaint are sufficient to satisfy the willfulness portion of the statute.

Courts treat the malicious injury requirement of § 523(a)(6) as separate from the willful requirement. According to In re Jercich 238 F.3d 1202, 1209 (9th Cir. 2001): "A 'malicious' injury involves '(1) a wrongful act, (2) done intentionally, (3) which necessarily causes injury, and (4) is done without just cause or excuse.'" Carillo v. Su (In re Su), 290 F.3d 1140, 1146-47 (9th Cir. 2002). Plaintiff alleges conduct that, if true, would satisfy the maliciousness portion of the statute. For example, Plaintiff's complaint alleges that Defendant knowingly made material misstatements or omissions the written material provided to Plaintiff, which ultimately allowed Defendant to obtain the hundreds of thousands of dollars from Plaintiff. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant knew that the money acquired from Plaintiff had not gone for the benefit of SMRB or to purchase an oil processing machine, and also knew that significant damage to plaintiff would certainly result if the money could not be returned to Plaintiff. The WSLCB report also concludes on page 9 that it appears that the investors taken in by Defendant (Plaintiff among them) were the victims of a fraudulent "Ponzi Scheme." For these reasons, Plaintiff's complaint has sufficiently stated claim under section 523(a)(6).

L. Attorney's Fees Under §523(d)

This section states: "If a creditor requests a determination of dischargeability of a consumer debt under subsection (a)(2) of this section, and such debt is discharged, the court shall grant judgment in favor of the debtor for the costs of, and a reasonable attorney's fee for, the proceeding if the court finds that the position of the creditor was not substantially justified, except that the court shall not award such costs and fees if special circumstances would make the award unjust." As should be obvious, none of Defendant's debts have been discharged in connection with the section 523(a)(2) claim as we are still at the pleading stages. Thus, this request for attorney's fees by Defendant is premature and is thus denied.

III. Conclusion

The court does not see a failure of subject matter jurisdiction. The court is persuaded Plaintiff's complaint, though it could be made clearer in places by pin citation to the attached WSLCB report and in a few places raise some dubious theories, does appear to have stated enough for relief under every theory alleged. This is not to say that Plaintiff will succeed on every theory alleged, but simply that the basic pleading requirements have been

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant's Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss these three adversary proceedings. Although there are five dismissal motions on calendar in various Griffithe-related adversary proceedings, these three will be addressed in a single memorandum inasmuch as the issues are identical and, unlike the other two, turn on a question of jurisdiction.

Debtor argues for the first time in his Reply that the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 and several cases addressing the intersection of cannabis and bankruptcy, stand for the general proposition that bankruptcy courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims relating to cannabis. Subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, but this does not obviate the overarching concern for due process and the court notes that the Plaintiffs have had no effective opportunity to address this fundamental issue. Moreover, the court would value their input on the question as none of the cases cited by Defendant deal directly with the issue before the court and the court is not persuaded that the cited authorities can be read quite so broadly as Defendant argues. The issue here can be framed as whether the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction in an adversary proceeding where the Plaintiffs seek to have Defendant/Debtor's debts, incurred through alleged malfeasance, adjudicated as nondischargeable despite the underlying cannabis business venture being simultaneously legal under state law and illegal under federal law.

Even though cannabis sale has now been legal in several states for several years (while the federal law remains against) the only case cited by Defendant that comes close to addressing this precise issue is Northbay Wellness Group v. Beyries, 789 F.3d 956 (9th Cir. 2015). There, an attorney stole money from his client, a legal medical marijuana dispensary, and subsequently filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Id. at 958 The dispensary instituted an adversary proceeding seeking to except its claim from discharge, but the bankruptcy court dismissed the adversary complaint under the "unclean hands" doctrine. Id. at 959 The Ninth Circuit reversed and remanded, explaining that the bankruptcy court failed to balance the parties' respective wrongdoings as required under that doctrine:

"The Supreme Court has emphasized, however, that the doctrine of unclean hands 'does not mean that courts must always permit a defendant wrongdoer to retain the profits of his wrongdoing merely because the plaintiff himself is possibly guilty of transgressing the law.' [Johnson v. Yellow Cab [Transit Co.], 321 U.S. [383, 387, 64 S. Ct. 622, 88 L. Ed. 814 (1944)]. Rather, determining whether the doctrine of unclean hands precludes relief requires balancing the alleged wrongdoing of the plaintiff against that of the defendant, and 'weigh[ing] the substance of the right asserted by [the] plaintiff against the transgression which, it is contended, serves to foreclose that right.' Republic Molding Corp. v. B.W. Photo Utils., 319 F.2d 347, 350 (9th Cir. 1963). In addition, the 'clean hands doctrine should not be strictly enforced when to do so would frustrate a substantial public interest.' EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753 (9th Cir. 1991)." Id. at 960.

The Ninth Circuit in Northbay did not analyze the issue of whether the bankruptcy court had subject matter jurisdiction over the exception to discharge action. Neither the cases cited in the briefs nor any that the court has been able to find analyze and/or expressly settle the jurisdiction issue. The closest possible exception that the court has found occurred near the end of the bankruptcy court's original opinion in Northbay where the court borrowed the reasoning in a dissenting opinion written by Judge Noonan in another case. The bankruptcy court stated in pertinent part:

"It is very unseemly for the court to be asked to grant relief to a plaintiff which claims it lost its cash from illegal drug sales by shoving it into envelopes and then delivering it to its attorney, uncounted and undocumented. This is hardly the behavior of a legitimate business. While the conduct of the parties may have been legal under state law, in the eyes of a federal court they were conspiring to sell contraband. They were in pari delicto, and the funds plaintiffs gave to Beyries were the actual proceeds of illegal drug sales. This is not the sort of case which is supposed to darken the doors of a federal court. See Adler v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 219 F.3d 869, 882 (9th Cir. 2000) (Noonan, Circuit Judge, dissenting)." In Re Beyries, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4710, *1, *5 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. Nov. 28, 2011)

In another case, Olson v. Van Meter (In re Olson), 2018 WL 989263 *1 (9th Cir. BAP Feb. 5, 2018), the debtor's estate included commercial property that was partially being rented out to a cannabis dispensary. The issue before the court was whether such an estate could confirm a plan under chapter 13. The bankruptcy court dismissed the entire case sua sponte on grounds that the debtor had been accepting post-petition rent payments from a cannabis dispensary, and therefore, the debtor was involved in ongoing criminal activity that precluded her from seeking bankruptcy relief. On appeal, the BAP vacated the dismissal on grounds that the bankruptcy court had not made specific findings in connection with the dismissal, and remanded the case for such findings. In a concurring opinion, Judge Tighe stated, "[a]lthough debtors connected to marijuana distribution cannot expect to violate federal law in their bankruptcy case, the presence of marijuana near the case should not cause mandatory dismissal." Id. at *7.

The court takes the above language to imply that in the canvassing of available case law, and contrary to Debtor's suggestion, the Olson court could find no blanket rule that categorically obliterates the bankruptcy court's subject matter jurisdiction simply because cannabis may be involved on some level.

The authorities cited above raise several concerns. The court is uncertain about whether it has subject matter jurisdiction and requires further briefing from the parties; this should be the case in any event given the late raising of the issue. The court is also concerned that if, as Debtor argues, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the dischargeability issue, then Debtor is effectively able to hide behind the bankruptcy process and frustrate the creditors he may have defrauded. Worse still, it is at least conceivable that Debtor could even get his debts discharged despite his own purported wrongful conduct creating those debts. On its face, this result seems to offend the fundamental notions of equity that the bankruptcy court is charged with upholding. Stated differently, perhaps the more applicable maxims of equity here are not only unclean hands but: 'one that seeks equity must do equity', or 'equity will not allow a statute to be used as a cloak for fraud.'

Plaintiffs argue that the relief afforded by bankruptcy law is intended to give a fresh start to the honest but unfortunate Debtor. Plaintiffs argue, therefore, that it would be contrary to bankruptcy policy to allow Debtor to discharge his debts to the extent they were incurred by fraud, misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty, or some other unsavory means. The court may well agree. Thus, the doctrine of in pari delicto seems inapposite in this specific context. In the court's view, gross inequity would result if Debtor could defeat Plaintiffs' complaints based on this court's purported lack of subject matter jurisdiction caused by the underlying illicit activity of both Plaintiffs and Debtor, but still avail himself of the protections and benefits of the Bankruptcy Code.

Chapter 7

Perhaps the better questions are, should only part of the court's jurisdiction be jeopardized and if so, what part? Consistent with the above, maybe the proper role of equity is to deny discharge entirely on grounds of unclean hands allowing neither side of the illegal transactions to benefit? The problem here is that no adequate briefing has been received on this central question for which authority is apparently sparse.

Continue about 45 days to allow further briefing.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/27/20:

This is supposed to be a pre-trial conference. Sadly, it is not that and this is hardly the first time in this series of cases where the court has been sorely frustrated.

As required by the LBRs, the parties were to have met and conferred in good faith to narrow the issues so that trial time could be focused on those items truly in dispute. Local Rule 7016-1 sets forth a very specific timeline and list of duties incumbent on each side. At LBR 7016-1(b)(1)(C) Plaintiff was to have initiated a meet and confer at least 28 days before the date set for the pre-trial conference. According to Defendant's papers, this did not occur 28 days before the originally scheduled pretrial conference of Feb. 6, or indeed at all until February 13 when Plaintiff reportedly filed his "Pretrial Stipulation" in which he claims it was Defendants who "refused to participate in the pretrial stipulation process" necessitating what is actually a unilateral stipulation. Defendant on the next day, February 14, filed his Unilateral Pretrial Stipulation. Defendant does acknowledge at his page 2, line 1-2 that Plaintiff sent something over to Defendant on January 28, but it was reportedly "not complete in any respect." As to the original date of the Pretrial Conference of February 6, that was very late. Whether that document was anything close to what was later filed unilaterally on Feb. 13 is not clarified. But what is very clear is that these two unilateral "stipulations" are largely worthless in the main goal of narrowing issues inasmuch as the parties seem to be discussing two entirely different complaints. Defendant focuses on what the former trustee (now deceased) may have known about the existence of a loan undisclosed on the schedules made by Frank to WeCosign, Inc., which loan was reportedly worthless in any case, and about how that knowledge should be imputed to Plaintiff Marshack. But why the trustee's knowledge, imputed or otherwise, should justify an alleged misstatement or omission to list assets under oath, is never quite explained. One presumes Defendant will argue materiality. Plaintiff focuses on the alleged use of another corporation, Tara Pacific, as the repository of funds taken from WeCosign as an alleged fraudulent conveyance and then used by Frank and Tara as a piggy bank between 2010 and 2012 and upon alleged misstatements in the schedules about Tara's and Frank's actual average income. While this sounds like a fraudulent conveyance theory the gist seems to be that Tara and Frank were using ill-gotten gains to live on while denying in respective schedules that they had any income (or assets) thus comprising a false oath. There probably are connections between these different stories, but that is not made at all clear (and it must be made clear). Plaintiff's overlong "stipulation" is written more like a 'cut and paste' brief containing long tables with over 59 footnotes inserted. One presumes this represents a good faith compilation of bank records, but even that is left unclear. But the language used reads purely as advocacy, not an attempt to narrow the disputed facts in a way the other side can sign.

Buried in the Defendant's recitations (at page 4, ¶ 13) is the argument that the case should be dismissed as outside the statute of limitation (or statute of repose in Defendant's terms) described at §727(e)(1). Why this was not raised 50+ months ago when the action was filed by Rule 12(b) motion or otherwise is not explained. What the Defendant expects the court to do with this point now is also not explained.

In sum, this case is still a disorganized mess. This is not the first time the court has voiced its utter frustration with this series of cases. Rather than being ready for trial, we are very much still at the drawing board. The court is not happy about it as this is hardly a young case.

What is the remedy? The court could order sanctions against either side, or maybe both sides, and that would be richly deserved. The court could decide that Plaintiff as the party with the initial duty under the LBRs should suffer the brunt of just consequences by a dismissal, as the ultimate sanction. But however tedious and frustrating this has become the court would rather see these cases decided on their merits (if any) if that is possible. But what the court will not do is to further indulge these parties in disobeying the LBRs and generally continuing to shamble along, never getting anywhere. Therefore, it is ordered:

1. The parties will immediately meet and confer about reducing the two unilateral 'stipulations' into an intelligible, single, useful list of items not in dispute and therefore requiring no further litigation;
2. The resulting stipulation will be concise, user-friendly and focused on the actual legal issues to be tried;
3. The stipulation will contain a concise list of exhibits to be offered at trial identified by number for Plaintiff and letter for Defendant;
4. The parties will attempt in good faith to resolve any evidentiary objections to admission of the exhibits, and if agreement cannot be reached, state concisely the reasons for or against admissibility;

5. The stipulation will contain a list of witnesses to be called by each side, with a very brief synopsis of the expected testimony;
6. All factual matters relevant and truly in dispute will be listed, by short paragraph;
7. All legal issues to be decided will be separately listed, by paragraph;
8. Any threshold issues such as Defendants argument about statute of repose will be separately listed along with a suggested means of resolving the issue; and
9. Both sides will estimate expected length of trial, mindful that the court requires all direct testimony by declaration with the witnesses available at trial for live cross and re-direct.

In sum the parties are to do their jobs. If the court's order is not followed in enthusiastic good faith, and completely with the goal of narrowing the issues, and if the resulting product is not a concise, user-friendly joint pretrial stipulation, the offending party or parties will be subject to severe sanctions which may include monetary awards and/or the striking or either the complaint or answer.

Continue about 60 days to accomplish the above.

#12.00 Creditor Remares Global, LLC Motion To Allow It To Intervene in Adversary Proceeding

Docket 43

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/25/20:

Two very similar motions brought by the same party in two different adversary proceedings. These are the motions under Rule 24 of Remares Global LLC ("Remares") to intervene. The oppositions are also nearly identical. Because there are no meaningful differences in either the facts or applicable law, they are combined in this single memorandum. The adversary proceedings in question are:

- 1) Richard A. Marshack, in his capacity as Chapter 7 Trustee v. Olga Shabanets as trustee of the 2012 Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Igor Shabanets etc. (8:20-ap-01002);
- 2) Richard A. Marshack, in his capacity as Chapter 7 Trustee v. Rock Star Beverly Hills, LLC et al (8:20-ap-01023)

Both motions are opposed by the chapter 7 trustee, Richard Marshack ("Trustee").

The background facts do not appear to be substantively disputed.

The Olga Shabanets Adversary Proceeding

This adversary proceeding is to recover about $3 million in cash and securities (the "Funds") debtor Igor Shabanets ("Debtor") allegedly fraudulently transferred to his "2012 Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Igor Shabanets dated 11/12/2012" In April 2019, Remares obtained a $10,314,112.97 judgment ("Judgment") against Debtor in Florida. Remares recorded a Certificate of Lien and caused a levy to be served upon Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. ("ML") which then froze the Funds. Remares then domesticated its Judgment in California and caused Debtor to be served with an Order to Appear for Examination ("ORAP"), and again levied on the Funds at ML. In August 2019, Remares further filed and served the Trust with a fraudulent transfer action in state court to recover the Funds (the "Trust Avoidance Action").

As part of the ML levy, the state court ordered ML to deposit the Funds with the State Court. Prior to depositing the Funds, however, Debtor filed his bankruptcy petition. Remares then removed the Trust Avoidance Action to the bankruptcy court which created this Adversary Proceeding. Thereafter, Remares filed a motion to cause ML to deposit the Funds with the bankruptcy court which was granted causing ML to deposit $3,033,215.05. On April 2, 2020, the Trustee substituted into the Adversary Proceeding. In response, the bankruptcy court terminated Remares as a party to the Avoidance Action. In late April 2020, Remares learned it was no longer a party.

Chapter 7

In April 2019, Remares obtained a judgment against Debtor in Florida. Remares then domesticated its Judgment in California. On May 13, 2019, Remares caused an abstract of judgment ("Abstract") to be recorded with the Orange County Recorder's Office which placed a lien on 2 Monarch Cove, Dana Point, CA ("2 Monarch"). Five months after Remares recorded its abstract, Debtor allegedly fraudulently transferred 2 Monarch to Rock Star Beverly Hills, LLC ("Rock Star"). Pursuant to California Code of Civil Procedure ("CCP") § 697.390, Remares' Abstract still encumbers 2 Monarch despite the transfer to Rock Star. As a result, in November 2019 Remares filed and served Rock Star and Debtor with a fraudulent transfer action in state court to void the transfer of 2 Monarch to Rock Star (the "Rock Star Avoidance Action"). Prior to obtaining a judgment in the Rock Star Avoidance Action, however, Debtor filed his bankruptcy petition. Remares then removed the Rock Star Avoidance Action to the bankruptcy court which created this Adversary Proceeding.

As noted above, in April, Trustee was substituted into this adversary and Remares was terminated as a party.

The Declaratory Relief Adversary Proceedings

On May 8, 2020, Remares filed a complaint against the Trustee, Debtor, and Rock Star, seeking declaratory relief regarding the validity, priority, or extent of an alleged lien on the 2 Monarch property. This initiated adversary proceeding number 8:20-ap-01078. Also on May 8, 2020, Remares filed a complaint against the Trustee, Debtor, and Ms. Shabanets, seeking declaratory relief regarding the validity, priority, or extent of alleged lien(s) on certain funds deposited with the Court in this case, initiating adversary proceeding number 8:20-ap-01079.

Reasons for Intervention

Remares seeks to intervene in both adversary proceedings to ensure that the wording of any judgment would specifically note that the transfers were both void ab initio as opposed to simply "avoided" as the Trustee requests. Remares argues that the wording of the judgment is of great importance, and that Trustee's preferred wording would be detrimental to Remares' interests.

Remares' Standing

The Trustee's primary argument presents a threshold issue, one of Remares' asserted lack of standing to intervene in both matters. Specifically, Trustee asserts that "an intervenor of right must have Article III standing in order to pursue relief that is different from that which is sought by a party with standing." Town of Chester v. Laroe Estates, Inc., 137 S. Ct. 1645, 1651 (2017). The "irreducible constitutional minimum" of standing, as explained by the Supreme Court, has three elements: "[t]he plaintiff must have (1) suffered an injury in fact, (2) that is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) that is likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision." Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547 (2016)

Here, Trustee argues that Remares is seeking different relief from that sought by Trustee, and therefore, must demonstrate its standing to intervene as a matter of right, which it has failed to do. First, Trustee argues that the debtor-in-possession wholly displaced Remares as the real-party-in-interest to pursue fraudulent transfer claims of the Debtor when the Debtor filed his voluntary petition for bankruptcy, as those claims became property of the Estate. Cf. Capriati Construction Corp. v. SPER, Inc. (In re Capriati Construction Corp.), 2018 WL 1404439 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2018) ("The trustee's standing to sue on behalf of the estate is exclusive; a debtor's creditors cannot prosecute [fraudulent transfer claims] belonging to the estate absent abandonment."); see also Hanlin v. Frazer (In re Vandevort), 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 4535 at *17 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2009). Trustee then argues that when the Trustee was appointed following the conversion to Chapter 7, the Trustee displaced the debtor-in-possession as the real- party-in-interest to pursue the fraudulent transfer claims. Trustee argues that he has exclusive standing to pursue fraudulent transfer claims belonging to the Estate, leaving Remares without any independent basis or standing to intervene in this adversary action.

In reply, Remares concedes that Trustee is currently the only party-in-interest, but that Trustee's conclusion that Remares lacks standing is erroneous. Remares argues "[s]tanding is determined at the time of the lawsuit's commencement, and we must consider the facts as they existed at that time the complaint was filed[.]" Skaff v. Meridien N. Am. Beverly Hills, LLC, 506 F.3rd 832, 850 (9th Cir. 2007). Here, Remares argues, there is no dispute Remares had standing at the time it filed the state fraudulent transfer action against Debtor because it had a judgment against Debtor.

Remares argues that the filing of the bankruptcy petition did not cause Remares to lose its standing. A creditor who files a prepetition fraudulent transfer action does not lose standing when a trustee substitutes in. See Unisys Corp. v. Dataware Prods., Inc., 848 F.2d 311, 313-14 (1st Cir. 1988). The "prepetition standing of a creditor plaintiff is not 'lost' but rather its rights are superseded unless and until claims are abandoned under section 544[.]" In re Vandervort, 2009 WL 7809927, pg. 6 (BAP 9th Cir. 2009).

Remares' cited authorities do not obviously and conclusively establish its standing. For example, Skaff was not a bankruptcy case and is factually quite dissimilar. Nothing in Skaff can be explicitly interpreted to mean that when an adversary proceeding commences, a party with prepetition claims or even a judgment has automatic standing to intervene, especially when there is a chapter 7 trustee involved. Similarly, Unisys

Corp. did not discuss standing. In fact, the word "standing" does not appear at all in the opinion. Thus, Remares' citation to that case is of very limited value. Finally, Remares' citation to Vandervort, an unpublished opinion, does offer some guidance, but not necessarily in Remares' favor. It is probable that Remares' reliance on this case stems from the first portion of the quote above where the court observes that "prepetition standing of a creditor plaintiff is not 'lost'[".] This could be taken to mean that Remares did not lose its standing, but the problem is the second half of the sentence where the court clarifies that such a creditor's rights are superseded unless and until the claims are abandoned under section 544, which clearly Trustee has not done. Thus, Remares' standing to bring this motion for intervention is somewhat uncertain. Perhaps the right balance is to say that Remares' did not lose its standing, only that, at present, Trustee's exclusive right to pursue the fraudulent transfer actions supersedes that of Remares.

Intervention Standards

FRCP 24, made applicable in bankruptcy proceedings through FRBP 7024, provides for two types of intervention: (1) intervention of right and (2) permissive intervention. Remares argues that it should be entitled to intervention of right under FRCP 24(a)(2), and argues that permissive intervention is appropriate.

FRCP 24(a)(2) provides: "[o]n timely motion, the court must permit anyone to intervene who: ... (B) claims an interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of the action, and is so situated that disposing of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede the movant's ability to protect its interest, unless existing parties adequately represent that interest." An applicant for intervention of right is required to show that: (1) it has a significant protectable interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of the action; (2) the disposition of the action may, as a practical matter, impair or impede the applicant's ability to protect its interest; (3) the application is timely; and (4) the existing parties may not adequately represent the applicant's interest. U.S. v. Alisal Water Corporation, 370 F.3d 915, 919 (9th Cir. 2004); U.S. v. City of Los Angeles, California, 288 F.3d 391, 397 (9th Cir. 2002). The party seeking to intervene bears the burden of showing that all requirements for intervention have been met. Courts are guided primarily by practical and equitable considerations, and the requirements for intervention are broadly interpreted in favor of intervention. Alisal Water, 370 F.3d at 919.

All four conditions for intervention as a matter of right are analyzed below:

Significant Protectable Interest Relating to The Action

Remares argues that as a result of its liens through the (i) Lien Certificate, (ii) Florida Writ, (iii) California Writ, (iv) ORAP, and (v) Notice of Judgment Lien, and (vi) the abstract of judgment Remares has significant protectable interests in the Funds and 2 Monarch. Remares argues that it previously filed these actions in state court so that it could cause the transfers to be "void ab initio" and for the court to determine that its liens have a higher priority than any other involuntary liens. Thus, as a secured creditor Remares argues it has a significant protectable interest in the Funds which are the subject of the litigation.

Moreover, Remares argues that creditors in Remares' position have an interest in actions impacting recoveries for creditors' claims in a case. See Matter of Munford, Inc., 115 B.R. 388,389 (Bankr. N.D. Ga 1990) (holding that a creditors' committee had a right to intervene in a substantive consolidation action because it "could materially affect" the creditor's ability to collect on their claims). Thus, Remares argues that it has an interest in both the Funds and 2 Monarch, and so it has a protectable interest in the actions.

Trustee reiterates that the relief to be obtained in avoiding such a transfer is exclusively within the Trustee's control. In other words, Remares has no standing or ability to request any remedy on account of the estate's fraudulent transfer claims. The Trustee's assertion of no standing does not seem to be explicitly supported by the case law, but Trustee's exclusive right to pursue the unabandoned fraudulent transfer claims seems beyond question. Still, it does seem that Remares does have a protectable interest relating to the action. Whether it is a winning position remains, of course, to be determined. But this factor narrowly weighs in favor of Remares.

Practical Impairment

Remares argues that the disposition of the Adversary Proceeding may impair Remares' ability to protect its interest. Again, Trustee's goal of the Adversary Proceeding is to avoid the transfers of the Funds and of 2 Monarch, and to make any judgment worded in such a way as to make it more likely that the Trustee can avoid each of Remares' five liens. Because the Trustee seeks the judgment worded in such a way to help it attack Remares' liens, Remares argues that its interests could be impaired and thus it is entitled to intervene in this Adversary Proceeding.

Trustee cites United States v. Ballantyne, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 125632 at *6-7 (S.D. Cal. 2013), where the court observed that avoidance of a fraudulent transfer will impair or impede a person's ability to protect his interest if the relief granted will leave that person with "no remaining interest" as a result of the avoidance. Drawing a distinction between Ballantyne and the present case, Trustee argues that Remares will still have the ability to assert an interest or lien in the Funds and 2 Monarch even if the Trustee prevails in the lawsuit against Ms. Shabanets, the Shabanets Trust, and Rock Star, and obtains a judgment avoiding the transfer of the Funds and 2 Monarch. Remares' remaining interest in the Funds and 2 Monarch is based on its alleged judgment lien and ORAP lien and judgment lien, which are not the subject of this lawsuit but is the subject of the Declaratory Relief Adversaries.

As the court sees it, Remares is trying to prevent unnecessary litigation by having a judgment that finds the transfers in question to be void from the beginning rather than simply voidable. The difference is not solely one of semantics in Remares' view because if the judgment holds the transfer voidable, Remares will have to prove the validity of its liens, which will likely result in more litigation. Trustee does not make it clear whether he believes that the Remares liens are, in fact valid. In any case, this factor likely also weighs narrowly in favor of Remares.

Other Parties Will Not Protect Remares' Interests

Remares argues that the existing parties in the Adversary Proceeding will not adequately protect Remares' interests as they are all adverse to Remares. The Trustee's goal is to recover the Funds and 2 Monarch for the bankruptcy estate generally, and to have the judgment worded in a way so as to attack Remares' liens. Other parties, Debtor, Olga and the Trust, and Rock Star will seek that the Court determine there were no fraudulent transfers and/or that the Funds and 2 Monarch are not property of the Estate. Remares, on the other hand, seeks to have the transfers of the Funds and 2 Monarch deemed "void ab initio." Thus, all parties are potentially adverse to Remares and none will protect Remares' interest. But Trustee argues that he and Remares have the same ultimate goals in these adversary proceedings, which is to have the two transfers nullified. Trustee asserts that if Remares is seeking a determination regarding the validity, extent, or priority of its lien after judgment is entered in favor of the Trustee, it has filed a separate adversary action seeking such relief, but has no ability to seek that determination in connection with this adversary action. But again, if the wording of the judgment will make a significant difference, and Trustee is dedicated to a finding that the transfers are avoidable, rather than void ab initio, then Remares and Trustee appear to be at an impasse where it would be logical for Remares to assume that its rights will not be adequately protected. Thus, this factor also weighs in favor of Remares.

Timeliness

Both parties agree that the motion is timely.

Remares appears to have narrowly carried its burden of demonstrating that it should be allowed to intervene as a matter of right. As the case law seems to suggest, Remares did not lose standing when Trustee was substituted in, Trustee just took precedence over prosecution of the adversary proceedings.

Permissive Intervention

FRCP 24(b)(1)(B) provides that "[o]n timely motion, the court may permit anyone to intervene who: ... has a claim or defense that shares with the main action a common question of law or fact." Here, seemingly by Trustee's own admission, Trustee and Remares would have very similar, if not identical goals in the adversary proceedings. Remares harbors reasonable doubts that Trustee will protect Remares' interests, which could result in unnecessary litigation down the road. The court has an obligation to prevent or discourage unnecessary litigation whenever possible. The dispute that brought about this motion seems like just the kind of issue that could lead to that unwanted end. Thus, in addition to meeting the standards for intervention as a matter of right, Remares has made a case for permissive intervention as an independent ground for granting the motion.

(cont'd from 5-27-20 entered 5-12-20)

Docket 66

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/25/20:

This is Defendant, Bomor Enterprises, LLC's ("Defendant's" or "Bomor's") motion to dismiss Plaintiff, Chapter 7 trustee, Karen Sue Naylor's ("Trustee's") complaint pursuant to Fed R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Trustee opposes the motion.

Basic Background Facts

The basic facts as related in Trustee's complaint are as follows:

On or about June 12, 2002, Defendant Ruffin Road Venture Lot 6 ("RRV6") obtained title to the real property commonly known as 3645 Ruffin Road, San Diego California 92123-1845, assigned Assessor's Parcel Number ("APN") 421-380-06-00 ("Property"). In connection with a loan from San Diego County Credit Union ("SDCU") to RRV6, RRV6 executed and delivered to SDCU a promissory note ("SDCU Note") in the principal amount of $1,600,000.00. The SDCU Note was secured by a deed of trust (the "SDCU Deed of Trust") which was recorded on October 15, 2004, in the Official Records of the San Diego County Recorder's Office as Instrument No. 328843. On or about March 23, 2007, in connection with a loan from The Alliance Portfolio ("Alliance") in the principal amount of $600,000.00 to RRV6, RRV6 executed and delivered to Alliance a promissory note dated March 23, 2007 (the "Alliance Note"). The Alliance Note is secured by a deed of trust which was recorded on March 29, 2007 in the Official Records of the San Diego County Recorder's Office as Instrument No. 2007-0210944 (the "Alliance Deed of Trust").

On or about April 9, 2007, Debtors, Harv and Kim Wyman ("Debtors") acquired a fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Note and Alliance Deed of Trust through an assignment of deed of trust dated April 9, 2007 which was recorded on April 11, 2007 as Instrument Number 2007-0244635 in the Official Records of the San Diego County Recorder's Office (the "Wyman Assignment").

On or about April 9, 2007, Edward G. Kopp and Kerstin Kopp Thee, trustors and trustees of the Kerstin Kopp Trust dated 01-02-92 (collectively, the "Kopps") acquired a fractional 2/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust through an assignment of deed of trust which was recorded on April 11, 2007 as Instrument No. 2007-0244636 in the Official Records of the San Diego County Recorder's Office (the "Kopp Assignment").

On or about April 9, 2007, Terrence W. Cooney ("Cooney") acquired a fractional 3/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust through an assignment of deed of trust which was recorded on April 11, 2007 as Instrument No. 2007-0244637 in the Official Records of the San Diego County Recorder's Office (the "Cooney Assignment").

On or about June 17, 2010, Cooney attempted to assign his fractional beneficial interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust to Phoenix Equity Group, LLC ("Phoenix") through an assignment of deed of trust which was recorded on June 17, 2010 as Instrument No. 2010- 03055434 in the Official Records of the San Diego County Recorder's Office (the "Phoenix Assignment").

On or about September 14, 2010, Phoenix attempted to assign a fractional beneficial interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust to Robert F. Bates, Trustee of the Robert F. Bates Family Trust dated 11/29/90, an individual ("Bates") through an assignment of deed of trust which was recorded on October 15, 2010. On or about January 13, 2014, Bates attempted to assign a fractional beneficial interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust to Bomor through an assignment of deed of trust which was recorded on July 7, 2014 as Instrument No. 2014-0280296 in the Official Records of the San Diego County Recorder's Office (the "Bomor 1st Assignment").

On or about September 6, 2016, the Kopps transferred their fractional 2/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust to Bomor through an assignment of deed of trust which was recorded on July 31, 2017 ("Bomor Second Assignment"). On or about May 25, 2017, in connection with a loan from The Evergreen Advantage LLC ("Evergreen LLC"), RRV6 executed a deed of trust in favor of Evergreen LLC securing a promissory note in the principal amount of $2,250,000.00 (the "Evergreen Deed of Trust"). The Evergreen Deed of Trust was recorded on July 31, 2017.

On or about June 15, 2017, Bomor and RRV6 executed an agreement purporting to subordinate the Alliance Deed of Trust to the Evergreen Deed of Trust (the "Subordination Agreement"). The Subordination Agreement provides, in relevant part, that Bomor is the holder of "an 83.34% fractional interest" in the Alliance Deed of Trust. The Subordination Agreement also appears to erroneously name The Evergreen Advantage Management, Inc. ("Evergreen, Inc.") instead of Evergreen LLC as the "Lender" of the Evergreen Deed of Trust. The date that the Subordination agreement was delivered to Evergreen LLC and/or Evergreen Inc. is unknown.

On July 21, 2017 ("Petition Date"), Debtors filed a voluntary Chapter 7 bankruptcy petition ("Petition"). On July 31, 2017, the Subordination Agreement was recorded as Instrument Number 2017-0344182 in the Official Records of the San Diego County Recorder's Office in violation of the automatic stay created by the filing of the Petition. In Schedule A/B which the Debtors filed with the Petition, Debtors disclosed an interest in the Alliance

Deed of Trust in the amount of $100,000.00. In Amended Schedule C, Debtors have claimed an exemption in this interest in the amount of $21,675.00. The Petition, Schedules and Statement of Financial Affairs did not disclose the Subordination Agreement. On August 28, 2017, prior to the Section 341(a) Meeting of Creditors, Plaintiff obtained a copy of a title report that disclosed the Subordination Agreement.

RRV6 has defaulted under the terms of the Alliance Note and Alliance Deed of Trust. As of April 12, 2016, there was and still is due, owing and payable on the Alliance Note the sum of $1,820,264.05. As the owner and holder of a fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Note and Alliance Deed of Trust, Plaintiff argues she is entitled to payment in the amount of at least $303,377.34.

The Causes of Action

Trustee's complaint alleges three causes of action, as follows:

- 1) Declaratory relief pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201, 11 U.S.C. §§ 105, and 362(a): If it was effective after the filing of the Petition, then the Subordination Agreement was an act to obtain possession of and/or exercise control over, or an act to create, perfect, or enforce any lien against Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust, which is property of the Estate. Plaintiff argues that this would constitute a violation of the automatic stay and that this act would be void ab initio, and Trustee would request a declaration from this court to that effect.

- 2) To Avoid Post-Petition Transfer pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 549(a), 550(a), 551): If it was effective after the filing of the Petition, then the Subordination Agreement was a post-petition transfer of Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust, which is property of the Estate. Such transfer was not authorized under Title 11 of the United States Code or by the Court. Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. section 549(a), therefore, the Trustee may avoid such transfer. Because the Subordination Agreement may be avoided as to Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust pursuant to 11 U.S.C. section 549(a), the avoided interest should be recovered and preserved for the benefit of the Estate pursuant to 11 U.S.C. sections 550(a)(1) and 551.

3) To Avoid Pre-Petition Transfer pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 544(a)(3), Cal. Civ. Code § 3412. Plaintiff is a hypothetical bona fide purchaser of Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust, which is property of the Estate, as of the Petition Date. If it was effective prior to the filing of the Petition, then the Subordination was a pre-petition transfer of this interest. Such transfer is voidable by such a hypothetical bona fide purchaser pursuant to California Civil Code section 3412 because the Subordination Agreement was not recorded in the Official Records of San Diego County Recorder's Office as of the Petition Date and, therefore, provided neither constructive nor inquiry notice to such a purchaser under the recording acts. If left outstanding, then this instrument will continue to impair the value of Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust because this interest will remain subordinated to the Evergreen Deed of Trust. Therefore, Plaintiff requests that this instrument be delivered up and cancelled as to Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust. Because the Subordination Agreement may be avoided as to Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust pursuant to 11 U.S.C. section 544(a)(3), the avoided interest should be recovered and preserved for the benefit of the Estate pursuant to 11 U.S.C. sections 550(a)(1) and 551.

Motion to Dismiss Standards

under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). There are cases that justify, or compel, granting a motion to dismiss. The line between totally unmeritorious claims and others must be carved out case by case by the judgment of trial judges, and that judgment should be exercised cautiously on such a motion. Id.

"While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-65 (2007) A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id. Threadbare recitals of elements supported by conclusory statements is not sufficient. Id.

Timeliness of Complaint complaint are barred because the complaint was filed after the expiration of the applicable statutes of limitations. However, Trustee argues that the doctrine of equitable tolling applies in this case, which makes the complaint timely. As noted above, the Second and Third causes of action are brought pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§549 and 544 respectively. Both of these sections have two-year statutes of limitations. The question is, when did the clock begin running? The answer appears to favor Trustee as the critical documents that give rise to the causes of action were initially concealed by Debtors and did not come to light until August 28, 2017. As will be discussed below, the date of discovery is critical because it gives the plaintiff the benefit of the full statute of limitations period.

Does The Complaint Sufficiently State Grounds For Equitable To Tolling Apply?

Trustee asserts, citing Milby v. Templeton (In re Milby), 875 F.3d 1229, 1232 (9th Cir. 2017), that the doctrine of equitable tolling is "read into every federal statute of limitation." "A litigant seeking equitable tolling bears the burden of establishing two elements: (1) that he has been pursuing his rights diligently, and (2) that some extraordinary circumstance stood in his way and prevented timely filing." Id.

The BAP in Milby observed that "[i]n tolling statutes of limitations, courts have typically assumed that the event that "tolls" the statute simply stops the clock until the occurrence of a later event that permits the statute to resume running.'" Templeton v. Milby (In re Milby), 545 B.R. 613, 621 (9th Cir. BAP 2016) aff'd, 875 F.3d 1229 (9th Cir. 2017). The BAP then stated that the proper inquiry is not whether the Plaintiff could have brought the claims within the limitations period, but whether the complaint was filed within the limitations period once appropriate tolling is taken into account. Id. at 622, citing Socop-Gonzalez v. Immigration & Naturalization Service, 272 F.3d 1176, 1196 (9th Cir. 2001). The BAP stated flatly, "A court should not look at the trustee's post-discovery diligence when considering whether equitable tolling should be applied." Id. at 622. The Ninth Circuit slightly disagreed with the BAP on this point, observing that "Courts may...consider a petitioner's diligence, after an extraordinary circumstance has been lifted, as one factor in a broader diligence assessment." In re Milby, 875 F.3d at 1234. However, the Ninth Circuit made clear that "diligence during the existence of an extraordinary circumstance... is the key consideration." Id.

Here, Trustee asserts that both main elements for equitable tolling are satisfied by the complaint. Trustee's complaint alleges that Debtors concealed the Subordination Agreement by failing to disclose it in their Petition, Schedules and Statement of Financial Affairs. Trustee also argues that Debtors concealed other critical documents such as the Loan Servicing Agreement. Such concealment, Trustee argues, constitutes an extraordinary circumstance beyond her control that stood in the way of timely filing. Trustee also argues that Trustee's diligence during the period of extraordinary circumstance is beyond question because she obtained a copy of a title report that disclosed the Subordination Agreement a little over a month after the Petition Date and prior to the Section 341(a) Meeting of Creditors. But, Trustee asserts, the title report was only the beginning of the inquiry. On its face, the subordination agreement only affected Bomor's 5/6th interest, there being no mention of Debtors' 1/6th interest.

Bomor urges the court to question why Trustee waited nearly 23 months after discovery of the critical documents to bring the complaint. After all, in Milby, the discovery occurred extremely close to the expiration of the applicable statute of limitation, which Bomor argues is a critical factual distinction. But the plainly stated directive articulated by the BAP in Milby and subsequent opinion by the Ninth Circuit appears to pour cold water on that argument, mainly that the trustee's post-discovery due diligence is either largely irrelevant or just one minor factor to whether tolling applies. The main idea is that Trustee is entitled to the full statute of limitations period, which begins running upon discovery. The court does not know why Trustee elected to wait as long as she did, and nothing in the complaint offers explanation. But the court does not believe that waiting until nearly the end of the limitations period is, by itself, fatal to equitable tolling and no authority cited by Bomor suggests otherwise.

Bomor also argues that Debtor concealing assets is not an extraordinary circumstance in bankruptcy. It is certainly not an uncommon circumstance, but it does seem to be beyond the control of the trustee as there are only a limited number of ways to ensure that the Debtors are forthcoming and honest in their filings, none of them fool proof. Neither party appears to have cited explicit authority that stands for the broad proposition that concealing assets or critical documents generally does or does not qualify as an extraordinary circumstance for purposes of equitable tolling. As this is Bomor's motion to dismiss, the burden falls on Bomor to cite such authority or otherwise convince the court, which it has not done.

Thus, the court is satisfied that the complaint sufficiently alleges that Trustee did not become aware of the critical documents' existence until August 28, 2017, which is when the statutes of limitations would begin to run. The complaint was filed on August 26, 2019, which is within (just barely) the two-year statutes of limitations for actions brought under 11 U.S.C. §§544 and 549. In sum, Plaintiff's Second and Third causes of action are not barred by the applicable statutes of limitations.

This Is Not A Summary Judgment Motion

Bomor's motion reads more like a Rule 56 summary judgment motion rather than simply a Rule 12 motion to dismiss. The motion, opposition, and reply go into rather excruciating detail of law and fact surrounding each cause of action. Indeed, Bomor openly suggests that this motion be treated as a summary judgment motion. The court suggests that if Bomor is serious, then a motion for summary judgment should have been filed. As it is, this is simply a motion to dismiss, subject to the standards recited above. Trustee also points out that there is likely still discovery to be completed and, as a technical matter, the motion would have to have been brought on the proper notice required for a summary judgment motion. In any case, the only task before the court is deciding whether the complaint contains allegations, taken as true and viewed in the light most favorable to Trustee as the nonmoving party, to plausibly support the asserted causes of action. That lighter burden is carried.

Trustee's First Cause of Action

Trustee's first cause of action as outlined in the complaint request declaratory relief to the effect that the subordination agreement, if it was effective after the petition date, would constitute a violation of the automatic stay under 11 U.S.C. §362(a), making it void ab initio. This section states in pertinent part: "[A] petition filed under section 301, 302, or 303 of this title . . . operates as a stay, applicable to all entities, of . . . (3) any act to obtain possession of property of the estate or of property from the estate or to exercise control over property of the estate; (4) any act to create, perfect, or enforce any lien against property of the estate." The complaint states: "If it was effective after the filing of the Petition, then the Subordination Agreement was an act to obtain possession of and/or exercise control over, or an act to create, perfect, or enforce any lien against Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust, which is property of the Estate." Trustee's complaint argues that there is an actual controversy between the parties as to whether the Subordination Agreement is effective as to Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust.

This is a very close call. Bomor argues that subordination agreement was executed pre-petition, took effect pre-petition, and was only recorded post-petition to put other parties on notice. Bomor concludes that it could not have violated the automatic stay as a matter of law. Trustee implicitly concedes that this might be true, but that discovery will help determine whether the parties intended for the agreement to take effect post-petition. Trustee also argues that certain language in the agreement states that the agreement shall become effective when recorded. What these provisions identified by Trustee mean is a question of fact and their impact on this cause of action will be definitively addressed at a later juncture. Again, the court is only tasked with deciding whether a plausible claim has been stated, with all benefit of the doubt resolved in Plaintiff's favor. If Trustee's allegations are taken as true, it is more likely than not that she has successfully stated a claim for declaratory relief. To be clear, the court is not making any findings of fact at this juncture.

Trustee's Second Cause of Action

Trustee's second cause of action asserts that the subordination agreement constitutes a voidable post-petition transfer pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§549 and 550. Section 549 states in relevant part: "[T]he trustee may avoid a transfer of property of the estate—(1) that occurs after the commencement of the case; and (2) . . . (B) that is not authorized under this title or by the court." Again, the complaint is worded using contingent language: If it was effective after the filing of the Petition, then the Subordination Agreement was a post-petition transfer of Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust, which is property of the Estate. Trustee also brings this second cause of action under section 550, which states in relevant part: "Except as otherwise provided in this section, to the extent that a transfer is avoided under section . . . 549 . . . of this title, the trustee may recover, for the benefit of the estate, the property transferred, or, if the court so orders, the value of such property, from—(1) the initial transferee of such transfer or the entity for whose benefit such transfer was made."

Finally, Trustee alleges this second cause of action pursuant to section 551, which states in relevant part: "Any transfer avoided under section . . . 549 . . . of this title . . . is preserved for the benefit of the estate but only with respect to property of the estate."

Once again, Trustee's language of the allegations is qualified. "Because the Subordination Agreement may be avoided as to Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust pursuant to 11 U.S.C. section 549(a), the avoided interest should be recovered and preserved for the benefit of the Estate pursuant to 11 U.S.C. sections 550(a)(1) and 551." Such qualified language makes it difficult to gauge how much Trustee believes in her own claims. But, as the opposition makes clear, much of the viability of Trustee's causes of action depend on what discovery produces in this case. Reading between the lines, Trustee's causes of action depend at least in part on certain assumptions being borne out in discovery. Bomor contends that a subordination agreement does not constitute a transfer at all. However, Trustee cites at least one case where a court opined that a subordination fits within the definition of "transfer." See Holber v. Jacobs (In re Jacobs), 401 B.R. 161, 171 n.13 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2009) ("Based on application of the general principles employed by the courts in construing the parameters of the concept of 'transfer' under the Code, I conclude that the Subordination Agreement here effected a transfer. While it may not have been a transfer in the most common and conventional form (e.g., transferring title to property, granting a lien, assigning contractual rights), it nonetheless resulted in the diminution of the Debtor's contractual collection rights[.]") So it seems at the very least that the Subordination Agreement could be considered a transfer, albeit not in the usual sense, but not necessarily inconsistent with the bankruptcy code.

But, without a more complete factual record, the validity of the asserted claims is difficult to assess. So, what to do? The guiding principal in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion requires that a claim only be plausible, not necessarily compelling. Trustee seems to concede that her causes could be vulnerable if her assumptions prove faulty. But again, the claim at this stage only has to be plausible on its face to deny the motion. Giving Trustee the benefit of the doubts, the complaint does just enough to meet the plausibility standard.

Trustee's Third Cause of Action

Trustee's third cause of action alleges that the subordination agreement is voidable as a pre-petition transfer pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 544(a)(3), which state is pertinent part:

"The trustee shall have, as of the commencement of the case, and without regard to any knowledge of the trustee or of any creditor, the rights and powers of, or may avoid any transfer of property of the debtor or any obligation incurred by the debtor that is voidable by . . . a bona fide purchaser of real property, other than fixtures, from the debtor, against whom applicable law permits such transfer to be perfected, that obtains the status of a bona fide purchaser and has perfected such transfer at the time of the commencement of the case, whether or not such a purchaser exists."

This cause of action is also brought pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code §3412, which states in relevant part: "A written instrument, in respect to which there is a reasonable apprehension that if left outstanding it may cause serious injury to a person against whom it is void or voidable, may, upon his application, be so adjudged, and ordered to be delivered up or canceled."

Trustee argues that under section 544(a)(3), she is a hypothetical bona fide purchaser of Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust, which is property of the Estate, as of the Petition Date. Trustee asserts that if the Subordination Agreement was effective prior to the filing of the Petition, then the Subordination Agreement was a pre-petition transfer of this interest.

Invoking Cal. Civ. Code. §3412, Trustee argues that such transfer is voidable by such a hypothetical bona fide purchaser because the Subordination Agreement was not recorded in the Official Records of San Diego County Recorder's Office as of the Petition Date and, therefore, provided neither constructive nor inquiry notice to such a purchaser under the recording acts. Trustee asserts that if left outstanding, then this instrument will continue to impair the value of Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust because this interest will remain subordinated to the Evergreen Deed of Trust. Trustee then argues that that this instrument must be delivered up and cancelled as to Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust.

Finally, Trustee concludes that because the Subordination Agreement may be avoided as to Debtors' fractional 1/6th interest in the Alliance Deed of Trust pursuant to 11 U.S.C. section 544(a)(3), the avoided interest should be recovered and preserved for the benefit of the Estate pursuant to 11 U.S.C. sections 550(a)(1) and 551. How that can be squared with the fact that the trust deed as a whole was facing imminent foreclosure, is left to the imagination.

Bomor argues that Subordination Agreement is not voidable under 11 U.S.C. section 544(a)(3) and Civil Code section 3412 because, prior to the Petition Date, Debtors had executed a Loan Servicing Agreement. Trustee argues that this argument is unavailing at this point because the Loan Servicing Agreement constitutes impermissible hearsay, and in any case, the Subordination Agreement could have been avoided by a hypothetical bona fide purchaser, such as Trustee. Giving Trustee the benefit of the doubts, as the court must do at the Rule 12 stage, this cause of action is likely enough to withstand the motion, but again, narrowly. Discovery will likely go a long way to deciding whether Trustee can ultimately prove this, or any of the other claims.

Conclusion

This is a very close case. Trustee's complaint seems to be reliant on assumption and speculation to a large degree hoping that discovery will validate her theories of the case. However, the court is unable to conclude that her claims wholly lack plausibility because much depends on what information discovery reveals. The court expects that if Trustee is unable to obtain evidence that would support any of her claims, she would simply withdraw those causes of action or amend her complaint as appropriate. Trustee's claims are also likely timely due to the doctrine of equitable tolling, but again, just barely. Although this motion reads very much like a summary judgment motion, it is in fact a motion to dismiss and so the court is only obliged to decide whether Trustee has stated a plausible claim for relief, not which party will be ultimately be vindicated.

Docket 5

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/25/20:

Following the hearing on the OSC re: Contempt on April 29, Foothill Financial and Trustee jointly lodged an order on April 30. The official order issued on May 11. Mr. Herman filed an untimely objection to the lodged order.

To accompany his objection to the lodged order, Mr. Herman attached his own proposed order, which bears little resemblance to the actual ruling on the OSC and several other orders issued by this court.

The most consequential rewrite Mr. Herman makes to his proposed order is where he states that per our abstention order, he is allowed to pursue in state court all claims that may belong solely to his wife with no limit on value. This is despite the many orders issued by this court where the specific claims the court abstained from are listed. Foothill's response catalogues the various orders and judgments with the court's very clear language articulating the narrow scope of its abstention.

Mr. Herman appears to have seized upon the most miniscule ambiguity to deliberately disregard the language and spirit of this court's orders in an attempt to reframe his dismissed claims as belonging solely to his wife, thereby allowing him to re-litigate them in state court. Mr. Herman may have already filed a version of his order with the state court. Foothill and Trustee are understandably dismayed by this latest attempt to hinder and delay.

In light of this most recent and fairly egregious transgression, Foothill requests that the court now impose monetary sanctions. Foothill suggests that Mr. Herman should pay the fees incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's ongoing contempt, which Foothill estimates in its status report at $7,500.

Mr. Herman has filed his own status report asserting that the contempt order is on appeal and there is nothing else to be adjudicated by this court at this time, all matters now being with the district court.

Mr. Herman is playing with fire. Rather than displaying even a modicum of compunction after being adjudged to be in contempt, Mr. Herman asserts in his objection that his contempt is now purged, and that it never truly existed in the first place. Mr. Herman, we should not forget, is also an attorney, and is presumed to be able to understand court orders and the consequences for disregarding them. Thus, a measured and modest monetary sanction is likely appropriate, with the promise of more severe sanctions to follow if Mr. Herman continues to misconduct himself.

The court requests an update on whether Mr. Herman actually lodged a bogus form of order with the state court. Impose monetary sanctions of $2000 payable jointly to Foothill and Trustee.

as Foothill reports that discussions with the trustee are ongoing. If not everything can be resolved through discussions, what would there be left to try? When, approximately?

This is Plaintiff Foothill Financial, L.P.'s (Plaintiff's) motion for a preliminary injunction. The motion seeks to stay proceedings in a state court action brought by Defendant/Debtor Richard P. Herman and his non-debtor spouse, Sabina C. Herman (collectively, Defendants) against Plaintiff and its individual partners. The motion seeks to stay the state court proceeding until such time as this court makes a determination as to whether: (a) the claims in the pending state court action are property of the debtor's estate; (b) the post-conversion, duly appointed and acting Chapter 7 trustee is the real party in interest with standing to prosecute or otherwise dispose of those claims; and (c) the claims in the pending state court action have been released pursuant to a settlement agreement previously approved by this court. Plaintiff is joined by the Chapter 7 trustee in requesting this preliminary injunction.

For his part, Defendant does not directly contest that Plaintiff can meet its burden of establishing the need for a preliminary injunction. Defendant does not believe his state court claims are property of the bankruptcy estate and believes that this motion is nothing more than a disguised motion to dismiss his state court claims. Defendant suggests that this court abstain from this current action because the state court action is far along. Defendant characterizes Plaintiff as a "predatory lender" and claims that Plaintiff procured the release in the Settlement Agreement by fraud.

I. Preliminary Injunction Standards

"A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish that [1] he is likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4] that an injunction is in the public interest." Winter v. NRDC, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). The Ninth Circuit has held, "a 'likelihood' of success per se is not an absolute requirement." Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1085 (9th Cir. 2014) Instead, "serious questions going to the merits' and a hardship balance that tips sharply toward the plaintiff can support issuance of an injunction, assuming the other two elements of the Winter test are also met." Id.

A. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

Plaintiff believes that it can show that Debtor and Sabina lack standing to prosecute the state court claims because they are property of the estate and, therefore, belong to the trustee of the estate. Further, even if Debtor and Sabina did have proper standing, Plaintiff asserts that the release clause in the Settlement Agreement, which was approved by this court, would defeat their causes of action.

1. Lack of Standing

Both federal and California law require actions to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 367 ("[e]very action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest"). "Because the bankruptcy trustee controls the bankruptcy estate, [he or she] is the real party in interest in the suits that belong to the estate." Griffin v. Allstate Ins. Co., 920 F. Supp. 127, 130 (C.D. Cal. 1996). "After appointment of a trustee, a Chapter 7 debtor no longer has standing to pursue a cause of action which existed at the time the Chapter 7 petition was filed. Only the trustee, as representative of the estate, has the authority to prosecute and/or settle such causes of action." Harris v. St. Louis University, 114 B.R. 647, 648 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1990) (internal quotations and alternations omitted). Further, a Chapter 7 debtor may not prosecute on his or her own a cause of action belonging to the estate unless the claim has been abandoned by the trustee. Bostanian v. Liberty Savings Bank, 52 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1081 (1997) ("absent abandonment of the claim by the trustee, a debtor out of possession has no standing to prosecute a cause of action which has passed to the bankruptcy estate").

Plaintiff persuasively argues that the six causes of action making up the pending state court action, assuming Defendants retained or acquired any rights after signing the Settlement Agreement, are property of the bankruptcy estate, and thus, passed to the trustee when the case was converted from Chapter 11 to Chapter 7. Further, Plaintiffs also persuasively argue that the causes of action in the state court action relating to damaged personal property such as plants, antique furniture, artwork, etc., are also property of the bankruptcy estate. To the extent that it is argued by Defendants that these items of personal property were the non-debtor spouse's separate property, no evidence supporting this argument is proffered that would rebut the community property presumption. In short, Plaintiff has persuasively argued that it has at least a fair likelihood of prevailing on the argument that the claims set forth in Defendants' Second Amended Complaint in state court are property of the bankruptcy estate, which belong to the Chapter 7 trustee.

2. The Release Clause in the Settlement Agreement

Plaintiff persuasively argues that, even if the Defendants had proper standing to pursue their claims in state court, the claims would still likely be defeated by the general release and covenant not to sue contained in the Settlement Agreement approved by this court. Indeed, the language in the Settlement Agreement cited by Plaintiff does appear to waive any potential claims Defendants may have had or might still have against Plaintiff.

Plaintiff cites Gregory v. Hamilton, 77 Cal. App. 3d 213, (1978) for the proposition that under California law, specific performance is an appropriate remedy for enforcing a release. There, the court noted, "[i]t is indisputable that money damages could not provide the relief which respondent seeks, i.e., release from liability. Therefore, the breach complained of must be remedied in equity by compelling performance." Id. at 219. However, there is also Cal. Civ. Code §526(a)(6), which states:

"(a) An injunction may be granted in the following cases:

(6) Where the restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings."

Chapter 7

Plaintiff also persuasively argues that the Settlement Agreement, signed by Debtor post-petition in his capacity as debtor-in-possession, is binding on the Chapter 7 trustee. "[I]t is axiomatic that the Trustee is bound by the acts of the debtor-in-possession[.]" Armstrong v. Norwest Bank, Minneapolis, N.A., 964 F.2d 797, 801 (8th Cir. 1992). Thus, it appears likely that a court would find the unambiguous language in the Settlement Agreement both binding and enforceable.

Defendants do not challenge the language of the Settlement Agreement. However, Defendants do argue that the Settlement Agreement is invalid because Plaintiff allegedly procured the Settlement through fraud. In support of this contention, Defendants cite Cal. Civ. Code §1668, which states:

"All contracts which have for their object, directly or indirectly, to exempt any one from responsibility for his own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law."

The problem with Defendants' contention is that it is critically lacking in evidentiary support and assumes a finding of fraud as the precondition. Further, Defendants' argument does not address the standing issue raised by Plaintiff. Thus, Plaintiff has shown a sufficient likelihood of success on the merits of its arguments regarding both Defendants' lack of standing and the enforceability of the Settlement Agreement.

B. Irreparable Harm

Plaintiff argues that if the injunctive relief does not issue, Plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury. For example, Plaintiff argues that if the state action can proceed, there is a significant risk of inconsistent rulings based on multiple actions in different courts. Plaintiff persuasively argues that this is particularly problematic in this case because Debtor is taking inconsistent positions in the state court action and before this court. For example, in the state court action, Debtor and his wife are claiming that valuable personal property such as antiques, and artwork were damaged by Plaintiff as a result of their eviction of Debtor and his wife. However, Plaintiff points out that none of these valuables were listed in Debtor's schedules in the bankruptcy case.

Further, Plaintiff argues that Defendants are attempting to gain a favorable judgment in their fraud/misrepresentation claims regarding the Settlement Agreement in order the chill Plaintiffs participation in the bankruptcy case. Plaintiff argues that the bankruptcy court is the only forum in which it can pursue claims against the Defendants, making the inequity plain.

Finally, if Defendants are permitted to continue prosecuting the state court action, the estate will continue to be depleted of resources, thereby injuring the interests of Plaintiff and other creditors. Plaintiff will also have to continue expending resources to defend against Defendants' claims. Plaintiff argues that it has no adequate remedy at law because neither the Defendants nor the Estate have enough resources to compensate Plaintiff for the continuing harm it would suffer if the state court action proceeds. In support of this argument, Plaintiff cites Philip Morris USA Inc., v. Scott, 561 U.S. 1301, 1304 (2010) for the proposition that "[i]f expenditures cannot be recouped, the resulting loss may be irreparable."

Of the arguments put forth by Plaintiffs regarding irreparable harm, the danger of inconsistent rulings leading to the necessity of disentangling those rulings, which would almost certainly further deplete the finite resources of the bankruptcy estate, is the most compelling and persuasive argument. This element is not addressed by Defendants. Therefore, there is a risk of irreparable injury to Plaintiff if the state court action is allowed to proceed.

C. Balance of Hardships

Plaintiff again persuasively argues that this factor weighs in favor of granting the injunction because: (1) the state court action should not have been filed in the first place without permission of this court; (2) Defendants claims in the state court action are baseless because the provisions the Settlement Agreement is valid and enforceable; (3) Plaintiffs are being forced to spend substantial sums of money mounting a defense to the state court action, which is especially harmful to Plaintiffs given that Defendants' standing to pursue those claims is suspect at best; (4) there is a risk of inconsistent judgments across courts in different jurisdictions; (5) the prosecution of the state court actions will further deplete the bankruptcy estate's limited resources.

Defendants do not address this point. However, there is not an obvious legitimate hardship to Defendants if the state court action is temporarily stayed. Therefore, this consideration weighs in Plaintiff's favor as well.

D. The Public Interest

Plaintiff argues that issuing the injunction is supported by public policy principles that are fundamental to the bankruptcy system. For example, Plaintiff cites In re Richmond Paramedical Servs., Inc., 94 B.R. 881, 885 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1988) for the general proposition that a paramount public interest is "protecting the estate of debtors for the benefit of creditors." This includes a public interest in maintaining the status quo by not dissipating potential assets of the debtor's estate. In re OGA Charters, LLC, 554 B.R. 415, 432 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) In addition, as noted in In re Chiron Equities, 552 B.R. 674, 701, (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) "[i]t is in the public interest for bankruptcy courts to enforce their own orders and to ensure that the integrity of the bankruptcy system is upheld." Plaintiff argues, and the court agrees, that issuing a preliminary injunction to stay the state court proceedings until the ambiguities identified by Plaintiff are resolved, serves these public interests. Thus, this factor also weighs in favor of granting a preliminary injunction.

II. Abstention

Defendants argue that this court should exercise its discretion to abstain from deciding in this matter. Defendants appears to be arguing that since the state court action is nearly to the jury trial stage (i.e., much further along than the proceedings in this court?), this court should abstain, pending resolution in the state court action. However, considering the issues discussed above, abstention does not seem appropriate. Both Plaintiff and the Chapter 7 trustee are requesting that this court issue a preliminary injunction so as to allow a determination on these threshold issues. Moreover, considering the dubious way the state court matter was initiated (by a DIP without leave of court) there are transcendent questions that must be sorted out by the bankruptcy court before the lawsuit can or should continue.

Tentative for 4/29/20:

This is a hearing on the court's Order to Show Cause why Debtor, Richard P. Herman ("Debtor") should not be held in Contempt of Court for Violating Court Orders and The Automatic Stay. The OSC was issued on March 18, 2020. Specifically, the OSC requires that Debtor demonstrate:

- (a) Why he should not be held in contempt for
 - i. his continuing efforts to exercise control over and interfere with the dismissal of the estate's claims in direct violation of the express provisions of this Court's orders and Judgment as well as the provisions of the automatic stay; and

ii. his continuing violation of this Court's permanent injunction by continuing to assert and pursue claims in the state court that this Court has enjoined him from asserting or pursuing.

(b) Why he should not be subjected to the following sanctions:

i. Imposition of a coercive fine, payable to the Court, for each day that he remains in contempt; and

ii. Compensatory damages incurred by Foothill and the Trustee as a result of Mr. Herman's contemptuous conduct, including the attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and appear at the hearing thereon, and any additional attorneys' fees and costs incurred by Foothill and/or the Trustee to respond and appear with respect to Mr. Herman's pleadings filed in the state court in violation of this Court's orders.

Both Debtor and Foothill Financial, L.P. ("Foothill") have filed timely responses.

Debtor's response is not persuasive. The main problem is that Debtor feigns ignorance or misunderstanding of this court's orders. Debtor appears to be arguing that his action(s) in state court are legitimate considering this court's abstention from adjudicating the remaining claims that were not deemed property of the estate. As argued effectively by Foothill in its response, this court has been clear in its delineation between what causes of action are and are not property of the estate. The court has clearly stated in prior adopted tentative rulings, the "surviving claims" are limited to claims for negligent damage to personal property in an amount not to exceed $3,500, and for his wife to pursue the same cause of action provided that she could establish that the damaged property was her separate property. These very narrow categories can have little relationship with what Debtor seems to persist in filing in the State Court.

As argued by Foothill, Mr. Herman is contending, here and in the State Court, that the "abstained claims" include claims other than the surviving claims identified by this court, which Mr. Herman argues are to be "defined in the State Court." Foothill notes that Debtor's response cites no authority or document that could possibly lead Debtor to such an understanding.

To aggravate the problem, Debtor is a licensed attorney of long standing, and so may be reasonably presumed to be able to understand court orders, and importantly, the consequences for ignoring them. Thus, his reported actions, which he does not deny, can be viewed as deliberate refusals to abide by this court's lawful orders.

Debtor's citation to Taggart is inapposite as Debtor does not really attempt to draw any parallels between Taggart and the present case, nor could he.

As Foothill correctly notes, unlike in Taggart, neither Foothill nor the Trustee has sought damages under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k), but rather this proceeding involves the court's authority to enforce its orders by imposing civil contempt remedies. Moreover, although there is more than ample basis for this court to find that Debtor's conduct was (and continues to be) "willful," the Supreme Court in Taggart expressly held that, in the civil contempt context, it is error to apply a subjective standard. Id. at 1804; see also In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) (no finding of bad faith or willful misconduct is required as "the focus is not on the subjective beliefs or intent of the contemnors in complying with the order, but whether in fact their conduct complied with the order at issue") (internal quotations omitted).

Instead, the Supreme Court held, "[b]ased on the traditional principles that govern civil contempt, the proper standard is an objective one." Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 1804. Thus, Foothill argues, under Taggart, remedies for civil contempt are appropriate where "there is no objectively reasonable basis for concluding that the [contemnor's] conduct might be lawful under the . . . order." Id. at 1801 (rejecting a "good faith" defense and instead establishing an objective reasonableness standard in the context of contempt proceedings arising out of the violation of a discharge order).

The court has patiently entertained Debtor's numerous motions, many of which have been of dubious merit and suspected of being nothing more than attempts to delay enforcement of Foothill's legal rights. Many have been repetitive and do nothing but rehash the same issues. The court is now left with no option but to use its coercive powers to compel Debtor to abide by its orders. Thus, the question then is, what form should the coercive measures take? Foothill suggests the following measures be imposed:

1. Order Debtor to pay to the court a fine in the amount of $1,000 for each day that he remains in contempt, and direct that, in addition to ceasing and desisting from any further contemptuous behavior, Debtor shall cure his existing contempt forthwith by immediately filing with the State Court a notice: (1) withdrawing his motion for reconsideration seeking to set aside the State Court's dismissal of the Estate Claims as requested by the Trustee, and (2) affirming to the State Court that the only cause of action that the Hermans assert is the remaining single cause of action for negligent damage to personal property, which cause of action is limited to (a) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to his tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants) in an amount not to exceed $3,500"; and (b) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to her tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants), but only to the extent that Mrs. Herman can establish that the tangible personal property alleged to have been damaged was her sole and separate property as of the commencement of the bankruptcy case on

2. That the court compensate Foothill for its attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and this reply, and to appear at the hearing on the Order to Show Cause, by ordering Debtor to pay to Foothill, by no later than May 15, 2020, the amount of $6,000, which is the minimum amount of fees and costs incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's contempt.

The court will forbear from the harsher methods, for now. But Debtor must accept that the matter has been decided, and further gainsaying is not only a waste of resources but an affront to the court and to the other parties, and thus a further contempt. Debtor may purge his contempt by promptly filing a withdrawal of the reconsideration motion on the dismissal of the "Estate claim" and affirming that insofar as the State court action will continue, it will be confined to the limited issues as outlined in paragraph 1 above. The court will not rule upon the other suggested sanctions as outlined in paragraph 2, for now, pending a report to be filed at least 14 days before the continued hearing regarding the dismissal etc. mentioned above.

The court finds debtor is in contempt. Initial sanction is as outlined above. A further hearing will be scheduled in approximately 60 days when status of compliance, and thus possible further sanctions, will be considered.

#10.00 Debtor's Emergency Motion For An Order Authorizing Interim Use Of Cash Collateral Pursuant To 11 USC Section 363 (cont'd from 5-13-20)

Docket 7

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/30/20:

Status? Continue on same terms another 60 days? When can we see a plan?

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Please be advised that CourtCall has announced reduced fees for attorneys to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through August 31, 2020.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 5/13/20:

This matter is on calendar because permitted use of cash collateral is set to expire as of the hearing per previous order. Nothing further has been filed as of 5/8. Status? The March MOR shows slightly positive cash flow, so, absent objection, the logical order would seem to be continued authority on same terms and conditions for about 60 days.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Please be advised that CourtCall has announced reduced fees for attorneys to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through April 30, 2020.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

Debtor filed an amended motion for use of cash collateral on 4/1/20. Unfortunately, this amended motion is likely untimely because there is nearly no time for any other party to respond before the hearing date on 4/8. In any case, the new amended motion does not appear to address Banc of California's objections to continued use of cash collateral. Therefore, the amended motion should be continued to allow creditors, including Banc of California, adequate time to respond. In the meantime, Debtor should answer Banc of California's allegations of misusing cash collateral.

Continue for about two weeks on same terms. Debtor to address Banc Of California's points. Appearance is optional.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Docket 1

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/2/20:

Frustrating. This is scheduled as a pretrial conference yet no joint pretrial stipulation is seen although it is required under the LBRs and was the topic of specific warnings given last time. All we have is a somewhat lame "status report" from plaintiff that reports settlement attempts were rebuffed. This is not acceptable and is not an excuse. The lack of progress is doubly concerning since the court is informed that a state court judgment which was to be basis for a Rule 56 motion to be brought by plaintiff has been finally resolved after appeal for months now. So, why no motion? No joint stimulation? Nothing. Defendant has moved to dismiss for these failures. The court will hear argument.

No tentative.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Please be advised that CourtCall has announced reduced fees for attorneys to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through August 31, 2020.

show cause under this court's Order entered January 30, 2019. Under that Order the court issued a temporary stay of the state court action Cham v. Mai LASC #505934, which action has apparently been removed to this court by the creditor, Daniel Cham. By Order entered February 5, 2019 in the removed adversary proceeding Cham v. Mai, now re-numbered #10-01019TA, the court ordered the parties to show cause why the court should not abstain in the removed case and remand back to state court. That abstention/remand is also on calendar as #16.

The debtor opposes abstention and remand. The central issue appears to be whether 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(3) applies, i.e. if the creditor Cham had knowledge of the bankruptcy proceeding in enough time to file a dischargeability action, but failed to do so, the claim is discharged irrespective of all the various other issues which might be pertinent. Debtor has submitted a declaration that he informed Cham of the pendency of the bankruptcy. The Debtor secondarily argues that he has no obligation to Cham even if there was insufficient notice because the real obligor was a corporation.

The court sees little reason for it to become involved in the dispute over whether there might be reasons to pierce the corporate veil, alter ego, etc. to determine whether (aside from discharge) debtor is liable to Cham under state law. So, the court will abstain from all such issues and remand them to state court for their determination. The bankruptcy discharge and application of § 523(a)(3), however, is within the court's core jurisdiction. The court will hear from the parties over whether and how this single issue should be resolved, and deadlines for reasonable discovery, pre-trial motions and the like, will be set. Absent compelling reasons otherwise, the court believes that this could be resolved by Rule 56 motion in a near timetable.

Abstain and remand as to all issues other than §523(a)(3).

#2.00 Kenneth Gharib's Motion For Partial Stay Of The April 24, 2020 Order (Docket No. 882)
(OST Signed 6-22-20)

Docket 882

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/9/20:

This is contemnor, Kenneth Gharib's ("Gharib's") motion for partial stay of the April 24, 2020 order granting Gharib's emergency motion for release ("Temporary Release Order"), pending Gharib's appeal. The motion is brought pursuant to Rule 8007 Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. The motion is opposed by the chapter 7 trustee, Thomas H. Casey ("Trustee").

1. Basic Background

The underlying bankruptcy case began on October 24, 2011 as a voluntary Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition of Kenny G Enterprises, LLC ("KGE"), of which Gharib was the principal. In 2013, this court converted the action to Chapter 7 and issued a temporary restraining order preventing Gharib from transferring proceeds of the KGE's estate comprised of about $1,420,043.70. Gharib notwithstanding transferred that sum through a series of paper corporations he controlled within minutes of issuance of the order. Finding Gharib in contempt of that order on March 23, 2015, this court ordered him to pay sanctions to the trustee totaling $1,420,043.70 and an additional $1,000 fine for every day the sanction remained unpaid. When Gharib had still not complied with the order on May 12, 2015, this court ordered Gharib incarcerated until he complied with the order. On March 31, 2020, Gharib filed an Emergency Motion for Release in light of the COVID-19 pandemic ("Motion"). After hearings held on April 8, 2020, April 15, 2020, and April 22, 2020, this court partially granted the Motion through its Temporary Release Order on April 24, 2020. Gharib filed a notice of appeal of the Temporary Release Order on April 30, 2020. The Temporary Release Order contemplates a further hearing July 30 and re-incarceration absent other order. Through this motion at bar Gharib now requests that the court stay the effectiveness of ¶¶ 2-8, ¶¶ 21-22, Appendix 3, and Appendix 4 of the Temporary Release Order pending his appeal.

2. Legal Standards

Consideration of whether to grant a stay pending appeal traditionally involves four factors: "(1) whether the stay applicant has made a strong showing that he is likely to succeed on the merits; (2) whether the applicant will be irreparably injured absent a stay; (3) whether issuance of the stay will substantially injure the other parties interested in the proceeding; and (4) where the public interest lies." Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 426 (2009) (quoting Hilton v. Braunskill, 481 U.S. 770, 776 (1987) (internal quotation marks omitted)). "[A] discretionary stay pending appeal is viewed as an extraordinary remedy." In re Smith, 397 B.R. 134, 136 (Bankr. D. Nev. 2008) (internal citations and quotations omitted) "The party moving for a stay has the burden on each of these elements." In re Irwin, 338 B.R. 839, 843 (E.D. Cal. 2006). Movant's failure to satisfy any element is fatal to the motion. Id. "The first two factors of the traditional standard are the most critical." Nken, 556 U.S. at 434. The court examines each of the Nken elements:

A. Likelihood of Success on The Merits

The first factor, a strong showing of a likelihood of success on the merits, requires more than "a mere possibility" that relief will be granted.

Chapter 7

Nken, 556 U.S. at 434. Here, Gharib argues that he can demonstrate that his incarceration for civil contempt is no longer coercive in nature, and thus has impermissibly become punitive. Five years have passed since he was first incarcerated, and more than three years have passed since the Ninth Circuit observed that at some point the combination of the incarceration and the daily monetary sanction of $1,000 will cease to be coercive. In that time, Gharib argues, he has not produced one penny of the $1.4 million at issue, which, Gharib argues, should be ample evidence that he is simply unable to comply. After all, the five years of incarceration for civil contempt is not only extraordinary by itself as evidenced by the scarcity of cases involving similar duration, but it is comparable to sentences for criminal, felonious conduct. Thus, Gharib concludes that the court erred in its decision to continue enforcing the contempt order.

Gharib also argues that enforcing the terms of the Temporary Release Order, which might require him to return to the Santa Ana Jail when it expires would be a violation of his substantive due process rights under the Fifth Amendment insofar as re-incarceration represents a greater risk of contracting Covid-19. In support of this argument, Gharib cites the recent case of Castillo v. Barr, 2020 WL 1502864 at *3 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 27, 2020), where the court observed, "[a] civil detainee's constitutional rights are violated if a condition of his confinement places him at substantial risk of suffering serious harm, such as the harm caused by a pandemic." Gharib then cites numerous cases where courts have released prisoners considering the current pandemic. Gharib asserts that the decision to release him on a furlough included the implicit concession that his continued confinement in the Santa Ana Jail violated his substantive due process rights because of his high risk of contracting a potentially severe case of Covid-19 given his allegedly frail health. Gharib also argues that his substantive due process rights were violated because the release conditions did not reflect the least possible power adequate to achieve the desired outcome. See Spallone v. United States, 493 U.S. 265, 276 (1990) ("[I]n selecting contempt sanctions, a court must exercise the least possible power adequate to the end proposed.") This same alleged failure, Gharib argues, also violated his right to procedural due process because not only were the restrictions in the Temporary Release Order more akin to what would be given to a criminal defendant, these conditions, partly fashioned by the trustee, were "forced" upon him as the only alternative was remaining confined in the Santa Ana Jail. In imposing such restrictive conditions, Gharib argues, the court failed to apply any substantive law or explain its reasoning for imposing such restrictions, while in the process depriving him of his right to an impartial decisionmaker. By doing so, Gharib argues that the court's order both implicated and deprived him of significant liberty interests, such as freedom of association, freedom of movement, and his asserted right to use the internet. Accordingly, Gharib concludes, he has demonstrated a likelihood of succeeding on the merits of his appeal.

The court has reviewed the provisions of the Temporary Release Order and maintains its belief that under the relevant circumstances of this case, the terms do represent the least possible power to achieve its goal, which is, primarily, to limit Gharib's potential of contracting Covid-19 while he is subject to the contempt order, but also to prevent Gharib from dissipating estate assets during his requested release (or to make recovery of the $1.4 million, or what remains of it, more difficult). Gharib will no doubt recall that this court repeatedly solicited suggestions on how best to achieve these goals. Unrestricted release was a non-starter. The court notes that Gharib's motion neither acknowledges his own misconduct during the pendency of the bankruptcy case, nor does he suggest any less restrictive alternatives that would still realistically further the court's goals. The court need not recount the many blatant falsehoods Gharib has cynically spun, but as he is well-aware, the court was not convinced that he could be trusted not to further dissipate estate assets if he were given any opportunity to do so. The court does not believe that any court, upon reviewing the bizarre record in this case, would conclude differently. Furthermore, despite the limited relevance of Gharib's citation to criminal matters where inmates were released due to concerns over Covid-19, the court notes that Gharib did not analyze any of the conditions of those inmates' releases, which is rather telling. Here, the major challenge before the court was to fashion a furlough order that would prevent Gharib's access to estate property, a tricky proposition given the many ways to access money. The court certainly gave Gharib opportunities to suggest terms for temporary release that did not contain loopholes he could easily exploit once released and he failed to convince the court that any less restrictive terms could realistically accomplish the court's goals. Any reviewing court would likely not conclude otherwise.

Still, to entertain Gharib's some of Gharib's arguments, there might be a small chance that the Temporary Release Order is overbroad insofar as it limits Gharib's use of the internet. Gharib cites United States v. Blair, 933 F.3d 1271 (10th Cir. 2019), where the court stated, "in all but the most extreme cases, a special condition of supervised release that absolutely prohibits the use of the Internet will unreasonably impede a defendant's liberty in violation of [18 U.S.C. §3583(d)(2)]." Id. at 1277. Gharib does not analyze this case any further, likely because it does not really help him. In Blair, a criminal case, the court's statement quoted above is in response to a release order that read "[t]he defendant's use of computers and Internet access devices must be limited to those the defendant requests to use, and which the probation officer authorizes." Id. at 1274. The Blair court found that this term could be interpreted to authorize a complete blackout of internet access, and was, therefore, impermissibly overbroad. Id. at 1275-76 Here, no such prohibition could be read into the Temporary Release Order and unlike Blair we have neither the help of pretrial services nor is this a criminal matter. Be that as it may, a reviewing court might ask whether the term limiting Gharib's use of the internet is as narrow as it could be while still achieving the goal of limiting Gharib's access to estate property. Again, a reviewing court would note the number of times this court solicited suggestions on release terms and no superior alternatives emerged, which is not to say that if such superior alternatives have been conceived since, the court would not be amenable to amending the Temporary Release Order and incorporating them into any similar future orders. But the court is under no illusion that giving Gharib enhanced internet capability would help coerce Gharib to purge his contempt; on the contrary, it would only serve as a tempting opportunity to aggravate it. Thus, in the absence of better alternatives, a reviewing court would likely agree that limiting Gharib's use of the internet does not unduly deprive him of any fundamental rights. Similarly, Gharib argues that his freedom of association and movement have been impermissibly curtailed by the Temporary Release Order, which limits his authorized in-person contact to certain individuals and medical personnel. Again, it is worth remembering that the impetus for seeking the release was his fear of contracting Covid-19 in the jail. The Centers for Disease Control guidelines as well as numerous state and local guidelines still recommend social distancing, limiting interactions with people outside the household, and until recently, remaining in one's home, if possible, as some of the best ways to stay free of Covid-19. It seems strange then that Gharib would object to the very terms that contemplate his continued safety and virus-free status, which causes the court to wonder about the bona fides of Gharib's Covid-19 concerns. The prohibition on using banks is self-explanatory and needs no elaboration here.

In sum, Gharib has apparently forgotten that his stated reason for requesting relief from the contempt and incarceration order was his fear of contracting Covid-19 while in the Santa Ana Jail. The court has not forgotten. As a reminder, the court, despite strenuous opposition by the Trustee, agreed that Gharib's safety was potentially at some risk (though that was largely speculative), and so decided to modify its order enabling Gharib to leave the Santa Ana Jail on furlough. Gharib's motion for release was heard by the court and he could participate in fashioning the least onerous release order possible under the relevant circumstances. That is all the substantive and procedural due process the case law requires. Now, it seems, in somewhat circular fashion, Gharib is using the court's compassion as a sword to attack the order which secured his requested release. Due process does not require that Gharib get relief on his preferred terms and the court should not be mistaken for a violin to be played so effortlessly. The court also reminds Gharib, as it has in every hearing, that he can secure his outright release (the relief he truly seeks) by purging his contempt or, importantly, cooperating with the Trustee in establishing a record of what happened to the funds, thereby establishing his impossibility defense. Likely, no court would or could find otherwise based on the unique facts of this lamentable case. Gharib has also not provided a comparison chart (or the like) that would demonstrate how he enjoys even less liberty now than were he an inmate at the Santa Ana Jail. Such an aid would assist the court in its analysis but only up to a point. Even the most zealous advocate would have to concede that releasing Gharib from jail would carry significant risk of further dissipation of estate assets, hence the need for more stringent release terms. Moreover, a release without conditions would cancel any remaining coercive effect of the original order of incarceration. Thus, Gharib has failed to demonstrate any likelihood, let alone a strong likelihood, of success on the merits of his appeal. As the Nken elements are conjunctive, the court's analysis could properly end here. For thoroughness, however, the court will also analyze the remaining Nken elements.

B. Irreparable Harm:

As noted above, the first two elements (likelihood of success and irreparable injury) are the most critical elements. To properly evaluate these two crucial considerations, courts employ a sliding scale approach wherein, for example, if the likelihood of irreparable injury is high, the likelihood of success on appeal threshold can be respectively lower. In re Red Mountain Mach. Co., 451 B.R. 897, 899–900 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2011) "It is well established that the deprivation of constitutional rights unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury." Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012) (internal citation and quotation omitted).

Gharib argues that he has suffered and will continue to suffer irreparable harm because of his purportedly compromised liberty interests and threat of returning to the Santa Ana Jail when the Temporary Release Order expires in a few weeks. However, as discussed above, Gharib's analysis of his liberty interests are supported mainly by cases in the criminal law context, and are quite factually distinguishable, rendering them of only limited value here. Even the Melendrez case cited by Gharib and quoted above held that the irreparable injury in that case was unlawful detention. Id. at 1002. Gharib has long argued that his continued incarceration is unlawful, but that argument has not convinced this or any other court to date. Thus, his irreparable injury argument is not on the most solid of ground. Still, Gharib cites case law that opines that any loss of liberty represents an irreparable injury. See Xuyue Zhang v. Barr, 2020 WL 1502607, at *7 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 27, 2020) ("[T]he Court finds that each passing day Petitioner spends within the walls of Adelanto is an irreparable injury: a day of freedom he cannot get back."). But this argument presupposes that Gharib's loss of liberty is either unlawful or not within his own power to correct. Neither supposition is correct for reasons already stated. Therefore, this makes little difference for purposes of this motion even when employing the sliding scale approach.

C. Harm to Trustee

Gharib also argues that the balance of harms tips toward him. The Trustee, Gharib argues, stands to lose only money, not his liberty. Trustee would likely disagree, but there is not much analysis on the harm Trustee might suffer. Thus, this factor might be said to be in equipoise but again, it

D. Public Interest

Gharib argues that as a matter of public policy, an individual's liberty interests should be valued differently than one would value a sum of money. Under that logic no thief should ever worry about losing his liberty nor any contemnor ever return monies improperly taken despite being ordered to do so. While it is difficult to put a dollar figure on one's liberty, Gharib appears to forget that he voluntarily surrendered his liberty when he decided to (and continues to) ignore this court's lawful order. He also seems to forget that he holds the key to his liberty. There would seem to be an even stronger public interest in allowing courts to enforce their lawful orders through coercive sanctions, which the current sanctions still are, with no reviewing court having held otherwise. Thus, this prong tilts against Gharib.

3. Recent Events

The court notes that a significant event has occurred since the last hearing on this matter, i.e. the death of Gharib's brother, Steven Rushtabadi ("the brother") in April. The obvious interpretation of this event from Gharib's point of view is that, as the brother was purportedly the last person with knowledge of where the money is, his death leads to the conclusion that the trail has gone cold, which in turn leads to the conclusion that Gharib must be released because compliance is no longer possible. However, those suppositions are not built on bedrock, but rather more like upon thin air. First, the implicit premise requires that the court believe that the brother was, in fact, the last and only person with knowledge of the money's whereabouts. Why should the court conclude that? Gharib's argument also requires the court to believe the brother's assertions (not under oath) that the money has been spent and cannot be retrieved. Lastly, an insinuation is made that the brother has spent all the purloined funds on his heroin addiction, merely because he apparently died of an overdose of this illegal drug. The court is reluctant to accept any of these premises due to Gharib's inveterate trafficking in falsehoods throughout this case. But Gharib could help himself, the Trustee and the court by testifying to what he knows. Moreover, it would seem to the court that there is an equally plausible conclusion to be reached in light of the brother's death, which is that now more than ever, Gharib represents the best hope of ever finding the missing money or obtaining its return, and he should continue to be held in contempt and incarcerated until he cooperates.

4. Final Thoughts

One of the most confusing parts of this motion for stay pending appeal (in addition to its inherent circularity) is the omission to consider that a return to Santa Ana Jail is only one possibility, not a certainty. This was plainly stated in the Temporary Release Order. Of course, the court must again evaluate the relative threat of the virus considering then existing conditions and of Gharib's adherence to the original order, as well as the defense of impossibility. "Circularity," because in very large part this motion for stay is just a rehash about the propriety and continued coercive power of the original incarceration, which issue is and has been on appeal to the District Court for over a year and seemingly has little to do with the order permitting a furlough to ease the virus threat possibly posed by such continued incarceration. It is certainly hard to argue with a straight face that the furlough is somehow more oppressive than was the original incarceration. In sum, none of the elements for a stay pending appeal have been shown and so the motion will be denied.

Tentative for 6/17/20:

It is difficult to determine current status. All plan payments must be current and missing documents provided. Regarding arrearages, was this in the nature of paying the mortgagee on account of taxes advanced on Debtor's behalf? If it was paid to OC taxes directly, this was improper, as it should have been dealt with under the plan. An amended claim should be obtained from the lender either by stipulation or plan objection. No tentative.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be

#22.00 Motion Under Local Bankruptcy Rule 3015-1 (n) And (w) To Modify Plan or Suspend Plan Payments
(cont'd from 6-17-20)

Docket 85

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/15/20:

The debtor should respond to the Trustee's question. Is extension under CARES Act a feasible solution?

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, the court encourages telephonic appearances through CourtCall on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. Telephonic appearances may be arranged by calling (866) 582-6878. If personal appearance is intended, please call the Courtroom Deputy at (714) 338-5304 by 4 p.m. the day before. Tentative for 6/17/20:

Trustee questions whether the loss in income is attributable to the COVID19 pandemic, in which case an extension is suggested per the CARES Act. However, debtor seems to be arguing something different, i.e. loss of a contractor's license. More information on this question is requested. No tentative.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/15/20:

Creditor Al Hassas/Sweet Lemons, LLC ("Creditor") moves for an order approving a Settlement Agreement between Creditor and Debtor in the voluntary chapter 13 case. The approval of this motion would result in the dismissal of the Debtor's chapter 13 bankruptcy. Trustee filed an opposition on 6/25/20. Trustee argues that the Settlement Agreement, if approved, should not involve dismissal of the chapter 13 and all payments should be disbursed by the Trustee. Additionally, Trustee requests the Creditor amend their proof-of-claim in accordance with the agreement and Debtor amend the plan to establish the appropriate class or subclass for treatment of the creditor in accordance with the agreement.

On 7/1/2020, Debtor filed a reply to the opposition. She argues the conditions requested by the Trustee would only result in a default on the Settlement Agreement. The agreement states a third-party has agreed to pay the monthly payment straight to the Creditor. Debtor argues if the payments must go through the Trustee for distribution to the Creditor there is too much room for error and the possibility of default is much higher, thus, putting a greater burden on the Debtor. Additionally, Debtor argues if the payments are made to the Trustee this would structurally alter the terms of the agreement and since the payments go beyond the five-year term of the bankruptcy plan, the Trustee could not fully satisfy the entirety of the agreement transitioning it into default.

Creditor and Debtor filed replies to the Trustee's opposition arguing that the Jevic-like settlement in contrast does not violate the priority scheme set forth in the Bankruptcy Code. See Czyzewski v. Jevic Holding Corp. 137 S. Ct. 973, 979 (2017). Additionally, they argue settlement would allow for the Debtor to begin a "fresh start" moving forward after dismissal. Finally, Creditor argues every prong in the four-prong fair classification test found in In re Benner, 146 B.R. 265, 266 (D. Montana 1992) has been satisfied. But Benner is a separate classification case, not a dismissal case.

Under 11 U.S.C § 105, the court holds the power over the case to approve, dismiss, or deny the motion to approve Settlement Agreement. Here, the motion falls within the scope of § 105 and the court holds power over this action. FRBP 9019 allows for the compromise or settlement of claims and controversies by the Creditor, Debtor, and Trustee following notice and a hearing. In order for the court to approve a proposed settlement the court should consider the following factors, as discussed in In re Woodson: 839 F.2d 610,620 (9th Cir. 1988), citing Martin v. Kane (In re A & C Properties), 784 F.2d 1377, 1380-81 (9th Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Martin v. Robinson, --- U.S. ----, 107 S. Ct. 189, 93 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1986).

"(a) The probability of success in the litigation; (b) the difficulties, if any, to be encountered in the matter of collection; (c) the complexity of the litigation involved, and the expense, inconvenience and delay necessarily attending it; (d) the paramount interest of the creditors and a proper deference to their reasonable views in the premises."

Here, (a) the probability of success in the Creditor's allegedly nondischargeable claim against the Debtor should be regarded as high. This would further burden the Debtor and have the likelihood of never creating an effective reorganization plan; (b) the agreement between the parties has taken place over that last several months with a full merger clause and understanding of each parties' obligations. The Debtor has secured a third-party, who has agreed to the terms and will satisfy all the required payments.

(c) The complexity of the situation is straightforward enough. Debtor lost a civil suit to the Creditor who holds the majority debt against the Debtor. The cost of litigation would significantly decrease the total amount in the estate, diminishing the ability to pay not only the Creditor as agreed but any remaining unsecured claims.

But the main issue arises under the last Woodson factor: "the paramount interest of the creditors . . ." that is creditors, plural. The agreement is solely between the Debtor and one Creditor. It fails to take into consideration or even discuss any other creditors who must be treated within the reorganization plan. Understandably, Creditor holds almost 90% of the total debt, but all other creditors must also be considered when approving such a motion, particularly one involving a dismissal. Approving the Settlement Agreement should be a compromise which is "fair and equitable" to all parties involved. (italics added) In re A & C Properties, 784 F.2d at 1381. The agreement focuses solely on questions of Creditor's and Debtor's concerns but fails to consider at all any other creditors.

The court is not indifferent to the Debtor's fresh start nor to her difficulty in handling a non-dischargeable obligation, nor is the court indifferent to the administrative cost savings to the reorganization effort. All are good points, but the movants fail to convince that these points cannot be handled within the context of a Chapter 13 plan. The fact that payments might continue past the five years is hardly an insuperable impediment. The plan can acknowledge the non-dischargeable nature of the obligation and acknowledge that at the end of term the payments will have to go on since the discharge otherwise generally applicable under the plan will not affect this obligation. The Trustee need not be involved after the end of the term. So, no good reason is given to abandon all other creditors in order to further the convenience of just two parties.

Deny as requested. Suggest continuance for re-draft.

(con't from 4-15-20 per order approving stipulation to cont. evidentiary hrg on debtor's objection to proof of claim of shellpoint mortgage servicing entered -awaiting the order as 3-26-20)

Docket 26

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/15/20:

A tentative was issued back in February of 2019 concluding that there was a need for a follow-up evidentiary hearing. The evidentiary hearing has been continued many times by stipulation. It appears that the last written update on this case came from a stipulation to continue the hearing filed in February of 2020. That stipulation asserted that the parties were close to settling and did not want to incur unnecessary fees and costs. In the months since then, Debtor has parted ways with her attorney and is now proceeding pro se. Thus, where this matter stands at present is anyone's guess.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, the court encourages telephonic appearances through CourtCall on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. arrearage – which includes escrow deficiency for funds advanced of $67,598.15 and projected escrow shortage of $5,787.37. However, because Shellpoint’s claim is prima facie valid, the burden shifts to the objector to produce evidence that would negate at least one of the elements essential to the claim’s legal sufficiency. In re Consol. Pioneer Mortgage, 178 B.R. 222, 226 (9th Cir. BAP 1995); In re Pugh, 157 B.R. 898, 901 (9th Cir. BAP 1993). Debtor does not reach this threshold. Debtor allegedly misinterprets a Statement regarding alleged surplus, but does not offer evidence to refute an essential claim made by Shellpoint – that Debtor has not been making payments required by the Note and Deed of Trust which is the foundation for that number. The court cannot tell on this record which set of assertions is correct, but because the prima facie validity in consequence is not overcome, the motion as a summary proceeding can only be denied. The court will hear argument whether a further evidentiary hearing in contested proceeding is required.

- #11.00 Secured Creditor Estate Of Late William L. Seay (U.S.M.C. (R.E.T.))'s Motion For Order Requiring Accounting, Restoration Of Unauthorized Payments, And Adequate Protection
(cont'd from 6-23-20 per order granting mtn to cont. hrg enteref 6-08-20)

Docket 623

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/21/20:

This is the motion of by the Estate of William L. Seay ("Seay"), a creditor of the bankruptcy estate, to prohibit use of cash collateral and for an order requiring accounting, restoration of unauthorized payments, and adequate protection. The motion is opposed by the Chapter 7 trustee, Thomas H. Casey ("Trustee").

This motion comes on the heels of a motion to dismiss the First Amended Complaint ("FAC") in the related adversary proceeding styled, Estate of William L. Seay v. Thomas H. Casey, 8:19-ap-01131 ("the adversary proceeding") that was heard by this court just over a month ago in mid-June. The motion to dismiss was granted with leave to amend. As Trustee argues, despite being brought in the main case, this motion appears to seek substantively similar, if not identical relief as sought by the FAC in the adversary proceeding. The underlying facts in this motion are identical to those recited in the tentative ruling on the motion to dismiss the FAC and are incorporated herein by reference. The parties involved are also identical.

The motion seeks the following relief:

- 1) An order requiring Trustee to account for the funds he was ordered to hold in trust in a segregated account pursuant to the December 8, 2016 Sale Order;
- 2) An order requiring Trustee to either restore to the account the unauthorized payments made to his law corporation or requiring dollar for dollar adequate protection.

The relief sought in the recently dismissed FAC requested the following relief:

- 1) Disgorgement of the cash collateral misappropriated by Trustee and adequate protection;
- 2) Restitution by common count for money had and received following Seay's rescission of the contract with Trustee;
- 3) Declaration of a constructive trust with an obligation to disgorge the funds back to the segregated account pending resolution of the restitution claims made in the adversary proceeding; and
- 4) An injunction prohibiting Trustee or his associates from invading or dissipating funds in the segregated account pending further order of court.

It is obvious that the relief sought in the dismissed FAC and the present motion, although styled differently, are substantially similar, if not identical.

But the motion is not only infirm procedurally it is also weak substantively. Trustee persuasively argues that this motion should be denied because it is procedurally infirm in the following ways:

- 1) The Seay Estate lacks standing to bring this motion because it is simply a collection of assets and liabilities without capacity to sue or be sued, and, therefore, requires a proper representative. This was precisely one of the points decided regarding the FAC.
- 2) As discussed above, the present motion and the FAC sought and seek materially identical relief in different cases.

3) The Motion requests recovery of property from the Estate and Estate professionals, determination of the validity of the Seay Estate's purported lien based on Seay's alleged rescission of the Agreement, and for equitable and injunctive relief for "restoration of funds" and an accounting, all of which must be sought by adversary proceeding under Rule 7001.

Regarding standing, Seay conceded in the FAC proceeding that the Seay estate needed a proper representative as required by California Probate Code §9820 and suggested that Col. Seay's wife, Nancy Klein Seay, would be fulfilling that role. However, as Trustee asserts, there does not appear to be any evidence that a probate estate has been opened for the Estate of William L. Seay, nor has counsel for the Seay Estate provided the Trustee or the court with a copy of the Order Appointing Representative for such estate. The court assumes that such evidence will be produced at some point as proper standing must be established to bring any of these motions or indeed a second amended complaint in the adversary proceeding. Thus, the court concludes that Seay still lacks standing to bring this motion for want of a properly designated representative.

Trustee's second procedural argument, which asserts that this motion is improper as it seeks nearly identical relief as sought in the adversary proceeding, is also persuasive. Trustee cites language from Walton v. Eaton Corp., 563 F.2d 66, 70 (3rd Cir. 1977) for the proposition that a plaintiff has "no right to maintain two separate actions involving the same subject matter at the same time in the same court and against the same defendants." See also, Lee v. Benedict, 958 F.2d 377 (9th Cir. 1992). "The power of a federal court to prevent duplicative litigation is intended to foster judicial economy, the comprehensive disposition of litigation, and to protect parties from the vexation of concurrent litigation over the same subject matter." In re Porter, 295 B.R. 529, 543 (Bankr. E.D. Penn. 2003). (Internal quotations omitted).

"Colloquially described as 'claim splitting,' the practice refers to the improper pursuit of more than one lawsuit against the same parties arising out of the same facts. The theory of claim splitting bars a party from subsequent, duplicative litigation where the same controversy exists." In re Don Rose Oil, 614 B.R. 358, 367 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2020). Though a species of claim preclusion, claim splitting does not require a final judgment on the merits in a prior case. Id. at 367-68. The court examines whether the causes of action and relief sought, as well as the parties or privies to the action, are the same. Id. at 368. This rule has been applied where a party files a request seeking an order that is subject to a pending Adversary Proceeding. See In re Zimmer, 586 B.R. 413, 414 (Bankr. W.D. Penn. 2018). As discussed above, and set forth in chart form in Trustee's opposition, the requested relief in the present motion is substantially and materially duplicative to that sought in the FAC. The parties are also identical. Seay has apparently hinted an intent to file a second amended complaint repairing, among other things, the procedural deficiencies identified by the court in its adopted tentative ruling on Trustee's motion to dismiss. The court does not know what to expect in the second amended complaint, when (if) it is filed, and so the court cannot determine absolutely at this time whether there will continue to be significant or total overlap. But, unless movant announces a determination not to file a second amended complaint, it is proper to deny this motion or stay the motion pending adjudication of the adversary proceeding.

Trustee also persuasively argues that this motion is improperly brought in the main case because the relief sought is only properly obtained through an adversary proceeding according to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure ("FRBP"). First, under FRBP 7001-(1), an action to recover money or property must be brought by adversary proceeding. As argued by Trustee, the motion seeks restoration of payments made to the estate pursuant to the underlying agreement, which constitutes an action to recover money, likely putting it inside the purview of FRBP 7001-1. Trustee next argues that this motion is asserting rescission of the underlying agreement and reinstatement of the Seay lien. In other words, Seay seeks a determination of the validity, priority, or extent of its lien, which is an action that must also be brought in an adversary proceeding pursuant to FRBP 7001-(2). Trustee further argues that the motion's seeking of restoration of funds constitutes a form of injunctive and equitable relief and must be brought in an adversary proceeding under FRBP 7001-(7). See Thompson v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC, 2015 WL 3454726 at *5 (E.D. Wis. May 29, 2015) ("Bankruptcy Rule 7001 provides that 'a proceeding to recover money or property,' which in theory would include a claim for unjust enrichment, and 'a proceeding to obtain an injunction or other equitable relief,' are adversary proceedings. Bank R. 7001(1), (7).") For these reasons, the motion is procedurally improper and should be rejected on that basis. Seay's reply does not contain any analysis of FRBP 7001 and does not acknowledge or attempt to argue around the procedural deficiencies asserted by Trustee, which leads the court to the conclusion that these arguments are not contested. Instead, the reply contains several pages of analysis on issues familiar to the court in the adversary proceeding such as the purported failure of consideration of the underlying agreement between Seay and Trustee, purported unilateral rescission of that agreement by Seay, and Trustee's quasi-judicial immunity, all of which have been argued before, and in any case, are more appropriately considered in the adversary proceeding.

Lastly, Seay's motion is substantively suspect. As the court recalls (and as a review has confirmed), part of the Settlement Agreement between the estate and Seay included a 50/50 split of the proceeds of the real property, and under that agreement Seay's lien would come off (or be "carved out" in language of the Agreement) to constitute the estate's share. That is the obvious meaning of the term "carve out" which appears conspicuously in not only the Trustee's motion to approve the compromise, but, importantly, in Seay's supporting pleading as well. If the term "carve out" has another meaning, it is not explained in the papers. Without a lien Seay cannot now be heard to argue about cash collateral or adequate protection, as those concepts are only appropriate in the context of a secured claim. As the court understands it, there is no contention that any professional fee payments came out of Seay's 50% encumbered portion, which portion was in fact duly paid to him. While the court understands Seay has some argument about why he (or it) should be entitled to a rescission, the court does not see that such a rescission can be effected unilaterally and immediately, as movant seems to be arguing (or as would be necessary for the motion to make any sense). Pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code section 1691, "to effect a rescission a party to the contract must, promptly upon discovering the facts which entitle him to rescind...(a) Give notice of rescission to the party as to whom he rescinds; and (b) Restore to the other party everything of value which he has received from him under the contract or offer to restore the same upon condition that the other party do likewise, unless the latter is unable or positively refuses to do so." "[A] party to a contract cannot rescind at his pleasure, but only for some one or more of the causes enumerated in section 1689 of the Civil Code." McCall v. Superior Court, 1 Cal.2d 527, 538 (1934). "One seeking to rescind a contract, or to enforce a rescission which he claims he has effected in the manner provided in section 1691 of the Civil Code, must allege facts showing that he had good right to rescind, and for what cause a rescission had taken place, or that a rescission had been made by consent." Id. Of the causes enumerated in Cal. Civ. Code section 1689(b)(1), the court observes that between this motion and the FAC, duress, fraud, and collusion are alleged as is failure of consideration under §1689(b)(2) and (3). However, the court notes that these allegations, which were put forth in the FAC, were dismissed for failure to state a claim under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). So, what is the effect of the dismissal on the attempted rescission? This question is likely not answerable with any finality at this point as a second amended complaint is expected in the next few weeks. It is at that point that the court will decide whether Seay has stated facts sufficient to support causes of action for fraud, collusion, duress or failure of consideration, assuming they are alleged. In other words, the facts currently before the court do not give rise to a valid rescission. It is premature for this court to make any rulings on the issue of rescission, but it is clear that this still unsettled question does not support the form of adequate protection and accounting sought in this motion.

The motion reads very much like a motion for reconsideration of the court's original order on the interim fees including many familiar arguments the court found unpersuasive in the past, including the very recent past. Missing from such a motion is any intervening change in law or previously undiscovered evidence that would warrant such reconsideration. It is worth remembering that Seay unsuccessfully objected to the interim fee applications, then appealed the interim fees order only to see the appeal denied as premature and interlocutory. What has changed? The fee awards are still interim, and therefore not final. Thus, as Trustee argues, the proper time to lodge such objections, as are made in this motion and elsewhere, is when Trustee submits his final report and application for fees. Trustee is fully aware that the fee awards are only interim and may be revisited or even adjusted. See In re Strand, 375 F.3d 854, 858 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Cont'l Ill. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Charles N. Wooten, Ltd. (In re Evangeline Ref. Co.), 890 F.2d 1312, 1321 (5th Cir.1989) ("Because interim awards are interlocutory and often require future adjustments, they are 'always subject to the court's reexamination and adjustment during the course of the case.'")), Similarly, the court finds unpersuasive Seay's request to require the expense and inconvenience of an accounting from the estate, as movant requests.

Lastly, the court does not wish to make any rulings that could be misinterpreted as factual findings, which could then lead to unnecessary confusion and possibly risk inconsistent rulings in the pending adversary proceeding. It is not even clear why this motion is being brought at all seeing as the adversary proceeding is in its early stages with a second amended complaint likely to be filed in just a few weeks, which will most likely advance many of the same arguments and allegations made in this motion. In sum, the court does not see the judicial efficiency in requiring Trustee to make an accounting (which he will have to do anyway for his final fee application) at this time; nor is the court persuaded that restoration of the funds and/or

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/22/20:

This is Debtor, Freda Philomena D'Souza's ("Debtor's") Motion to require creditor Samy S. Antoun and Samia Z. Antoun Trustees of Samy and Samia Antoun Family Trust Dated September 9, 1986 ("Antoun") to advise on the amount necessary to cure default/reinstate loan and accept payment from Debtor pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1142 and 11 U.S.C. §105. The motion is opposed by Antoun.

1. Brief Background

The facts are largely undisputed. Debtor filed a petition under Chapter 11 on November 1, 2017. An obligation is owed to Antoun for a promissory note that was secured against the Debtor's real property located at 167 Avenida Florencia, San Clemente, CA 92672 with a stated value of $1.5 Million. The amount owed on the Antoun note was a little over $600,000. On or about May 1, 2018, Debtor filed her Chapter 11 Plan that went out for a vote from the creditors within the Chapter 11 Proceeding (hereinafter "the Chapter 11 Plan").

On or about July 26, 2018, Debtor entered into a Stipulation for Plan Treatment with Antoun. Pursuant to the terms of the stipulated plan treatment, Debtor was to make monthly interval payments of $3,680.07 for a period of 72 months, with a balloon payment of $561,876.27 due on the 72nd month after the Effective Date of the Chapter 11 Plan. The Chapter 11 Plan was confirmed by order of the court on September 14, 2018. The Effective Date of the Chapter 11 Plan was September 29, 2018. Interval payments on the Antoun note would begin on October 1, 2018 pursuant to the terms of the stipulation (thus adopted as part of the plan). The interval payments of $3,680.07 would continue thereafter monthly through October 1, 2026 (72 months), with a final balloon payment of $561,876.27 being due on November 1, 2026. By January 7, 2019, the Debtor had already missed two payments to Antoun. Accordingly, on January 7, 2019, Antoun sent a Notice of Default to the Debtor ("First Notice of Default"). Debtor asserts that she made the following payments (i) $3,680.07 on or about January 29, 2019 ("January Payment") and (ii) $3,680.07 on or about March 1, 2019 ("March Payment"). Antoun apparently failed to process payments in a timely manner as required by the confirmed Chapter 11 Plan, and on June 13, 2019, Debtor filed an adversary proceeding seeking to remove the Debtor's obligations to pay the Antoun claim altogether. The Chapter 11 Plan contains a provision that removes the obligations of the Debtor to pay a creditor that did not timely process payments. Antoun filed a summary judgment motion, which was granted by the court finding that the provision in the plan was unenforceable, both as offensive to equity and because Debtor, having defaulted under the plan, was in no position to require strict performance from Antoun.

On December 2, 2019, Debtor tendered to Antoun certified funds in the amount of $44,160.84 (hereinafter "the certified funds") to cover all outstanding monthly payments that were due on the Antoun Note through December 31, 2019. Antoun refused to accept the payment. Since that time, Debtor's counsel has apparently repeatedly offered the certified funds to Antoun through counsel, specifically advising that the funds were not being tendered for any reason other than to pay Antoun the full amount due on his interval payments. As such, Debtor asserts that she has repeatedly requested a statement of any additional amount that Antoun believes is necessary to cure any default and to fully reinstate the loan, but no such amount has ever been provided.

In January 2020, Debtor sent the January interval payment to Antoun as required, but the January payment was not processed by Antoun. In February, Antoun through counsel allegedly returned the payment to Debtor. In late January 2020, Debtor sent the February interval payment to Antoun as required, but as of the filing of this motion (March 30, 2020), the February payment has allegedly not been processed by Antoun either. As of the filing of this motion, Debtor asserts that Antoun has not accelerated the Antoun Note nor mailed the Debtor any (further?) notice of default. The payments sent by Debtor to Antoun allegedly remain unprocessed. Debtor asserts that she is fully ready and capable to pay the arrears but cannot do so unless she is advised as to the amount due.

Before moving to the legal issues, the court must express its exasperation. That something as simple, and some might say as obvious, as this dispute should require the time of the court is a very sad testament not only to the dysfunctional relationship between Antoun and Debtor and to their total lack of cooperation, but also to a surprisingly combative attitude which cannot be but both expensive and harmful. The blame is not one-sided, as it likely got started by an inexplicably lackadaisical approach by Debtor in paying late or not at all, who then attempted ambush by an outrageously offensive plan provision which, had the court seen earlier, would have ended up on the cutting room floor. But now, the creditor won't even deign to state the amount owed. Incredible!

2. Legal Questions

The main question is, does Debtor have a right to cure the default pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code §2924c? This statute "provides that when a mortgage loan is accelerated as a result of a borrower's default, the borrower can reinstate the loan by paying all amounts due, 'other than the portion of principal as would not then be due had no default occurred.'" Taniguchi v. Restoration Homes LLC, 43 Cal. App. 5th 478, 483 (2019) (internal citation omitted). "That is, the borrower can cure the default and reinstate the loan by paying the amount of the default, including fees and costs resulting from the default, rather than the entire accelerated balance." Id. "The mortgage lender must inform the borrower of the correct amount due to reinstate the loan." Id. at 483-84. In explaining the policy behind this statute, the Taniguchi court stated that the rule was intended to save equities in homes built up through years of payments and observed that "[t]he right to make up payments in default and thus avoid calling the entire loan and sale under a trust deed is good public policy at any time." Id. at 484.

Antoun provides nearly no analysis to dispute that §2924c applies to this case, instead noting that the case law demonstrates the difficulty in applying the statute to modifications. In reading the case law, it seems likely that 2924c would apply here, as it ultimately did in Taniguchi. As the Taniguchi court concluded, "for purposes of section 2953, the Taniguchis' Modification is appropriately viewed as the making or renewal of a loan secured by a deed of trust. It is thus subject to the anti-waiver provisions of section 2953. Section 2924c gives the Taniguchis the opportunity to cure their precipitating default (that is, the missed modified monthly payments) by making up those missed payments and paying the associated late charges and fees, and in that way to avoid the consequences of default on the modified loan." Id. at 490. Antoun also does not directly dispute that Debtor has attempted to make payments intended to cure the default or that the exact amount required to cure the default has been withheld. The court does not understand Antoun's position. The court remembers Debtor's attempt to cancel the debt through a sneaky and unenforceable provision in the plan and understands if Antoun is suspicious of Debtor's motives. However, it does appear that Debtor is evidencing a willingness to pay what she owes under the agreement to bring her payments current and cure the default. The closest Antoun comes to an explanation is an argument based apparently on the court's summary judgment decision where the court observed that a material default under the plan forgives counter performance. This is a basic precept of contract law, and for many purposes plans are treated as contracts. That was raised in the context of why the offensive plan provision should not be enforced. But that is a long way from Antoun then arguing that a plan default waives all other provisions of ancillary contracts, such as the underlying deed of trust, or provisions of California law. That is an illogical assumption largely because Antoun wants, at some level, provisions of the trust deed and California law to still apply (otherwise, no foreclosure?)

Perhaps Antoun does not trust Debtor's ability to remain current on payments, which would lead to constant loop of default and cure, default and cure. The court is sympathetic to that position and Antoun can take comfort in the knowledge that the court cannot tolerate such a situation for long. But, if Debtor can cure the default, and remain current on payments going forward, what is the problem? How is Antoun being disadvantaged if it is being paid because in the end that is all that Antoun is owed? It seems that insisting on going to state court to pursue remedies is premature, especially as Debtor would likely raise §2924c again, requiring further litigation. The court also observes that, although Antoun is correct that issuing the order requested by Debtor would, in some ways, be akin to an injunction or declaratory relief, the court does have 11 U.S.C. §105(a) at its disposal, which gives the court some latitude to issue the order requested. To be clear, all that Debtor is requesting through this motion is a simple number that the court expects Antoun could easily provide, and that Antoun simply accept payment of what it is owed. The declaration of Jeffrey Golden states that Antoun is owed the full debt amount in excess of $900,000 and that the cure amount is in excess of $360,000 (See Opp. Ex. 1). The cure amount appears to be quite high. The motion is requesting that monthly payments under the agreement be allowed to resume, once the cure amount is known. It does not seem possible that over $300,000 could have accrued since the default occurred, but since little explanation is offered, the court cannot be sure.

However, to some extent the parties may be carrying their dispute into the realm of state law to which this court has little reason to opine and will abstain. So, the court feels that requiring Antoun to state the amount owed with particularity is appropriate; this is because it might be argued that we got to this juncture because of unique plan provisions and the court's earlier summary judgment, all of which can be said are "arising under" Title 11. The statement must also contain an itemization and explanation. However, if the amount of the arrearage or the ability to accelerate and deny opportunity to cure are somehow governed under California law and not the plan, the court will abstain from that dispute and Debtor will have to commence an action there. At this juncture the court will allow the parties to work out whether the bankruptcy injunction of §1141 has application. All that requires is that parties abide by the plan. But the court cannot tell on this record whether Antoun is arguing that the plan is being complied with because of rights under state law. If so, that will be the province of the state court.

Grant. Require Antoun to state and explain amount needed to cure within ten days.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the debtor's motion to approve as adequate its revised Disclosure Statement to accompany its First Amended Plan. The Disclosure Statement is still not adequate for at least the following reasons:

1. Sale of the real property in San Juan Capistrano, the premises for debtor's business, is promised no later than February 28, 2020. But just how this is to be accomplished without a §363(f) order is not explained and it is obvious that a plan providing for same is not yet possible. This needs better explanation and/or a more realistic timetable.
2. The plan still needs a better discussion as to how the equity interests are being treated. Presumably this belongs in Class 4 and there should be there a discussion about the absolute priority rule and the contribution of $20,000 in new value. Further, some discussion as to how/why that is the proper number is necessary given the requirements of "market testing" found in Bank of America NT & SA v. 203 N. La Salle Street Partnership 526 U.S. 434 (1999) would be in order.
3. The description about discharge at 21:1-3 should be corrected in view of §1141(d)(3) as suggested by the United States Trustee.

4. As indicated in the opposition of Seacoast Commerce Bank a better job could be done explaining how this plan is feasible if, as Seacoast argues, only about $13,000 is available on a net basis for monthly debt service after costs of operation. Normally, feasibility is a confirmation issue, but this would be the opportunity to explain in simple terms how this works.
5. Some discussion about the alleged $150,000 loan to an insider needs to be discussed and if it is not to be pursued, why.
6. A consistent explanation as to whether Northeast Bank is truly a fully secured creditor at $93,118 including post-petition assets is necessary, in order to evaluate the best interest of creditors test, as Seacoast argues.
7. Some discussion about the pending litigation against Seacoast is also necessary. Is this to be pursued post confirmation? If so, how is the litigation to be funded and what goal is sought? If a judgment were achieved what becomes of the proceeds?

Deny

Tentative for 1/8/20:

This is debtor's motion for approval of disclosure statement as required under §1125(a)(1) as containing "adequate information." An adequacy finding is opposed in oppositions filed by both the UST and Seacoast Commerce Bank. The oppositions are both well taken, and the points raised need not be restated at elaborate length here. The court is primarily concerned about the following fundamental deficiencies:

1. The plan clearly violates the absolute priority rule found at §1129(b)(2)

- (B)(ii). The plan proposes only 1% to unsecured creditors in installments yet the principals retain governance and stock ownership. Seacoast, which itself may be the largest unsecured creditor, plans to vote against. No new value is mentioned. So, unless something else is true this plan is patently unconfirmable, and distribution of a disclosure statement on such a plan is a waste of time and resources. While the court does not usually prejudge confirmation issues, this one is too fundamental to ignore, and so either amendment or at least explanation is required;
2. The proposed treatment of Seacoast 's secured claim is also very problematic. Debtor proposes either to cramdown a payment over 30 years at 5% or a "consensual sale" of the underlying real estate collateral. But the timing and conditions of the proposed sale are unstated, not made subject to conditions and are, thus, illusory. Can the debtor sell whenever it feels like it? Whenever in future it thinks the market has appreciated enough, even if that takes years, or never? The alternative treatment is also a non-starter. An effective 100% loan to value claim is far riskier than a more conventional loan usually made as a percentage of value. Consequently, the increased risk element must be accommodated (paid for), and anything less is a legally impermissible imposition of the risk upon the lender. See In re North Valley Mall ,432 B.R, 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Although this is usually a confirmation issue, 5% is far too low for a commercial loan under any reasonable economic analysis, i.e. prime rate is 4.75% and must be "built up" from there even under a Till analysis. North Valley Mall is not the only analysis relied upon by courts, but this court happens to believe it is the most appropriate in a business, real estate context. Therefore, the court will not approve dissemination of disclosure upon such a patently unconfirmable plan.
 3. Feasibility is very questionable. Again, normally this is judged at confirmation, but the court does not ignore that the MORS show a

Docket 92

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/22/20:

Debtor acknowledges he bears the burden of proof in this valuation motion under §506. He offers only his own declaration, which, although not entirely inadmissible as an owner, suffers from several problems such as the obvious self-interest as well as reductions dependent on expertise that the declarant does not evidentially possess (i.e. structural repairs, opinion on which side of the street is more valuable and the appropriate amount of reduction, even if true, etc.). Consequently, that burden is not carried. The IRS similarly offers declarations based on hearsay reports of computerized databases such as Zillow, or upon the county assessor, which is/are a notoriously inaccurate basis of current value. Moreover, the range of values, $900,000 to $1.3 million is significant and where the value falls may be quite significant (strategic) in determining treatment of junior liens. Consequently, the court cannot render an informed judgment on this record. Absent an agreed single appraiser, each side will be required to submit his/its own professional appraisal of the subject property. These are to be filed at least two weeks before the hearing. Depending on range of resulting values, there may be a further requirement of an evidentiary hearing. Continue.

Tentative for 5/6/20:

The court issued its tentative 2/26 pointing out various deficiencies in the disclosure statement, as drafter. Although various events have occurred in the case, such as a sale of real property, the disclosure statement has not changed. Why haven't we seen an amended disclosure statement?

No tentative.

1. Sale of the real property in San Juan Capistrano, the premises for debtor's business, is promised no later than February 28, 2020. But just how this is to be accomplished without a §363(f) order is not explained and it is obvious that a plan providing for same is not yet possible. This needs better explanation and/or a more realistic timetable.
2. The plan still needs a better discussion as to how the equity interests are being treated. Presumably this belongs in Class 4 and there should be there a discussion about the absolute priority rule and the contribution of $20,000 in new value. Further, some discussion as to how/why that is the proper number is necessary given the requirements of "market testing" found in Bank of America NT & SA v. 203 N. La Salle Street Partnership 526 U.S. 434 (1999) would be in order.
3. The description about discharge at 21:1-3 should be corrected in view of §1141(d)(3) as suggested by the United States Trustee.
4. As indicated in the opposition of Seacoast Commerce Bank a better job could be done explaining how this plan is feasible if, as Seacoast argues, only about $13,000 is available on a net basis for monthly debt service after costs of operation. Normally, feasibility is a confirmation issue, but this would be the opportunity to explain in simple terms how this works.
5. Some discussion about the alleged $150,000 loan to an insider needs to be discussed and if it is not to be pursued, why.
6. A consistent explanation as to whether Northeast Bank is truly a fully secured creditor at $93,118 including post-petition assets is necessary, in order to evaluate the best interest of creditors test, as Seacoast argues.

7. Some discussion about the pending litigation against Seacoast is also necessary. Is this to be pursued post confirmation? If so, how is the litigation to be funded and what goal is sought? If a judgment were achieved what becomes of the proceeds?

Deny

Tentative for 1/8/20:

This is debtor's motion for approval of disclosure statement as required under §1125(a)(1) as containing "adequate information." An adequacy finding is opposed in oppositions filed by both the UST and Seacoast Commerce Bank. The oppositions are both well taken, and the points raised need not be restated at elaborate length here. The court is primarily concerned about the following fundamental deficiencies:

1. The plan clearly violates the absolute priority rule found at §1129(b)(2) (B)(ii). The plan proposes only 1% to unsecured creditors in installments yet the principals retain governance and stock ownership. Seacoast, which itself may be the largest unsecured creditor, plans to vote against. No new value is mentioned. So, unless something else is true this plan is patently unconfirmable, and distribution of a disclosure statement on such a plan is a waste of time and resources. While the court does not usually prejudge confirmation issues, this one is too fundamental to ignore, and so either amendment or at least explanation is required;
2. The proposed treatment of Seacoast's secured claim is also very problematic. Debtor proposes either to cramdown a payment over 30 years at 5% or a "consensual sale" of the underlying real estate collateral. But the timing and conditions of the proposed sale are unstated, not made subject to conditions and are, thus, illusory. Can the debtor sell whenever it feels like it? Whenever in future it thinks the market has appreciated enough, even if that takes years, or never? The alternative treatment is also a non-starter. An effective 100% loan to value claim is far riskier than a more conventional loan usually made as a percentage of value. Consequently, the increased risk element must be accommodated (paid for), and anything less is a legally impermissible imposition of the risk upon the lender. See In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Although this is usually a confirmation issue, 5% is far too low for a commercial loan under any reasonable economic analysis, i.e. prime rate is 4.75% and must be "built up" from there even under a Till analysis. North Valley Mall is not the only analysis relied upon by courts, but this court happens to believe it is the most appropriate in a business, real estate context. Therefore, the court will not approve dissemination of disclosure upon such a patently unconfirmable plan.

3. Feasibility is very questionable. Again, normally this is judged at confirmation, but the court does not ignore that the MORS show a generally declining cash position, and this is while there has been a 9-month moratorium in debt payments. Had even reduced payments been made the debtor would be by now out of money. What, if anything, is expected to change this outlook?

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the motion of Judgment Creditor, Placentia Development Company, LLC ("PDC") to dismiss Bridgemark Corporation, LLC's ("Debtor's") Chapter 11 case pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1112(b) and/or motion for relief from the automatic stay pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §362 (action in nonbankruptcy forum). The motion is opposed by Debtor. No other party has filed any responsive papers.

1. Basic Background Facts

Debtor filed its Petition on January 14, 2020. PDC is the primary creditor owed approximately $42.5 million on account of a state court judgment entered after years of litigation over Debtor's unauthorized use of PDC's land for purposes of extracting oil. Debtor's principal, Robert J. Hall, testified under oath that the company does not have the ability to pay the judgment debt because Debtor's business involves a finite resource of constantly diminishing value. Debtor's second largest non-insider creditor is owed less than $25,000, and all of Debtor's other debts combined add up, at most, to a few hundred thousand. PDC reports that it is offering to acquire all such legitimate, non-insider debts at par. In other words, the judgment owed to PDC accounts for approximately 99.8% of the estate's debt. There do not appear to be any other debts listed as disputed, contingent, or unliquidated.

Chapter 11

The authorizing resolution appended to Debtor's Petition admits that the purpose of this chapter 11 filing is to allow Debtor a stay pending appeal because the Debtor (and one presumes, its principals) cannot afford a supersedeas bond. During the punitive damages portion of the state court trial this testimony was elicited:

"We cannot pay the 27 million We have no ability to pay any of this. ... I don't care how you do it. There's just no way around that. We don't have the ability to pay it and operate a business. It's done." Trial Tr. (Ex. B to Kibler Declaration) at 3125:9-13."

Mr. Hall also testified that at best, Bridgemark might theoretically be able to pay the $27 million in compensatory damages at $1 million per year, interest-free, over 27 years. See Id. at 3156:20-23 ["We can't pay it. ... If they would let us pay a million dollars a year for 27 years with no interest, we might be able to work it out."] But as Mr. Hall also testified, Bridgemark is built on "an asset that's declining in value every year.... It just goes down and down and down." Id. at 3113:8-12.

By prior motion the court was informed that Debtor will attempt post judgment motions to reduce the judgment and/or obtain a new trial. No information is provided as to the status of any of those.

The court is also informed that PDC has filed a state court lawsuit against members of the Hall family, who are 100% equity holders of Debtor, alleging, among other things, that the Halls used Debtor as a vehicle to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars to affiliated entities in the form of "management fees" or "consulting fees," which the affiliated entities then – through non-arms' length "loans" to the Halls – used to purchase multi-million-dollar homes, extravagant cars and furnishings, valuable pieces of art, and luxury yachts for personal use and benefit.

2. Motion to Dismiss & Relief from Stay Standards

Section 1112(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides:

"[O]n request of a party in interest, and after notice and a hearing, the court shall convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 or dismiss a case under this chapter, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate, for cause unless the court determines that the appointment under section 1104(a) of a trustee or an examiner is in the best interests of creditors and the estate."

The statute includes a non-exhaustive list of certain types of "cause," including "substantial or continuing loss to or diminution of the estate and the absence of a reasonable likelihood of rehabilitation," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(A), and "gross mismanagement of the estate," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(B).

Similarly, section 362(d) provides that "[o]n request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, the court shall grant relief from the stay provided under subsection (a) of this section ... for cause," and also provides the non-exhaustive example of "lack of adequate protection."

Given the non-exhaustive nature of "cause" referenced in both sections of the Code, courts have read the term "cause" to include bankruptcy filings that are not appropriate invocations of federal bankruptcy jurisdiction – such as filings in which the avowed purpose of the bankruptcy petition is to avoid posting an appellate bond, or where the petition seeks merely to move what is essentially a two-party dispute from a state court to a federal bankruptcy court. As a matter of shorthand, the case law interpreting §§362(d)(1) and 1112(b) often refer to these types of cause as dismissals for "bad faith" or for lack of "good faith." See generally Marsch v. Marsch (In re Marsch), 36 F.3d 825, 828 (9th Cir. 1994) [employing this terminology, but cautioning that it is misleading: "While the case law refers to these dismissals as dismissals for 'bad faith' filing, it is probably more accurate in light of the precise language of section 1112(b) to call them dismissals 'for cause.'"]. Thus, the shorthand phrase "good faith" (which does not appear in the statute) does not turn on an inquiry into subjective motivations, thoughts, or feelings. Instead, the question is whether a particular bankruptcy filing transgresses "several, distinct equitable limitations that courts have placed on Chapter 11 filings" in order to "deter filings that seek to achieve objectives outside the legitimate scope of the bankruptcy laws." Id.

In this context, whether there is "cause" for dismissal or relief from stay "depends on an amalgam of factors and not upon a specific fact." In re Mense, 509 B.R. 269, 277 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2014). Four pertinent factors include whether the debtor has unsecured creditors, cash flow, or sources of income to sustain a feasible plan of reorganization, and whether the case is "essentially a two-party dispute capable of prompt adjudication in state court." In re St. Paul Self Storage Ltd. P'ship, 185 B.R. 580, 582–83 (9th Cir. BAP 1995). Courts are particularly suspicious of filings in which the express purpose of the chapter 11 petition is to stay execution of a judgment without an appellate bond. See e.g., In re Integrated Telecom Express, Inc., 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004) ("[I]f there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court."). In such cases, courts consider some or all of the following factors to determine whether bankruptcy jurisdiction is being properly invoked:

- "Whether the debtor had financial problems on the petition date, other than the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor has relatively few unsecured creditors, other than the holder of the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor intends to pursue an effective reorganization within a reasonable period of time, or whether the debtor is unwilling or unable to propose a meaningful plan until the conclusion of the litigation"; and

• "Whether assets of the estate are being diminished by the combined ongoing expenses of the debtor, the chapter 11 proceedings, and prosecution of the appeal." In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 280 (footnotes and citations omitted).

"The bankruptcy court is not required to find that each factor is satisfied or even to weigh each factor equally. Rather, the ... factors are simply tools that the bankruptcy court employs in considering the totality of the circumstances." In re Prometheus Health Imaging, Inc., 2015 WL 6719804, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Nov. 2, 2015) (citations, internal quotation marks, and brackets omitted). Indeed, "[a] bankruptcy court may find one factor dispositive or may find bad faith even if none of the factors are present." In re Greenberg, 2017 WL 3816042, at *5 (9th Cir. BAP Aug. 31, 2017) (citing Mahmood v. Khatib (In re Mahmood), 2017 WL 1032569, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Mar. 17, 2017)).

3. Was Debtor's Petition Filed for a Proper Purpose?

PDC argues that Debtor's petition is a textbook bad faith filing. In support PDC cites In re Integrated Telecom Express, 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004), where the court stated bluntly: "if there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay provision to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court." PDC also cites In re Casey, 198 B.R. 910, 917–18 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1996) for the proposition that the "use [of] bankruptcy to defeat the state law appeal bond requirement" is not a "legitimate bankruptcy purpose."

In response Debtor argues that at least some courts have held that a chapter 11 filing can properly substitute for posting an appeal bond. For example, Debtor cites Marshall v. Marshall (In re Marshall), 721 F.3d 1032, 1048 (9th Cir. 2013) where the court found:

Here, unlike in Marsch and Boynton, the record suggests that Howard and Ilene's liquid assets were probably insufficient to satisfy the judgment or cover the cost of a supersedeas bond. The bankruptcy court found that the Fraud Judgment amounted to over $12 million plus interest, that the "custom" in Texas was to set appeal bonds at 150% of the judgment, and that Howard did not have sufficient liquid assets to post a bond of that size. Although the record does not invariably indicate that the Debtors could not finance a supersedeas bond, we cannot say that the bankruptcy court's determination was clearly erroneous. Moreover, notwithstanding their ability to finance a bond, Howard and Ilene's inclusion of the Fraud Judgment in their initial Plan suggests that they filed their bankruptcy petition for the proper purpose of reorganization, not as a mere ploy to avoid posting the bond.

Debtor argues that the language quoted above, and others expressing similar sentiment, is applicable to our case. Debtor also points out that it is not attempting to avoid posting an appeal bond, it simply cannot do so, which Debtor argues is a critical distinction.

PDC argues that the cases cited by Defendant must be viewed according to their unique factual context, rather than relying solely on the ultimate result. For example, PDC points out that in Marshall, the judgment creditor who moved to dismiss the case as a bad faith filing had already missed the claims bar date (which was November 15, 2002) when he filed the motion to dismiss (on December 13, 2002). See In re Marshall, 298 B.R. 670, 674 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2003). At the time the motion to dismiss was filed, the debtors had already proposed a plan that would pay every other creditor with timely claims in full. Id. It was in this context that the Circuit court held that the bankruptcy court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to dismiss for bad faith. Indeed, the Marshall Circuit court stated, "we agree with the bankruptcy court that '[p]erhaps the most compelling grounds for denying a motion to dismiss grounded on bad faith is the determination that a reorganization plan qualifies for confirmation.'" Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048

(quoting 298 B.R. at 681)). PDC persuasively argues that it would inappropriate to infer a broader rule from Marshall. PDC argues with some persuasion that the other cases cited by Debtor were ones in which the courts based their holdings on the unique circumstances before them and did not articulate rules of general applicability.

Similarly, on the relief of stay question, Debtor's citation to In re Badax, LLC, 608 B.R. 730 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2019), also appears to be misplaced. Debtor takes a small section of the opinion where the court stated that the conclusion of bad faith was not based solely on the debtor's failure to obtain a bond, but rather based on a totality of the circumstances. Id. at 741. However, PDC points out that the Badax court specifically held that relief from stay was granted because the case had been filed in an attempt to delay execution on an adverse judgment and also because "there [was] no basis to conclude that a speedy, efficient and feasible reorganization [was] realistic." Id.

In contrast PDC argues that the instant case is more similar in substance to several other cases including Windscheffel v. Montebello Unified School District (In re Windscheffel), 2017 WL 1371294 (9th Cir. BAP Apr. 3, 2017). In Windscheffel, the debtor filed an appeal of an approximately $3 million state court judgment, but "claimed that he was unable to post the required supersedeas bond to stay enforcement of the judgment." Id. at *1. "He filed bankruptcy to avoid posting the bond and to stay [the judgment creditor's] collection efforts." Id. The debtor had, at most, four unsecured creditors (including the judgment creditor). The debtor filed a proposed chapter 11 plan that was "a thinly veiled attempt to avoid the state court's award of punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest because it proposed to pay 49.22 percent of [the judgment creditor's] claim, which was (not coincidentally) the approximate amount of the state court judgment without punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest." Id. The debtor later amended his plan to provide that if the judgment were upheld on appeal, he would liquidate his assets and give the proceeds to the judgment creditor. Id. The Ninth Circuit BAP affirmed the bankruptcy court's holding that the "totality of the circumstances" warranted dismissal of the case for cause. Id. at *4.

PDC argues that Debtor has admitted in the authorizing resolution attached to its Petition that this case was filed to circumvent the requirement to post a supersedeas bond: "Since the Company lacks the financial resources to post a bond, the only way to protect the interests of all stakeholders [i.e., the Hall family] is to commence a case under chapter 11" Docket No. 1 at PDF page 5 of 101. PDC also points to the First Day Declaration, and specifically the section entitled "Events Leading to the Bankruptcy" which only mentions the judgment debt, and really nothing else, as the major cause of the bankruptcy filing. Therefore, PDC argues with some persuasion that it is obvious that the only purpose served by filing the Chapter 11 petition was to attempt to avoid the posting of an appeal bond. After all, Debtor's entire business model as amplified in Mr. Hall's testimony is built upon extracting a finite and irreplaceable resource, which might be said to make a reorganization over time inherently less feasible than other businesses.

PDC next argues that because the dispute is solely between PDC and Debtor, for purposes of a finding of bad faith, this case is fundamentally a two-party dispute, which is continuing even now. PDC cites In re Murray, 543 B.R. 484, 494–95 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016), aff'd, 565 B.R. 527 (S.D.N.Y. 2017), aff'd, 900 F.3d 53 (2d Cir. 2018), for the proposition that, "Bankruptcy is a collective remedy, with the original purpose – which continues to this day – to address the needs and concerns of creditors with competing demands to debtors' limited assets" As such, PDC argues, "[a] chapter 11 reorganization case has been filed in bad faith when it is an apparent two-party dispute that can be resolved outside of the Bankruptcy Court's jurisdiction." Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC v. Sholes (In re Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC), 2011 WL 4502102, at *10 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. Aug. 26, 2011).

PDC argues that there is no need for the "collective remedy" of bankruptcy as articulated above because there are no other creditors with competing demands to Debtor's assets. All other claims against Debtor are de minimis relative to the Judgment, and also appear to be undisputed. Cf. In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 (dismissing chapter 11 case where debtors had "few unsecured creditors" other than judgment creditor); In re Windscheffel, 2017 WL 1371294, at *5 (affirming dismissal of case where claims of other unsecured creditors were "negligible" compared to judgment creditor's claim). In fact, if the judgment debt did not exist, it appears Debtor would have more than sufficient cash on hand to pay any other outstanding debts without difficulty. See First Day Decl. ¶¶ 22 (stating that Debtor has unrestricted cash of approximately $4.2 million) & 28–30 (describing secured car loans, royalty obligations, and accounts payable totaling less than $700,000). PDC reminds the court that it also offers to acquire all legitimate, non-insider claims at par value, leaving no reason that such creditors cannot be paid in full.

Finally, PDC argues, citing In re Chu, 253 B.R. 92, 95 (S.D. Cal. 2000) that for purposes of a finding of bad faith, Debtor's prepetition improper conduct provides additional support for dismissing the case outright or granting relief of stay. Thus, use of a debtor's assets to fund the expenses of its principals is one factor indicative of bad faith. See, e.g., In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 n.26. PDC argues that Debtor's alleged tortious prepetition conduct, which precipitated the underlying lawsuit that ultimately led to the judgment (which included punitive damages), should be considered by the court. The court should also consider the allegations contained in the litigation PDC has pending against the Hall family, which alleges that family members essentially used Debtor as a piggy bank to mask income from Debtor.

Though perhaps not always perfect analogues, it appears that PDC's characterization of Ninth Circuit jurisprudence is more in line with the current case than those cases cited by Debtor. To be clear, the court is less concerned with Debtor's heated rhetoric impugning PDC's motivation in pursuing this motion (and PDC's allegations of post-petition misconduct by the Debtor and the Hall family) than it is with PDC's arguments that a reorganization is likely not feasible due to the enormous judgment debt and Debtor's ever diminishing product source. The court is also not impressed with Debtor's assertion that allowing PDC to collect on its judgment would amount necessarily to a business fatality. First, it is far from clear that PDC wants to "kill" the Debtor as it would seem far more logical to continue operations, at least until the judgment is paid. Perhaps not so clear is why the Hall family should get to stay in authority. Debtor's principals, as the trial court found, are responsible for this misfortune as indicated by the addition of punitive damages to the judgment.

The court also disagrees with Debtor's premise that simply because Debtor is currently operating a viable business, a successful reorganization is realistic. Even Debtor's authorities suggesting a Chapter 11 to avoid an appeal bond may serve a legitimate purpose do so largely because a reorganization benefitting an array of creditors with divergent interests seemed possible or even likely. See e.g. Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048-49 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681), citing Marsch, 36 F. 3d at 828 and In re Boynton, 184 B.R. 580, 581, 583 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1995). But little or no effort is made here to show how this Debtor can possibly confirm a non-consensual plan under these circumstances, where 99+% of the debt is in hostile hands. This must particularly be so where PDC has offered to make all other creditors whole either by buying the claims or by filing a competing plan. How does Debtor get away with claiming an impaired consenting class in those circumstances, even if separate classification maneuvers could succeed? Adding to this problem is Mr. Hall's admission that the assets are a diminishing resource, thus calling into question the feasibility of a long-term payout. Debtor may cite to 11 U.S.C. §1129 (c) which requires the court, when two plans are confirmable, to consider the interests of equity. But this assumes that Debtor's plan could in any event be confirmable, a somewhat dubious proposition. A plan that proposes nothing more than delay while the appeals are resolved should be regarded as "dead on arrival."

But the court is willing to give the Debtor a short but reasonable extension to answer these questions about just how probable a reorganization is or can be despite these obstacles. In this the court is uninterested in platitudes; rather, a point by point, connect the dots proposal to reorganization that could be plausibly crammed down is what is needed. Further, PDC may also amplify the record with a more complete evidentiary showing which might support a charge of prepetition fraud or mismanagement as discussed at §§ 1104(a)(1) (or implicated in 1112) thereby strengthening the argument that there is no legitimate reason for maintaining management. Debtor should not expect an extension of exclusivity, however, which will run out on or about May 14, 2020.

Continue hearing about 60 days to allow Debtor to explain how reorganization is feasible in these circumstances.

This is Plaintiff Foothill Financial, L.P.'s (Plaintiff's) motion for a preliminary injunction. The motion seeks to stay proceedings in a state court action brought by Defendant/Debtor Richard P. Herman and his non-debtor spouse, Sabina C. Herman (collectively, Defendants) against Plaintiff and its individual partners. The motion seeks to stay the state court proceeding until such time as this court makes a determination as to whether: (a) the claims in the pending state court action are property of the debtor's estate; (b) the post-conversion, duly appointed and acting Chapter 7 trustee is the real party in interest with standing to prosecute or otherwise dispose of those claims; and (c) the claims in the pending state court action have been released pursuant to a settlement agreement previously approved by this court. Plaintiff is joined by the Chapter 7 trustee in requesting this preliminary injunction.

For his part, Defendant does not directly contest that Plaintiff can meet its burden of establishing the need for a preliminary injunction. Defendant does not believe his state court claims are property of the bankruptcy estate and believes that this motion is nothing more than a disguised motion to dismiss his state court claims. Defendant suggests that this court abstain from this current action because the state court action is far along. Defendant characterizes Plaintiff as a "predatory lender" and claims that Plaintiff procured the release in the Settlement Agreement by fraud.

I. Preliminary Injunction Standards

"A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish that [1] he is likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4] that an injunction is in the public interest." Winter v. NRDC, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). The Ninth Circuit has held, "a 'likelihood' of success per se is not an absolute requirement." Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1085 (9th Cir. 2014). Instead, "serious questions going to the merits' and a hardship balance that tips sharply toward the plaintiff can support issuance of an injunction, assuming the other two elements of the Winter test are also met." Id.

A. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

Plaintiff believes that it can show that Debtor and Sabina lack standing to prosecute the state court claims because they are property of the estate and, therefore, belong to the trustee of the estate. Further, even if Debtor and Sabina did have proper standing, Plaintiff asserts that the release clause in the Settlement Agreement, which was approved by this court, would defeat their causes of action.

1. Lack of Standing

Both federal and California law require actions to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 367 ("[e]very action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest"). "Because the bankruptcy trustee controls the bankruptcy estate, [he or she] is the real party in interest in the suits that belong to the estate." Griffin v. Allstate Ins. Co., 920 F. Supp. 127, 130 (C.D. Cal. 1996). "After appointment of a trustee, a Chapter 7 debtor no longer has standing to pursue a cause of action which existed at the time the Chapter 7 petition was filed. Only the trustee, as representative of the estate, has the authority to prosecute and/or settle such causes of action." Harris v. St. Louis University, 114 B.R. 647, 648 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1990) (internal quotations and alternations omitted). Further, a Chapter 7 debtor may not prosecute on his or her own a cause of action belonging to the estate unless the claim has been abandoned by the trustee. Bostanian v. Liberty Savings Bank, 52 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1081 (1997) ("absent abandonment of the claim by the trustee, a debtor out of possession has no standing to prosecute a cause of action which has passed to the bankruptcy estate").

Plaintiff persuasively argues that the six causes of action making up the pending state court action, assuming Defendants retained or acquired any rights after signing the Settlement Agreement, are property of the bankruptcy estate, and thus, passed to the trustee when the case was converted from Chapter 11 to Chapter 7. Further, Plaintiffs also persuasively argue that the causes of action in the state court action relating to damaged personal property such as plants, antique furniture, artwork, etc., are also property of the bankruptcy estate. To the extent that it is argued by Defendants that these items of personal property were the non-debtor spouse's separate property, no evidence supporting this argument is proffered that would rebut the community property presumption. In short, Plaintiff has persuasively argued that it has at least a fair likelihood of prevailing on the argument that the claims set forth in Defendants' Second Amended Complaint in state court are property of the bankruptcy estate, which belong to the Chapter 7 trustee.

2. The Release Clause in the Settlement Agreement

Plaintiff persuasively argues that, even if the Defendants had proper standing to pursue their claims in state court, the claims would still likely be defeated by the general release and covenant not to sue contained in the Settlement Agreement approved by this court. Indeed, the language in the Settlement Agreement cited by Plaintiff does appear to waive any potential claims Defendants may have had or might still have against Plaintiff.

Plaintiff cites Gregory v. Hamilton, 77 Cal. App. 3d 213, (1978) for the proposition that under California law, specific performance is an appropriate remedy for enforcing a release. There, the court noted, "[i]t is indisputable that money damages could not provide the relief which respondent seeks, i.e., release from liability. Therefore, the breach complained of must be remedied in equity by compelling performance." Id. at 219. However, there is also Cal. Civ. Code §526(a) (6), which states:

"(a) An injunction may be granted in the following cases:

(6) Where the restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings."

Plaintiff also persuasively argues that the Settlement Agreement, signed by Debtor post-petition in his capacity as debtor-in-possession, is binding on the Chapter 7 trustee. "[I]t is axiomatic that the Trustee is bound by the acts of the debtor-in-possession[.]"Armstrong v. Norwest Bank, Minneapolis, N.A., 964 F.2d 797, 801 (8th Cir. 1992). Thus, it appears likely that a court would find the unambiguous language in the Settlement Agreement both binding and enforceable.

Defendants do not challenge the language of the Settlement Agreement. However, Defendants do argue that the Settlement Agreement is invalid because Plaintiff allegedly procured the Settlement through fraud. In support of this contention, Defendants cite Cal. Civ. Code §1668, which states:

"All contracts which have for their object, directly or indirectly, to exempt any one from responsibility for his own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law."

The problem with Defendants' contention is that it is critically lacking in evidentiary support and assumes a finding of fraud as the precondition. Further, Defendants' argument does not address the standing issue raised by Plaintiff. Thus, Plaintiff has shown a sufficient likelihood of success on the merits of its arguments regarding both Defendants' lack of standing and the enforceability of the Settlement Agreement.

B. Irreparable Harm

Plaintiff argues that if the injunctive relief does not issue, Plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury. For example, Plaintiff argues that if the state action can proceed, there is a significant risk of inconsistent rulings based on multiple actions in different courts. Plaintiff persuasively argues that this is particularly problematic in this case because Debtor is taking inconsistent positions in the state court action and before this court. For example, in the state court action, Debtor and his wife are claiming that valuable personal property such as antiques, and artwork were damaged by Plaintiff as a result of their eviction of Debtor and his wife. However, Plaintiff points out that none of these valuables were listed in Debtor's schedules in the bankruptcy case.

Further, Plaintiff argues that Defendants are attempting to gain a favorable judgment in their fraud/misrepresentation claims regarding the Settlement Agreement in order the chill Plaintiffs participation in the bankruptcy case. Plaintiff argues that the bankruptcy court is the only forum in which it can pursue claims against the Defendants, making the inequity plain.

Finally, if Defendants are permitted to continue prosecuting the state court action, the estate will continue to be depleted of resources, thereby injuring the interests of Plaintiff and other creditors. Plaintiff will also have to continue expending resources to defend against Defendants' claims. Plaintiff argues that it has no adequate remedy at law because neither the Defendants nor the Estate have enough resources to compensate Plaintiff for the continuing harm it would suffer if the state court action proceeds. In support of this argument, Plaintiff cites Philip Morris USA Inc., v. Scott, 561 U.S. 1301, 1304 (2010) for the proposition that "[i]f expenditures cannot be recouped, the resulting loss may be irreparable."

Of the arguments put forth by Plaintiffs regarding irreparable harm, the danger of inconsistent rulings leading to the necessity of disentangling those rulings, which would almost certainly further deplete the finite resources of the bankruptcy estate, is the most compelling and persuasive argument. This element is not addressed by Defendants. Therefore, there is a risk of irreparable injury to Plaintiff if the state court action is allowed to proceed.

C. Balance of Hardships

Plaintiff again persuasively argues that this factor weighs in favor of granting the injunction because: (1) the state court action should not have been filed in the first place without permission of this court; (2) Defendants claims in the state court action are baseless because the provisions the Settlement Agreement is valid and enforceable; (3) Plaintiffs are being forced to spend substantial sums of money mounting a defense to the state court action, which is especially harmful to Plaintiffs given that Defendants' standing to pursue those claims is suspect at best; (4) there is a risk of inconsistent judgments across courts in different jurisdictions; (5) the prosecution of the state court actions will further deplete the bankruptcy estate's limited resources.

Defendants do not address this point. However, there is not an obvious legitimate hardship to Defendants if the state court action is temporarily stayed. Therefore, this consideration weighs in Plaintiff's favor as well.

D. The Public Interest

Plaintiff argues that issuing the injunction is supported by public policy principles that are fundamental to the bankruptcy system. For example, Plaintiff cites In re Richmond Paramedical Servs., Inc., 94 B.R. 881, 885 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1988) for the general proposition that a paramount public interest is "protecting the estate of debtors for the benefit of creditors." This includes a public interest in maintaining the status quo by not dissipating potential assets of the debtor's estate. In re OGA Charters, LLC, 554 B.R. 415, 432 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) In addition, as noted in In re Chiron Equities, 552 B.R. 674, 701, (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) "[i]t is in the public interest for bankruptcy courts to enforce their own orders and to ensure that the integrity of the bankruptcy system is upheld." Plaintiff argues, and the court agrees, that issuing a preliminary injunction to stay the state court proceedings until the ambiguities identified by Plaintiff are resolved, serves these public interests. Thus, this factor also weighs in favor of granting a preliminary injunction.

II. Abstention

Defendants argue that this court should exercise its discretion to abstain from deciding in this matter. Defendants appears to be arguing that since the state court action is nearly to the jury trial stage (i.e., much further along than the proceedings in this court?), this court should abstain, pending resolution in the state court action. However, considering the issues discussed above, abstention does not seem appropriate. Both Plaintiff and the Chapter 7 trustee are requesting that this court issue a preliminary injunction so as to allow a determination on these threshold issues.

(set by Order entered 3-18-20)
(rescheduled from 4-28-2020 at 11:00 a.m. per court)

Docket 113

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/23/20:

New for 7/23: Mr. Herman's objection to order for sanctions and stay of proceedings pending appeal. Mr. Herman argues that he has appealed this court's contempt order, which divests this court of jurisdiction. This objection was filed on 6/26/20.

The objection is linked to the notice of lodgment of the order requiring Herman to pay $2,000 as a sanction for his continuing violation of this court's May 11, 2020 contempt order.

Foothill and the Chapter 7 Trustee have filed a joint supplemental report noting Mr. Herman's continuing noncompliance. Per the report, Mr. Herman is continuing his campaign in state court asserting that this wife may make claims beyond that which this court set forth. The state court has apparently issued an OSC re dismissal and a separate OSC regarding the court's proposed transfer of the Surviving Claims to a court of limited jurisdiction (i.e. claims for damages of less than $25,000). These matters are set for hearing on August 7, 2020. Unsurprisingly, Mr. Herman has also failed to pay the sanction to Foothill as ordered.

Regarding Mr. Herman's assertion that the appeal divests this court of jurisdiction over the contempt order, Foothill cites Hoffman v. Beer Drivers and Salesmen's Local Union No. 88, 536 F.2d 1268, 1276 (9th Cir. 1976) for the proposition that, in the context of contempt proceedings like the ones here, "where the court supervises a continuing course of conduct and where as new facts develop additional supervisory action by the court is required, an appeal from the supervisory order does not divest the [court] of jurisdiction to continue its supervision, even though in the course of that supervision the court act upon or modifies the order from which the appeal is taken.” Trustee further cites Hughes v. Sharp, 476 F.2d 975 (9th Cir. 1973), where the court noted, that when the contemnor is a party to the pending proceedings, and when those proceedings are still under way, the court lacks jurisdiction to consider the purported appeal from a contempt order as that order is interlocutory. The court stated that although this may seem harsh, a contemnor is not without recourse, as among his options is purging his contempt. Id. Foothill also notes that the notice of appeal was untimely and that a new appeal cannot be initiated by simply amending the notice of appeal; a new notice of appeal is required.

By contrast, Mr. Herman's objection is completely devoid of analysis and contains only vague citations to cases standing for the broad proposition that an appeal divests the bankruptcy court of jurisdiction over those aspects of the case involved in the appeal. But those cases cited by Mr. Herman do not undercut the cases cited by Foothill. Mr. Herman has not filed anything responsive to Foothill's supplemental report.

The message that the court sent to Mr. Herman at the last hearing on 6/25 was apparently not received, even when Mr. Herman was unambiguously ordered to pay a sanction of $2,000 to Foothill to put a sharper point on the message. Mr. Herman seems to be operating on the misguided assumption that his appeal puts him out of reach of this court, leaving him free to pursue conduct this court has already characterized as contumacious. However, as the case law cited above demonstrates, the court remains vested with the power to monitor Mr. Herman's ongoing misconduct, and modify the contempt order as necessary.

The court has already noted that Mr. Herman is playing with fire by continuing to ignore this court's orders. It does not appear, however, that Mr. Herman is altering his course. Rather, he persists, relying on legalistic arguments about finality of orders which, as explained above, are not persuasive. But this course is causing real, continuing damages to Foothill. So, the court has little choice but to raise the stakes in hopes of reaching the requisite coercion threshold. The sanction is doubled to $4,000, payable forthwith to Foothill.

Tentative for 6/25/20:

Following the hearing on the OSC re: Contempt on April 29, Foothill Financial and Trustee jointly lodged an order on April 30. The official order issued on May 11. Mr. Herman filed an untimely objection to the lodged order.

To accompany his objection to the lodged order, Mr. Herman attached his own proposed order, which bears little resemblance to the actual ruling on the OSC and several other orders issued by this court.

The most consequential rewrite Mr. Herman makes to his proposed order is where he states that per our abstention order, he is allowed to pursue in state court all claims that may belong solely to his wife with no limit on value. This is despite the many orders issued by this court where the specific claims the court abstained from are listed. Foothill's response catalogues the various orders and judgments with the court's very clear language articulating the narrow scope of its abstention.

Mr. Herman appears to have seized upon the most miniscule ambiguity to deliberately disregard the language and spirit of this court's orders in an attempt to reframe his dismissed claims as belonging solely to his wife, thereby allowing him to re-litigate them in state court. Mr. Herman may have already filed a version of his order with the state court. Foothill and Trustee are understandably dismayed by this latest attempt to hinder and delay.

In light of this most recent and fairly egregious transgression, Foothill requests that the court now impose monetary sanctions. Foothill suggests that Mr. Herman should pay the fees incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's ongoing contempt, which Foothill estimates in its status report at $7,500.

Mr. Herman has filed his own status report asserting that the contempt order is on appeal and there is nothing else to be adjudicated by this court at this time, all matters now being with the district court.

Mr. Herman is playing with fire. Rather than displaying even a modicum of compunction after being adjudged to be in contempt, Mr. Herman asserts in his objection that his contempt is now purged, and that it never truly existed in the first place. Mr. Herman, we should not forget, is also an attorney, and is presumed to be able to understand court orders and the consequences for disregarding them. Thus, a measured and modest monetary sanction is likely appropriate, with the promise of more severe sanctions to follow if Mr. Herman continues to misconduct himself.

The court requests an update on whether Mr. Herman actually lodged a bogus form of order with the state court. Impose monetary sanctions of $2000 payable jointly to Foothill and Trustee.

This is a hearing on the court's Order to Show Cause why Debtor, Richard P. Herman ("Debtor") should not be held in Contempt of Court for Violating Court Orders and The Automatic Stay. The OSC was issued on March 18, 2020. Specifically, the OSC requires that Debtor demonstrate:

- (a) Why he should not be held in contempt for
 - i. his continuing efforts to exercise control over and interfere with the dismissal of the estate's claims in direct violation of the express provisions of this Court's orders and Judgment as well as the provisions of the automatic stay; and
 - ii. his continuing violation of this Court's permanent injunction by continuing to assert and pursue claims in the state court that this Court has enjoined him from asserting or pursuing.

- (b) Why he should not be subjected to the following sanctions:
 - i. Imposition of a coercive fine, payable to the Court, for each day that he remains in contempt; and
 - ii. Compensatory damages incurred by Foothill and the Trustee as a result of Mr. Herman's contemptuous conduct, including the attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and appear at the hearing thereon, and any additional attorneys' fees and costs incurred by Foothill and/or the Trustee to respond and appear with respect to Mr. Herman's pleadings filed in the state court in violation of this Court's orders.

Both Debtor and Foothill Financial, L.P. ("Foothill") have filed timely responses.

Debtor's response is not persuasive. The main problem is that Debtor feigns ignorance or misunderstanding of this court's orders. Debtor appears to be arguing that his action(s) in state court are legitimate considering this court's abstention from adjudicating the remaining claims that were not deemed property of the estate. As argued effectively by Foothill in its response, this court has been clear in its delineation between what causes of action are and are not property of the estate. The court has clearly stated in prior adopted tentative rulings, the "surviving claims" are limited to claims for negligent damage to personal property in an amount not to exceed $3,500, and for his wife to pursue the same cause of action provided that she could establish that the damaged property was her separate property. These very narrow categories can have little relationship with what Debtor seems to persist in filing in the State Court.

As argued by Foothill, Mr. Herman is contending, here and in the State Court, that the "abstained claims" include claims other than the surviving claims identified by this court, which Mr. Herman argues are to be "defined in the State Court." Foothill notes that Debtor's response cites no authority or document that could possibly lead Debtor to such an understanding.

To aggravate the problem, Debtor is a licensed attorney of long standing, and so may be reasonably presumed to be able to understand court orders, and importantly, the consequences for ignoring them. Thus, his reported actions, which he does not deny, can be viewed as deliberate refusals to abide by this court's lawful orders.

Debtor's citation to Taggart is inapposite as Debtor does not really attempt to draw any parallels between Taggart and the present case, nor could he.

As Foothill correctly notes, unlike in Taggart, neither Foothill nor the Trustee has sought damages under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k), but rather this proceeding involves the court's authority to enforce its orders by imposing civil contempt remedies. Moreover, although there is more than ample basis for this court to find that Debtor's conduct was (and continues to be) "willful," the Supreme Court in Taggart expressly held that, in the civil contempt context, it is error to apply a subjective standard. Id. at 1804; see also In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) (no finding of bad faith or willful misconduct is required as "the focus is not on the subjective beliefs or intent of the contemnors in complying with the order, but whether in fact their conduct complied with the order at issue") (internal quotations omitted). Instead, the Supreme Court held, "[b]ased on the traditional principles that govern civil contempt, the proper standard is an objective one." Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 1804. Thus, Foothill argues, under Taggart, remedies for civil contempt are appropriate where "there is no objectively reasonable basis for concluding that the [contemnor's] conduct might be lawful under the . . . order." Id. at 1801 (rejecting a "good faith" defense and instead establishing an objective reasonableness standard in the context of contempt proceedings arising out of the violation of a discharge order).

The court has patiently entertained Debtor's numerous motions, many of which have been of dubious merit and suspected of being nothing more than attempts to delay enforcement of Foothill's legal rights. Many have been repetitive and do nothing but rehash the same issues. The court is now left with no option but to use its coercive powers to compel Debtor to abide by its orders. Thus, the question then is, what form should the coercive measures take? Foothill suggests the following measures be imposed:

1. Order Debtor to pay to the court a fine in the amount of $1,000 for each day that he remains in contempt, and direct that, in addition to ceasing and desisting from any further contemptuous behavior, Debtor shall cure his existing contempt forthwith by immediately filing with the State Court a notice: (1) withdrawing his motion for reconsideration seeking to set aside the State Court's dismissal of the Estate Claims as requested by the Trustee, and (2) affirming to the State Court that the only cause of action that the Hermans assert is the remaining single cause of action for negligent damage to personal property, which cause of action is limited to (a) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to his tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants) in an amount not to exceed $3,500"; and (b) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to her tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants), but only to the extent that Mrs. Herman can establish that the tangible personal property alleged to have been damaged was her sole and separate property as of the commencement of the bankruptcy case on October 17, 2017."

2. That the court compensate Foothill for its attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and this reply, and to appear at the hearing on the Order to Show Cause, by ordering Debtor to pay to Foothill, by no later than May 15, 2020, the amount of $6,000, which is the minimum amount of fees and costs incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's contempt.

The court will forbear from the harsher methods, for now. But Debtor must accept that the matter has been decided, and further gainsaying is not only a waste of resources but an affront to the court and to the other parties, and thus a further contempt. Debtor may purge his contempt by promptly filing a withdrawal of the reconsideration motion on the dismissal of the "Estate claim" and affirming that insofar as the State court action will continue, it will be confined to the limited issues as outlined in paragraph 1 above. The court will not rule upon the other suggested sanctions as outlined in paragraph 2, for now, pending a report to be filed at least 14 days before the continued hearing regarding the dismissal etc. mentioned above.

#9.00 STATUS CONFERENCE RE: Notice of Removal of Civil Action to United States Bankruptcy Court
(cont'd from 5-27-20)

Docket 1

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/23/20:

Does the court understand correctly that the matter is not yet at issue as there has been an answer and counterclaim? Discovery on all claims cutoff November 1, 2020. Last date to file pretrial motions December 11 2020. Pretrial conference Jan. 14, 2021@ 10:00 a.m.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, the court encourages telephonic appearances through CourtCall on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. Telephonic appearances may be arranged by calling (866) 582-6878. If personal appearance is intended, please call the Courtroom Deputy at (714) 338-5304 by 4 p.m. the day before. Otherwise, the doors to the courtroom will be locked.

Please be advised that CourtCall has announced reduced fees for attorneys to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through September 30, 2020. The Court's website has been updated with this new information.

to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Please be advised that CourtCall has announced reduced fees for attorneys to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through April 30, 2020.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

If the court understands correctly, it is Plaintiff's wish to remain in the Bankruptcy Court and proceed to default and default prove-up. There appears to be no reason not to do this since, unlike contested matters where the court is deferential to sister courts, especially when the proceedings are well-advanced and other non-debtor parties are actively involved, none of those issues pertain here. But there is a large standing issue. Such matters as these belong not to the prosecuting plaintiff alone but to the estate once a bankruptcy is filed. Consequently, the court expects the Plaintiff to contact the Trustee and make suitable arrangements about matters including: (1) continued representation and employment of counsel; (2) substitution of real party in interest and (3) language of the default judgment, findings and evidence to be submitted in support.

The OSC is satisfied and discharged, and the matter will be continued about 60 days as a status conference.

Appearance is optional.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Please be advised that CourtCall has announced reduced fees for attorneys to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through April 30, 2020.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 4/1/20:

Why should the court not remand? The court is also interested to know if the Chapter 7 Trustee intends to intervene as real party in interest. Continue for these answers.

COURTS OWN MOTION

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/25/20:

Following the hearing on the OSC re: Contempt on April 29, Foothill Financial and Trustee jointly lodged an order on April 30. The official order issued on May 11. Mr. Herman filed an untimely objection to the lodged order.

To accompany his objection to the lodged order, Mr. Herman attached his own proposed order, which bears little resemblance to the actual ruling on the OSC and several other orders issued by this court.

The most consequential rewrite Mr. Herman makes to his proposed order is where he states that per our abstention order, he is allowed to pursue in state court all claims that may belong solely to his wife with no limit on value. This is despite the many orders issued by this court where the specific claims the court abstained from are listed. Foothill's response catalogues the various orders and judgments with the court's very clear language articulating the narrow scope of its abstention.

Mr. Herman appears to have seized upon the most miniscule ambiguity to deliberately disregard the language and spirit of this court's orders in an attempt to reframe his dismissed claims as belonging solely to his wife, thereby allowing him to re-litigate them in state court. Mr. Herman may have already filed a version of his order with the state court. Foothill and Trustee are understandably dismayed by this latest attempt to hinder and delay.

In light of this most recent and fairly egregious transgression, Foothill requests that the court now impose monetary sanctions. Foothill suggests that Mr. Herman should pay the fees incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's ongoing contempt, which Foothill estimates in its status report at $7,500.

Mr. Herman has filed his own status report asserting that the contempt order is on appeal and there is nothing else to be adjudicated by this court at this time, all matters now being with the district court.

Mr. Herman is playing with fire. Rather than displaying even a modicum of compunction after being adjudged to be in contempt, Mr. Herman asserts in his objection that his contempt is now purged, and that it never truly existed in the first place. Mr. Herman, we should not forget, is also an attorney, and is presumed to be able to understand court orders and the consequences for disregarding them. Thus, a measured and modest monetary sanction is likely appropriate, with the promise of more severe sanctions to follow if Mr. Herman continues to misconduct himself.

The court requests an update on whether Mr. Herman actually lodged a bogus form of order with the state court. Impose monetary sanctions of $2000 payable jointly to Foothill and Trustee.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Tentative for 4/29/20:

This is a hearing on the court's Order to Show Cause why Debtor, Richard P. Herman ("Debtor") should not be held in Contempt of Court for Violating Court Orders and The Automatic Stay. The OSC was issued on March 18, 2020. Specifically, the OSC requires that Debtor demonstrate:

(a) Why he should not be held in contempt for

- i. his continuing efforts to exercise control over and interfere with the dismissal of the estate's claims in direct violation of the express provisions of this Court's orders and Judgment as well as the provisions of the automatic stay; and
- ii. his continuing violation of this Court's permanent injunction by continuing to assert and pursue claims in the state court that this Court has enjoined him from asserting or pursuing.

(b) Why he should not be subjected to the following sanctions:

- i. Imposition of a coercive fine, payable to the Court, for each day that he remains in contempt; and
- ii. Compensatory damages incurred by Foothill and the Trustee as a result of Mr. Herman's contemptuous conduct, including the attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and appear at the hearing thereon, and any additional attorneys' fees and costs incurred by Foothill and/or the Trustee to respond and appear with respect to Mr. Herman's pleadings filed in the state court in violation of this Court's orders.

Both Debtor and Foothill Financial, L.P. ("Foothill") have filed timely responses.

Debtor's response is not persuasive. The main problem is that Debtor feigns ignorance or misunderstanding of this court's orders. Debtor appears to be arguing that his action(s) in state court are legitimate considering this court's abstention from adjudicating the remaining claims that were not deemed property of the estate. As argued effectively by Foothill in its response, this court has been clear in its delineation between what causes of action are and are not property of the estate. The court has clearly stated in prior adopted tentative rulings, the "surviving claims" are limited to claims for negligent damage to personal property in an amount not to exceed $3,500, and for his wife to pursue the same cause of action provided that she could establish that the damaged property was her separate property. These very narrow categories can have little relationship with what Debtor seems to persist in filing in the State Court.

As argued by Foothill, Mr. Herman is contending, here and in the State Court, that the "abstained claims" include claims other than the surviving claims identified by this court, which Mr. Herman argues are to be "defined in the State Court." Foothill notes that Debtor's response cites no authority or document that could possibly lead Debtor to such an understanding.

To aggravate the problem, Debtor is a licensed attorney of long standing, and so may be reasonably presumed to be able to understand court orders, and importantly, the consequences for ignoring them. Thus, his reported actions, which he does not deny, can be viewed as deliberate refusals to abide by this court's lawful orders.

Debtor's citation to Taggart is inapposite as Debtor does not really attempt to draw any parallels between Taggart and the present case, nor could he.

As Foothill correctly notes, unlike in Taggart, neither Foothill nor the Trustee has sought damages under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k), but rather this proceeding involves the court's authority to enforce its orders by imposing civil contempt remedies. Moreover, although there is more than ample basis for this court to find that Debtor's conduct was (and continues to be) "willful," the Supreme Court in Taggart expressly held that, in the civil contempt context, it is error to apply a subjective standard. Id. at 1804; see also In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) (no finding of bad faith or willful misconduct is required as "the focus is not on the subjective beliefs or intent of the contemnors in complying with the order, but whether in fact their conduct complied with the order at issue") (internal quotations omitted). Instead, the Supreme Court held, "[b]ased on the traditional principles that govern civil contempt, the proper standard is an objective one." Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 1804. Thus, Foothill argues, under Taggart, remedies for civil contempt are appropriate where "there is no objectively reasonable basis for concluding that the [contemnor's] conduct might be lawful under the . . . order." Id. at 1801 (rejecting a "good faith" defense and instead establishing an objective reasonableness standard in the context of contempt proceedings arising out of the violation of a discharge order).

The court has patiently entertained Debtor's numerous motions, many of which have been of dubious merit and suspected of being nothing more than attempts to delay enforcement of Foothill's legal rights. Many have been repetitive and do nothing but rehash the same issues. The court is now left with no option but to use its coercive powers to compel Debtor to abide by its orders. Thus, the question then is, what form should the coercive measures take? Foothill suggests the following measures be imposed:

1. Order Debtor to pay to the court a fine in the amount of $1,000 for each day that he remains in contempt, and direct that, in addition to ceasing and desisting from any further contemptuous behavior, Debtor shall cure his existing contempt forthwith by immediately filing with the State Court a notice: (1) withdrawing his motion for reconsideration seeking to set aside the State Court's dismissal of the Estate Claims as requested by the Trustee, and (2) affirming to the State Court that the only cause of action that the Hermans assert is the remaining single cause of action for negligent damage to personal property, which cause of action is limited to (a) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to his tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants) in an amount not to exceed $3,500"; and (b) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to her tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants), but only to the extent that Mrs. Herman can establish that the tangible personal property alleged to have been damaged was her sole and separate property as of the commencement of the bankruptcy case on October 17, 2017."

2. That the court compensate Foothill for its attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and this reply, and to appear at the hearing on the Order to Show Cause, by ordering Debtor to pay to Foothill, by no later than May 15, 2020, the amount of $6,000, which is the minimum amount of fees and costs incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's contempt.

The court will forbear from the harsher methods, for now. But Debtor must accept that the matter has been decided, and further gainsaying is not only a waste of resources but an affront to the court and to the other parties, and thus a further contempt. Debtor may purge his contempt by promptly filing a withdrawal of the reconsideration motion on the dismissal of the "Estate claim" and affirming that insofar as the State court action will continue, it will be confined to the limited issues as outlined in paragraph 1 above. The court will not rule upon the other suggested sanctions as outlined in paragraph 2, for now, pending a report to be filed at least 14 days before the continued hearing regarding the dismissal etc. mentioned above.

The court finds debtor is in contempt. Initial sanction is as outlined above. A further hearing will be scheduled in approximately 60 days when status of compliance, and thus possible further sanctions, will be considered.

(re-scheduled from 7-23-20 at 11:00 a.m. per court order)

Docket 81

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/23/20:

This is the chapter 7 trustee, Thomas H. Casey's ("Trustee's") motion for default judgment sought against defendant, Helen Shlaimoun ("Defendant"). Trustee seeks recovery of $707,100 in transfers made by debtor, Zia Shlaimoun ("Debtor") to Defendant pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code. § 3439.04. Defendant is Debtor's mother. Defendant has not filed an opposition (or anything responsive) to the motion.

1. Background

As related by Trustee, in 2010, the Debtor engaged in a fraudulent scheme whereby he defrauded unwitting fraud victims of over $10,000,000. Hybrid Finance, Ltd. ("Hybrid"), the largest creditor in the main bankruptcy action, was defrauded of $1,000,000. Debtor had proposed a scheme where he would use Hybrid's investment of $1,000,000 to "lease" an account worth $100,000,000 from Nat West Bank, and the Debtor would use that leased account to fund trades. Hybrid was told that the trades would be so profitable that the $1,000,000 could be repaid at the end of the lease with profits. Hybrid was persuaded by Debtor and decided to invest in or around June of 2010. Unfortunately, Debtor did not use the monies for an investment, instead, he funneled the monies toward the purchase of a $15,000,000 mansion in Malibu, California. Hybrid was never returned the funds it invested, and it filed suit against Debtor in 2014.

The Hybrid litigation consisted of two actions. The first action was against Debtor individually and the second action was against his 99.9% owned entity Versailles Investments, LLC. Both actions were consolidated and tried together. Hybrid obtained a temporary restraining order against Versailles Investments, LLC on January 15, 2015. The injunction prevented Versailles and its agents from transferring or dissipating any proceeds from the sale of the Malibu Property. The sale proceeds were north of $3,000,000 and initially went into the attorney client trust account of Debtor's attorney, Kenneth Catanzarite, Esq. ("Catanzarite"). Thereafter, Catanzarite dispersed the funds at the direction of Debtor. The Hybrid lawsuit culminated in a judgment of over $2,661,457, against Debtor, inclusive of punitive damages. Judgment was entered on September 5, 2017 and is now, with prejudgment interest, in excess of $3,000,000.

2. The Fraudulent Transfers

The largest transfer from Debtor to Defendant was for $684,000, and it was made on January 20, 2015 – five days after a temporary restraining order was issued against Versailles. A few days before Debtor's transfer to Defendant, his counsel, Catanzarite, transferred $840,000 of the Malibu mansion sale proceeds to Debtor.

At Exhibit "A" of his declaration Catanzarite states that he transferred $600,000 of the sale proceeds to Debtor on January 5, 2015 and an additional $240,000 of sale proceeds to Debtor on January 13, 2015. The temporary restraining order eventually culminated into a preliminary injunction. From the order of events, Trustee asserts that it appears clear Debtor transferred over $684,000 of funds to his mother on January 20, 2015 in an attempt to prevent his creditors from accessing those funds and likely in violation of the court order preventing the transfer of those funds.

The transfers made to Defendant by Debtor were as follows:

- a. On January 10, 2015, the Debtor issued $100 to Defendant. See

b. On or about January 20, 2015, the Debtor issued a cashier's check to Defendant in the amount of $684,000.00. Within one week, $680,000 of these funds were moved to a Wells Fargo account vested in the name of Gold Star Group, LLC. See Ahuja Decl. at ¶9, Exhibit "7". The lone signer on the account was Defendant; however, the Debtor retained control of the account and prepared and signed checks in Defendant's name. The Debtor did not disclose this Gold Star Group, LLC Wells Fargo account in his bankruptcy schedules. See Docket # 95, Appendix "A" at pg. 11. While Debtor listed other Gold Star companies, he failed to list Gold Star Group, LLC. See Declaration of Michael Jason Lee, at Appendix 1 for a schedule of the payments made from Goldstar Group, LLC and Debtor's retention of control and direction of the funds.

c. On or about July 22, 2015, the Debtor issued a check to Defendant in the amount of $13,000. See Ahuja Decl. at ¶9, Exhibit "8".

d. On or about September 1, 2015, the Debtor transferred $9,000 to Defendant. See Ahuja Decl. at ¶9, Exhibit "9".

There is no evidence of consideration ever being paid to Debtor for the transfers made to Defendant. Debtor retained control over the funds he transferred to his mother who then subsequently transferred said funds to Goldstar Group, LLC – an entity she was the sole signatory on. Thereafter, Debtor directed payment of those funds and paid his own personal expenditures out of the Gold Star Group, LLC account. Debtor used the funds to pay his lawyer, to pay for his personal assistant, to pay for his older son's music career expenses, to pay for his younger son's car racing aspirations, to pay himself, to pay his wife, to withdraw cash, to pay for his older son's business ventures. 3. Legal Standards

FRCP 55 permits a court to enter default judgment upon a party's application. A court may grant or deny a motion for default judgment at its discretion. See Alan Neuman Prods., Inc. v. Albright, 862 F.2d 1388, 1392 (9th Cir. 1988) (citing Haw. Carpenters' Tr. Funds v. Stone, 794 F.2d 508, 511–12 (9th Cir. 1986); Eitel v. McCool, 782 F.2d 1470, 1471 (9th Cir. 1986)). The Ninth Circuit has set out seven factors, known as the Eitel factors, that a court may consider when exercising its discretion as to whether or not to grant default judgment: (1) the possibility of prejudice to the plaintiff, (2) the merits of plaintiff's substantive claim, (3) the sufficiency of the complaint, (4) the sum of money at stake in the action, (5) the possibility of a dispute concerning material facts, (6) whether the default was due to excusable neglect, and (7) the strong policy underlying the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure favoring decisions on the merits. Eitel, 782 F.2d at 1471–72.

When weighing these factors, the well-pleaded factual allegations of the complaint are taken as true, except for those allegations relating to damages. TeleVideo Sys., Inc. v. Heidenthal, 826 F.2d 915, 917–18 (9th Cir. 1987); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(b)(6). To prove damages, a plaintiff may submit declarations, or the Court may hold an evidentiary hearing. See Affinity Grp., Inc. v. Balsar Wealth Mgmt., LLC, No. 05CV1555 WQH (LSP), 2007 WL 1111239, at *1 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 10, 2007); see also Taylor Made Golf Co. v. Carsten Sports, 175 F.R.D. 658, 661 (S.D. Cal. 1997) ("In assessing damages, the court must review facts of record, requesting more information if necessary, to establish the amount to which plaintiff is lawfully entitled upon judgment by default.").

4. The Eitel Factors

The Eitel factors are analyzed as follows:

The first factor, prejudice to plaintiff, as Trustee argues, weighs in favor of entering default judgment. Plaintiff appears to have stated a valid claim against Defendant for a voidable transaction and Defendant has failed to appear or participate in this action. Plaintiff has therefore suffered and continues to suffer injury. Without a default judgment, Plaintiff lacks any other recourse to recover damages. This constitutes prejudice that favors default judgment. See PepsiCo, Inc. v. Cal. Sec. Cans, 238 F. Supp. 2d 1172, 1177 (C.D. Cal. 2002) (noting that "[i]f Plaintiffs' motion for default judgment is not granted, Plaintiffs will likely be without other recourse for recovery" and will suffer prejudice).

Regarding factor 2, the claim merits and sufficiency of the complaint, as noted by Trustee, a default concedes the truth of the allegations in the complaint, except those relating to damages. TeleVideo, 826 F.2d at 917–18 (quoting Geddes v. United Fin. Grp., 559 F.2d 557, 560 (9th Cir. 1977)); Taylor Made, 175 F.R.D. at 661 (noting that "[i]n assessing liability, the complaint's allegations are taken as true" because "a defendant's default functions as an admission of the plaintiff's well-pleaded allegations of fact"). Amongst other allegations, Plaintiff brings a claim for a voidable transaction pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code §3439.04. A trustee may bring a state law claim for fraudulent transfer that exists as to a creditor as of the date of the bankruptcy petition. In re EPD Inv. Co., LLC, 523 B.R. 680, 685 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2015) (Section 544(b)(1) authorizes a trustee to avoid "any transfer of an interest of the debtor in property...that is voidable under applicable law" – i.e., state law.). Here, the fraudulent transfer claims existed pre-petition, as the transfers pre-date the petition by several years. Cal. Civ. Code §3439.04 provides the following:

(a) A transfer made, or obligation incurred by a debtor is voidable as to a creditor, whether the creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation as follows:

(1) With actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the debtor.

(2) Without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor either:

(A) Was engaged or was about to engage in a business or a transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction.

(B) Intended to incur or believed or reasonably should have believed that the debtor would incur, debts beyond the debtor's ability to pay as they became due.

(b) In determining actual intent under paragraph (1) of subdivision (a), consideration may be given, among other factors, to any or all of the following:

(1) Whether the transfer or obligation was to an insider.

(2) Whether the debtor retained possession or control of the property transferred after the transfer.

(3) Whether the transfer or obligation was disclosed or concealed.

(4) Whether before the transfer was made or obligation was incurred, the debtor had been sued or threatened with suit.

(6) Whether the debtor absconded.

(7) Whether the debtor removed or concealed assets.

(8) Whether the value of the consideration received by the debtor was reasonably equivalent to the value of the asset transferred or the amount of the obligation incurred.

(9) Whether the debtor was insolvent or became insolvent shortly after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred.

(10) Whether the transfer occurred shortly before or shortly after a substantial debt was incurred.

(11) Whether the debtor transferred the essential assets of the business to a lienor that transferred the assets to an insider of the debtor.

(c) A creditor making a claim for relief under subdivision (a) has the burden of proving the elements of the claim for relief by a preponderance of the evidence.

Almost all of the Eitel factors all appear to be satisfied. "The UVTA, formerly known as the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, 'permits defrauded creditors to reach property in the hands of a transferee.' 'A fraudulent conveyance is a transfer by the debtor of property to a third person undertaken with the intent to prevent a creditor from reaching that interest to satisfy its claim.'... The purpose of the voidable transactions statute is "'to prevent debtors from placing property which legitimately should be available for the satisfaction of demands of creditors beyond their reach..." Lo v. Lee, 24 Cal.App.5th 1065, 1071 (2018). "Whether a conveyance was made with fraudulent intent is a question of fact, and proof often consists of inferences from the circumstances surrounding the transfer." Filip, 129 Cal.App.4th at 834, internal citations omitted.). "There is no minimum number of factors that must be present before the scales tip in favor of finding of actual intent to defraud. This list of factors is meant to provide guidance to the trial court, not compel a finding one way or the other." Id. Here, Trustee persuasively asserts that several of the badges of fraud codified in §3439.04 are implicated, including but not limited to:

- (1) Transfer was to an insider, namely his mother;
- (2) Debtor retained possession of the transferred funds and controlled them through another entity;
- (3) Debtor concealed the asset by not listing his interest in Gold Star, LLC in his schedules;
- (4) Debtor absconded with the funds by transferring the funds after Hybrid obtained a temporary restraining order preventing the transfer of funds;
- (5) Litigation was already initiated (with Hybrid) at the time he transferred the funds to his mother.

Several of the badges of fraud set forth in §3439.04 are implicated. As the motion is unopposed and the facts appear to be supported by the motion's accompanying exhibits and declarations, the court accepts these as alleged. The next Eitel factor is sum of money at stake. Under this factor, the court considers whether the damages sought are proportional to the alleged harm. Landstar Ranger, Inc. v. Parth Enter., Inc., 725 F. Supp. 2d 916, 921 (N.D. Cal. 2010). Here, the damages sought mirror the amount fraudulently transferred to Defendant by Debtor. Here, Trustee asserts that the amount of assets transferred was $707,100 in cash and seeks this amount in a monetary judgment. Thus, this amount is appropriate and is the amount prayed for in the First Amended Complaint against Defendant. Next, the court considers the possibility of a factual dispute. As Trustee asserts, the allegations must be taken as true because of the default, see TeleVideo, 826 F.2d at 917–18. Therefore, any purported factual dispute is settled as there is no indication that Defendant will defend against the action. Accordingly, this factor favors default.

The court is obliged to look at reason(s) for default under Eitel. If a defendant's default may have been the product of excusable neglect, this factor weighs against granting default judgment. Eitel, 782 F.2d at 1471–72. Here, there is no indication or evidence of excusable neglect. Thus, this factor weighs in favor of default judgment.

The final Eitel factor requires the court to consider the policy that favors judgment on the merits. As Trustee observes, it would seem that this factor would always weigh against granting such a motion, but here, there is no indication that a merit-based decision is practicable because Defendant has yet to answer Plaintiff's complaint or respond to this motion in any way despite being given timely notice and proper service. As Trustee argues, the policy of timely administration of justice outweighs the strong preference for a merit-based decision in this case.

5. Is There a Statute of Limitations Issue?

As to timing, Cal. Civ. Code §3439.09 provides:

"A cause of action with respect to a transfer or obligation under this chapter is extinguished unless action is brought pursuant to subdivision (a) of Section 3439.07 or levy made as provided in subdivision (b) or (c) of Section 3439.07:

(a) Under paragraph (1) of subdivision (a) of Section 3439.04, not later than four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred or, if later, not later than one year after the transfer or obligation was or could reasonably have been discovered by the claimant.

(b) Under paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of Section 3439.04 or Section 3439.05, not later than four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred."

Trustee's allegations are uncontested. However, missing from Trustee's analysis is discussion of the amount of time that lapsed between the transfers and the complaint. The applicable statute allows a claim for fraudulent conveyance to be brought within 4 years of the transfer. Here, the transfers took place at various times in 2015, but the largest transfer, representing nearly 97% of the requested relief, occurred on January 20, 2015. Four years later would be January 20, 2019. However, the complaint initiating this adversary proceeding was not filed until March 14, 2019, which is outside the original statutory period. But, of course, the bankruptcy was filed March 15, 2017, before the statute had lapsed, so there is application of 11 U.S.C. §108(a), which provides for a two-year extension. This complaint would seem, then, to have been just under the wire.

6. Conclusion

Grant as prayed. Trustee will submit a form of order.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/25/20:

Following the hearing on the OSC re: Contempt on April 29, Foothill Financial and Trustee jointly lodged an order on April 30. The official order issued on May 11. Mr. Herman filed an untimely objection to the lodged order.

To accompany his objection to the lodged order, Mr. Herman attached his own proposed order, which bears little resemblance to the actual ruling on the OSC and several other orders issued by this court.

The most consequential rewrite Mr. Herman makes to his proposed order is where he states that per our abstention order, he is allowed to pursue in state court all claims that may belong solely to his wife with no limit on value. This is despite the many orders issued by this court where the specific claims the court abstained from are listed. Foothill's response catalogues the various orders and judgments with the court's very clear language articulating the narrow scope of its abstention.

Mr. Herman appears to have seized upon the most miniscule ambiguity to deliberately disregard the language and spirit of this court's orders in an attempt to reframe his dismissed claims as belonging solely to his wife, thereby allowing him to re-litigate them in state court. Mr. Herman may have already filed a version of his order with the state court. Foothill and Trustee are understandably dismayed by this latest attempt to hinder and delay.

In light of this most recent and fairly egregious transgression, Foothill requests that the court now impose monetary sanctions. Foothill suggests that Mr. Herman should pay the fees incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's ongoing contempt, which Foothill estimates in its status report at $7,500.

Mr. Herman has filed his own status report asserting that the contempt order is on appeal and there is nothing else to be adjudicated by this court at this time, all matters now being with the district court.

Mr. Herman is playing with fire. Rather than displaying even a modicum of compunction after being adjudged to be in contempt, Mr. Herman asserts in his objection that his contempt is now purged, and that it never truly existed in the first place. Mr. Herman, we should not forget, is also an attorney, and is presumed to be able to understand court orders and the consequences for disregarding them. Thus, a measured and modest monetary sanction is likely appropriate, with the promise of more severe sanctions to follow if Mr. Herman continues to misconduct himself.

The court requests an update on whether Mr. Herman actually lodged a bogus form of order with the state court. Impose monetary sanctions of $2000 payable jointly to Foothill and Trustee.

Tentative for 4/29/20:

This is a hearing on the court's Order to Show Cause why Debtor, Richard P. Herman ("Debtor") should not be held in Contempt of Court for Violating Court Orders and The Automatic Stay. The OSC was issued on March 18, 2020. Specifically, the OSC requires that Debtor demonstrate:

(a) Why he should not be held in contempt for

- i. his continuing efforts to exercise control over and interfere with the dismissal of the estate's claims in direct violation of the express provisions of this Court's orders and Judgment as well as the provisions of the automatic stay; and
- ii. his continuing violation of this Court's permanent injunction by continuing to assert and pursue claims in the state court that this Court has enjoined him from asserting or pursuing.

(b) Why he should not be subjected to the following sanctions:

- i. Imposition of a coercive fine, payable to the Court, for each day that he remains in contempt; and

Debtor's response is not persuasive. The main problem is that Debtor feigns ignorance or misunderstanding of this court's orders. Debtor appears to be arguing that his action(s) in state court are legitimate considering this court's abstention from adjudicating the remaining claims that were not deemed property of the estate. As argued effectively by Foothill in its response, this court has been clear in its delineation between what causes of action are and are not property of the estate. The court has clearly stated in prior adopted tentative rulings, the "surviving claims" are limited to claims for negligent damage to personal property in an amount not to exceed $3,500, and for his wife to pursue the same cause of action provided that she could establish that the damaged property was her separate property. These very narrow categories can have little relationship with what Debtor seems to persist in filing in the State Court.

As argued by Foothill, Mr. Herman is contending, here and in the State Court, that the "abstained claims" include claims other than the surviving claims identified by this court, which Mr. Herman argues are to be "defined in the State Court." Foothill notes that Debtor's response cites no authority or document that could possibly lead Debtor to such an understanding.

To aggravate the problem, Debtor is a licensed attorney of long standing, and so may be reasonably presumed to be able to understand court orders, and importantly, the consequences for ignoring them. Thus, his reported actions, which he does not deny, can be viewed as deliberate refusals to abide by this court's lawful orders.

Debtor's citation to Taggart is inapposite as Debtor does not really attempt to draw any parallels between Taggart and the present case, nor could he.

As Foothill correctly notes, unlike in Taggart, neither Foothill nor the Trustee has sought damages under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k), but rather this proceeding involves the court's authority to enforce its orders by imposing civil contempt remedies. Moreover, although there is more than ample basis for this court to find that Debtor's conduct was (and continues to be) "willful," the Supreme Court in Taggart expressly held that, in the civil contempt context, it is error to apply a subjective standard. Id. at 1804; see also In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) (no finding of bad faith or willful misconduct is required as "the focus is not on the subjective beliefs or intent of the contemnors in complying with the order, but whether in fact their conduct complied with the order at issue") (internal quotations omitted). Instead, the Supreme Court held, "[b]ased on the traditional principles that govern civil contempt, the proper standard is an objective one." Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 1804. Thus, Foothill argues, under Taggart, remedies for civil contempt are appropriate where "there is no objectively reasonable basis for concluding that the [contemnor's] conduct might be lawful under the . . . order." Id. at 1801 (rejecting a "good faith" defense and instead establishing an objective reasonableness standard in the context of contempt proceedings arising out of the violation of a discharge order).

The court has patiently entertained Debtor's numerous motions, many of which have been of dubious merit and suspected of being nothing more than attempts to delay enforcement of Foothill's legal rights. Many have been repetitive and do nothing but rehash the same issues. The court is now left with no option but to use its coercive powers to compel Debtor to abide by its orders. Thus, the question then is, what form should the coercive measures take? Foothill suggests the following measures be imposed:

1. Order Debtor to pay to the court a fine in the amount of $1,000 for each day that he remains in contempt, and direct that, in addition to ceasing and desisting from any further contemptuous behavior, Debtor shall cure his existing contempt forthwith by immediately filing with the State Court a notice: (1) withdrawing his motion for reconsideration seeking to set aside the State Court's dismissal of the Estate Claims as requested by the Trustee, and (2) affirming to the State Court that the only cause of action that the Hermans assert is the remaining single cause of action for negligent damage to personal property, which cause of action is limited to (a) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to his tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants) in an amount not to exceed $3,500"; and (b) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to her tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants), but only to the extent that Mrs. Herman can establish that the tangible personal property alleged to have been damaged was her sole and separate property as of the commencement of the bankruptcy case on October 17, 2017."

2. That the court compensate Foothill for its attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and this reply, and to appear at the hearing on the Order to Show Cause, by ordering Debtor to pay to Foothill, by no later than May 15, 2020, the amount of $6,000, which is the minimum amount of fees and costs incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's contempt.

The court will forbear from the harsher methods, for now. But Debtor must accept that the matter has been decided, and further gainsaying is not only a waste of resources but an affront to the court and to the other parties, and thus a further contempt. Debtor may purge his contempt by promptly filing a withdrawal of the reconsideration motion on the dismissal of the "Estate claim" and affirming that insofar as the State court action will continue, it will be confined to the limited issues as outlined in paragraph 1 above. The court will not rule upon the other suggested sanctions as outlined in paragraph 2, for now, pending a report to be filed at least 14 days before the continued hearing regarding the dismissal etc. mentioned above.

The court finds debtor is in contempt. Initial sanction is as outlined above. A further hearing will be scheduled in approximately 60 days when status of compliance, and thus possible further sanctions, will be considered.

See #2. Debtor is coming to the end with this case. Catching up on missing MORS was the absolute requirement as without that there would be no more rope (and future lapses will not be tolerated). The debtor continues to assert the prospect of a turnaround but the hard facts are that we have not seen it yet and this is no longer a young case. As the UST argues, there is a substantial gap between proven income to date and what would be required on a monthly basis to service the mortgage, let alone anything else. We will continue about 60 days and in that time several things must happen: 1. a plan and disclosure statement must be on file; 2. that plan must be plausible and confirmable; 3. the disclosure statement must be accurate and complete, something approvable in the first pass (and not as a last minute bid to get more time); and 4. supporting evidence must be on file explaining how any of this actually works. Continued blaming of COVID-19 may be accurate but will not be availing, largely because this case was in trouble well before that became an issue. Continue approximately 60 days to coincide with #2.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Tentative for 1/22/20:

The court will determine whether, based on timely MORs, there is enough regular income to support a plan. Failure to demonstrate this ability, or any further delinquency on filing of MORs, will likely result in granting the motion.

Continue for 60-75 days per Trustee's suggestion.

no equity, and both elements are required. That is a very close question on this record. There is clearly not enough equity to provide "adequate protection" within the meaning of §362(d)(1). Even if debtor's appraisal could be believed there might be, at best, only a razor thin slice above liens and costs of sale. So, the only solution is for debtor to confirm a plan and quickly. The court is willing to give a brief opportunity to do this, but if by the continued hearing there is not a plausible, confirmable plan on file, there will be no more time given. A word of caution: this does not mean some document that says "plan" on it, it means something that has been thought through and looks like it can actually be confirmed, and that will require supporting evidence. COVID-19 is a tragedy but in the end sympathy does not substitute for hard evidence, as that term does not appear in the statute.

#8.00 Motion To Discharge Tax Debt As Non-Priority Unsecured Claims

Docket 38

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/28/20:

This is Debtors, Jeffrey and Sandra Wade's ("Debtors") motion to discharge tax debt as non-priority unsecured claims. Debtors request that the court enter an order discharging the tax debt listed in the amended schedule E/F in the amount of $43,768.91 pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §727(b). The motion is opposed by creditor, Franchise Tax Board ("FTB"). Debtors failed to include 2006 and 2007 FTB tax debt in their 2011 bankruptcy, mistakenly believing that the state tax debt would be wiped out when the federal tax debt was discharged. Debtors assert that this mistaken assumption was due in part to bad advice given to them by their CPA. The case was re-opened, and Debtors now request that their tax debt from 2006 and 2007 be discharged pursuant to 11 U.S.C. 727(b), which states in relevant part:

"a discharge under subsection (a) of this section discharges the debtor from all debts that arose before the date of the order for relief under this chapter, and any liability on a claim that is determined under section 502 of this title as if such claim had arisen before the commencement of the case, whether or not a proof of claim based on any such debt or liability is filed under section 501 of this title, and whether or not a claim based on any such debt or liability is allowed under section 502 of this title."

Debtors request that the court enter an order discharging the tax debt in the amount of $43,768.91. Debtors assert that the taxes are income taxes and eligible for discharge, the debt is over three years old, the Franchise Tax Board has assessed the tax debt and this assessment was done at least 240 days before the petition was filed, and there are no known tax liens associated with this debt. Debtors also assert that they have not committed fraud or any willful evasion, and that there are no other avenues available to Debtors.

First, the court doubts that this could proceed via motion in any event. Dischargeability issues are determined by adversary proceedings. See FRBP 7001(6). Second, the governing statute is §523(a)(1)(B) and (C). These sections provide: A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt—

(1) for a tax or a customs duty—

(A) of the kind and for the periods specified in section 507(a)(2) or 507(a)(8) of this title, whether or not a claim for such tax was filed or allowed;

(B) with respect to which a return, if required—

(i) was not filed; or

(ii) was filed after the date on which such return was last due, under applicable law or under any extension, and after two years before the date of the filing of the petition; or

(C) with respect to which the debtor made a fraudulent return or willfully attempted in any manner to evade or defeat such tax;

The principal dispute seems to be whether the tax claims in question are priority debts of the sort described in Section 507(a)(2) or (a)(8), which are then within the description of non-dischargeable debts. Debtors argue that they are. By contrast, FTB asserts that its claims are entitled to priority status pursuant to 11 U.S.C. 507(a)(8)(A), which provides:

(a) The following expenses and claims have priority in the following

(A) a tax on or measured by income or gross receipts for a taxable year ending on or before the date of the filing of the petition—

(i) for which a return, if required, is last due, including extensions, after three years before the date of the filing of the petition;

(ii) assessed within 240 days before the date of the filing of the petition, exclusive of—

(I) any time during which an offer in compromise with respect to that tax was pending or in effect during that 240-day period, plus 30 days; and

(II) any time during which a stay of proceedings against collections was in effect in a prior case under this title during that 240-day period, plus 90 days

Some of Debtors assertions are at odds with those of the FTB. For example, FTB cites In re King, 961 F.2d 1423, 1424 (9th Cir. 1992) where the court noted that "[t]he date on which the taxes were assessed rather than the due date of the return determines priority under the 240-day rule." FTB also asserts that to assess personal income tax, the FTB must send a taxpayer a proposed deficiency assessment setting forth the reasons for the proposed deficiency and the corresponding computations. Cal. Rev. & Tax. Code § 19034(a). Further, if the taxpayer wishes to protest the proposed deficiency, the taxpayer must file a written protest within 60 days of each notice of proposed deficiency. Cal. Rev. & Tax. Code § 19041(a). FTB asserts that it issued a Notice of Proposed Assessment for the 2006 tax year on March 8, 2011, which became final on May 9, 2011 after the expiration of the 60-day period. The FTB also issued a Notice of Proposed Assessment for the 2007 period on December 28, 2010, which became final on February 28, 2011 after the expiration of the 60-day period. Debtors filed their petition on July 26, 2011. Thus, the FTB calculates that it assessed Debtors' 2006 liability only 78 days before the filing of their voluntary petition and assessed Debtors' 2007 liability only 148 days before the filing of their voluntary petition. Since both the 2006 and 2007 tax liabilities were assessed within 240 days of the filing of Debtors' voluntary petition, FTB concludes that their taxes are entitled to priority status and cannot be discharged in the bankruptcy.

Debtors have not filed a Reply and so cannot account for the discrepancies identified by the FTB. It is perhaps notable that Debtors filed a very similar motion roughly one year ago requesting that their IRS debt in the amount of $363,680.03 be discharged following the reopening of their bankruptcy case. The IRS did not file an opposition and the motion was granted. Adding to the confusion is that Debtors assert that the FTB confirmed with Debtor that the 2006 and 2007 tax debts were dischargeable, but it is the FTB that opposes this motion. Debtors' motion is light on analysis and exhibits that confirm or support their asserted facts. Thus, as it is Debtors' motion, they must bear the burden of demonstrating their entitlement to the relief they seek, which they have not done (even if the court could entertain this request outside an adversary proceeding).

(set from order entered on 7-14-20 see doc #83)

Docket 80

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/28/20:

It would appear that there is nothing in the motion that seeks to rearrange priority of liens, so even if Golden Star has a junior lien there is no attempt to prime liens. If priming is being attempted that must be clarified by debtor. Further, as clarified in the debtors' response, proceeds of the line of credit may be used to pay Golden Star as well as all other creditors and presumably the Trustee will take care to see to that occurs before any proceeds are given back to debtor.

Grant.

#12.10 Motion To Dismiss Complaint For Failure To State A Claim Upon Which Relief Can Be Granted

Docket 27

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/30/20:

This is Defendants Jason Paul Hughes ("Jason Hughes"), in his individual capacity and as trustee for the JPH Living Trust ("JPH Trust"), and Timothy M. Hughes's ("Tim Hughes" and collectively "Defendants") motion to dismiss the adversary proceeding as to them pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b) (6). This motion is somewhat unusual in that it seeks to dismiss claims against only certain named defendants. Other defendants in this adversary proceeding, but not parties to this motion, include debtor, Deborah Jean Hughes ("Debtor"), and Debtor's mother, Betty McCarthy in her individual capacity and as trustee for the Betty Lou McCarthy Living Trust. The motion is opposed by the chapter 7 trustee, Richard Marshack ("Trustee").

1. Basic Background

The events as related by Trustee in his complaint are relatively straightforward and are largely uncontested; however, the intent behind certain acts is highly contested. Prior to the filing of her bankruptcy petition on May 28th, 2019, the Debtor was a married woman involved in a business with her family known as "Cuppa Juice Cold Pressed Juicery" which sold a variety of plant-based juice drinks and food products. This business had two locations: a store in Orange County and another in San Diego County. The business was incorporated in June 2014 and operated from on or around mid-2015 until early 2019. Shortly after filing her bankruptcy petition on May 28, 2019, the business closed.

The Debtor's interest in her business was an asset of her community as that is defined under the California Family Code. Ms. Hughes operated her business with the knowledge and consent of her husband Tim Hughes. Tim Hughes would sometimes assist the Debtor in her business. Her son Timothy Hughes (not currently a party to these proceedings) owned the business with her. The business was a community property asset used to generate community property income, which was used to pay community property debts. Business obligations she incurred were generated and intended to pay "necessities" and "necessaries" of life. California Family Code 910 et seq.

Beginning in early 2018, Ms. Hughes would suffer various legal problems. On January 26th, 2018, Ms. Hughes would be sued by future creditor Adam Seligman concerning a sale of certain corporate interests. This case was filed in the California Superior Court San Diego Division. In that matter, the Debtor brought a Motion to Compel Arbitration which was granted by the California Court resulting in the dismissal of the State Court proceeding. This dispute then proceeded in arbitration in the first part of 2019. No final judgment was issued by the arbitrator and the matter was ultimately stayed by the bankruptcy filing. Contemporaneously with these events, in 2019, she would then be brought into two other collection proceedings. By at least early 2019, the Debtor's debts would exceed her assets and she would be insolvent. With these creditors at the door, in 2019 the Debtor (as alleged by the Trustee) began taking steps in anticipation of filing bankruptcy.

On March 4, 2018, the Debtor drafted a document with her mother, Ms. McCarthy, to purchase a proposed percentage of her mother's house located at 4192 Shorebreak Drive, Huntington Beach, CA 92692 ("Shorebreak"). Pursuant to the terms of that agreement, Ms. Hughes purchased the following:

"It is the intent of both parties to allow Debbie Hughes to buy a percentage of the above described property. Said percentage will be based on the value of the home at the time of purchase divided by the total investment of Debbie Hughes. The purchase/percentage may not exceed 15% of the value of the home."

The Trustee alleges, on information and belief, that Shorebreak, is and was, worth approximately $1,600,000 at the time this contract was executed. On April 28, 2019, Tim Hughes would file paperwork initiating a dissolution of his marriage to the Debtor. The Debtor would file her own dissolution petition on May 31, 2019. In violation of the automatic stay, and for reasons that are not clear, in July 2019, Tim Hughes and Deborah Hughes would then divide up and, in Trustee's words, abscond with their interests in the former community property. Ms. Hughes provided a document to the Trustee representing this property division agreement.

Prior to filing her bankruptcy petition, the Debtor owned real property located at 22571 Charwood Circle, Lake Forest, CA 92630 ("Charwood"). This was her residence and it was owned jointly by the Debtor and her husband Tim Hughes, presumably as community property. The Trustee alleges on information and belief that the value of the property was approximately $700,000 as of May 2019; whether this value is net of liens is not stated.

As noted, Debtor filed her chapter 7 petition on May 28, 2019. A 341(a) hearing was initially scheduled for July 19, 2019. Debtor testified that she contracted with her son Jason Hughes to purchase her interest in Charwood and pay those proceeds to her mother, Betty McCarthy, in order to fund the purchase described in the March 4th, 2018 agreement. Records provided by the Debtor demonstrated that on May 21, 2019 she quitclaimed her interest in Charwood to Jason Hughes.

The Trustee alleges that the Debtor received funds for her transfer of Charwood (from Jason?) after she filed her bankruptcy petition on May 28th, 2019. The Debtor provided the Trustee with a check dated "May 22nd, 2019" in favor of Betty McCarthy in the amount of $130,000. However, the endorsement of the check by Betty McCarthy's bank demonstrates that it was honored on July 13th, 2019, well after the petition (and apparently in violation of the stay). Further, the Debtor demonstrated that she opened a post-petition bank account in June 2019 into which approximately $132,307 was deposited. Therefore, the Trustee alleges that approximately $130,000 was received by the Debtor post-petition and conveyed to Betty McCarthy in July 2019. Trustee asserts that these assets belonged to the estate as of May 28th, 2019, the date the petition was filed. Debtor would provide a Grant Deed to the Trustee, executed on July 25th, 2019, which purported to transfer 12% interest in Shorebreak drive to Debtor. As of the filing of the complaint in December of 2019, this document was not recorded nor this transfer perfected. On or around August 25th, 2019, Tim Hughes would transfer his interest in Charwood to Jason Hughes on behalf of JPH Trust by quitclaim deed. The Trustee alleges that either Tim Hughes received funds for this transfer or transferred this interest for no consideration. On or around November 7th, 2019, Jason Hughes would transfer his interest in Charwood to the JPH Trust.

Debtor would appear at several 341(a) hearings and make representations to the Trustee on the record. Of note, through her petition, and by documents provided to the Trustee, she allegedly testified as follows:

- (1) She testified to ownership of a Bank of America Account with her mother. She refused to provide full unredacted statements of this account to the Trustee upon request although she had unfettered access to acquire and provide these statements to the Trustee. Specifically, she provided the cover page of each account, and a formal declaration refusing to cooperate with the Trustee.
- (2) She testified that she conveyed the $130,000 to her mother who then began quickly utilizing these funds for improvements to the Shorebreak property.

(3) She represented in testimony that the purchase of the Shorebreak property from her mother was an attempt to acquire an interest in a new residence. The Trustee alleges that the Debtor's representation on this point was fraudulent in nature and was an attempt to dissipate her assets and put them out of the reach of her creditors. No such interest was perfected prior to filing.

(4) She testified that she owned the assets of her business, and then proceeded to contract with her mother to sell off those same assets to acquire a loan to address some prepetition business debts.

5) She testified that Jason Hughes received approximately $24,000 out of a lien placed against Charwood, or from other sources derived from the Debtor's assets.

2. 12(b)(6) Standards

FRCP 12(b)(6) requires a court to consider whether a complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). There are cases that justify, or compel, granting a motion to dismiss. The line between totally unmeritorious claims and others must be carved out case by case by the judgment of trial judges, and that judgment should be exercised cautiously on such a motion. Id.

"While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-65 (2007) A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, _ U.S._, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id. Threadbare recitals of elements supported by conclusory statements is not sufficient. Id. In determining a motion to dismiss, the court can consider: (1) the complaint and answer; (2) any documents attached or mentioned in the pleadings; (3) documents not attached but "integral" to the claims; and (4) matters subject to judicial notice. L-7 Designs, Inc. v. Old Navy, LLC, 647 F.3d 419, 422 (2nd Cir. 2011); Coto Settlement v. Eisenberg, 593 F.3d 1031, 1038 (9th Cir. 2010).

3. The Motion Deals Only With some Claims Against Some Defendants

The complaint contains a total of 13 claims for relief, but less than half of them, beginning with the seventh cause of action appear to implicate Defendants.

a. Seventh Claim for relief– Turnover of Property Pursuant to 11
U.S.C. §§542 and 543

The seventh cause of action is for turnover of property pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§542 and 543. 11 U.S.C. §542, in relevant part, provides that "An entity, in possession, custody, or control, during the case, of property that the trustee may use, sell, or lease under section 363 of this title, or that the debtor may exempt under section 522 of this title, shall deliver to the trustee, and account for, such property or the value of such property, unless such property is of inconsequential value or benefit to the estate."

Trustee alleges that Jason Hughes in his individual capacity, and as Trustee of the JPH Trust, possesses the Charwood property. The Charwood property is a parcel of real property that Trustee alleges Debtor transferred out of her name within 1 year prior to filing to an insider, namely her son and the JPH Trust. If the transfer is avoided by the Trustee, Jason Hughes should clearly turn the Charwood property over to the Estate. But it is not clear to the court that he should not do so anyway as Charwood appears to be community property asset and thus estate property, although this, in turn, may require avoidance of the attempted post-petition distribution agreement between debtor and Tim Hughes. Tim Hughes is alleged to possess proceeds from the liquidation of the Charwood Property. This is further complicated because apparently Jason quitclaimed Charwood back to Tim Hughes post-petition. To the extent the transfer of the Charwood property to Jason Hughes is not avoided, and to the extent the transfer of the proceeds of liquidation to Tim Hughes is avoided, Trustee asserts that the proceeds distributed to Tim Hughes from the liquidation of the Charwood property should be turned over to the Estate.

As noted by Defendants, this cause of action, or parts thereof, is dependent on avoidance and recovery under the other causes of action. Substantively, Defendants argue that there are simply no facts pled in the complaint that would tend to show that Jason Hughes is in possession of $24,000 of estate money. On the contrary, Defendants argue that Jason Hughes is not holding any estate money, as the $139,000 he paid for the Debtor's interest in Charwood was paid to the Debtor as acknowledged in the Complaint. See [Complaint 5:11-12; 18:7-6]. In the Opposition, Trustee acknowledges that Jason Hughes is not in possession of the $24,000. Defendants also argue that this cause of action depends on findings the court has not yet made, making it premature as Tim Hughes occupies and owns half of the property. The court would add that contingent claims are difficult to assess for plausibility because the court is not making findings of fact at this point. Thus, this cause of action appears to be insufficiently supported by factual allegations and, therefore, too speculative at this time. Of course, if and when the court makes findings on the other causes of action upon which this cause of action depends, the complaint can be amended.

In sum, this claim for relief is muddled, and probably does not contain enough facts as against Jason regarding turnover of proceeds. As to other defendants and theories of relief, it is left unclear but it could do with a restatement and clarification.

b. The Ninth Claim for Relief- Avoidance of Preferential(?)
Transfer Pursuant To 11 U.S.C. §548

The court assumes that "Preferential" as appears in the caption is a mistake inasmuch as the substance of the alleged claim for relief sounds in fraudulent conveyance. This should be corrected.

11 U.S.C. § 548 provides in relevant part:

(a) (1) The trustee may avoid any transfer (including any transfer to or for the benefit of an insider under an employment contract) of an interest of the debtor in property, or any obligation (including any obligation to or for the benefit of an insider under an employment contract) incurred by the debtor, that was made or incurred on or within 2 years before the date of the filing of the petition, if the debtor voluntarily or involuntarily—

(A) made such transfer or incurred such obligation with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any entity to which the debtor was or became, on or after the date that such transfer was made or such obligation was incurred, indebted; or

(B) (i) received less than a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for such transfer or obligation; and

(ii) (I) was insolvent on the date that such transfer was made, or such obligation was incurred, or became insolvent as a result of such transfer or obligation;

(II) was engaged in business or a transaction, or was about to engage in business or a transaction, for which any property remaining with the debtor was an unreasonably small capital;

(III) intended to incur, or believed that the debtor would incur, debts that would be beyond the debtor's ability to pay as such debts matured; or

(IV) made such transfer to or for the benefit of an insider or incurred such obligation to or for the benefit of an insider, under an employment contract and not in the ordinary course of business.

Trustee in his complaint alleges that Debtor engaged in all transfers complained of voluntarily and with the intent to defraud her creditors. Such transfers were made to insiders and the transfer of Charwood was for insufficient value considering what she received in exchange. To the extent she did receive $139,000 pre-petition, she traded it in exchange for $300,000 in alleged equity in Charwood, which was insufficient. Trustee also asserts that her divestiture from Charwood rendered Debtor insolvent. Defendants again assert that this cause of action is insufficiently pled. To begin with, the cause of action is styled as one to avoid preferential transfers, but the section cited covers fraudulent transfers. Defendants argue that the proper lens to view reasonably equivalent value is from the perspective of creditors, not from the debtor. Defendants also argue that if the transfers are sought to be avoided as intentionally fraudulent transfers, then the complaint must comply with the heightened pleading standards under Rule 9(b).

The court is not sure such pleading standards have been met. Trustee vaguely asserts that the transfers were the main parts of a larger scheme to put assets out of reach of creditors. What is left is mostly suggestion and innuendo and, not specific. As this claim appears to fall short of the heightened pleading standards in Rule 9(b), the claim for intentional fraudulent transfer should be dismissed with leave to amend. It could be argued that a claim for a constructively fraudulent transfer survives even if intentional fraud is not adequately pled, which it may not be. In terms of reasonably equivalent value, Trustee asserts that Debtor only received $139,000 in exchange for her portion of Charwood, which should hypothetically be around $300,000 (if one also accepts that only half and not the whole of equity in community assets is to be considered). This, Trustee argues, cannot represent reasonably equivalent value and Trustee is likely correct, at least for Rule 12 purposes since this is in any case a factual question. Defendants argue that the complaint does not contain adequate facts to conclude that the transfer was not for reasonably equivalent value, especially when viewed from the perspective of creditors. Defendants argue that the complaint does not consider what creditors would likely take from a hypothetical sale of Debtor's interest once costs, liens, and the like are included, to say nothing of what would result if Debtor and/or her husband elected a $175,000 homestead exemption (and that exemption were sustained). Defendants conclude that the $139,000 may very well be more than reasonably equivalent value for the transfer. These arguments are not supported by any authority. Although the question of value must be taken from the viewpoint of creditors (as held in Defendant's cited authorities), it is a long way further to argue that hypothetical homestead exemptions must also be factored in at the threshold of determining what reasonable equivalence is. Homesteads should be evaluated when and if they are asserted, not as hypotheticals pertaining to prepetition transfers. To do otherwise is to open a world of mischief. Further, the court does not read the Iqbal and Twombly standard to require such guesswork based on hypotheticals. Rather, viewing the assertions in the complaint in the light most favorable to Trustee as the nonmoving party, Trustee may well have a claim for a constructively fraudulent transfer, and might also have one for intentionally fraudulent conveyance if more explicit allegations are offered.

Transfer pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §550

This claim is dependent on the immediately preceding causes of action. But it is very common to allege these as conditional theories for relief in the same action since nothing is gained by making them into two adversary proceedings since once (or if) the transaction is avoided as a fraudulent conveyance, liability of the transferee should follow automatically as day follows night under §550.

d. Eleventh Claim for Relief- Avoidance of Post-Petition Transfers Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §549

11 U.S.C. §549 provides in relevant part:

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) or (c) of this section, the trustee may avoid a transfer of property of the estate—

- (1) that occurs after the commencement of the case; and
- (2) (A) that is authorized only under section 303(f) or 542(c) of this title; or
(B) that is not authorized under this title or by the court.

Trustee in his complaint alleges that to the extent any of the transfers are proven to be post-petition transfers of estate property, Trustee asks to avoid such transfers. This claim for relief is unclear as to Defendants. As Defendants argue, if this cause of action relates to Tim Hughes' transfer of his interest in Charwood to Jason Hughes after the commencement of the Debtor's case, the complaint does not state any facts to suggest that the estate retained an interest without the Debtor being on title. It might be that the Trustee is alleging that as of the transfer to Jason, Tim Hughes' interest was still a community property interest as the attempted division of community property between spouses was ineffectual. In any case, Defendants argue that this cause of action, to the extent it concerns Tim and Jason Hughes, has been rendered moot by virtue of the re-transfer back to Tim Hughes on January 22, 2020 [Request for Judicial Notice Exhibit "2;" Quitclaim Deed]. Trustee concedes in the opposition that this cause of action can be dismissed as to Jason and Timothy Hughes. But it is not entirely clear to the court that the Tim to Jason deeds are the only transfers in question. What about the post-petition cashing of the $130,000 check? Is that an avoidable transfer? Since ¶47 sweeps into the Claim for Relief all previous allegations, the reader is left very uncertain exactly what is intended for §549 analysis; more clarity is needed. But the movants, by Trustee's own admission, are not involved. Whether they could be involved, however, requires a tightening up of the allegations to clarify which transfers and under what legal theory relief is being sought.

4. Conclusion

The remaining claims implicated either Debtor, Betty McCarthy or both, but not Jason or Tim Hughes. As discussed, some portions of Claims for Relief might involve parties other than Jason or Tim Hughes. Thus, those claims remain. For the reasons discussed above, this motion should be granted, but with leave to amend where Trustee has a good faith belief that doing so will be productive. In some cases, it is necessary merely to clear up and tighten up some of the allegations and correct what appear to be obvious errors.

Grant with leave to amend as to the claims discussed.

#4.00 Motion to Use Cash Collateral
(cont'd from 5-27-20)

Docket 5

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 8/5/20:

This is an oft-continued request for use of cash collateral. As the court recalls, there is only a very marginal slice of equity in the collateral. The court has repeatedly stated (starting in November) that status quo cannot be expected to last indefinitely, and the tentative from last time (5/27) said one last extension would be granted. But the court observes now that somehow confirmation of the plan has moved to September 2. The June MOR shows a dwindling cash balance. To exacerbate the court's concern, no further status report is offered, although Ms. Altieri does file a declaration suggesting that everything is unfolding more or less as expected, with only a temporary lull in rental payments due to the pandemic. Unless the secured creditor is willing to go along further the court sees little encouragement on this record or reason to continue the use beyond September 2. So, despite the court's earlier admonition we should continue on the same basis until the continued confirmation hearing, but further continuances of that date should not be expected and, if sought, had better include the secured creditor's acquiescence as it may be without further use of cash collateral. It probably also goes without saying that the proposed plan should be the very best possible as further time is not assured.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, the court encourages telephonic appearances through CourtCall on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. Telephonic appearances may be arranged by calling (866) 582-6878. If personal appearance is intended, please call the Courtroom Deputy at (714) 338-5304 by 4 p.m. the day before. (cont'd from 5-27-20)

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO 9-02-20 AT 11:00 A.M.
PER ORDER GRANTING STIPULATED REQUEST TO CONTINUE CONFIRMATION HEARING ENTERED 6-26-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/27/20:

This is the hearing on confirmation of debtor's plan. It is opposed in objections filed by two creditors.

A. Bryson

The first objection comes from judgment creditor from Class 2E, Stephanie Bryson ("Bryson"). Bryson obtained a judgment against Debtor in the amount of $270,658.85. Bryson has liens on two properties located in Massachusetts, the Chandler property and the Adams property. The Chandler property was valued at $775,000 (though Bryson values it at $795,000). The Adams property was valued at $978,300 (Bryson values it at $1,240,000).

The plan proposes to pay off debt of $330,386.91 (as of 10/22/19) over a period of 180 months, with monthly "interest only" payments of $1,376.61, then a balloon payment of $330,386.91 at the end of the plan.

Bryson argues that the plan does not satisfy the best interest of creditors test. Bryson does not believe that the Debtor's liquidation analysis is accurate, due partly to the undervaluing of the encumbered properties. If Bryson's fair market valuations are used instead of Debtor's, then the result is a net positive instead of negative. Bryson concedes that after administrative costs were factored in a chapter 7 liquidation there would still be nothing left for unsecured creditors, whereas the current plan provides for at least some recovery for unsecured creditors. Despite this fact, Bryson argues that the plan still cannot be considered fair and equitable.

Specifically, Bryson argues that the 5% interest rate contemplated in the plan is not adequate to account for the risks involved. Bryson is not a lender and her Massachusetts judgment accrues interest at 12% per year. Bryson asserts that she could foreclose on the Massachusetts properties, which would pay the judgment debt in full. Bryson asserts that the plan also has feasibility issues, and the interest rate must be adjusted to account for that risk.

Bryson asserts that the plan relies on rental income from two properties in Massachusetts. Any unplanned or prolonged vacancy throws the plan into doubt. Furthermore, Bryson asserts that Debtor's financial history suggests that her projected income is optimistic to say the least. The properties are also old and may need repairs over the life of the plan. Those repairs could come at significant cost, which again, would jeopardize the plan. The supplement to the Bryson opposition states that Debtor is including a $16,000 annual bonus from her employer, Clean Energy. However, it appears that the bonus will be in the form of stock, not cash. Thus, Bryson concludes that the plan is simply not feasible and should not be confirmed. Not raised by Bryson, but of concern to the court, is what happens at the end of 180 months on the balloon? One imagines that the debtor will either refinance or sell, but the prospect of so doing should at least be explained. Interest-only, non-amortizing lien treatments are inherently riskier than fully amortizing. This is because the creditor is never put in a position of comfort on its principal, but always hangs on the precipice. There may be a further complication here in that Massachusetts rate of interest on judgment liens is reported to be 12%, which means that the balance will actually increase over time, unless it is intended that the cramdown rate supplant the state judgment rate. That point needs clarification and briefing.

This is not inherently unconfirmable, but the fundamental precept is that the risks imposed must be fully paid. In the court's view, 5% is too low to accomplish "present value" under §1129(b)(2)(A) considering this point and that Bryson appears to be in second position, with little or no cushion. See In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Debtor argues for the prime plus approach found in Till and argues that North Valley Mall is distinguishable. But her argument is not convincing. What is the principled difference between a judgment lien and a defaulted loan? They are both 'allowed secured claims' and that is what the Code requires be given present value if paid over time. Debtor confuses resort to market data to help analyze what is present value (an economic concept informed by data) with the fact that most data available happens to originate in the loan marketplace. That is because lenders consult varied data when deciding whether to extend credit, and many factors such as collateral value and creditworthiness go into the analysis. That is a process done before the fact. But that does not change the fact that both are secured claims being paid over time so their origin seems immaterial after the fact where the court in cramdown analysis is asked to make a determination of factors in situations where no real market exists. Even if the court could be persuaded that the Till approach (which was after all about a truck loan and seemingly even less relevant) were correct, a 1.75% adjustment is still way too low.

B. U.S. Bank National Association

The real property that is the subject of this Objection is located at 33 Chandler Street, Newton, MA 02458 (the "Property"). Creditor holds a security interest in the Property as evidenced by a Note and Mortgage executed by the Debtor. Said Note and Mortgage are attached to Creditor's proof of claim (the "Proof of Claim") which was filed in the instant case as Claim No. 5-1.

Chapter 11

The Proof of Claim provides for a secured claim in the amount of $590,127.29. This amount has increased since the petition date as interest has accrued and Creditor has made post-petition escrow advances to protect its interest in the Property. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is $617,465.04. Creditor's claim is treated in the Plan under Class "2B." The Plan provides that the Debtor will pay Creditor's claim the amount of $590,127.29, over 360 months (30 years) at 4.625% interest, with equal monthly payments of $3,034.08.

The Plan fails to provide for maintenance of property insurance and timely payment of property taxes. The Plan should specify whether Debtors intend to maintain property insurance and tax payments directly or through establishment of an escrow account with Creditor. Creditor has advanced approximately $7,597.52 for post-petition property taxes on account of the Property. The Plan does not provide for reimbursing Creditor for such advances which were made post-petition for the benefit of the estate. Such advances qualify as administrative expenses and must be cured on or before the effective date of the plan.

The Plan indicates that the value of the Property is $775,000.00. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is $617,465.04. The plan provides for a total secured claim in the reduced amount of $590,127.29. As the plan fails to provide for the full amount of Creditor's secured claim, Debtor's Plan cannot be confirmed as is, and the portion that is payable as an administrative claim must be dealt with.

C. Conclusion

The objections raise some good points regarding feasibility. According to Bryson, Debtor's own financial data demonstrate that she will not be able to make good on the plan payments. This plan appears to have a very (perhaps overly) optimistic outlook on Debtor's finances. Further, expenditures that may be necessary are not addressed at all, like insurance, maintenance, and the fact that there may be a $7597.52 administrative claim.

Debtor points out that Bryson has not provided any analysis as to what the appropriate interest rate would be. Debtor also points out that under the plan, unsecured creditors get at least some recovery, whereas in a liquidation, they would receive nothing. While, of course, the court wants unsecured creditors to get something, this does not substitute for the fact that it is debtor's burden to prove not only feasibility, but that cramdown treatment is providing the present value of the objecting secured claims and that this plan is better than liquidation. This has not been done. Furthermore, Debtor asserts that the First Amended Plan provides that all secured creditors encumbering the Rental Properties will receive deferred cash payments totaling the allowed amount of their claims while retaining their liens on the Rental Properties. But this assertion is devoid of analysis and, on a true present value basis, probably wrong. As Debtor's plan seems to be premised on everything going as planned over the 15 (or even thirty) years of this Chapter 11 plan, with little or no wiggle room, and while not even apparently dealing with all likely expenses, the court requires Debtor to answer Bryson's concerns about feasibility. Given the current economic climate, Debtor should account for the realistic probability of sustained occupancy in the rental properties as well as her own employment prospects.

No tentative. Continue for approximately 30 days to afford one final opportunity to fill in the gaps.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

The purpose of a disclosure statement is "to give all creditors a source of information which allows them to make an informed choice regarding the approval or rejection of a plan." Duff v. U.S. Trustee (In re California Fidelity, Inc.), 198 B.R. 567, 571 (9th Cir. BAP 1996). "Adequate information" is defined under 11 U.S.C. Sec. 1125(a)(1) as "information of a kind, and in sufficient detail, as far as is reasonably practicable in light of the nature and history of the debtor and the condition of the debtor's books and records, that would enable a hypothetical reasonable investor typical of holders of claims or interest of the relevant class to make an informed judgment about the plan, but adequate information need not include such information about any other possible or proposed plan."

Bryson's objections notwithstanding (though feasibility seems questionable), the DS appears to provide adequate information. It is also worth noting that the DS has not drawn any other opposition. The plan may ultimately not be confirmable if feasibility proves too speculative, as it very well might be given the current economic climate, or if cramdown is attempted and the value of the rental properties is too low as Bryson has alleged, suggesting that creditors will do better in a liquidation (the so-called best interest of creditors test). Debtor will have the burden on these issues in order to achieve confirmation, but at this stage, the DS does not appear deficient from an information standpoint, especially with the detailed risk factors analysis.

Grant. Set confirmation date and deadlines.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/27/20:

This is supposed to be a pre-trial conference. Sadly, it is not that and this is hardly the first time in this series of cases where the court has been sorely frustrated.

As required by the LBRs, the parties were to have met and conferred in good faith to narrow the issues so that trial time could be focused on those items truly in dispute. Local Rule 7016-1 sets forth a very specific timeline and list of duties incumbent on each side. At LBR 7016-1(b)(1)(C) Plaintiff was to have initiated a meet and confer at least 28 days before the date set for the pre-trial conference. According to Defendant's papers, this did not occur 28 days before the originally scheduled pretrial conference of Feb. 6, or indeed at all until February 13 when Plaintiff reportedly filed his "Pretrial Stipulation" in which he claims it was Defendants who "refused to participate in the pretrial stipulation process" necessitating what is actually a unilateral stipulation. Defendant on the next day, February 14, filed his Unilateral Pretrial Stipulation. Defendant does acknowledge at his page 2, line 1-2 that Plaintiff sent something over to Defendant on January 28, but it was reportedly "not complete in any respect." As to the original date of the Pretrial

Conference of February 6, that was very late. Whether that document was anything close to what was later filed unilaterally on Feb. 13 is not clarified. But what is very clear is that these two unilateral "stipulations" are largely worthless in the main goal of narrowing issues inasmuch as the parties seem to be discussing two entirely different complaints. Defendant focuses on what the former trustee (now deceased) may have known about the existence of a loan undisclosed on the schedules made by Frank to WeCosign, Inc., which loan was reportedly worthless in any case, and about how that knowledge should be imputed to Plaintiff Marshack. But why the trustee's knowledge, imputed or otherwise, should justify an alleged misstatement or omission to list assets under oath, is never quite explained. One presumes Defendant will argue materiality. Plaintiff focuses on the alleged use of another corporation, Tara Pacific, as the repository of funds taken from WeCosign as an alleged fraudulent conveyance and then used by Frank and Tara as a piggy bank between 2010 and 2012 and upon alleged misstatements in the schedules about Tara's and Frank's actual average income. While this sounds like a fraudulent conveyance theory the gist seems to be that Tara and Frank were using ill-gotten gains to live on while denying in respective schedules that they had any income (or assets) thus comprising a false oath. There probably are connections between these different stories, but that is not made at all clear (and it must be made clear). Plaintiff's overlong "stipulation" is written more like a 'cut and paste' brief containing long tables with over 59 footnotes inserted. One presumes this represents a good faith compilation of bank records, but even that is left unclear. But the language used reads purely as advocacy, not an attempt to narrow the disputed facts in a way the other side can sign.

Buried in the Defendant's recitations (at page 4, ¶ 13) is the argument that the case should be dismissed as outside the statute of limitation (or statute of repose in Defendant's terms) described at §727(e)(1). Why this was not raised 50+ months ago when the action was filed by Rule 12(b) motion or otherwise is not explained. What the Defendant expects the court to do with this point now is also not explained.

In sum, this case is still a disorganized mess. This is not the first time the court has voiced its utter frustration with this series of cases. Rather than being ready for trial, we are very much still at the drawing board. The court is not happy about it as this is hardly a young case.

What is the remedy? The court could order sanctions against either side, or maybe both sides, and that would be richly deserved. The court could decide that Plaintiff as the party with the initial duty under the LBRs should suffer the brunt of just consequences by a dismissal, as the ultimate sanction. But however tedious and frustrating this has become the court would rather see these cases decided on their merits (if any) if that is possible. But what the court will not do is to further indulge these parties in disobeying the LBRs and generally continuing to shamble along, never getting anywhere.

Therefore, it is ordered:

1. The parties will immediately meet and confer about reducing the two unilateral 'stipulations' into an intelligible, single, useful list of items not in dispute and therefore requiring no further litigation;
2. The resulting stipulation will be concise, user-friendly and focused on the actual legal issues to be tried;
3. The stipulation will contain a concise list of exhibits to be offered at trial identified by number for Plaintiff and letter for Defendant;
4. The parties will attempt in good faith to resolve any evidentiary objections to admission of the exhibits, and if agreement cannot be reached, state concisely the reasons for or against admissibility;
5. The stipulation will contain a list of witnesses to be called by each side, with a very brief synopsis of the expected testimony;

6. All factual matters relevant and truly in dispute will be listed, by short paragraph;
7. All legal issues to be decided will be separately listed, by paragraph;
8. Any threshold issues such as Defendants argument about statute of repose will be separately listed along with a suggested means of resolving the issue; and
9. Both sides will estimate expected length of trial, mindful that the court requires all direct testimony by declaration with the witnesses available at trial for live cross and re-direct.

In sum the parties are to do their jobs. If the court's order is not followed in enthusiastic good faith, and completely with the goal of narrowing the issues, and if the resulting product is not a concise, user-friendly joint pretrial stipulation, the offending party or parties will be subject to severe sanctions which may include monetary awards and/or the striking or either the complaint or answer.

Continue about 60 days to accomplish the above.

#5.00 Second Interim Application For Compensation And Reimbursement Of Expenses For Period: 2/16/2020 to 7/6/2020, Fee: $28,022.00, Expenses: $650.48.

MICHAEL JAY BERGER, DEBTOR'S ATTORNEY,

FEE:	$28,022.00
EXPENSES:	$650.48

Docket 121

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 8/12/20:

This is the Second Interim Fee Application of debtor's counsel. Wells Fargo complains that its collateral is not being benefitted by counsel's ongoing efforts and therefore cannot be used to pay fees. Wells Fargo also argues that, measured by cash available, the case is sinking as June's MOR is worse than May's. In the Reply some explanation is offered having to do with counting debits after the end of the month which, when adjusted on an apples to apples basis, shows that results of operations were actually about the same, if very slightly improved. It is also grossly simplistic to argue that Wells' collateral is not benefitted at all by counsel's efforts. That debtor is able to stay in business at all seems to be a benefit to Wells Fargo as it is likely that should business cease a realization by Wells of its full claim would be very doubtful and, of course, no junior creditor would get anything. So, we seem to be more or less in the same place we were four months ago. We all look forward to some improvement in July and August MORs. The deadline to file a plan and disclosure statement looms in about six weeks (and extensions should not be expected). Debtor will be required to show feasibility and the track record looks equivocal so far. But that does not mean the court has given up on the case, and the court understands that without the earnest ongoing efforts of counsel, failure is assured. Zeal for fulfilling counsel's role will be understandably diminished if payment is altogether denied. So, what to

Chapter 11

#6.00 Motion In Chapter 11 Case For Order Authorizing Use Of Cash Collateral [11 U.S.C. Section 363]

Docket 30

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 8/12/20:

Secured Creditor's concerns are understandable. The court is unclear as to how Debtor proposes to pay the creditors. The Subject Property has been on the market for more than six months and Secured Creditor asserts that not a single offer has come in. Debtor vaguely states that there are marketing efforts going on, but nothing besides the pandemic to explain why no offers are forthcoming. The Subject Property has also recently converted to a rental property. Does Debtor still plan on selling the Subject Property? If not, vague reference is made to a possible refinance to pay creditors. What would that look like? What is the proposed timeline? The motion does not provide answers to these questions. However, the court is generally supportive of Debtors in possession taking steps to preserve value of collateral, and that appears to be what Debtor intends to do with the cash collateral. Perhaps the better part of valor is to grant the motion on an interim or temporary basis with a status conference scheduled in the near future so that Debtor can put together a proposal for paying Secured Creditor, whether through a sale, a refinance, or some other arrangement. If the court is not satisfied with the arrangement, the motion will be denied.

The argument that there is an ample equity cushion is not persuasive for at least two reasons. First, the valuation comes from the debtor which, of course, is self-serving. While it is true that owners are not disqualified from opining as to the value of assets they own, that does not mean that the court has to give them the same weight as valuations from professional appraisers. Of course, the creditor does not offer a professional appraisal either.

But the second concern arises from the fact that apparently the property has been for sale for six months, without result. This suggests downward adjustments may be in order. In the end the property has to be maintained and managed, or it will not generate any income and will not show well for sale either. Consequently, the court is inclined to grant the motion for a four-month trial basis with the proviso that all rents must be used for property upkeep and management only, with no more than a 10% management fee paid to any insider, including the daughter.

(cont'd from 7-23-20)

Docket 113

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 8/13/20:

The sanction was doubled at the 7/23 hearing but reportedly nothing has been paid in whole or in part of any portion. Even more grave is the report that the Hermans have filed a motion before the state court for leave to amend the complaint which, although seemingly labelled as confined to negligent destruction of personal property, nevertheless asserts millions in damages for emotional distress and punitive damages, which, as a whole, seems a thinly disguised re-assertion of claims this court has already ruled were owned by the estate and sold by its trustee to Foothill. But, reportedly, the state court has relegated the amendment motion for the limited jurisdiction court to decide. Depending on how that goes it would seem that these proposed amendments may not be allowed, or at least not allowed consistent with the jurisdiction of that court deciding the question, and thus effectively foreclosed. In either case, it would seem that Mr. Herman does not intend to accept this court's decisions. The court is inclined to see whether the amendment is allowed by the limited jurisdiction court before assessing whether yet more sanctions or other measures are warranted.

Tentative for 7/23/20:

New for 7/23: Mr. Herman's objection to order for sanctions and stay of proceedings pending appeal. Mr. Herman argues that he has appealed this court's contempt order, which divests this court of jurisdiction. This objection was filed on 6/26/20.

Chapter 7

The objection is linked to the notice of lodgment of the order requiring Herman to pay $2,000 as a sanction for his continuing violation of this court's May 11, 2020 contempt order.

Foothill and the Chapter 7 Trustee have filed a joint supplemental report noting Mr. Herman's continuing noncompliance. Per the report, Mr. Herman is continuing his campaign in state court asserting that this wife may make claims beyond that which this court set forth. The state court has apparently issued an OSC re dismissal and a separate OSC regarding the court's proposed transfer of the Surviving Claims to a court of limited jurisdiction (i.e. claims for damages of less than $25,000). These matters are set for hearing on August 7, 2020. Unsurprisingly, Mr. Herman has also failed to pay the sanction to Foothill as ordered.

Regarding Mr. Herman's assertion that the appeal divests this court of jurisdiction over the contempt order, Foothill cites Hoffman v. Beer Drivers and Salesmen's Local Union No. 88, 536 F.2d 1268, 1276 (9th Cir. 1976) for the proposition that, in the context of contempt proceedings like the ones here, "where the court supervises a continuing course of conduct and where as new facts develop additional supervisory action by the court is required, an appeal from the supervisory order does not divest the [court] of jurisdiction to continue its supervision, even though in the course of that supervision the court act upon or modifies the order from which the appeal is taken." Trustee further cites Hughes v. Sharp, 476 F.2d 975 (9th Cir. 1973), where the court noted, that when the contemnor is a party to the pending proceedings, and when those proceedings are still under way, the court lacks jurisdiction to consider the purported appeal from a contempt order as that order is interlocutory. The court stated that although this may seem harsh, a contemnor is not without recourse, as among his options is purging his contempt. Id. Foothill also notes that the notice of appeal was untimely and that a new appeal cannot be initiated by simply amending the notice of appeal; a new notice of appeal is required.

By contrast, Mr. Herman's objection is completely devoid of analysis and contains only vague citations to cases standing for the broad proposition that an appeal divests the bankruptcy court of jurisdiction over those aspects of the case involved in the appeal. But those cases cited by Mr. Herman do not undercut the cases cited by Foothill. Mr. Herman has not filed anything responsive to Foothill's supplemental report.

The message that the court sent to Mr. Herman at the last hearing on 6/25 was apparently not received, even when Mr. Herman was unambiguously ordered to pay a sanction of $2,000 to Foothill to put a sharper point on the message. Mr. Herman seems to be operating on the misguided assumption that his appeal puts him out of reach of this court, leaving him free to pursue conduct this court has already characterized as contumacious. However, as the case law cited above demonstrates, the court remains vested with the power to monitor Mr. Herman's ongoing misconduct, and modify the contempt order as necessary.

The court has already noted that Mr. Herman is playing with fire by continuing to ignore this court's orders. It does not appear, however, that Mr. Herman is altering his course. Rather, he persists, relying on legalistic arguments about finality of orders which, as explained above, are not persuasive. But this course is causing real, continuing damages to Foothill. So, the court has little choice but to raise the stakes in hopes of reaching the requisite coercion threshold. The sanction is doubled to $4,000, payable forthwith to Foothill. The court notes that the Superior Court has now also scheduled this matter on order to show cause for August 7, 2020. A further hearing will be scheduled for a mutually convenient date after August 7 to evaluate where we stand and whether yet more coercion is needed.

Tentative for 6/25/20:

Following the hearing on the OSC re: Contempt on April 29, Foothill Financial and Trustee jointly lodged an order on April 30. The official order issued on May 11. Mr. Herman filed an untimely objection to the lodged order.

To accompany his objection to the lodged order, Mr. Herman attached his own proposed order, which bears little resemblance to the actual ruling on the OSC and several other orders issued by this court.

The most consequential rewrite Mr. Herman makes to his proposed order is where he states that per our abstention order, he is allowed to pursue in state court all claims that may belong solely to his wife with no limit on value. This is despite the many orders issued by this court where the specific claims the court abstained from are listed. Foothill's response catalogues the various orders and judgments with the court's very clear language articulating the narrow scope of its abstention.

Mr. Herman appears to have seized upon the most miniscule ambiguity to deliberately disregard the language and spirit of this court's orders in an attempt to reframe his dismissed claims as belonging solely to his wife, thereby allowing him to re-litigate them in state court. Mr. Herman may have already filed a version of his order with the state court. Foothill and Trustee are understandably dismayed by this latest attempt to hinder and delay.

In light of this most recent and fairly egregious transgression, Foothill requests that the court now impose monetary sanctions. Foothill suggests that Mr. Herman should pay the fees incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's ongoing contempt, which Foothill estimates in its status report at $7,500.

Mr. Herman has filed his own status report asserting that the contempt order is on appeal and there is nothing else to be adjudicated by this court at this time, all matters now being with the district court.

Mr. Herman is playing with fire. Rather than displaying even a modicum of compunction after being adjudged to be in contempt, Mr. Herman asserts in his objection that his contempt is now purged, and that it never truly existed in the first place. Mr. Herman, we should not forget, is also an attorney, and is presumed to be able to understand court orders and the consequences for disregarding them. Thus, a measured and modest monetary sanction is likely appropriate, with the promise of more severe sanctions to follow if Mr. Herman continues to misconduct himself.

The court requests an update on whether Mr. Herman actually lodged a bogus form of order with the state court. Impose monetary sanctions of $2000 payable jointly to Foothill and Trustee.

Chapter 7

Tentative for 4/29/20:

This is a hearing on the court's Order to Show Cause why Debtor, Richard P. Herman ("Debtor") should not be held in Contempt of Court for Violating Court Orders and The Automatic Stay. The OSC was issued on March 18, 2020. Specifically, the OSC requires that Debtor demonstrate:

(a) Why he should not be held in contempt for

- i. his continuing efforts to exercise control over and interfere with the dismissal of the estate's claims in direct violation of the express provisions of this Court's orders and Judgment as well as the provisions of the automatic stay; and
- ii. his continuing violation of this Court's permanent injunction by continuing to assert and pursue claims in the state court that this Court has enjoined him from asserting or pursuing.

(b) Why he should not be subjected to the following sanctions:

- i. Imposition of a coercive fine, payable to the Court, for each day that he remains in contempt; and
- ii. Compensatory damages incurred by Foothill and the Trustee as a result of Mr. Herman's contemptuous conduct, including the attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and appear at the hearing thereon, and any additional attorneys' fees and costs incurred by Foothill and/or the Trustee to respond and appear with respect to Mr. Herman's pleadings filed in the state court in violation of this Court's orders.

Chapter 7

Both Debtor and Foothill Financial, L.P. ("Foothill") have filed timely responses.

Debtor's response is not persuasive. The main problem is that Debtor feigns ignorance or misunderstanding of this court's orders. Debtor appears to be arguing that his action(s) in state court are legitimate considering this court's abstention from adjudicating the remaining claims that were not deemed property of the estate. As argued effectively by Foothill in its response, this court has been clear in its delineation between what causes of action are and are not property of the estate. The court has clearly stated in prior adopted tentative rulings, the "surviving claims" are limited to claims for negligent damage to personal property in an amount not to exceed $3,500, and for his wife to pursue the same cause of action provided that she could establish that the damaged property was her separate property. These very narrow categories can have little relationship with what Debtor seems to persist in filing in the State Court.

As argued by Foothill, Mr. Herman is contending, here and in the State Court, that the "abstained claims" include claims other than the surviving claims identified by this court, which Mr. Herman argues are to be "defined in the State Court." Foothill notes that Debtor's response cites no authority or document that could possibly lead Debtor to such an understanding.

To aggravate the problem, Debtor is a licensed attorney of long standing, and so may be reasonably presumed to be able to understand court orders, and importantly, the consequences for ignoring them. Thus, his reported actions, which he does not deny, can be viewed as deliberate refusals to abide by this court's lawful orders.

Debtor's citation to Taggart is inapposite as Debtor does not really attempt to draw any parallels between Taggart and the present case, nor could he.

As Foothill correctly notes, unlike in Taggart, neither Foothill nor the Trustee has sought damages under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k), but rather this proceeding involves the court's authority to enforce its orders by imposing civil contempt remedies. Moreover, although there is more than ample basis for this court to find that Debtor's conduct was (and continues to be) "willful," the Supreme Court in Taggart expressly held that, in the civil contempt context, it is error to apply a subjective standard. Id. at 1804; see also In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) (no finding of bad faith or willful misconduct is required as "the focus is not on the subjective beliefs or intent of the contemnors in complying with the order, but whether in fact their conduct complied with the order at issue") (internal quotations omitted). Instead, the Supreme Court held, "[b]ased on the traditional principles that govern civil contempt, the proper standard is an objective one." Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 1804. Thus, Foothill argues, under Taggart, remedies for civil contempt are appropriate where "there is no objectively reasonable basis for concluding that the [contemnor's] conduct might be lawful under the . . . order." Id. at 1801 (rejecting a "good faith" defense and instead establishing an objective reasonableness standard in the context of contempt proceedings arising out of the violation of a discharge order).

The court has patiently entertained Debtor's numerous motions, many of which have been of dubious merit and suspected of being nothing more than attempts to delay enforcement of Foothill's legal rights. Many have been repetitive and do nothing but rehash the same issues. The court is now left with no option but to use its coercive powers to compel Debtor to abide by its orders. Thus, the question then is, what form should the coercive measures take? Foothill suggests the following measures be imposed:

1. Order Debtor to pay to the court a fine in the amount of $1,000 for each day that he remains in contempt, and direct that, in addition to ceasing and desisting from any further contemptuous behavior, Debtor shall cure his existing contempt forthwith by immediately filing with the State Court a notice: (1) withdrawing his motion for reconsideration seeking to set aside the State Court's dismissal of the Estate Claims as requested by the Trustee, and (2) affirming to the State Court that the only cause of action that the Hermans assert is the remaining single cause of action for negligent damage to personal property, which cause of action is limited to (a) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to his tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants) in an amount not to exceed $3,500"; and (b) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to her tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants), but only to the extent that Mrs. Herman can establish that the tangible personal property alleged to have been damaged was her sole and separate property as of the commencement of the bankruptcy case on October 17, 2017."

2. That the court compensate Foothill for its attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and this reply, and to appear at the hearing on the Order to Show Cause, by ordering Debtor to pay to Foothill, by no later than May 15, 2020, the amount of $6,000, which is the minimum amount of fees and costs incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's contempt.

The court will forbear from the harsher methods, for now. But Debtor must accept that the matter has been decided, and further gainsaying is not only a waste of resources but an affront to the court and to the other parties, and thus a further contempt. Debtor may purge his contempt by promptly filing a withdrawal of the reconsideration motion on the dismissal of the "Estate claim" and affirming that insofar as the State court action will continue, it will be confined to the limited issues as outlined in paragraph 1 above. The court will not rule upon the other suggested sanctions as outlined in paragraph 2, for now, pending a report to be filed at least 14 days before the continued hearing regarding the dismissal etc. mentioned above.

The court finds debtor is in contempt. Initial sanction is as outlined above. A further hearing will be scheduled in approximately 60 days when status of compliance, and thus possible further sanctions, will be considered.

The debtor opposes abstention and remand. The central issue appears to be whether 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(3) applies, i.e. if the creditor Cham had knowledge of the bankruptcy proceeding in enough time to file a dischargeability action, but failed to do so, the claim is discharged irrespective of all the various other issues which might be pertinent. Debtor has submitted a declaration that he informed Cham of the pendency of the bankruptcy. The Debtor secondarily argues that he has no obligation to Cham even if there was insufficient notice because the real obligor was a corporation.

The court sees little reason for it to become involved in the dispute over whether there might be reasons to pierce the corporate veil, alter ego, etc. to determine whether (aside from discharge) debtor is liable to Cham under state law. So, the court will abstain from all such issues and remand them to state court for their determination. The bankruptcy discharge and application of § 523(a)(3), however, is within the court's core jurisdiction. The court will hear from the parties over whether and how this single issue should be resolved, and deadlines for reasonable discovery, pre-trial motions and the like, will be set. Absent compelling reasons otherwise, the court believes that this could be resolved by Rule 56 motion in a near timetable.

Abstain and remand as to all issues other than §523(a)(3).

#3.00 Creditor's Motion For Order Approving: (1) Settlement Agreement With Debtor Ashley Dawn Conrad; And (2) Approving Form Of Settlement Agreement (cont'd from 7-15-20)

Docket 57

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO 9-01-20 AT 11:00 A.M.
PER ORDER APPROVING STIPULATION RE: CREDITOR'S MOTION FOR ORDER APPROVING SETTLEMENT ENTERED 8-18-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/15/20:

Creditor Al Hassas/Sweet Lemons, LLC ("Creditor") moves for an order approving a Settlement Agreement between Creditor and Debtor in the voluntary chapter 13 case. The approval of this motion would result in the dismissal of the Debtor's chapter 13 bankruptcy. Trustee filed an opposition on 6/25/20. Trustee argues that the Settlement Agreement, if approved, should not involve dismissal of the chapter 13 and all payments should be disbursed by the Trustee. Additionally, Trustee requests the Creditor amend their proof-of-claim in accordance with the agreement and Debtor amend the plan to establish the appropriate class or subclass for treatment of the creditor in accordance with the agreement.

On 7/1/2020, Debtor filed a reply to the opposition. She argues the conditions requested by the Trustee would only result in a default on the Settlement Agreement. The agreement states a third-party has agreed to pay the monthly payment straight to the Creditor. Debtor argues if the payments must go through the Trustee for distribution to the Creditor there is too much room for error and the possibility of default is much higher, thus, putting a greater burden on the Debtor. Additionally, Debtor argues if the payments are made to the Trustee this would structurally alter the terms of the agreement and since the payments go beyond the five-year term of the bankruptcy plan, the Trustee could not fully satisfy the entirety of the agreement transitioning it into default.

Creditor and Debtor filed replies to the Trustee's opposition arguing that the Jevic-like settlement in contrast does not violate the priority scheme set forth in the Bankruptcy Code. See Czyzewski v. Jevic Holding Corp. 137 S. Ct. 973, 979 (2017). Additionally, they argue settlement would allow for the Debtor to begin a "fresh start" moving forward after dismissal. Finally, Creditor argues every prong in the four-prong fair classification test found in In re Benner, 146 B.R. 265, 266 (D. Montana 1992) has been satisfied. But Benner is a separate classification case, not a dismissal case.

Under 11 U.S.C § 105, the court holds the power over the case to approve, dismiss, or deny the motion to approve Settlement Agreement. Here, the motion falls within the scope of § 105 and the court holds power over this action. FRBP 9019 allows for the compromise or settlement of claims and controversies by the Creditor, Debtor, and Trustee following notice and a hearing. In order for the court to approve a proposed settlement the court should consider the following factors, as discussed in In re Woodson: 839 F.2d 610,620 (9th Cir. 1988), citing Martin v. Kane (In re A & C Properties), 784 F.2d 1377, 1380-81 (9th Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Martin v. Robinson, --- U.S. ----, 107 S. Ct. 189, 93 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1986).

"(a) The probability of success in the litigation; (b) the difficulties, if any, to be encountered in the matter of collection; (c) the complexity of the litigation involved, and the expense, inconvenience and delay necessarily attending it; (d) the paramount interest of the creditors and a proper deference to their reasonable views in the premises."

Here, (a) the probability of success in the Creditor's allegedly nondischargeable claim against the Debtor should be regarded as high. This would further burden the Debtor and have the likelihood of never creating an effective reorganization plan; (b) the agreement between the parties has taken place over that last several months with a full merger clause and understanding of each parties' obligations. The Debtor has secured a third-party, who has agreed to the terms and will satisfy all the required payments. (c) The complexity of the situation is straightforward enough. Debtor lost a civil suit to the Creditor who holds the majority debt against the Debtor. The cost of litigation would significantly decrease the total amount in the estate, diminishing the ability to pay not only the Creditor as agreed but any remaining unsecured claims.

But the main issue arises under the last Woodson factor: "the paramount interest of the creditors . . ." that is creditors, plural. The agreement is solely between the Debtor and one Creditor. It fails to take into consideration or even discuss any other creditors who must be treated within the reorganization plan. Understandably, Creditor holds almost 90% of the total debt, but all other creditors must also be considered when approving such a motion, particularly one involving a dismissal. Approving the Settlement Agreement should be a compromise which is "fair and equitable" to all parties involved. (italics added) In re A & C Properties, 784 F.2d at 1381. The agreement focuses solely on questions of Creditor's and Debtor's concerns but fails to consider at all any other creditors.

The court is not indifferent to the Debtor's fresh start nor to her difficulty in handling a non-dischargeable obligation, nor is the court indifferent to the administrative cost savings to the reorganization effort. All are good points, but the movants fail to convince that these points cannot be handled within the context of a Chapter 13 plan. The fact that payments might continue past the five years is hardly an insuperable impediment. The plan can acknowledge the non-dischargeable nature of the obligation and acknowledge that at the end of term the payments will have to go on since the discharge otherwise generally applicable under the plan will not affect this obligation. The Trustee need not be involved after the end of the term. So, no good reason is given to abandon all other creditors in order to further the

Tentative for 7/15/20:
The debtor should respond to the Trustee's question. Is extension under CARES Act a feasible solution?

Tentative for 6/17/20:

Trustee questions whether the loss in income is attributable to the COVID19 pandemic, in which case an extension is suggested per the CARES Act. However, debtor seems to be arguing something different, i.e. loss of a

Docket 26

 VACATED  REASON: OFF CALENDAR - CASE DISMISSED - ORDER AND NOTICE OF DISMISSAL ARISING FROM DEBTOR'S REQUEST FOR VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL OF CHAPTER 13 ENTERED 8-12-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 7/15/20:

A tentative was issued back in February of 2019 concluding that there was a need for a follow-up evidentiary hearing. The evidentiary hearing has been continued many times by stipulation. It appears that the last written update on this case came from a stipulation to continue the hearing filed in February of 2020. That stipulation asserted that the parties were close to settling and did not want to incur unnecessary fees and costs. In the months since then, Debtor has parted ways with her attorney and is now proceeding pro se. Thus, where this matter stands at present is anyone's guess.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, the court encourages telephonic appearances through CourtCall on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. Chapter 13

Debtor, Diane Weinsheimer ("Debtor") disputes a $415,142.08 prepetition arrearage – which includes escrow deficiency for funds advanced of $67,598.15 and projected escrow shortage of $5,787.37. However, because Shellpoint's claim is prima facie valid, the burden shifts to the objector to produce evidence that would negate at least one of the elements essential to the claim's legal sufficiency. In re Consol. Pioneer Mortgage, 178 B.R. 222, 226 (9th Cir. BAP 1995); In re Pugh, 157 B.R. 898, 901 (9th Cir. BAP 1993). Debtor does not reach this threshold. Debtor allegedly misinterprets a Statement regarding alleged surplus, but does not offer evidence to refute an essential claim made by Shellpoint – that Debtor has not been making payments required by the Note and Deed of Trust which is the foundation for that number. The court cannot tell on this record which set of assertions is correct, but because the prima facie validity in consequence is not overcome, the motion as a summary proceeding can only be denied. The court will hear argument whether a further evidentiary hearing in contested proceeding is required.

#4.00 Motion for relief from the automatic stay REAL PROPERTY

PACIFIC WESTERN BANK Vs.
DEBTOR

Docket 341

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/1/20:

This relief of stay motion is largely resolved by the fact that there is no longer any property of the estate involved since the trustee has abandoned the subject property by order entered 5/9/19. The court doubts that any bare, continuing "possessory interest" is even something protected by the stay, and even if it were, the stay as to the debtor is resolved once a discharge is entered per §362(c)(2)(C). Lastly, it would appear that the property has no equity and is not necessary to a reorganization within the meaning of §362(d)(2). Grant.

#8.00 Chapter 7 Trustee's Motion For Order Authorizing Filing Of Chapter 7 Bankruptcy Cases For Olive Avenue Investors, LLC, And South 7th Street Investments, LLC

Docket 1839

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/1/20:

This is the chapter 7 trustee, Howard Grobstein's ("Trustee's") motion for order authorizing filing of chapter 7 bankruptcy cases for Olive Avenue Investors, LLC, and South 7th Street Investments, LLC. The motion is opposed by Baseline Medical Holdings, LLC and Mountain Park Health Center (collectively "Arizona Defendants"). Respondents Don Mealing, trustee and all other similarly situated judgment creditors arising out of Orange County Superior Court Case No. 30-2008 00114401 ("Charton Creditors"), and Dynalectric Company ("Dynalectric") also oppose.

1. General Background

As with most motions in this case, the parties are numerous and the facts serpentine. As related by Trustee, Point Center Financial ("Debtor") was in the business of residential and commercial loan origination and servicing. Primarily, Debtor's loan funding was procured from private investors who in some instances received fractionalized interests in deeds of trust securing their investments and in other instances invested in a blind mortgage pool in which they did not receive a direct interest in deeds of trust. Following defaults on the loans, Debtor initiated foreclosure proceedings against the property securing the respective loans, which typically resulted in Debtor being the successful purchaser at the foreclosure auction. As the purchaser, Debtor frequently set up limited liability companies to hold title to the property, with itself as manager of the LLC, while its investors' interests under the foreclosed deed of trust were converted to membership interests in the LLC. Debtor's operations yielded income in the form of loan origination, loan servicing, and management fees.

2. Jeffrey Gomberg and TAMCO, LLC

Mr. Gomberg held interests in various Debtor-originated investments as beneficiary to his late parents' estate. In or around early 2014, Mr. Gomberg formed TAMCO, LLC ("TAMCO") for the purpose of obtaining control of and managing the assets owned by entities formed by Debtor. Mr. Gomberg passed away in May 2019, leaving TAMCO without management, and TAMCO is now a defunct entity.

3. Olive Avenue

Olive Avenue Investors, LLC ("Olive Avenue") is a California limited liability company that was formed in 2010 for the purpose of commercial real estate activities related to property located on Olive Avenue, Winchester, Riverside County, CA 92596 (the "Olive Property"). Olive Avenue's operating agreement names Debtor as its sole manager. Under the operating agreement, the manager is entitled to be paid "a management fee from the date of formation of [Olive Avenue] in the amount of 2.50% annually calculated upon the total capitalization value" of $1,850,000. As of the Petition Date, Debtor was owed $142,519.69 in management fees. Olive Avenue's operating agreement provides that the manager may be replaced only by a vote of members representing a majority interest in Olive Avenue and the payment of all management fees and expenses then due.

In or around 2016, Mr. Gomberg claimed that he had the right to control Olive Avenue based on TAMCO's possession of ballots, proxies, and/or powers of attorney of members holding a majority of the membership interests in Olive Avenue. Trustee disputed Mr. Gomberg's claim on the basis that TAMCO had failed to obtain relief from the automatic stay before attempting to exercise control over property of the Estate (Debtor's management rights) and, in any event, a vote to replace Debtor as manager would be ineffective under Olive Avenue's operating agreement until Debtor's management fees were paid in full. However, Trustee determined that it would be more beneficial for the estate to receive payment from the sale of the Olive Property Mr. Gomberg had negotiated than to litigate with TAMCO over control of Olive Avenue and subsequently conduct a new sale process. Accordingly, the Trustee entered into a settlement agreement with TAMCO under which TAMCO would become the manager of Olive Avenue, complete the sale of the Olive Property, and pay the Estate at least $100,000 from the sale proceeds on account of Debtor's management fee claim. The Trustee sought and obtained this Court's approval of that settlement. Docket Nos. 1655 & 1675. However, Mr. Gomberg passed away before the settlement could be effectuated. In this motion Trustee seems to be proceeding on the presumption that the estate is still the manager as opposed to simply a money creditor, notwithstanding the approved settlement. The court does not reach that question.

4. South 7th

South 7th Street Investments, LLC ("South 7th") is one of the LLCs established by Debtor to hold title to a property following foreclosure. Specifically, South 7th was formed in or about November 2008 for the purpose of taking title to undeveloped land located at 7630 South 7th Street, Phoenix, Arizona 85042 (the "South 7th Property"). South 7th's operating agreement names Debtor as its sole manager and provides for the payment of management fees to Debtor. As of the Petition Date, Debtor was owed approximately $368,000 in management fees.

TAMCO purported to assume control of South 7th in November 2016 based on an alleged vote of a majority of the interests in South 7th in favor of TAMCO replacing Debtor as South 7th's manager. See Adv. No. 8:16-01089-TA, Docket No. 179. As with Olive Avenue, however, TAMCO allegedly failed to obtain relief from the automatic stay or pay any of the management fees owed to the Estate.

In or around May 2017, TAMCO purported to cause the sale of the South 7th Property to Mountain Park Health Center, a private hospital in Arizona. The grant deed was signed by Mr. Rodney L. Tucker as the "Executive Vice President/CFO" of "TAMCO II, Inc." Trustee asserts that since TAMCO II, Inc., is not the same entity that purportedly was voted in as the manager of South 7th, the deed would be invalid even if TAMCO had actually replaced Debtor as the manager of South 7th (which it arguably did not, due to its failure to comply with the operating agreement and to obtain relief from the automatic stay). In January 2019, the Trustee filed a complaint in the Superior Court for the State of Arizona, County of Maricopa #CV 2019-000849 (the "Arizona Court" or "Arizona action") on behalf of South 7th and the Debtor's estate. The complaint seeks to recover the South 7th Property and quiet title in South 7th's name, and also seeks declaratory and injunctive relief identifying the Trustee as the sole party authorized to act on behalf of South 7th. In May 2019, the Arizona Court ruled that the Trustee lacked standing to pursue the action on behalf of South 7th due to the deemed rejection of South 7th's operating agreement and ordered the case dismissed.

5. Trustee's Main Argument

Trustee does not dispute that it rejected the Operating Agreements, but argues that the Arizona Court's ruling was erroneous, not least because it conflicts with recent Supreme Court precedent regarding the effect of rejection. See Mission Prod. Holdings v. Tempnology, LLC, 139 S. Ct. 1652, 1656-62 (2019) ("A rejection breaches a contract but does not rescind it. And that means that all the rights that would ordinarily survive a contract breach . . . remain in place. . . . A rejection does not terminate the contract. When it occurs, the debtor and counterparty do not go back to their pre-contract positions."). However, Trustee asserts that challenging the Arizona Court's ruling would be expensive and time-consuming, and Trustee proposes that it is more efficient to resolve the standing issue with his approach of simply being authorized to file chapter 7 petitions on behalf of Olive Avenue and South 7th. Trustee asserts that his position is supported by § 363(b)(1), which states in relevant part, "[t]he trustee . . . may use, sell, or lease, other than in the ordinary course of business, property of the estate." Furthermore, Trustee asserts that for the court to approve a use of estate assets outside of the ordinary course of business, the trustee must provide an "articulated business justification" for the proposed use. See, e.g., In re ASARCO, LLC, 650 F.3d 593, 601 (5th Cir. 2011); Walter v. Sunwest Bank (In re Walter), 83 B.R. 14, 19-20 (9th Cir. BAP 1988). Moreover, under 11 U.S.C. § 105(a), "[t]he court may issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions" of the Bankruptcy Code. See also Sasson v. Sokoloff (In re Sasson), 424 F.3d 864, 874 (9th Cir. 2005) ("[T]he bankruptcy court may use its inherent equitable power to fashion relief, as long as the remedy is consistent with the objectives of the Bankruptcy Code."). Trustee argues that this motion is consistent with the objectives of the bankruptcy code because it will save litigation expenses and potentially lead to recoveries for the Debtor.

Arizona Defendants assert that this motion is barred as it represents a textbook application of the Rooker-Feldman doctrine. The Rooker-Feldman doctrine is a well-established jurisdictional rule prohibiting federal courts from exercising appellate review over final state court judgments. See Henrichs v. Valley View Dev., 474 F.3d 609, 613 (9th Cir. 2007). The Rooker-Feldman doctrine bars suits "[b]rought by state-court losers complaining of injuries caused by state-court judgments rendered before the district court proceedings commenced and inviting district court review and rejection of those judgments." Lance v. Dennis, 546 U.S. 459, 464 (2006) (quoting Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Saudi Basic Indus. Corp., 544 U.S. 280, 284 (2005)). "A suit brought in federal district court is a 'de facto appeal' forbidden by Rooker-Feldman when 'a federal plaintiff asserts as a legal wrong an allegedly erroneous decision by a state court and seeks relief from a state court judgment based on that decision.'" Carmona v. Carmona, 603 F.3d 1041, 1050 (9th Cir. 2010) (citation omitted). If a lawsuit contains a de facto appeal, a federal court is barred from deciding not only the issues decided by the state court, but also any other issues that are "inextricably intertwined" with the state court's decision. See Noel v. Hall, 341 F.3d 1148, 1158 (9th Cir. 2003). "A claim is inextricably intertwined with a state court judgment if the federal claim succeeds only to the extent that the state court wrongly decided the issues before it, or if the relief requested in the federal action would effectively reverse the state court decision or void its ruling." Fontana Empire Ctr., LLC v. City of Fontana, 307 F.3d 987, 992 (9th Cir. 2002).

The Arizona Defendants argue that Trustee through this motion is pursuing a horizontal appeal of the Arizona State Court judgment, advancing essentially the same arguments that the Arizona State Court found unpersuasive, including Trustee's citation to Tempnology, the case he argues provides strong support for this motion. Indeed, the Arizona State Court analyzed the facts of this case within the context of Tempnology and is worth quoting at some length. The Arizona State Court stated:

"In Mission Product Holdings, Inc. v. Tempnology, LLC, 139 S. Ct. 1652 (2019), the trustee rejected a trademark licensing agreement. The Supreme Court held that the debtor's rejection of the licensing agreement did not deprive the licensee, who did not breach the contract, of its rights to enforce the agreement to use the trademarks. The Court ruled that a rejection of a contract is treated like a breach under state contract law. The Court stated, quoting 13 R. Lord, Williston On Contracts §3:32, pp. 701-702 (4th ed. 2013): "[W]hen a contract is breached in the course of performance, the injured party may elect to continue the contract or refuse to perform further." 139 S. Ct. at 1662. The breach does not result in a termination or rescission of the contract. Id. As such, the non-breaching party can sue based on the breach. This rule "prevents a debtor in bankruptcy from recapturing interests it had given up." Id. at 1663. Nothing in the Tempnology decision in any way supports the notion that the breaching party can enforce the rejected contract." Arizona Defendants' RJN, Exh. 6 p. 5.

"Here, the trustee is the breaching party. A party who commits a material breach of contract has no legal rights to sue to enforce the contract. See e.g., Brown v. Grimes, 192 Cal. App. 4th 265 (2011). ("When a party's failure to perform a contractual obligation constitutes a material breach of the contract, the other party may be discharged from its duty to perform under the contract."); De Burgh v. De Burgh, 39 Cal. 2d 858, 863 (1952) ("in contract law a material breach excused further performance by [an] innocent party"); Cal. Civ. Code, § 1439 ["Before any party to an obligation can require another party to perform any act under it, he must fulfill all conditions precedent thereto imposed upon himself; and must be able and offer to fulfill all conditions concurrent so imposed upon him on the like fulfillment by the other party ..."). Id.

Chapter 7

The Arizona court also provided some contextual support for its reasoning in footnote 2:

"As discussed at oral argument, it is true that this case does not involve a direct dispute between the two parties to the contract. Rather, it involves a claim against a third party. The fundamental point, however, is that the trustee, who breached the contract, has no right to "enforce" the contract. While Grobstein is not suing another party to the Operating Agreement, he purports to be acting under the powers provided him under the Operating Agreement, which he rejected and breached." Id.

So, the Arizona court did not analyze the question in terms of whether a contract rejected in bankruptcy makes the contract disappear; rather, the Arizona court analyzed the question on the more nuanced question of whether rejecting a contract is a material breach (it clearly is) by the debtor which then forgives counter performance and/or blocks the debtor as breaching party from suing under the rejected contract. This court finds the analysis persuasive, and even if it were a closer question, this court for reasons explained below would not indulge in second-guessing on the point for reasons of comity.

7. Rooker-Feldman Is Probably Not Implicated Here

So, it would seem, despite Trustees assertion that he disagreed with the ruling, that the Arizona State Court has already addressed the application of Tempnology and was not persuaded by Trustee's arguments. However, in Trustee's reply, he argues this is not a Rooker-Feldman issue by clarifying that he is seeking different relief. Specifically, he argues in his reply that he is only attempting to address the issue identified by the Arizona Court by obtaining the appointment of a representative for South 7th who will have indisputable standing to pursue litigation on behalf of South 7th (and not on the contract rejection issue). Moreover, how can this court authorize the filing of a voluntary Chapter 7 without revisiting the issue of standing and authority which, in turn, goes right back to gainsaying what the Arizona court decided? It might be correct that this motion contains a different issue than was before the Arizona State Court and so is not a de facto appeal. But it remains that the Arizona court dismissed the Trustee's action on standing grounds, and this motion attempts a horizontal challenge of that ruling because only someone with proper authority can file a petition. Trustee offers only scant authority for this motion, the most compelling of which is likely the court's powers under 11 U.S.C. §105(a). Trustee notes that none of the oppositions have argued that the motion is not in the best interests of the bankruptcy estate and have not identified any interest that would be harmed if the motion succeeds, but that does not solve the question of standing.

Trustee is asking this court for extraordinary relief, which is evidenced by the lack of caselaw where a court granted similar relief on similar facts. The court notes that without explicit authority to buttress granting this unusual motion (i.e. is this really a use, sale or lease of property under §363, or an appropriate invocation of §105? And who has the authority to use, sell or lease in this context of a breached management agreement?) any such order would likely be appealed, resulting in yet more litigation and expense for the estate, for no clear benefit to Debtor or its creditors. The court also notes that Trustee might have another arrow in the quiver, which is that Debtor is purportedly the largest creditor of both Olive Avenue and South 7th. As such, Trustee asserts, he can simply force both entities into an involuntary bankruptcy and achieve substantially the same result as he seeks through this motion. Why not just do that? After all, this motion is procedurally suspect as Trustee has, at best, questionable standing to bring this motion, and the motion is conspicuously short on solid, relevant authority. The procedural history of this case is muddy enough and the court does not wish to add another layer. Thus, this motion should be denied, and Trustee should pursue the involuntary bankruptcy route if he believes it viable and appropriate. The court makes no findings in that regard.

8. Comity and Abstention

But quite aside from those questions this court is most reluctant to second guess the decision in the Arizona action, and even if a new Chapter 7 trustee were appointed for one or both of Olive Avenue and South 7th bankruptcy estates, that/those trustee(s) would still have to deal with the same question of whether Trustee has/had standing to sue on behalf of the estate or even to file the petition(s) in the first place. But, presumably, the Trustee for Point Center would have authority to file a claim for money as a creditor, or an involuntary petition as a creditor, but that may be the full extent of his authority.

Federal courts have discretion to decline jurisdiction when there is a pending state court action. The Colorado River abstention doctrine from Colorado River Water Conservation District v. United States, 424 U.S. 800 (1976), comes into play where parallel litigation is being carried out, particularly where federal and state court proceedings are simultaneously being carried out to determine the rights of parties with respect to the same questions of law. Under such circumstances, it makes little sense for two courts to expend the time and effort to achieve a resolution of the question. The principle rests on considerations of "[w]ise judicial administration, giving regard to conservation of judicial resources and comprehensive disposition of litigation." Colorado River, 424 U.S. at 817 (citing Kerotest Mfg. Co. v. C-O-Two Fire Equipment Co., 342 U.S. 180, 183 (1952)). One such example described by the Colorado River court was "that the court first assuming jurisdiction over property may exercise that jurisdiction to the exclusion of other courts." Id. at 818 (citation omitted).

Unlike other abstention doctrines, application of the Colorado River doctrine is prudential and discretionary and is a way to save judicial resources and avoid wasteful duplication of litigation. Id. Typically, such factors considered by the court include the order in which the courts assumed jurisdiction over property, the order in which the courts assumed jurisdiction over the parties, the relative inconvenience of the forum, the relative progress of the two actions, the desire to avoid piecemeal litigation, whether federal law provides the rule of decision, whether the state court will adequately protect the rights of all parties, whether the federal filing was vexatious (intended to harass the other party) or reactive (in response to adverse rulings in the state court).

Further, the parallel proceedings need not be identical to be parallel. See Janopaul Block Co. v St. Paul, 830 F.Supp.2d 976, 982 (S.D. Cal. 2011) (proceedings are considered parallel for purposes of the Colorado River doctrine where substantially the same parties are contemporaneously litigating substantially the same issues in federal and state courts.); AAR Int'l, Inc. v. Nimelias Enters. S.A., 250 F.3d 510, 518 (7th Cir. 2001) ("[t]he question is not whether the suits are formally symmetrical, but whether there is a substantial likelihood that the [state court] litigation will dispose of all claims presented in the federal case.)

Here, all factors to be considered by the court weigh in favor of abstaining from exercising jurisdiction over the parties' disputes. The Arizona Action remains pending regarding the State Court Defendants' Cross-complaint to quiet title to the Property. The Arizona Action was filed first (and by the Trustee), has been pending for over a year and a half, and involves real property located in Arizona. The State Court Defendants have expended significant time and expense in conducting discovery and litigating in the Arizona Court. All the claims in the Cross-complaint are state law claims. Moreover, Mr. Grobstein as Trustee filed the Motion only after entry of the judgment and after the State Court Defendants proceeded with obtaining relief on their Cross-complaint. Clearly, Trustee filed this Motion in response to adverse rulings (both actual and anticipated) in the Arizona Action.

Moreover, under the principles of federalism, courts should abstain from exercising jurisdiction when a state court proceeding is pending to avoid unnecessary conflict between state and federal governments. See Younger v. Harris, 401, U.S. 37 (1971); United States v. Morros, 268 F.3d 695, 707 (9th Cir. 2001). Courts apply the Younger abstention not only to pending state proceedings that are criminal, but "also when certain civil proceedings are pending, if the State's interests in the proceeding are so important that exercise of the federal judicial power would disregard the comity between the States and the National Government." Pennzoil Co. v. Texaco, Inc., 481 U.S. 1, 11 (1987).

Courts must first analyze whether the parallel state action falls within one of three categories: (1) criminal prosecutions, (2) "certain civil enforcement proceedings," and (3) "civil proceedings involving certain orders uniquely in furtherance of the state courts' ability to perform their judicial functions." Sprint Communications, Inc. v. Jacobs, 571 U.S. 69, 78 (2013). Such state court ability includes the ability to enforce a state court judgment. See, e.g., Pennzoil Co. v. Texaco, Inc., 481 U.S. 1, 13-14; Lebbos v. Judges of Superior Court, Santa Clara Cnty., 883 F.2d 810, 815 (9th Cir.1989). Moreover, property law is deemed an important state interest warranting Younger abstention. *Harper v. entitled to the same claim-preclusion and issue-preclusion effects it would receive in the Arizona state courts. See Exxon Mobil Corp., 544 U.S. at 293. The court should allow the Arizona Action to proceed as the State Court Defendants are reportedly days away from obtaining a judgment. For all these reasons, the court should deny the Motion.

The foregoing analysis is entirely consistent with decisions interpreting the formal abstention provisions found at 28 U.S.C. §1334, which provides in pertinent part, "nothing in this section prevents a district court in the interest of justice, or in the interest of comity with State courts or respect for State law, from abstaining from hearing a particular proceeding arising under title 11 or arising in or related to a case under title 11." For purposes of section 1334, "related to" has been interpreted to mean "whether the outcome of the proceeding could conceivably have any effect on the estate being administered in bankruptcy." In re Feitz, 852 F.2d 455, 457 (9th Cir. 1988). Now, the court realizes this is only obliquely an abstention question, since it would be the Arizona bankruptcy court, not this court, that would preside in such a hypothetical case. But still, these principles inform this court's ruling upon this motion; if this motion were granted this court would necessarily intrude into the questions already decided by the Arizona state court on the question of authority and standing. Furthermore, In re Tucson Estates, 912 F.2d 1162 (9th Cir. 1990) enumerates a multi-part test of elements a court will consider in determining whether to abstain. These factors include: (1) the effect or lack thereof on the efficient administration of the estate if a court recommends abstention, (2) the extent to which state law issues predominate over bankruptcy issues, (3) the difficulty or unsettled nature of the applicable law, (4) the presence of a related proceeding commenced in state court or other nonbankruptcy court, (5) the jurisdictional basis, if any, other than 28 U.S.C. § 1334, (6) the degree of relatedness or remoteness of the proceeding to the main bankruptcy case, (7) the substance rather than form of an asserted "core" proceeding, (8) the feasibility of severing state law claims from core bankruptcy matters to allow judgments to be entered in state court with enforcement left to the bankruptcy court, (9) the burden of [the bankruptcy court's] docket, (10) the likelihood that the commencement of the proceeding in bankruptcy court involves forum shopping by one of the parties, (11) the existence of a right to a jury trial, and (12) the presence in the proceeding of nondebtor parties. Id. at 1167.

For the reasons already discussed, and for other reasons that are hopefully obvious, this court finds the great preponderance of those Tucson elements are present here in favor of abstention concerning any issues involving standing of the Point Center estate to act as manager for Olive Avenue or South 7th.

To be clear, this court understands that the Arizona State Court only dealt with South 7th, but the court notes that Trustee faces the same hurdle of demonstrating standing with respect to Olive Avenue. The court believes that the reasoning by the Arizona State Court was sound and sees no reason why it would not also apply to Olive Avenue. Furthermore, the court does not wish to invite the possibility of inconsistent rulings, which again, would only add to the complexity of this case.

9. No Notice of the Motion to the Members of South 7th

Not surprisingly, Trustee did not provide notice of the Motion to any of the members of South 7th. Nor did Trustee provide any notice to the State Court Defendants. The Arizona Court found he was not the manager of South 7th, that the members previously voted in TAMCO to replace PCF as manager, and that Trustee has no standing to act on behalf of South 7th. Trustee has been adjudged a third party to South 7th with absolutely no authority to act on its behalf. At the very least Trustee should be required to provide notice to all members of South 7th of his efforts in the pending motion, together with ample opportunity for response, particularly on such a weighty issue as filing a voluntary liquidation petition in bankruptcy.

10. The Motion Is an Improper Attempt to Circumvent the Requirements of 11 USC§303

Finally, the Motion is an improper attempt by Trustee to circumvent the requirements of Section 303 (involuntary bankruptcy cases). Section 105 authorizes bankruptcy courts to take any action to enforce or implement court orders or rules or to prevent an abuse of process. See In re Elm Inn, Inc., 942 F.2d 630, 634 (9th Cir. 1991); In re Jacobsen, 378 B.R. 805 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2007), judgment aff'd, 609 F.3d 647. The broad powers conferred by Section 105(a) are consistent with the "traditional understanding" that bankruptcy courts are courts of equity to be exercised in a manner not inconsistent with the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. In re Gurney, 192 B.R. 529, 537 (9th Cir. 1996). "Bankruptcy courts, being courts established by Act of Congress, 'have the power to regulate vexatious litigation pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 105 and 28 U.S.C. § 1651.'" In re Stanwyck, 450 B.R. 181, 200 (C.D. Cal. 2011). Clearly, the Motion is Trustee's attempt to circumvent the Arizona Judgment and the Bankruptcy Code requirements, but in a manner that presumes he has authority to file voluntary petitions. His real goal is to collect money and so, if bankruptcy is the proper avenue at all (and the court makes no determination), he should file an involuntary petition within the requirements of §303.

Deny, but authorize involuntary petitions in accordance with the dictates of §303 if the Trustee determines that to be an appropriate remedy and statutory prerequisites are satisfied

#10.00 Motion To Compel Trustee's Abandonment Of Property Per 11 USC 554(B)
And FRBP 6007(B)

Docket 143

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/1/20:

This is the Debtor's Motion to Compel Trustee's Abandonment of Property. The motion is opposed by judgment creditor, Remares Global, LLC ("Remares") and the Chapter 7 Trustee, Richard Marshack ("Trustee").

1. Basic Facts

In 2012, Debtor set up §529 plans for his children German, Oleg and Vasilisa at Merrill Lynch in Aventura, FL by depositing $130,000 into each account. Debtor is the owner of the accounts and his children, Oleg, German and Vasilisa are the beneficiaries ("529 Funds"). On May 3, 2019, Remares filed its Florida sister-state judgment in Orange County Superior Court and judgment was entered in California in favor of Remares and against Debtor for $10,324,378.84. On August 15, 2019, Remares caused the California Court to issue a writ of execution.

On August 22, 2019, Remares filed a complaint against Olga Shabanets ("Ms. Shabanets") and Olga Shabanets as Trustee of 2012 Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Igor Shabanets, u/a/d November 12, 2012 ("Shabanets Trust"), Igor Shabanets, and Merrill Lynch, under California Code of Civil Procedure 3439.04 and 3439.05 to avoid fraudulent conveyances, initiating case number 30-2019-01092348-CU-NP-CJC in the Superior Court for the County of Orange ("State Court Action"). Chapter 7

September 17, 2019, Remares caused Debtor to be served with an ORAP issued by the Superior Court. On December 20, 2019, Remares filed its first amended complaint ("Complaint").

On December 21, 2019, Debtor filed a voluntary petition for bankruptcy under Chapter 11 initiating this bankruptcy case. On January 9, 2020, Remares filed a notice of removal of the State Court Action, initiating adversary proceeding number 8:20-ap-01002-TA ("Removed Action"). On February 7, 2020, after motion by Remares, the court entered an order instructing Merrill Lynch to deposit $3,033,215.05 into the bankruptcy court register ("Merrill Lynch Funds"). On February 10, 2020, defendants, Ms. Shabanets" and Shabanets Trust filed a Notice of Consent to Removal. Also, on February 10, 2020, as Dk. No. 72, the court entered an order converting the case to Chapter 7. On February 11, 2020, Richard A. Marshack ("Trustee") was appointed as the Chapter 7 trustee. Also, on February 11, 2020, defendants Ms. Shabanets, individually and in her capacity as the trustee of the Shabanets Trust, and Igor Shabanets (collectively "Defendants") filed an answer to the Removed Action.

On April 2, 2020, Trustee filed a notice of substitution of Trustee as party-in-interest for Remares because only the Trustee has standing to prosecute avoidance actions. On April 24, 2020, Trustee filed a stipulation with Merrill Lynch where it would be dismissed as a defendant from this adversary. The Court approved the stipulation, dismissing Merrill Lynch as a defendant on May 1, 2020. On May 8, 2020, Remares filed a complaint against the Trustee, Debtor, and Ms. Shabanets, seeking declaratory relief regarding the validity, priority, or extent of its alleged lien(s) on the interpleaded funds deposited with the Court in this case, initiating adversary proceeding number 8:20-ap-01079-TA ("Declaratory Relief Adversary"). On July 16, 2020, default was entered against Debtor, Ms. Shabanets individually, and Ms. Shabanets as trustee for the Shabanets Trust in the Declaratory Relief Adversary. On July 20, 2020, as Dk. No. 142, Debtor filed amended schedules, including an amended schedule of exemptions. Also, on

2. Abandonment?

There appears to be agreement among the parties that the 529 funds are not part of the Debtor's bankruptcy estate. Trustee in his opposition asserts that the motion is procedurally incorrect as he cannot be ordered to abandon property that is not property of the estate, and in that way, the motion does not make sense and should be denied. The analysis could stop there.

Furthermore, Remares persuasively argues that it has a lien on the 529 Funds. Remares asserts that it obtained liens on the 529 Funds, through its Florida and California bank levies and from personal service on Debtor of a California Order to Appear for Examination ("ORAP"). "Service of the ORAP on the judgment debtor creates an unenforceable lien in the debtor's nonexempt personal property, even without a levy on the property." In re Burns, 291 B.R. 846, 850 (2003 BAP 9th Cir.). "[T]he lien upon all nonexempt property is created at the time the judgment debtor is served with the notice of the examination." Id. "Service of the order creates a lien on the personal property of the judgment debtor for a period of one year from the date of the order unless extended or sooner terminated by the court." CCP § 708.110(d). "Section 708.110 does not specify which personal property is thereby encumbered, or whether the judgment debtor must have custody and control of the property, but it does provide that 'the lien on the judgment debtor's property attaches whether or not the property is described in the notice in sufficient detail to be reasonable identifiable.'" Id. Thus, Remares argues that it has a lien on the Merrill Lynch Funds.

Furthermore, Remares persuasively argues that Debtor has admitted that Remares has liens on the 529 Funds because default was entered against him in Remares' adversary complaint. In the complaint, Remares alleges it has liens on all of the Merrill Lynch Funds, including the 529 Funds.

Chapter 7

The complaint asks this court to determine the validity, extent and priority of Remares' liens. Debtor failed to answer, so default was entered against him. As a result of the default, the allegations in the complaint are deemed admitted. Remares also persuasively argues that Debtor cannot claim the 529 Funds exempt because they are not exempt under California law. While IRC §529 accounts may be exempt in Maine, as Debtor asserts, Debtor cannot use Maine exemptions because he filed his bankruptcy petition in California. "California has opted out of the federal exemption scheme." In re Gomez, 530 B.R. 751, 754 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2015) (See also CCP § 703.130). "As a consequence, unless preempted by federal law, it is California state law, and not federal law [nor law from the state of Maine], which defines a debtor's right to claim particular exemptions and the amount of those exemptions." Id. at 754. Thus, Debtor cannot use Maine law to claim the 529 Funds exempt. As one court noted, "at least 27 states have exempted section 529 savings accounts from levy by creditors. However, California is not one of those states." O'Brien v. AMBS Diagnostics, LLC, 246 Cal.App.4th 942, 949-950 (2016). In O'Brien it was argued, like Debtor in this case, that debtor's 529 funds were exempt. The O'Brien court held there is no California exemption for 529 Plans and added "we certainly cannot go one step further and create a brand-new exception from whole cloth, no matter how persuasive the policy reasons that might support it." Id. Accordingly, as argued by Remares, the 529 Funds are excluded from the Estate and Remares appears to have valid liens on all the Merrill Lynch Funds. Remares, therefore, requests that the court should release the funds to Remares.

3. Trustee's position

Trustee appears to mostly concur with Remares (except for turnover). Trustee asserts that the estate may abandon property to a third-party lienholder, in appropriate circumstances. "Following abandonment, 'whoever had the possessory right to the property at the filing of bankruptcy again reacquires that right." In re Dewsnup, 908 F.2d 588, 590 (10th Cir. 1990) (aff'd sub nom. Dewsnup v. Timm, 502 U.S. 410 (1992)) "The legislative history and weight of authority holds that abandonment to a third party with a possessory interest is entirely proper." In re First Magnus Financial Corp., 2008 WL 5101347 at *5 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2008).

Trustee argues that if abandonment is the correct procedural vehicle for the release of interpleaded funds claimed to be excepted from property of the estate under 11 U.S.C. § 541(b)(6), the court should determine whether Debtor, Remares, or any other party has a superior possessory right to the funds. Trustee suggests that because those competing interests are properly before the court in the Removed Action, the court should deny this Motion and adjudicate those interests solely in the context of the Removed Action. To do otherwise would potentially lead to inconsistent outcomes and would not conserve judicial efficiency by splitting the claims into competing adversary proceedings and contested matters.

4. Conclusion

The court agrees with the Trustee, though Remares does makes some compelling arguments. Perhaps somewhat tellingly, Debtor has not filed a reply to either of the oppositions. For the reasons asserted by Trustee, it appears that this motion is procedurally infirm because: 1. The 529 Funds are not property of the estate, so abandonment is not appropriate; 2. proceedings to determine the extent and validity of liens are to be pursued in adversary proceedings. See Fed. R. Bankr. Proc. 7001(2) and 3. there appears already to be a pending adversary proceeding in which these issues are joined, i.e. the Removed Action. Therefore, because it makes little sense and is procedurally suspect, the motion should be denied.

#12.00 Motion For Summary Judgment Re: Motion To Disallow Debtor's Claimed Homestead Exemption (Doc 64-68)

Docket 334

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/1/20:

This is Creditor, Pacific Western Bank's ("Pacific Western") Motion for Summary Judgment disallowing Debtor's Claimed Homestead Exemption. The motion is opposed by Debtor, Catherine Haretakis ("Debtor").

1. Background

The following facts are apparently undisputed:

A. Debtor's Loan Default.

In or about June 2006, Debtor and John A. Haretakis (together, "Borrowers") borrowed the original principal amount of $500,000.00 from Pacific Western (the "Loan"). Borrowers defaulted on the Loan in November 2010. Despite demand, Borrowers failed to cure their defaults. Accordingly, on May 27, 2011, Pacific Western filed its complaint against Debtor and John A. Haretakis for Breach of Promissory Note and Common Count (the "Complaint").

On June 21, 2011, Robert B. Grant ("Grant"), a business associate of Defendants, acquired title to certain real property located at 36575 Calle Puerta Bonita, Temecula, California 92592 (the "Temecula Property"), by Grant Deed from Aurora Loan Services LLC. RJN, Exh. 3. Concurrently with recording of that Grant Deed, a Deed of Trust securing a loan in the amount of $480,000.00 nominally to Grant was recorded against the Temecula Property (the "Temecula Deed of Trust"). RJN, Exh. 4. Notwithstanding that title to the Temecula Property was held in Grant's name and that Grant was the trustor under the Temecula Deed of Trust, Debtor testifies that she and her husband actually "owned" and maintained possession of the Temecula Property.

C. Pacific Western Obtains Judgment and Records a Riverside Abstract of Judgment.

On August 13, 2012, under its complaint Pacific Western obtained and now holds a final, non-appealable judgment against Debtor in the original principal amount of $474,593.91 (the "Judgment"). RJN, Exh. 5. On October 5, 2012, Pacific Western recorded its Abstract of Judgment in the Official Records of the County of Riverside (the "Official Records"). RJN, Exh. 6. Pacific Western recorded an Amended Abstract of Judgment in the Official Records on December 4, 2012. RJN, Exh. 7 (the "Abstract").

D. Grant Transfers the Temecula Property to Matthew

On May 2, 2016, a Quitclaim Deed was recorded transferring an interest in the Temecula Property from Grant to Matthew Haretakis, the Debtor's son. RJN, Exh. 8. Debtor has testified that she continued to live at the Temecula Property throughout until "we sold the Temecula Property" in September 2016. Haretakis Decl., ¶ 6.

E. The Debtor Never Recorded a Declaration of Homestead with respect to the Temecula Property.

The Debtor never held legal title to the Temecula Property, despite contending that she was the true owner. Additionally, the Debtor never recorded a declaration of homestead under California Code of Civil Procedure §704.910, et seq.

F. The Sale of the Temecula Property (Free of Pacific Western's Judgment Lien?)

On September 8, 2016, Matthew Haretakis sold the Temecula Property, as evidenced a Grant Deed on that date. RJN, Exh. 9. The sale consideration for the Temecula Property was $1,040,000. The lien created by Pacific Western's Abstract attached to any interest of Debtor in real property. Because the Temecula Property was titled in the name of Matthew Haretakis rather than in the name of Debtor (the true owner), however, Pacific Western did not receive any notice and did not receive any proceeds in partial satisfaction of its Judgment upon closing of this voluntary sale of the sale of the Temecula Property. Debtor has testified that $211,500 of the proceeds of sale of the Temecula Property were used for a down payment for purchase of a new residence located at 2665 Orange Vale Lane, Riverside CA (the "Riverside Property").

Matthew Haretakis, Debtor's son, acquired title to the Riverside Property by Grant Deed recorded in the Official Records on September 22, 2016 (RJN, Exh. 10), using some of the proceeds of the sale of the Temecula Property, as well as financing secured by a Deed of Trust recorded in the Official Records on the same day. RJN, Exh. 11 (the "Riverside Deed of Trust"). The Riverside Deed of Trust states that it secures payment of a note in the amount of $417,000.00, plus interest.

H. Matthew Haretakis Quitclaims his Interest in the Riverside Property to the Debtor.

By Quitclaim Deed executed and recorded on August 29, 2017, the day before the Debtor filed this bankruptcy case, Matthew Haretakis transferred his interest in the Riverside Property to the Debtor. RJN, Exh. 12. The Documentary Tax calculation on the Quitclaim Deed indicates that the transfer is a gift, and that the tax is $0 computed on the consideration or value of property conveyed. Pacific Western's Abstract now formally reflects of record on the title for the Riverside Property, since for the first time since 2016 Debtor appears of record on title. The amount of the Judgment, including post-judgment interest, but not including certain post-judgment fees and costs that have been incurred by Pacific Western in enforcing the judgment, was then in excess of $701,393.78.

I. The Debtor Files Bankruptcy and Asserts a Homestead Exemption in the Riverside Property.

The Debtor filed her petition for relief under chapter 11 on August 30, 2017, commencing the instant bankruptcy case. On September 13, 2017, the Debtor filed her Schedules and Statement of Financial Affairs. The Debtor's Schedule C refers to the Riverside Property as her residence and she claims an exemption of $175,000 pursuant to Cal. Code Civ. P. § 704.730. RJN, Exh. 13. In Schedule D, the Debtor lists the Pacific Western Judgment as a secured claim against the Riverside Property. RJN, Exh. 14. In an amended Schedule A, the Debtor lists the Property with an estimated value of $675,000. RJN, Exh. 15. The §341(a) Meeting of Creditors in this case was held and concluded on October 10, 2017.

J. Pacific Western Objects to the Debtor's Claim of Homestead Exemption in the Property.

On November 9, 2017, Pacific Western timely filed its motion objecting to the Debtors' claim of homestead exemption (Doc 64-68, the "Exemption Objection") pursuant to Rule 4003(b) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure ("FRBP"). The court has elected to coordinate the Exemption Objection with the adversary proceeding in which Pacific Western has objected to the Debtor's discharge (Adv. No. 8:17-ap-01240-TA).

K. The Debtor Converts to Chapter 7.

After Pacific Western filed its liquidating chapter 11 plan, the Debtor filed her motion to convert her chapter 11 case to a case under chapter 7. On November 28, 2018, the Court entered its order converting the case. (Doc 234). Thomas H. Casey (the "Trustee") was appointed as the chapter 7 trustee on December 14, 2018. (Doc 252).

"Abandonment Motion") with respect to the Riverside Property that is the subject of this Motion. In connection with the Abandonment Motion, the Trustee presented evidence that the Property's value was approximately $570,000 to $600,000. Pursuant to its order entered on May 9, 2019, the court granted the Abandonment Motion (Doc 275, the "Abandonment Order").

As the court understands the motion, and as summarized by Debtor, this motion has two aspects: (1) whether the Riverside Property was acquired with "non-exempt funds"; and (2) whether the Riverside Property was "acquired" after Pacific Western's judgment lien attached. Debtor has decided not to challenge the first issue. This is a pivotal point, as explained below. Thus, the second issue is the sole issue requiring resolution.

2. Summary Judgment Standards

FRBP 7056 makes FRCP 56 applicable in bankruptcy proceedings. FRCP 56(c) provides that judgment shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. FRCP 56(e) provides that supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein, and that sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit shall be attached thereto or served forthwith. FRCP 56(e) further provides that when a motion is made and supported as required, an adverse party may not rest upon mere allegations or denials but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. FRCP 56(f) provides that if the opposing party cannot present facts essential to justify its opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or continue the motion as is just.

A party seeking summary judgment bears the initial responsibility of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of material fact and establishing that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law as to those matters upon which it has the burden of proof. Celotex Corporation v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 2553 (1986); British Airways Board v. Boeing Co., 585 F.2d 946, 951 (9th Cir. 1978). The opposing party must make an affirmative showing on all matters placed in issue by the motion as to which it has the burden of proof at trial. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324. The substantive law will identify which facts are material. Only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2510 (1986). A factual dispute is genuine where the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party. Id. The court must view the evidence presented on the motion in the light most favorable to the opposing party. Id. If reasonable minds could differ on the inferences to be drawn from those facts, summary judgment should be denied. Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 157, 90 S. Ct. 1598, 1608 (1970).

3. Was the Riverside Property Acquired After Pacific Western's Judgment Lien Attached?

Under California law, a judgment debtor who uses non-exempt funds to purchase a new residence after the recording of an abstract of judgment is not entitled to a homestead exemption as against that prior judgment. SBAM Partners v. Cheng Miin Wang (2008) 164 Cal.App.4th 903. In SBAM Partners, the judgment debtor purchased a condominium more than two years after its judgment creditor recorded an abstract of judgment. SBAM Partners, 164 Cal.App.4th at 906. Approximately ten years later, the creditor renewed its judgment and commenced proceedings for an execution sale of the condominium. Id. The debtor claimed a homestead exemption, arguing that the abstract of judgment lien did not attach until the date of purchase, at which time the condominium was already a homestead because he moved in on the date the deed was recorded. Id., at 906-07, and n. 6. The debtor submitted no evidence that the condominium was purchased with exempt funds. Id., at 906. The creditor argued that a homestead could not be created for property acquired after recording of its abstract. Id., at 907. Essentially, the issue was, in the context of a simultaneous acquisition and effect of already recorded lien, which interest prevailed? The trial court entered an order compelling the sale and denying the debtor's exemption claim. Id. The California Court of Appeals affirmed the trial court's order. The appeals court undertook a thorough analysis of the relevant judgment lien (Cal. Code Civ. P. § 697.340) and exemption statutes (Cal. Code Civ. P. § 704.710(c)). Id. at 908-913. The SBAM Partners court first explained that the homestead character of property is determined as of the date of the attachment of the judgment lien. For after-acquired property, attachment occurs on the date of purchase (such that attachment of the judgment lien and (possible) creation of a homestead occur simultaneously). Id., at 908.

But the question of priority in SBAM Partners turned on a careful reading of the statutory scheme. Section 704.710(c) provides:

"Homestead" means the principal dwelling (1) in which the judgment debtor or the judgment debtor's spouse resided on the date the judgment creditor's lien attached to the dwelling, and (2) in which the judgment debtor or the judgment debtor's spouse resided continuously thereafter until the date of the court determination that the dwelling is a homestead. Where exempt proceeds from the sale or damage or destruction of a homestead are used toward the acquisition of a dwelling within the six-month period provided by Section 704.720, "homestead" also means the dwelling so acquired if it is the principal dwelling in which the judgment debtor or the judgment debtor's spouse resided continuously from the date of acquisition until the date of the court determination that the dwelling is a homestead, whether or not an abstract or certified copy of a judgment was recorded to create a judgment lien before the dwelling was acquired.

Critically, the SBAM Partners court noted that the Legislative Committee comment to §704.710 states that "subdivision (c) is intended to preclude a judgment debtor from moving into a dwelling after creation of a judgment lien or after a judgment levy in order to create an exemption." Id., at 908. Thus, under §704.710, there is no general homestead for an after-acquired dwelling, unless the debtor has used exempt proceeds from a prior homestead. Id., at 912 (italics added). The SBAM Partners court further held that if §704.710 were interpreted to provide an exemption for any after-acquired property, that would render superfluous the provision of subdivision (c) specifically allowing a homestead exemption on an after-acquired dwelling purchased with exempt proceeds. Id. The SBAM Partners court finally summarized its holding that §704.710 clearly does not allow a homestead exemption on property acquired after the recording of a judgment lien unless the property was purchased with exempt proceeds from a prior homestead. Id., at 912-13.

Here, the outcome seems clear. Debtor does not contest that she used non-exempt proceeds from the sale of the Temecula Property to purchase the Riverside Property. Thus, Pacific Western's lien at the very least attached immediately upon the Debtor's acquisition of her interest in the Riverside Property and is, therefore, not subject to a claim of homestead exemption by Debtor under SBAM Partners. This is correct without examining the rather more nuanced question of whether the judgment lien actually attached earlier than August 29, 2017 when Debtor went on title under the theory that she at all earlier times held the equitable interest as the true owners of both the Temecula and Riverside properties, which can also be encumbered by existing judgment liens. The critical point is that the Riverside Property was not acquired with exempt funds and is, therefore, not within the definition of "homestead" under California law as interpreted in SBAM Partners.

Moreover, Debtor's bankruptcy does not change the result under California Law. Pacific Western's abstract is not subject to Debtor's claim of homestead exemption on the after-acquired Riverside Property. As Pacific Western correctly argues, in applying the California statutory judicial lien and homestead exemption scheme in the lien avoidance context, the Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel has come to the same conclusion as that in SBAM Partners – a debtor is not entitled to a homestead exemption superior to a judgment lien on property the debtor acquired after recording of the judgment. In re Pederson, 230 B.R. 158 (9th Cir. BAP 1999). In Pederson, the debtor moved unsuccessfully to avoid a judgment lien against after acquired property on the ground that the lien impaired the debtor's claim of homestead exemption. The BAP reviewed applicable California law on attachment of a judgment lien (Cal. Code Civ. P. §§ 697.310(a), 697.340(a)) and determined that "the statutory language providing that the lien attaches to after-acquired property 'at the same time it is acquired' can only mean that the lien attaches simultaneously with the debtor's acquisition of the property." Pederson, 230 B.R. at 163. In the case of after-acquired property, the BAP held that the debtor never held an interest in the property and therefore never had a right to claim an exemption, before the lien attached. Id. Accordingly, the BAP ruled that the judgment lien was not avoidable under Bankruptcy Code section 522(f). Id. This result is consistent with SBAM Partners.

Thus, Pacific Western appears to be correct that under California Code of Civil Procedure §704.720 Debtor is not entitled to claim a homestead exemption for the Riverside Property, which was acquired with non-exempt funds after the recording of Pacific Western's Abstract.

4. Debtor's Equitable and Legal Defenses

Debtor argues that she is entitled to the "automatic homestead" of CCP §704.710 because she resided in the Riverside Property before Pacific

Western's lien attached. Debtor also argues that Pacific Western's citation to SBAM Partners is unpersuasive because of a critical distinction on the facts from the present case. In SBAM Partners, Debtor asserts, the judgment debtor, Wang, "purchased the condominium in question, located in Los Angeles County; he has resided there continuously since the date of purchase." (but not before). In other words, the debtor in SBAM Partners moved into the property, and commenced his residence, after acquiring title. By contrast, Debtor asserts that she has resided in the Riverside Property since September 2016, almost three years before it was first acquired in record title. But there are major flaws in Debtor's argument.

It is true she did not acquire record title of the Riverside property until August 29, 2017, one day before the bankruptcy filing. But SBAM Partners teaches that in a case of simultaneous acquisition of property and attachment of preexisting judgment lien, the contest goes in favor of the existing judgment creditor. So, stopping right there, Debtor loses, unless some distinction with a difference can be made from the fact she moved in before acquiring record title. No such distinction appears in this case, based on how the argument is framed. CCP §697.340(a) provides: "A judgment lien on real property attaches to all interests in real property in the county where the lien is created (whether present or future, vested or contingent, legal or equitable) that are subject to enforcement of the money judgment against the judgment debtor pursuant to Article 1 (commencing with Section 695.010) of Chapter 1 at the time the lien was created . . .". (italics added). CCP §697.340(b) provides: "If any interest in real property in the county on which a judgment lien could be created under subdivision (a) is acquired after the judgment lien was created, the judgment lien attaches to such interest at the time it is acquired." Debtor asserts that she moved into the Riverside Property in September 2016 and has resided there continuously to this date, as set forth in the Declaration of Catherine Haretakis. But even her argument that she had a preexisting equitable interest in the Riverside property that escaped the attachment of the judgment lien fails, as explained below.

Debtor argues that as a matter of law in California, a debtor need not own an interest in real property to claim a homestead exemption. In support of this contention, Debtor cites Broadway Foreclosure Investments, LLC v. Tarlesson, 184 Cal. App. 4th 931 (2010). The Court of Appeal affirmed the trial court's ruling that the property was Tarlesson's homestead because it was her principal dwelling where she resided when the judgment creditor's lien attached to the property and continuously thereafter. CCP §703.020 provides that the statutory exemptions "apply only to property of a natural person" The judgment creditor, Broadway, interpreted §703.020 to somehow imply a requirement of title ownership. The appellate court disagreed: "While [CCP] section 703.020 states that the statutory exemptions 'apply only to property of a natural person,' there is nothing that suggests 703.020 requires that a claimant own the property subject to a claim of exemption rather than merely possess it ." Id. at 937.

In reply, Pacific Western argues that Debtor's assertion that Pacific Western's abstract of judgment lien attached to the Riverside Property "on the day the Debtor acquired title" is wrong as a matter of law. Pacific Western argues that pursuant to California Code of Civil Procedure §697.340(a), Pacific Western's Abstract of Judgment lien attached to all interests of the Debtor in real property (not only legal title) held at the time the Abstract of Judgment was recorded, or thereafter. Pacific Western notes that Debtor quotes this statute but appears to miss its import. Pacific Western asserts that the judgment liens attach to "all interests" of a debtor in real property include not just interests of record, but all equitable interests as well. Daff v. Wallace (In re Cass), 476 B.R. 602, 616-17 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2012) aff'd 2013 WL 1459272 at *15 (a perfected judgment lien attaches to all a debtor's interests in real property, including equitable interests).

Debtor arguably held an equitable interest in the Riverside Property at the time of its purchase in 2016 even though not record title. In fact, Pacific Western points out that Debtor originally defended her homestead exemption claim on the grounds that she had an equitable interest in the Temecula

Property, which supported an automatic homestead exemption for that property. But none of this saves Debtor's homestead priority because indisputably Pacific Western's abstract was already of record even before acquisition of the Riverside property. The Debtor then argues that the proceeds of her voluntary sale of the Temecula Property were exempt. Pacific Western asserts that the Debtor herself described that equitable interest as follows:

The Debtor freely concedes that she and her husband were the de facto owners of the Temecula Property. They paid the mortgage and the property taxes. They resided in that property from the date it was acquired by Mr. Grant until the date their adult son, Matthew Haretakis, sold it. .Response, Doc 81, p. 6, ll. 6-9.

Based on the Debtor's "de facto" ownership of the Temecula Property, she held an equitable interest in that property. Response, at n. 3. Pacific Western asserts that Debtor held the exact same "de facto" ownership interest in the Riverside Property at the time it was acquired. Pacific Western points out that the Debtor admits in discovery responses that she held an interest in the Riverside Property prior to acquiring legal title:

The Respondent [Debtor] claims an interest in the Riverside Property because she is the holder of title. She also claims an interest because the funds used to purchase the Riverside Property came from the Temecula Property, in which the Debtor also claimed an interest, by reason of her supplying the down payment and reimbursing Mr. Grant for the monthly mortgage, insurance and tax payments, pursuant to the terms of the Funding Agreement and Installment Land Contract. Pacific Western next asserts that Debtor and her husband authorized Matthew Haretakis to sell the Temecula Property and Matthew Haretakis received $522,254.30 in net proceeds from that sale, for the benefit of the Debtor and her husband. Hennesay Decl., Exh. 2, p. 22 (Request for Admission Nos. 20 and 21.) Debtor and her husband were not holders of legal title to the Temecula Property, based on their "de facto" ownership interest, but still they apparently considered the proceeds of the sale of that property to be their own and used them to purchase the Riverside Property. The Respondent [Debtor] did not divest herself of the proceeds of Temecula. Matthew purchased Riverside and spent other sums in accordance with the Debtor and her husband's request. They considered the funds theirs, not Matthew's. Hennesay Decl., Exh. 1, p. 7-8 (Interrogatory No. 3 and Response re Paragraph 42); see also, Hennesay Decl., Exh. 2, p. 23 (Request for Admission No. 24).

In addition to funding the down payment for purchase of the Riverside Property, Debtor funded payment or paid directly the mortgage, tax and insurance payments for the Riverside Property from the time of its purchase by Matthew on behalf of the Debtor and her husband. Hennesay Decl, Exh. 3. When Matthew Haretakis ultimately transferred legal title to the Riverside Property to the Debtor, Pacific Western asserts, the transfer was made without any consideration (because the Debtor was already the "de facto" owner). Hennesay Decl., Exh. 2, p. 24 (Request for Admission No. 29 and Response). Thus, Pacific Western argues, the Debtor's interest in the Riverside Property is admittedly the very same "de facto" ownership interest she previously conceded and claimed was sufficient to support a claim of automatic homestead in the Temecula Property. That equitable ownership interest, however, is likely also sufficient to allow Pacific Western's Abstract of Judgment lien to attach at the time she acquired that interest at the time of acquisition of the Riverside Property. See Cass, 476 B.R. at 616-17, aff'd 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 4653, *46 (citing California Code of Civil Procedure §

Debtor's adoption of the losing argument in SBAM Partners remains unavailing. Debtor attempts to distinguish this case from SBAM Partners, by arguing that the Debtor moved into the Riverside Property and acquired an interest therein before legal title was transferred to her. However, as pointed out by Pacific Western, the debtor in SBAM Partners made a similar argument – claiming a homestead exemption and arguing that the abstract of judgment lien did not attach until the date of purchase, at which time the condominium was already a homestead because he moved in on the date the deed was recorded. SBAM Partners, at 906-07, and n. 6. The California Court of Appeals noted that the Legislative Committee Comment to California Code of Civil Procedure section 704.710 states, in part, that "[s]ubdivision (c) is intended to preclude a judgment debtor from moving into a dwelling after creation of a judgment lien or after levy in order to create an exemption." Id., at 908. (citing Legis. Com. com., Deering's Ann. Code Civ. Proc. (1998 ed.) § 704.710, p. 451.) The debtor argued that the "creation of a judgment lien" happened upon attachment of the lien to a particular property. The lien creditor in SBAM Partners argued that "creation" of the lien happened upon recording of the abstract of judgment. The California Court of Appeals resolved that question in favor of the lien creditor. A judgment lien on real property is created when the lien is recorded, not upon attachment to a particular property. Thus, California's automatic homestead statute precludes a judgment debtor from moving into a dwelling after an abstract of judgment has been recorded in order to create an exemption. Id., at 912-13.

Again, Debtor argues that this case is legally more similar to Tarlesson, 184 Cal.App.4th 931. However, as Pacific Western points out, while that case distinguishes the holding in SBAM Partners, Tarlesson itself, is also distinguishable from this case. For example, Tarlesson did not involve the after-acquired residence situation found here and in SBAM Partners. On the contrary, the debtor in Tarlesson had lived in the subject property for about 22 years by the time the judgment creditor acquired its judgment lien. Tarlesson, 184 Cal.App.4th at 938. Also, in Tarlesson, the judgment creditor argued that the debtor lost her right to claim a homestead exemption in property when she transferred title to a separate entity. Id., at 934.

Finally, Debtor questions the relevance of the BAP's holding in In re Pederson because that case occurred in the context of lien avoidance under §522(f). In re Pederson, despite the §522(f) context, is still relevant because it supports SBAM Partners, and because there will be no bankruptcy sale of the Riverside Property. Pacific Western argues that since the chapter 7 trustee has abandoned the bankruptcy estate's interest in the Riverside Property, there will be no bankruptcy court approved sale that would require a resolution of the Debtor's claim of homestead exemption.

As noted throughout, Pacific Western appears to have the law on its side based on undisputed facts of this case and the asserted case law. Debtor's arguments are decidedly less compelling and short on relevant legal authority. Thus, summary judgment in favor of Pacific Western is warranted.

However, the court notes that on these facts, it appears that the Temecula property could constitute a de facto homestead for Debtor and her husband as they possessed the Temecula property and apparently also paid the mortgage despite title in being in a 3rd party's name. This all apparently occurred prior to the existence of Pacific Western's judgment lien as it was recorded after Debtor went into possession. Thus, it seems that a fair argument could be made that at least some of the funds used to make the Riverside purchase would be exempt funds, thus fulfilling the provision found in the CCP §704.720(b) 6-month safe harbor. However, for reasons unknown to the court, the concluding paragraph in Debtor's opposition concedes that the funds used to purchase the Riverside Property are non-exempt, which effectively seals off that argument.

5. Other Arguments

Chapter 7

Debtor makes a few unpersuasive arguments that are out of place in a summary judgment motion. Debtor complains that Pacific Western is abandoning old legal arguments and asserting new ones. Debtor fails to cite any authority suggesting that this is an improper practice in this context, such that the court is or should be obliged to ignore the new arguments. Similarly, Debtor argues the doctrine of laches because of Pacific Western's delay in pursuing this new line arguments, to Debtor's detriment. Again, Debtor's argument is not supported by authority, but simply asserted. In an apparent attempt to show detrimental change in position supporting a laches or estoppel argument Debtor argues that she might have changed her exemptions to utilize a "wildcard" had she known of Pacific Western's theory. She also argues that the trustee might have filed a preference action instead of merely an abandonment of the Riverside property. Neither argument is the least persuasive. On preference, we do not know why the trustee chose to abandon the property instead of suing to avoid the abstract of Pacific Western's judgment. It might well be because the Trustee did the arithmetic and concluded that it made no economic sense considering the purported value of the Riverside property and senior liens, or it might have been because of the doctrine described in the Cass case which holds that the lien was actually placed on the "de facto" interest well before the 90 days described in §547(b)(4)(A) and therefore one of the elements of a preference theory was missing. Even less persuasive is the argument that somehow a refinement of Pacific Western's theory in opposing the homestead prejudiced Debtor. No authority is cited for this theory that earlier recitation of all the underpinnings of one's argument is necessary such that the opponent has plenty of time to choose her ground. The contest over the exemption has been known for quite a while and the Debtor does not convincingly explain how she was misled to her detriment in any wrongful way. Lastly, Debtor is just not a sympathetic party on equitable arguments when, seen from a certain perspective, all these machinations were nothing more than a failed

Tentative for 7/15/20:

Creditor Al Hassas/Sweet Lemons, LLC ("Creditor") moves for an order approving a Settlement Agreement between Creditor and Debtor in the voluntary chapter 13 case. The approval of this motion would result in the dismissal of the Debtor's chapter 13 bankruptcy. Trustee filed an opposition on 6/25/20. Trustee argues that the Settlement Agreement, if approved, should not involve dismissal of the chapter 13 and all payments should be disbursed by the Trustee. Additionally, Trustee requests the Creditor amend their proof-of-claim in accordance with the agreement and Debtor amend the plan to establish the appropriate class or subclass for treatment of the creditor in accordance with the agreement.

On 7/1/2020, Debtor filed a reply to the opposition. She argues the conditions requested by the Trustee would only result in a default on the Settlement Agreement. The agreement states a third-party has agreed to pay the monthly payment straight to the Creditor. Debtor argues if the payments must go through the Trustee for distribution to the Creditor there is too much room for error and the possibility of default is much higher, thus, putting a greater burden on the Debtor. Additionally, Debtor argues if the payments are made to the Trustee this would structurally alter the terms of the agreement and since the payments go beyond the five-year term of the bankruptcy plan, the Trustee could not fully satisfy the entirety of the agreement transitioning it into default.

Creditor and Debtor filed replies to the Trustee's opposition arguing that the Jevic-like settlement in contrast does not violate the priority scheme set forth in the Bankruptcy Code. See Czyzewski v. Jevic Holding Corp. 137 S. Ct. 973, 979 (2017). Additionally, they argue settlement would allow for the Debtor to begin a "fresh start" moving forward after dismissal. Finally, Creditor argues every prong in the four-prong fair classification test found in In re Benner, 146 B.R. 265, 266 (D. Montana 1992) has been satisfied. But Benner is a separate classification case, not a dismissal case.

Under 11 U.S.C § 105, the court holds the power over the case to approve, dismiss, or deny the motion to approve Settlement Agreement. Here, the motion falls within the scope of § 105 and the court holds power over this action. FRBP 9019 allows for the compromise or settlement of claims and controversies by the Creditor, Debtor, and Trustee following notice and a hearing. In order for the court to approve a proposed settlement the court should consider the following factors, as discussed in In re Woodson: 839 F.2d 610,620 (9th Cir. 1988), citing. Martin v. Kane (In re A & C Properties), 784 F.2d 1377, 1380-81 (9th Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Martin v. Robinson, --- U.S. ----, 107 S. Ct. 189, 93 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1986).

"(a) The probability of success in the litigation; (b) the difficulties, if any, to be encountered in the matter of collection; (c) the complexity of the litigation involved, and the expense, inconvenience and delay necessarily attending it; (d) the paramount interest of the creditors and a proper deference to their reasonable views in the premises."

Here, (a) the probability of success in the Creditor's allegedly nondischargeable claim against the Debtor should be regarded as high. This would further burden the Debtor and have the likelihood of never creating an effective reorganization plan; (b) the agreement between the parties has taken place over that last several months with a full merger clause and understanding of each parties' obligations. The Debtor has secured a third-party, who has agreed to the terms and will satisfy all the required payments. (c) The complexity of the situation is straightforward enough. Debtor lost a civil suit to the Creditor who holds the majority debt against the Debtor. The cost of litigation would significantly decrease the total amount in the estate, diminishing the ability to pay not only the Creditor as agreed but any remaining unsecured claims.

But the main issue arises under the last Woodson factor: "the paramount interest of the creditors . . ." that is creditors, plural. The agreement is solely between the Debtor and one Creditor. It fails to take into consideration or even discuss any other creditors who must be treated within the reorganization plan. Understandably, Creditor holds almost 90% of the total debt, but all other creditors must also be considered when approving such a motion, particularly one involving a dismissal. Approving the Settlement Agreement should be a compromise which is "fair and equitable" to all parties involved. (italics added) In re A & C Properties, 784 F.2d at 1381. The agreement focuses solely on questions of Creditor's and Debtor's concerns but fails to consider at all any other creditors.

The court is not indifferent to the Debtor's fresh start nor to her difficulty in handling a non-dischargeable obligation, nor is the court indifferent to the administrative cost savings to the reorganization effort. All are good points, but the movants fail to convince that these points cannot be handled within the context of a Chapter 13 plan. The fact that payments might continue past the five years is hardly an insuperable impediment. The plan can acknowledge the non-dischargeable nature of the obligation and acknowledge that at the end of term the payments will have to go on since the discharge otherwise generally applicable under the plan will not affect this obligation. The Trustee need not be involved after the end of the term. So, no good reason is given to abandon all other creditors in order to further the convenience of just two parties.

Deny as requested. Suggest continuance for re-draft.

It appears that nothing has changed since last we met on this subject and the contemnor is as defiant as ever. Interestingly, he apparently now refuses to testify as to the disposition of the money rather than "double down" on any of his previous stories or those reported from his brother. Trustee requests that an inference be drawn from this blanket refusal. The court will hear argument on that point and how it affects continuing contempt. The court took some hope from our last meeting that the debtor actually wanted to testify, to make clear that his impossibility defense had merit. But no, nothing has changed, apparently. But this is also true regarding the pandemic so, absent a violation of furlough terms, the status quo should continue until the earlier of a purging of the contempt or a lifting of the danger from the virus. The court repeats verbatim below the tentative decision from its September 14, 2017 hearings because, regrettably, nothing or almost nothing has changed. For those earlier hearings and conferences the court wrote:

"This is the continued status conference regarding Mr. Gharib's ongoing contempt, purging the contempt and/or regarding the defense of impossibility. At the last status conference June 16, 2016 the court continued the matter until August 24, 2016. In the meantime the Trustee filed a motion for continuance until September 14 and, in turn, Mr. Gharib on August 15 filed a "Motion to Dismiss Sanction Order Due to Impossibility to Comply..." which was not set for separate hearing, but is construed as part of the ongoing issue of the impossibility defense. Mr. Gharib has been in custody under this court's order since May of 2015.

It is clear that the contemnor has the burden of proving impossibility. But Mr. Gharib has cited Falstaff Brewing Corp. v. Miller Brewing Co., 702 F. 2d 770 (9th Cir. 1983) for the proposition that impossibility is a complete defense, even if self-induced. Id. at 779-82 n. 7 quoting United States v. Rylander, 656 F. 2d 1313, 1318 n. 4 (9th Cir. 1981). As the Trustee has argued, this authority is somewhat dubious since the discussion in Falstaff is in dicta and one of the authorities relied upon by the Falstaff court, United States v. Rylander, was later overturned in United States v. Rylander, 460 U.S. 752, 103 S. Ct. 1548 (1983). Further, on the very question before us, i.e. the question of self-induced impossibility, the Ninth Circuit has ruled subsequently to Falstaff in Federal Trade Commission v. Affordable Media, LLC, 179 F. 3d 1228 (9th Cir 1999) that self-induced impossibility, particularly in the asset protection trust context, is not a defense to civil contempt or at least that the contemnor's burden of proof on the point is very high. Id. at 1239-41. Instead, the contemnor must still prove "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to comply. Id. at 1241 citing Rylander, 460 U.S. at 757, 103 S. Ct. 1548. Moreover, on that point and in that context the court is justified in maintaining a healthy skepticism, as did the Affordable Media court. Id. at 1242. See also In re Marciano, 2013 WL 180057*5 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 17, 2013); In re Lawrence, 251 B.R. 630, 651-52 (S.D. Fla. 2000); United States v. Bright, 2009 WL 529153*4-5 (Feb. 27, 2009).

Here, with even a mild degree of skepticism it is sufficient to find that Mr. Gharib has not met his burden of proving "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to purge the contempt. While this is not exactly an asset protection trust context as in Affordable Media, we have a near cousin of this phenomenon, i.e. multiple transfers to apparent sham corporations. As near as the court can understand it, Mr. Gharib argues that he has had no access or control over any funds since losing all of the $11.9 million+ he claimed under penalty of perjury to own in November 2012 in filings made with this court. In previous briefs some of the subject proceeds from the Hillsborough sale were traced by the Trustee into two previously unidentified corporations, Office Corp and D Coffee Shop. In response to this evidence and in Mr. Gharib's own words:

"In March of 2015, foreigner [sic] investors decided to terminate their contract and business with Gharib. Foreigner investors demanded and instructed Gharib to close all bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp and Hayward Corporation in Bank of America and transfer the remaining balance to Office Corp. Gharib followed foreigner investors demand and instruction and he closed both bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp in Bank of America. The remaining balance of approximately six hundred thousand dollars was transferred to Office Corp per foreigner investors' demand and instruction. Gharib never was the owner of funds or shareholder of Office Corporation. Gharib has no knowledge who owned stocks of Office Corp and foreigner investors never revealed to Gharib either. Shortly after, Gharib was detained in May 2015. While Gharib was in custody, trustee subpoenaed Office Corp bank account in Bank of America (see exhibit "26 and 27"). Office Corp's bank statements show the authorized signer was Mrs. Firouzabadi. Approximately three hundred thousand dollars of funds in that account was spent in a variety of items and the remaining funds were transferred to D Coffee Shop Corp (see exhibit "26"). Trustee also subpoenaed D Coffee Shop Corporation bank account in Bank of America (See exhibit "28" and "29"). D Coffee Shop Corp's bank statements show Mr. Rushtabadi was authorized signer and the remaining balance in D Coffee Shop Corp's account was spent in variety of items, and nothing left over in that account as of December 2015, 8 months ago. for what purpose the funds were spent in both Office Corp and D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was incarcerated during that period (May to December 2015). Gharib has no information as to identity of stock holder of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was not part of any of the above Corporations in any way or shape... Gharib did not have any interest or ownership in any of the above corporations at all. It is undisputable that that all funds (whether proceed of sales of Hillsborough or Foreigner investors' money) in both corporations were spent and gone (definitely not by Gharib)...."

Gharib's "Motion to Dismiss..." filed August 15, 2016 at pp. 4-5

Since the last hearing the Trustee has been unable to find or subpoena Mr. Rushtabadi, Gharib's brother. That a brother would be apparently so indifferent to Mr. Gharib's ongoing incarceration so as to offer his assistance or at least testimony is by itself rather noteworthy, particularly since Mr. Rushtabadi does know of the incarceration and makes telephone calls at Gharib's behest. But the Trustee was able to depose Ms. Firouzabadi August 26, 2016 [See Trustee's Exhibit "4"]. From her testimony it develops that she had a romantic relationship with Gharib allegedly ending in about 2014 and that, believing he was a successful businessman, she trusted him and allowed him to use her signature on various items and documents on things she apparently does not understand. [Transcript p. 57, line 16-19]. But, importantly, she testified she had absolutely no knowledge of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop corporations or of any transfers therefrom [Transcript p. 75, line 6-7] and identified that her purported signature on several of said corporations' papers offered as exhibits by the Trustee were forgeries. [Transcript at p. 56, line 1-17] Interestingly, she also testified that Mr. Rushtabadi, the brother, requested by telephone just before the deposition that she leave the country. [Transcript pp. 22-23] Why she should leave her home on such short notice at Mr. Rushtabadi's request was not clarified but the implication is pretty clear, to avoid service just as Mr. Rushtabadi has reportedly done (at least so far).

In sum, the court is even less persuaded than before that Mr. Gharib does not have continuing access to funds and the ability to control funds, suing various shills, to purge the contempt either in part or in whole. His stories about what happened to the Hillsborough proceeds, about phantom investments in Iranian real estate, unnamed "foreigner investors" and the like, have absolutely no substance or corroboration and defy all credibility. The few details offered have proven to be either outright lies or very suspect, at best. In sum, Mr. Gharib's burden of proving impossibility has not been carried."

The only developments that could be construed as "new" do not help the contemnor's case. The Trustee now reports that his investigation reveals that the contemnor's brother, Steven Rushtabadi, has depleted all of the remaining money from the account maintained by D Coffee Shop Corporation's (a subsequent transferee from Office Corporation, itself a transferee from the debtor) at Bank of America in a series of over-the-counter withdrawals, presumably in cash. For a few weeks between January 11 through February 26, 2016 (See, Exhibits "2" and "3" to Trustee's Declaration) these withdrawals are supported by video evidence of Mr. Rushtabadi receiving the cash. But it appears that the incremental depletion of the account has actually gone on for months earlier in cash withdrawal amounts alternating between $4500 and $3500. Exhibit "1." But the court notes that all withdrawals appear to be below the regulatory threshold of $10,000. The contemnor argues that it is impossible now to comply with the court's order because he is indigent and has no control over either his brother's or Ms. Firouzabadi's activities (or funds). The contemnor correctly points out that many of these transfers occurred after he was confined. But the court is not so naïve as to believe that transfers to corporations ostensibly controlled by a one-time girlfriend and a brother necessarily means that the contemnor has no ongoing control. At the very least it is the contemnor's burden to prove this to be the case and that burden is manifestly not carried here. The simple fact that Mr. Rustabadi refuses to cooperate by giving testimony, either in response to the Trustee's subpoenas or, conspicuously, even in support of his own brother's testimony which might relieve contemnor's incarceration, renders this whole line of excuse very dubious. Equally dubious is the argument that because the contemnor has allegedly not formally communicated with either the girlfriend or the brother in several months according to the contemnor's declaration and the records of the Metropolitan Detention Center, this must mean he has no ongoing control. But the court declines to take such an inference. Even less persuasive is the argument that the District Court has approved an in forma pauperis waiver of fees; all this means is that someone at the District Court believes what contemnor has said in an application, not that it is necessarily true. Rather, absent some more compelling and direct evidence to the contrary (such as declarations from Mr. Rustabadi or Ms. Firouzabadi), the court is more inclined to believe the more plausible scenario; i.e. the transfers from debtor to Office Corporation and then to corporations controlled by such close relatives or friends, were not mere coincidences, but were designed to camouflage the contemnor's ongoing control. Also disturbing is the Trustee's point made in page 5 of his Opposition: i.e. that several properties which contemnor claims were foreclosed upon as evidence of his indigence were actually transferred to a corporation, Las Vegas Investment, Inc., ostensibly controlled by the brother, Mr. Rushtabadi, using the name Steven Rush. If true this is yet further evidence that contemnor continues to control his investments using his brother as a shell. In sum, the court sees even less reason to find that impossibility has been proven.

Foreigner investors demanded and instructed Gharib to close all bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp and Hayward Corporation in Bank of America and transfer the remaining balance to Office Corp. Gharib followed foreigner investors demand and instruction and he closed both bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp in Bank of America. The remaining balance of approximately six hundred thousand dollars was transferred to Office Corp per foreigner investors' demand and instruction. Gharib never was the owner of funds or shareholder of Office Corporation. Gharib has no knowledge who owned stocks of Office Corp and foreigner investors never revealed to Gharib either. Shortly after, Gharib was detained in May 2015. While Gharib was in custody, trustee subpoenaed Office Corp bank account in Bank of America (see exhibit "26 and 27"). Office Corp's bank statements show the authorized signer was Mrs. Firouzabadi. Approximately three hundred thousand dollars of funds in that account was spent in a variety of items and the remaining funds were transferred to D Coffee Shop Corp (see exhibit "26"). Trustee also subpoenaed D Coffee Shop Corporation bank account in Bank of America (See exhibit "28" and "29"). D Coffee Shop Corp's bank statements show Mr. Rushtabadi was authorized signer and the remaining balance in D Coffee Shop Corp's account was spent in variety of items, and nothing left over in that account as of December 2015, 8 months ago. Gharib has no information why and for what purpose the funds were spent in both Office Corp and D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was incarcerated during that period (May to December 2015). Gharib has no information as to identity of stock holder of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was not part of any of the above Corporations in any way or shape... Gharib did not have any interest or ownership in any of the above corporations at all. It is undisputable that that all funds (whether proceed of sales of Hillsborough or Foreigner investors' money) in both corporations were spent and gone (definitely not by Gharib)...."

Gharib's "Motion to Dismiss..." filed August 15, 2016 at pp. 4-5

Since the last hearing the Trustee has been unable to find or subpoena Mr. Rushtabadi, Gharib's brother. That a brother would be apparently so indifferent to Mr. Gharib's ongoing incarceration so as to not offer his assistance or at least testimony is by itself rather noteworthy, particularly since Mr. Rushtabadi does know of the incarceration and makes telephone calls at Gharib's behest. But the Trustee was able to depose Ms. Firouzabadi August 26, 2016 [See Trustee's Exhibit "4"]. From her testimony it develops that she had a romantic relationship with Gharib allegedly ending in about 2014 and that, believing he was a successful businessman, she trusted him and allowed him to use her signature on various items and documents on things she apparently does not understand. [Transcript p. 57, line 16-19]. But, importantly, she testified she had absolutely no knowledge of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop corporations or of any transfers therefrom [Transcript p. 75, line 6-7] and identified that her purported signature on several of said corporations' papers offered as exhibits by the Trustee were forgeries. [Transcript at p. 56, line 1-17] Interestingly, she also testified that Mr. Rushtabadi, the brother, requested by telephone just before the deposition that she leave the country. [Transcript pp. 22-23] Why she should leave her home on such short notice at Mr. Rushtabadi's request was not clarified but the implication is pretty clear, to avoid service just as Mr. Rushtabadi has reportedly done (at least so far).

In sum, the court is even less persuaded than before that Mr. Gharib does not have continuing access to funds and the ability to control funds, using various shells, to purge the contempt either in part or in whole. His stories about what happened to the Hillsborough proceeds, about phantom investments in Iranian real estate, unnamed "foreigner investors" and the like, have absolutely no substance or corroboration and defy all credibility. The few details offered have proven to be either outright lies or very suspect, at best. In sum, Mr. Gharib's burden of proving impossibility has not been carried.

Deny motion to dismiss. Continue for further evaluation conference.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

Debtor filed an amended motion for use of cash collateral on 4/1/20. Unfortunately, this amended motion is likely untimely because there is nearly no time for any other party to respond before the hearing date on 4/8. In any case, the new amended motion does not appear to address Banc of California's objections to continued use of cash collateral. Therefore, the amended motion should be continued to allow creditors, including Banc of California, adequate time to respond. In the meantime, Debtor should answer Banc of California's allegations of misusing cash collateral.

#12.00 Motion to Use Cash Collateral
(cont'd from 8-05-20)

Docket 5

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/2/20:

Continue on same terms and condition through October 14, 2020 to coincide with confirmation hearing.

Tentative for 8/5/20:

This is an oft-continued request for use of cash collateral. As the court recalls, there is only a very marginal slice of equity in the collateral. The court has repeatedly stated (starting in November) that status quo cannot be expected to last indefinitely, and the tentative from last time (5/27) said one last extension would be granted. But the court observes now that somehow confirmation of the plan has moved to September 2. The June MOR shows a dwindling cash balance. To exacerbate the court's concern, no further status report is offered, although Ms. Altieri does file a declaration suggesting that everything is unfolding more or less as expected, with only a temporary lull in rental payments due to the pandemic. Unless the secured creditor is willing to go along further the court sees little encouragement on this record or reason to continue the use beyond September 2. So, despite the court's earlier admonition we should continue on the same basis until the continued confirmation hearing, but further continuances of that date should not be expected and, if sought, had better include the secured creditor's acquiescence as it may be without further use of cash collateral. It probably also goes without saying that the proposed plan should be the very best possible as further time is not assured.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, the court encourages telephonic

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/27/20:

This is the hearing on confirmation of debtor's plan. It is opposed in objections filed by two creditors.

A. Bryson

The first objection comes from judgment creditor from Class 2E, Stephanie Bryson ("Bryson"). Bryson obtained a judgment against Debtor in the amount of $270,658.85. Bryson has liens on two properties located in Massachusetts, the Chandler property and the Adams property. The Chandler property was valued at $775,000 (though Bryson values it at $795,000). The Adams property was valued at $978,300 (Bryson values it at $1,240,000).

The plan proposes to pay off debt of $330,386.91 (as of 10/22/19) over a period of 180 months, with monthly "interest only" payments of $1,376.61, then a balloon payment of $330,386.91 at the end of the plan.

Bryson argues that the plan does not satisfy the best interest of creditors test. Bryson does not believe that the Debtor's liquidation analysis is accurate, due partly to the undervaluing of the encumbered properties. If Bryson's fair market valuations are used instead of Debtor's, then the result is a net positive instead of negative. Bryson concedes that after administrative costs were factored in a chapter 7 liquidation there would still be nothing left for unsecured creditors, whereas the current plan provides for at least some recovery for unsecured creditors. Despite this fact, Bryson argues that the plan still cannot be considered fair and equitable.

Specifically, Bryson argues that the 5% interest rate contemplated in the plan is not adequate to account for the risks involved. Bryson is not a lender and her Massachusetts judgment accrues interest at 12% per year. Bryson asserts that she could foreclose on the Massachusetts properties, which would pay the judgment debt in full. Bryson asserts that the plan also has feasibility issues, and the interest rate must be adjusted to account for that risk.

Bryson asserts that the plan relies on rental income from two properties in Massachusetts. Any unplanned or prolonged vacancy throws the plan into doubt. Furthermore, Bryson asserts that Debtor's financial history suggests that her projected income is optimistic to say the least. The properties are also old and may need repairs over the life of the plan. Those repairs could come at significant cost, which again, would jeopardize the plan. The supplement to the Bryson opposition states that Debtor is including a $16,000 annual bonus from her employer, Clean Energy. However, it appears that the bonus will be in the form of stock, not cash. Thus, Bryson concludes that the plan is simply not feasible and should not be confirmed. Not raised by Bryson, but of concern to the court, is what happens at the end of 180 months on the balloon? One imagines that the debtor will either refinance or sell, but the prospect of so doing should at least be explained. Interest-only, non-amortizing lien treatments are inherently riskier than fully amortizing. This is because the creditor is never put in a position of comfort on its principal, but always hangs on the precipice. There may be a further complication here in that Massachusetts rate of interest on judgment liens is reported to be 12%, which means that the balance will actually increase over time, unless it is intended that the cramdown rate supplant the state judgment rate. That point needs clarification and briefing.

This is not inherently unconfirmable, but the fundamental precept is that the risks imposed must be fully paid. In the court's view, 5% is too low to accomplish "present value" under §1129(b)(2)(A) considering this point and that Bryson appears to be in second position, with little or no cushion. See In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Debtor argues for the prime plus approach found in Till and argues that North Valley Mall is distinguishable. But her argument is not convincing. What is the principled difference between a judgment lien and a defaulted loan? They are both 'allowed secured claims' and that is what the Code requires be given present value if paid over time. Debtor confuses resort to market data to help analyze what is present value (an economic concept informed by data) with the fact that most data available happens to originate in the loan marketplace. That is because lenders consult varied data when deciding whether to extend credit, and many factors such as collateral value and creditworthiness go into the analysis. That is a process done before the fact. But that does not change the fact that both are secured claims being paid over time so their origin seems immaterial after the fact where the court in cramdown analysis is asked to make a determination of factors in situations where no real market exists. Even if the court could be persuaded that the Till approach (which was after all about a truck loan and seemingly even less relevant) were correct, a 1.75% adjustment is still way too low.

B. U.S. Bank National Association

The real property that is the subject of this Objection is located at 33 Chandler Street, Newton, MA 02458 (the "Property"). Creditor holds a security interest in the Property as evidenced by a Note and Mortgage executed by the Debtor. Said Note and Mortgage are attached to Creditor's proof of claim (the "Proof of Claim") which was filed in the instant case as Claim No. 5-1.

Chapter 11

The Proof of Claim provides for a secured claim in the amount of $590,127.29. This amount has increased since the petition date as interest has accrued and Creditor has made post-petition escrow advances to protect its interest in the Property. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is $617,465.04. Creditor's claim is treated in the Plan under Class "2B." The Plan provides that the Debtor will pay Creditor's claim the amount of $590,127.29, over 360 months (30 years) at 4.625% interest, with equal monthly payments of $3,034.08.

The Plan fails to provide for maintenance of property insurance and timely payment of property taxes. The Plan should specify whether Debtors intend to maintain property insurance and tax payments directly or through establishment of an escrow account with Creditor. Creditor has advanced approximately $7,597.52 for post-petition property taxes on account of the Property. The Plan does not provide for reimbursing Creditor for such advances which were made post-petition for the benefit of the estate. Such advances qualify as administrative expenses and must be cured on or before the effective date of the plan.

The Plan indicates that the value of the Property is $775,000.00. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is $617,465.04. The plan provides for a total secured claim in the reduced amount of $590,127.29. As the plan fails to provide for the full amount of Creditor's secured claim, Debtor's Plan cannot be confirmed as is, and the portion that is payable as an administrative claim must be dealt with.

C. Conclusion

The objections raise some good points regarding feasibility. According to Bryson, Debtor's own financial data demonstrate that she will not be able to make good on the plan payments. This plan appears to have a very (perhaps overly) optimistic outlook on Debtor's finances. Further, expenditures that may be necessary are not addressed at all, like insurance, maintenance, and the fact that there may be a $7597.52 administrative claim.

Debtor points out that Bryson has not provided any analysis as to what the appropriate interest rate would be. Debtor also points out that under the plan, unsecured creditors get at least some recovery, whereas in a liquidation, they would receive nothing. While, of course, the court wants unsecured creditors to get something, this does not substitute for the fact that it is debtor's burden to prove not only feasibility, but that cramdown treatment is providing the present value of the objecting secured claims and that this plan is better than liquidation. This has not been done. Furthermore, Debtor asserts that the First Amended Plan provides that all secured creditors encumbering the Rental Properties will receive deferred cash payments totaling the allowed amount of their claims while retaining their liens on the Rental Properties. But this assertion is devoid of analysis and, on a true present value basis, probably wrong. As Debtor's plan seems to be premised on everything going as planned over the 15 (or even thirty) years of this Chapter 11 plan, with little or no wiggle room, and while not even apparently dealing with all likely expenses, the court requires Debtor to answer Bryson's concerns about feasibility. Given the current economic climate, Debtor should account for the realistic probability of sustained occupancy in the rental properties as well as her own employment prospects.

No tentative. Continue for approximately 30 days to afford one final opportunity to fill in the gaps.

Please be advised that CourtCall has announced reduced fees for attorneys to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through April 30, 2020.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

The purpose of a disclosure statement is "to give all creditors a source of information which allows them to make an informed choice regarding the approval or rejection of a plan." Duff v. U.S. Trustee (In re California Fidelity, Inc.), 198 B.R. 567, 571 (9th Cir. BAP 1996). "Adequate information" is defined under 11 U.S.C. Sec. 1125(a)(1) as "information of a kind, and in sufficient detail, as far as is reasonably practicable in light of the nature and history of the debtor and the condition of the debtor's books and records, that would enable a hypothetical reasonable investor typical of holders of claims or interest of the relevant class to make an informed judgment about the plan, but adequate information need not include such information about any other possible or proposed plan."

Bryson's objections notwithstanding (though feasibility seems questionable), the DS appears to provide adequate information. It is also worth noting that the DS has not drawn any other opposition. The plan may ultimately not be confirmable if feasibility proves too speculative, as it very well might be given the current economic climate, or if cramdown is attempted and the value of the rental properties is too low as Bryson has alleged, suggesting that creditors will do better in a liquidation (the so-called best interest of creditors test). Debtor will have the burden on these issues in order to achieve confirmation, but at this stage, the DS does not appear deficient from an information standpoint, especially with the detailed risk factors analysis.

Grant. Set confirmation date and deadlines.

Docket 29

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/3/20:
See #4.

Tentative for 3/5/20:

This is the Plaintiff's motion for "Temporary Abstention" and for stay of the pending litigation in favor of a proceeding in Washington State Court. Oddly, the motion is not brought for permissive abstention under 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c) but rather under the court's "inherent power to regulate their dockets and should use it to stay litigation pending resolution of another case or arbitration proceeding where it will dispose of or narrow the issues to be resolved in that litigation." In re Barney's Inc., 206 B.R. 336, 343-44 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1997). As near as the court can determine, the standards are largely the same.

It is well established that a federal court has "broad discretion to stay proceedings as an incident to its power to control its own docket." Clinton v. Jones, 520 U.S. 681, 706-707, 117 S. Ct. 1636 (1997); see also Landis v. North American Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254-255, 57 S. Ct. 163, 166 (1936) ("[T]he power to stay proceedings is incidental to the power inherent in every court to control the disposition of the causes on its docket with economy of time and effort for itself, for counsel, and for litigants. Welgrow International, Inc.*, 954 F.Supp. 101, 103-105 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (authorized stay in federal proceedings pending disposition of related foreign action).

The Ninth Circuit has enumerated factors a bankruptcy court should weigh when it considers whether to permissively abstain from hearing a matter before it. See Christiansen v. Tucson Estates, Inc. (In re Tucson Estates, Inc.), 912 F.2d 1162, 1167 (9th Cir. 1990). Those factors include: (1) the effect or lack thereof on the efficient administration of the estate if a Court recommends abstention,(2) the extent to which state law issues predominate over bankruptcy issues, (3) the difficulty or unsettled nature of the applicable law, (4) the presence of a related proceeding commenced in state court or other non-bankruptcy court, (5) the jurisdictional basis, if any, other than 28 U.S.C. § 1334,(6) the degree of relatedness or remoteness of the proceeding to the main bankruptcy case, (7) the substance rather than form of an asserted core proceeding, (8) the feasibility of severing state law claims from core bankruptcy matters to allow judgments to be entered in state court with enforcement left to the bankruptcy court, (9) the burden of the bankruptcy court's docket, (10) the likelihood that the commencement of the proceeding in bankruptcy court involves forum shopping by one of the parties, (11) the existence of a right to a jury trial, and (12) the presence in the proceeding of non-debtor parties.

Plaintiff cites a less exhaustive five factor analysis for suspending or staying a nondischargeability action as follows: (1) The burden of the proceeding on the defendant; (2)The interest of the plaintiff in expeditiously pursuing the action and prejudice resulting from any delay;(3) The convenience of the court in the management of its cases and the efficient use of judicial resources; (4) The interests of non-parties to the litigation; and (5) The interest of the public in the pending civil and criminal litigation. In re Government Securities Corp., 81 B.R. 692, 694 (Bankr. also, Southwest Marine, Inc. v. Triple A Mach. Shop, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 805, 809 (N.D. Cal. 1989).

Although the parties do not agree on which set of factors is correct, the parties do agree that not all of the above factors are applicable nor are they of equal weight. Plaintiff's most persuasive argument for abstention from this court, and one that Defendant does not dispute, is that Plaintiff and Defendant are already heavily engaged in an action in Washington state court. According to Plaintiff, the allegations in the state court action mirror those of the allegations made in this adversary proceeding. Defendant argues that this is a false assertion as there is no mention of anything in the Washington state court action that mirror Plaintiff's §727 claims, although Defendant does concede that Plaintiff's §523 claims are mirrored by the allegations in the Washington state court action. The Washington state court action was filed over a year ago and is reportedly set for trial in April of 2020. Consequently, it seems feasible for the Washington matter to proceed to trial and judgment on the issues underlying the §523(a) claims (and certain of the §727 theories involving pre-petition behavior). Provided that Plaintiff is careful in obtaining detailed and clear findings, Plaintiff can then resolve this adversary proceeding under collateral estoppel theories by Rule 56 motion. To the extent that Defendant is correct in his assertion that Plaintiff's §727 claims are not mirrored in the state court action, Plaintiff asserts that he will simply drop those claims as they will likely be unnecessary after the state court rules on the underlying claims. Plaintiff has already obtained relief from stay. Considering the resources that the parties have already expended in Washington, including pre-trial motions, discovery, etc., the parties should likely finish what they started up there. This approach would conserve resources here and would not likely result in duplication of effort.

Concerning the administrative law claims and SEC claims pending in Washington State against Defendant, Plaintiff argues that resolution of these claims will help narrow the issues even further or could even provide additional probative details, which Plaintiff argues is a proper justification for abstention. Defendant argues that these other cases should not be considered for purposes of abstention because they do not directly involve Plaintiff, but this argument is less compelling because Defendant does not attempt to argue that such litigation would not serve to narrow the issues or provide useful additional background. Defendant's other arguments against abstention, including the recent withdrawal of Defendant's counsel and a vague argument regarding the purported untimeliness of this motion, do not really move the needle in Defendant's favor. Related to the purported untimeliness of this motion is Defendant's argument that this motion is premature because if Defendant's dismissal motion is granted, then this motion becomes essentially moot. Plaintiff notes that Defendant cites no authority for the proposition that dismissal of the complaint would also end the Washington state court action. Defendant's argument also ignores that complaints after Rule 12 motions can be (and very likely would be) amended if they are found to be defective.

In sum, Plaintiff has made a persuasive case for staying proceedings in this court and allowing the parties to litigate what are largely matters of state law in Washington state court, especially since the parties are on the doorstep of trial. Thus, as Plaintiff urges, the court should use its power under §105(a) to temporarily abstain or stay this adversary proceeding pending resolution in Washington state court. Plaintiff is cautioned to obtain clear and dispositive findings on the operative issues such that collateral estoppel can govern in subsequent Rule 56 motion.

Grant abstention. This adversary proceeding is stayed until Plaintiff seeks to return for a Rule 56 motion. The court will schedule a status conference approximately 180 days out for evaluation.

#18.00 Motion to Sever Claims Pursuant to FRCP 21 and FRBP 7021

Docket 160

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/3/20:

This is a motion to sever pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 21 brought jointly by Defendants, Mantis Funding LLC ("Mantis"), CapCall, LLC ("CapCall") and Forward Financing LLC ("Forward Financing") (collectively "Movants"). The motion is opposed by Richard Marshack ("Trustee"), the chapter 7 trustee for Debtor, i.i. Fuels, Inc. ("Debtor").

1. Background

As related by Movants, on March 25, 2020, Plaintiff filed the Complaint, which pertains to several separate transactions with the Debtor. Illustrating the separate nature of the transactions, in the Complaint factual allegations against Mantis effectively amount to a single discrete paragraph (Paragraph 55), which describes an August 2017 Merchant Cash Advance by which Mantis paid to Debtor $125,000 in exchange for purchasing a specified amount of the Debtor's future receivables. The allegations against CapCall boil down to a different single paragraph (Paragraph 57), which alleges that CapCall paid to Debtor $300,000 as part of a merchant cash advance. And the Complaint's factual allegations against Forward Financing are confined to two other different paragraphs (Paragraphs 53 and 54) alleging that it entered into agreements with Debtor for multiple cash advances.

There are no facts in the Complaint alleging that any of the three Movants had any connection or relationship with any of the other defendants or with each other. All three Movants are represented by separate counsel. Mantis and Forward Financing separately answered the Complaint. (Dkt. Nos.

53, 92.) CapCall filed a motion to dismiss the claims against it (Dkt. No. 120), which is currently scheduled to be heard on September 3, 2020. (Dkt. No. 138.)

The other defendant to have appeared is EBF, which filed a motion to dismiss, but which also continued the hearing on its motion to September 3, 2020 to facilitate settlement discussions. (Dkt. No. 136.) The Court also has ordered, pursuant to a stipulation between Plaintiff and EBF, that discovery as to EBF "shall be stayed and tolled pending resolution" of EBF's motion to dismiss or further order of the Court. (Id.) Of the remaining defendants, seven are in default, and Plaintiff moved for default judgments against six of those, which motions the Court granted on July 30, 2020.2 (Dkt. Nos. 57-70.) The claims against Corefund Capital, LLC have been dismissed without prejudice. On July 10, 2020, Plaintiff filed four separate and unrelated Rule 7016 Joint Status Reports for each of the Moving Defendants as well as EBF. (Dkt. Nos. 126-129.) In their respective Joint Status Reports, Mantis, EBF, and CapCall sought or raised the issue of severance. At the Status Conference on July 23, 2020, the Moving Defendants again explained that the claims against each of them should be severed into independent adversary proceedings. Plaintiff opposes the request but does not articulate any specific reason or basis for why claims regarding separate transactions with separate defendants should be lumped together into one combined action, thus necessitating this Motion.

2. Legal Standards

Fed. R. Civ. P 21, made applicable to these proceedings by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7021, provides that "[o]n motion or on its own, the court may at any time on just terms, add or drop a party. The court may also sever any claim against a party." When considering a motion to sever under Rule 21, courts in the Ninth Circuit consider (a) whether the right to relief asserted by the plaintiff arises out of the "same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences," and (b) whether "there are common questions of law or fact." Coughlin v. Rogers, 130 F.3d 1348, 1350-51 (9th Cir. 1997) (granting motion to sever where "trial efficiency will not be promoted by allowing [multiple plaintiffs] to bring a single case" because "[e]ach claim raises potentially different issues, and must be viewed in a separate and individual light by the Court"); see also Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co., 232 F.3d 1271, 1296 (9th Cir. 2000) (upholding district court's decision to grant defendant's motion to sever claims). The phrase "transaction or occurrence" refers to "similarity in the factual background of a claim"; claims that 'arise out of a systematic pattern of events' arise from the same transaction or occurrence." Bautista v. Los Angeles County, 216 F.3d 837, 842-43 (9th Cir. 2000) (Reinhardt, J., concurring) (quoting Coughlin, 130 F.3d at 1350).

"Rule 21 applies when either (1) the claims asserted by or against the joined parties do not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence or (2) do not present some common question of law or fact." Winner's Circle of Las Vegas, Inc. v. AMI Franchising Inc., 916 F. Supp. 1024, 1029 (D. Nev. 1996) (emphasis added); see also Jonas v. Conrath, 149 F.R.D. 520, 523 (S.D. W. Va. 1993) ("While Rule 21 is silent on the standard applicable for determining misjoinder, 'courts have uniformly held that parties are misjoined when they fail to satisfy either of the preconditions for permissive joinder of parties set forth in Rule 20(a).'" (emphasis added)) (quoting Breton v. Commcn's Satellite Corp., 116 F.R.D. 162, 163 (D.D.C. 1987)). Bankruptcy courts may consider the following factors: (1) whether claims arise out of the same transaction or occurrence; (2) whether claims present some common questions of law or fact; (3) whether settlement of claims or judicial economy would be facilitated; (4) whether prejudice will be avoided if a severance is granted; and (5) whether different witnesses and documentary proof are required for the separate claims. See In re Last, 440 B.R. 642, 654 (Bankr. D.N.J. 2010) (applying test adopted by the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York).

3. The Claims Should Be Severed

Movants make compelling arguments in favor of severing the claims because they persuasively demonstrate that the claims against the individual defendants do not arise from the same transaction or occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences. Specifically, Trustee is attempting to recover amounts allegedly discretely transferred by Debtor to each of the three Moving Defendants pursuant to three completely separate agreements, with completely separate terms, that were entered into at different times for different reasons and pursuant to different documentation and applications. Moreover, Movants argue that the alleged transactions with each defendant are different, and the terms of each Movant's separate agreements with Debtor would involve entirely different testimonial and documentary evidence, with different witnesses, custodians, and legal issues, including whether (as Plaintiff contends) any of the various transactions were loans. And, Movants argue, as the motion-to-dismiss briefing already on file illustrates, there are different choice-of-law disputes as to each separate defendant's transactions with the Debtor.

Furthermore, Movants persuasively argue that Trustee's own conduct is tantamount to an admission that severance is appropriate. For example, Plaintiff conducted separate Rule 7026 conferences prior to the scheduling conference with the Court, then filed four independent and unrelated Rule 7016 Joint Status Reports (Dkt. Nos. 126-129), and even sought independent default judgments against still other defendants who also have no alleged connection to the four defendants that have appeared to defend against Plaintiff's claims.

Movants concede that Plaintiff has the same general theory that all the transactions are actually loans, but Movants argue that a similar theory is not enough to warrant joining all the defendants together, for it is settled that "the mere fact that . . . claims arise under the same general law does not necessarily establish a common question of law or fact." Coughlin, 130 F.3d at 1351. To illustrate the point, Movants analogize the complaint to a slip-and-fall situation wherein a person slips and falls in three different stores, on three different days then files one complaint against all three stores. Movants point out that there would be different surrounding circumstances, evidence, witnesses, etc. to be put forth at a trial. A single trial would be a messy and inefficient use of resources. Thus, Movants conclude, the motion is amply supported by good cause.

Trustee's opposition seems to focus on the inconvenience of holding separate trials. After all, Trustee asserts, the claims are actually not all that different, and would include some overlapping facts, documents, and witnesses. Trustee asserts that it would be inconvenient for certain witnesses to have to make appearances at separate trials especially when their testimony might be substantially similar in the different trials. Trustee also asserts that having one larger trial would be more efficient and more conducive to a settlement.

Movants and Trustee both insist that their preferred course would lead to more efficient use of resources. However, the court is persuaded by Movants' assertion that severance will promote settlement of claims and judicial economy because separate actions with focused and narrower discovery will accelerate the exchange of information and legal positions and may (hopefully) lead to informal resolution. The court is not persuaded that single longer trial will have this same effect. The court generally prefers smaller trials with narrow issues to a single mega-trial with multiple parties, different evidence, different witnesses, etc. It is not difficult to imagine how confusing that could become. Additionally, it seems likely that some Defendants would be forced sit idly for significant periods while Trustee attempted to prove each claim against each of the other separate defendants, which is not an efficient use of time or resources. Finally, the court is sympathetic to the Movants' concern over undue prejudice including (i) sitting in on numerous unnecessary group depositions involving alleged transactions that are wholly unrelated to anyone other than the deposed defendant; and (ii) significantly heighten the risk of exposing proprietary and confidential information to other defendants, who are competitors.

Tentative for 7/2/20:

Frustrating. This is scheduled as a pretrial conference yet no joint pretrial stipulation is seen although it is required under the LBRs and was the topic of specific warnings given last time. All we have is a somewhat lame "status report" from plaintiff that reports settlement attempts were rebuffed. This is not acceptable and is not an excuse. The lack of progress is doubly concerning since the court is informed that a state court judgment which was to be basis for a Rule 56 motion to be brought by plaintiff has been finally resolved after appeal for months now. So, why no motion? No joint stimulation? Nothing. Defendant has moved to dismiss for these failures. The court will hear argument.

No tentative.

The court is not happy with parties, like Ms. Little, that wait until the very last minute to file responses that were by the local rules due two weeks ago. on 6/25/20. Trustee argues that the Settlement Agreement, if approved, should not involve dismissal of the chapter 13 and all payments should be disbursed by the Trustee. Additionally, Trustee requests the Creditor amend their proof-of-claim in accordance with the agreement and Debtor amend the plan to establish the appropriate class or subclass for treatment of the creditor in accordance with the agreement.

On 7/1/2020, Debtor filed a reply to the opposition. She argues the conditions requested by the Trustee would only result in a default on the Settlement Agreement. The agreement states a third-party has agreed to pay the monthly payment straight to the Creditor. Debtor argues if the payments must go through the Trustee for distribution to the Creditor there is too much room for error and the possibility of default is much higher, thus, putting a greater burden on the Debtor. Additionally, Debtor argues if the payments are made to the Trustee this would structurally alter the terms of the agreement and since the payments go beyond the five-year term of the bankruptcy plan, the Trustee could not fully satisfy the entirety of the agreement transitioning it into default.

Creditor and Debtor filed replies to the Trustee's opposition arguing that the Jevic-like settlement in contrast does not violate the priority scheme set forth in the Bankruptcy Code. See Czyzewski v. Jevic Holding Corp. 137 S. Ct. 973, 979 (2017). Additionally, they argue settlement would allow for the Debtor to begin a "fresh start" moving forward after dismissal. Finally, Creditor argues every prong in the four-prong fair classification test found in In re Benner, 146 B.R. 265, 266 (D. Montana 1992) has been satisfied. But Benner is a separate classification case, not a dismissal case.

Under 11 U.S.C § 105, the court holds the power over the case to approve, dismiss, or deny the motion to approve Settlement Agreement. Here, the motion falls within the scope of § 105 and the court holds power over this action. FRBP 9019 allows for the compromise or settlement of claims and controversies by the Creditor, Debtor, and Trustee following notice and a hearing. In order for the court to approve a proposed settlement the court should consider the following factors, as discussed in In re Woodson: 839 F.2d 610,620 (9th Cir. 1988), citing Martin v. Kane (In re A & C Properties), 784 F.2d 1377, 1380-81 (9th Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Martin v. Robinson, --- U.S. ----, 107 S. Ct. 189, 93 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1986).

"(a) The probability of success in the litigation; (b) the difficulties, if any, to be encountered in the matter of collection; (c) the complexity of the litigation involved, and the expense, inconvenience and delay necessarily attending it; (d) the paramount interest of the creditors and a proper deference to their reasonable views in the premises."

Here, (a) the probability of success in the Creditor's allegedly nondischargeable claim against the Debtor should be regarded as high. This would further burden the Debtor and have the likelihood of never creating an effective reorganization plan; (b) the agreement between the parties has taken place over that last several months with a full merger clause and understanding of each parties' obligations. The Debtor has secured a third-party, who has agreed to the terms and will satisfy all the required payments. (c) The complexity of the situation is straightforward enough. Debtor lost a civil suit to the Creditor who holds the majority debt against the Debtor. The cost of litigation would significantly decrease the total amount in the estate, diminishing the ability to pay not only the Creditor as agreed but any remaining unsecured claims.

But the main issue arises under the last Woodson factor: "the paramount interest of the creditors . . ." that is creditors, plural. The agreement is solely between the Debtor and one Creditor. It fails to take into consideration or even discuss any other creditors who must be treated within the reorganization plan. Understandably, Creditor holds almost 90% of the total debt, but all other creditors must also be considered when approving such a motion, particularly one involving a dismissal. Approving the Settlement Agreement should be a compromise which is "fair and equitable" to all parties involved. (italics added) In re A & C Properties, 784 F.2d at 1381. The agreement focuses solely on questions of Creditor's and Debtor's concerns but fails to consider at all any other creditors.

The court is not indifferent to the Debtor's fresh start nor to her difficulty in handling a non-dischargeable obligation, nor is the court indifferent to the administrative cost savings to the reorganization effort. All are good points, but the movants fail to convince that these points cannot be handled within the context of a Chapter 13 plan. The fact that payments might continue past the five years is hardly an insuperable impediment. The plan can acknowledge the non-dischargeable nature of the obligation and acknowledge that at the end of term the payments will have to go on since the discharge otherwise generally applicable under the plan will not affect this obligation. The Trustee need not be involved after the end of the term. So, no good reason is given to abandon all other creditors in order to further the convenience of just two parties.

#11.00 Debtor's Motion To Approve And Enforce Agreed-Upon Term Sheet Signed By All Parties And Counsel At the Court-Ordered Mediation

Docket 95

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/8/20:

The Debtors are Mohamed Elhendi and his spouse, Samar Abdelghani ("Debtors"). This is their motion to approve and enforce the agreed-upon term sheet signed by all parties and counsel at the court-ordered mediation. The motion is opposed by Creditors, Jorge Gomez and L.A. Catering Truck MFG ("Creditors").

As far as the court can tell, aside from whether the Term Sheet represented a meeting of the minds (at least at the time it was drafted), the following facts are not contested:

The Debtors filed this Chapter 7 Bankruptcy Case on December 30, 2019. Prior to the filing, a debt had been incurred to Creditor LA Catering Truck MFG, pursuant to a lease agreement between the Debtor Elhendi and Creditor LA Catering Truck MFG dated April 18, 2019. The debt is listed on Schedule "D" of the Debtor's Petition. This debt was secured by a commercial "Food Truck" known as a 2003 WORKH ("Property"). The Property was used full time by the Debtor in his food truck business; at the time Elhendi used a fictitious business name "Kebabology." After the debt but before the petition, the Debtor transferred the Property to his limited liability company, Yansico, LLC, of which he is the managing member (and perhaps the only member, the record is unclear).

Three weeks after the Debtors filed their Petition and after Creditors were allegedly on notice of the Petition, on January 20, 2020, Creditors allegedly engaged in improper collection against the Debtor without first seeking and obtaining relief from the automatic stay by repossessing the Property.

The Debtors filed a Motion for Contempt of Court against Creditors alleging intentional violation of the automatic stay. Creditors filed a Motion to Annul the stay. Both hearings have been continued multiple times and are also on this calendar as #s 11.1 and 11.2. At Judge Bauer's urging, the Parties agreed to Mediation to resolve both issues, and attended a mediation session with the Hon. Meredith Jury, Ret., on July 29, 2020. Four people attended the Mediation: Debtor Mohamed (for himself and his wife) along with his attorney, and Creditors and their attorney. At the Mediation an ostensible agreement was reached, and a Term Sheet was signed by all parties and counsel. After the Mediation, Creditors' Counsel sent the Settlement Agreement to the Debtors' Counsel. However, the Settlement Agreement adds a Party to the Term Sheet, Yasinco, LLC, to which the Debtors object.

This is an unfortunate case where the sides each have no confidence that the other side is dealing in good faith. The court does not know exactly what to make of the asserted facts. For example, Debtor asserts that making Yasinco, LLC a party to the Settlement Agreement was never even once brought up in the course of the mediation. This is not expressly disputed by Creditors, but Creditors do persuasively argue that Debtor Elhendi is the managing member of Yasinco, LLC, Yasinco was the entity in reported title and possession and so arguably the party aggrieved, and so it should have been obviously understood that the Settlement Agreement would include the LLC.

Neither side cites any particularly persuasive authority that assists the court in determining the more righteous position. For example, Creditors cite Copeland v. Baskin Robbins U.S.A., 96 Cal. App. 4th 1251, 1257 (2002) for the proposition that "[i]f, despite their good faith efforts, the parties fail to reach ultimate agreement on the terms in issue the contract to negotiate is deemed performed and the parties are discharged from their obligations. Failure to agree is not, itself, a breach of the contract to negotiate." Creditors also cite Cedar Fair, L.P. v. City of Santa Clara, 194 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1171 (2011) and Delaware Tetra Techs., Inc. v. City. of San Bernardino, 247 Cal. App. 4th 352, 366, (2016) (term sheet only bound the parties to negotiate in good faith toward a final agreement as they had to hammer out issues) for a somewhat similar proposition. However, none of those cases is remotely like this case, and therefore, their precedential or even persuasive value is tenuous at best. For their part, Debtors cite nearly no relevant authority at all.

Thus, without clear guidance from the parties, the court notes that if the mediation fails, this case will go to trial to resolve the contempt and stay annulment issues (but not on this calendar, see below). Given the substantial efforts put forth by the parties, Judge Jury, and Judge Bauer to seek a resolution, it would be a pity to let things fall apart when the parties are so close to resolving these matters. Therefore, the court is persuaded that the spirit of the mediation was intended to put these matters to rest, which strongly implies inclusion of Yasinco LLC. Debtors do not put forth a compelling argument (at least not in these papers) that including Yasinco, LLC in the final settlement agreement would be prejudicial to them, or that inclusion of the LLC was not obviously at the center of the discussions. On other hand, Creditors do make a persuasive argument that if Yasinco, LLC is not included, then there exists a significant risk that these matters will not be settled at all because Debtor could still, in theory, pursue remedies against Creditors on behalf of Yasinco, LLC, defeating the purpose of the term sheet which was to put everything to rest.

Even if that is not Debtors' intention (and the court has its doubts), Debtors have not satisfied the court that such actions are not outside the realm of possibility. Clearly there is no trust between the parties. But, if Debtors are truly interested in resolving these issues, as evidenced by their participation in the mediation, why not just agree to the modifications?

Moreover, Debtors need to evaluate the weak posture this puts them in. Normally, the only time punitive damages for violation of the automatic stay are supported is where there is clear proof of willful (i.e.. knowing and intentional) violation. See §363(k)(1). Even actual damages seem tenuous in this case because, reportedly, title or at least possession was no longer in the Debtor but in his LLC at the time of repossession. The automatic stay does not protect separate entities whose only connection to the case is that the stock is owned by the debtor. See In re Hamilton, 2020 WL 995750 at *1 (9th Cir. 2020) ("The automatic stay arising from 11 U.S.C. § 362(a) generally protects only the debtor, the property of the debtor, and the property of the estate. It does not apply to actions against guarantors, sureties, corporate affiliates, or other non-debtor parties liable on the debts of the debtor." (internal citations and quotations omitted)). Unfortunately, Debtors did not file a reply to Creditors' opposition, so the court does not really have an answer to this question. On balance, Creditors appear to have the more righteous position and the motion will be denied, if for no other reason than the term sheet did not represent a full meeting of the minds. This leaves the Debtor in a weak position on the violation accusation, however. If there is, in fact, some unstated but compelling reason for Debtors to withhold their signatures on the final settlement agreement, the court is willing to hear that argument. Even if explained, however, there may still not be much of a case for damages in their case as stated.

#1.00 Motion For Recusal Of Presiding Judge

Docket 777

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/9/20:

This is Doug Cavanaugh's and Ralph Kosmides' (collectively "Movants") motion to recuse Judge Scott Clarkson from presiding over the entirety of this case, including any adversary proceeding or contested matter that may arise therein, under 28 U.S.C. § 455(a), on the ground that Judge Clarkson's impartiality may be open to question as he previously served as a mediator in four mediation sessions prior to the cases being reassigned from Judge Bauer. This memorandum covers two separate but identical motions, #s 1 and 2 on calendar, in cases (#s 18-13311 and 18-13324). The motions are opposed by Creditor, Winthrop Gulobow Hollander ("WGH"), the Chapter 11 Trustee, Peter Mastan ("Ch. 11 Trustee"), the Chapter 7 Trustee, Richard Marshack ("Ch. 7 Trustee"), and Creditor Pachulski Stang Ziel & Jones who filed a joinder to the other oppositions.

1. Factual Background

The following facts as rendered by Movants do not appear materially disputed. The Movants are the co-founders of Ruby's Diner, Inc. ("RDI" or "Debtor") and of Ruby's Franchise Systems, Inc. ("RFS" sometimes with RDI "Debtors")- an entity affiliated with RDI through common ownership and control. Mr. Cavanaugh served as the Chief Executive Officer ("CEO") of RDI since its incorporation in 1985 and of RFS since its incorporation in 1990. Mr. Kosmides was a former Chief Finance Officer of RFS and was a former officer of RDI until his resignation approximately five years ago. Mr.

Cavanaugh owns a 60% share in RDI and in RFS while Mr. Kosmides holds the other 40% share in each of the companies.

Mr. Cavanaugh was the appointed Responsible Individual for RDI in the chapter 11 phase of the case and for RFS prior to the appointment of the chapter 11 trustee. Furthermore, Messrs. Cavanaugh and Kosmides are creditors of each of the bankruptcy estates on account of certain obligations arising from pre and postpetition contracts with the debtors. RDI and its affiliates sought bankruptcy protection under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code on September 5, 2018 initiating case number 18-13311. On September 6, 2018, RFS commenced its voluntary chapter 11 initiating case number 18-13324.

Judge Catherine Bauer substituted as the presiding bankruptcy judge for RDI on September 5, 2018, and for RFS on September 7, 2018. On September 5, 2018, Judge Bauer entered the order to administer jointly the RDI's case along with its six affiliates. [Docket No. 6.] The RFS case is being administered separately from the RDI and its affiliates. Judge Bauer approved the employment of Pachulski Stang Ziehl and Jones, LLP as general bankruptcy counsel for RDI pursuant to the entered order on December 20, 2018.

Several other professionals have been hired by the estate including Donlin, Recan & Company as the estate's claims and noticing agent (on a limited capacity) and GlassRatner Advisory & Capital Group LLC (only as to the Debtor) as its financial advisor. [Docket Nos. 331 and 399.] On September 19, 2018, the Committee of Unsecured Creditors was appointed in the case ("RDI Committee"). [Docket No. 69.] Winthrop Couchot Golubow, LLP was appointed as its general bankruptcy counsel while Force 10 Partners, LLC was employed as its financial advisor. [Docket No. 176 and 177.] On December 12, 2018, the court entered an order approving the employment of Theodora Oringher PC as general bankruptcy counsel to RFS and Armory Consulting, Co. as its financial advisors. and 94.] Although the RFS case was being administered as a separate case, RFS and RDI filed a joint plan of reorganization beginning with Docket No. 344. The joint plan underwent several iterations with the last version marked Third Amended Joint Plan before the Debtor's case was converted to chapter 7. Thus, all issues involving the plan affected both the RFS and RDI bankruptcy cases. Through the course of the chapter 11 cases, the main issue had always been the plan's feasibility and source of funding for the joint plan to pay the escalating chapter 11 administrative expenses (which inevitably called into question the reasonableness of such fees) and the treatment of outstanding claims of unsecured creditors in the case. This included funds from Steve Craig and litigation proceeds from potential claims against insiders of the Debtor and RFS ("D&O Litigation").

To address this crucial obstacle to confirmation, the Debtor, RFS and the RDI Committee agreed to mediate their disputes and participated in what eventually became four separate mediation sessions conducted by the Hon. Scott Clarkson as the mediator. The order approving the mediation before Judge Clarkson was entered on May 29, 2019. [Docket No. 371.] A virtually identical order was entered in the RFS bankruptcy case on May 31, 2019 assigning the mediation to Judge Clarkson. [RFS Docket No. 201.] The parties and their respective counsel, along with the other stakeholders in the case: Opus Bank, U.S. Foods, Inc., Debtor, RFS, the Movants, the RDI Committee, and significant creditors of the SoCal Debtors, Pillsbury Winthrop and Steve Craig, who at the time, would have been the major source of funding for any chapter 11 plan (collectively "Parties"), attended and participated in the mediation sessions. On June 21, 2019, the Parties were present at the first mediation session presided on by Judge Clarkson held in the Santa Ana Bankruptcy Court ("RDI Mediation I"). On July 25, 2019, a second mediation session was conducted with the same Parties being present before Judge Clarkson ("RDI Mediation II"). From the transcript of the RDI Mediation II, the D&O Litigation, including evaluating the merits of the insider claims, and the payment of certain professional fees from proceeds of the litigation were discussed. While there was a point when the deficit in plan funding was manageable and settlement appeared to be achievable, the RDI Committee decided not to move forward with the deal. By the time the third and fourth mediation sessions took place before Judge Clarkson, the administrative claims allegedly became so high that the proposed joint plan looked to the D&O policy as a major source of payment for the administrative and unsecured claims. The joint plan of reorganization proposed establishing a litigation trust whereby certain chapter 11 administrative claims and unsecured creditors' claims will be paid in tranches. The various iterations of the plan in chapter 11 discussed the availability of coverage under the D&O insurance policy (which may provide up to $5 million in possible insurance coverage) to pay such claims. Movants do not concede that there is any D&O Litigation liability.

On August 13, 2019, Judge Clarkson conducted a third mediation session with all the parties present ("RDI Mediation III") which tackled various aspects of the same plan issues. On November 8, 2019, Judge Clarkson conducted the last mediation session with all the parties present ("RDI Mediation IV"). According to the November 8, 2019 transcript, as of October 2019, the combined fees were approximately $5.3 million to be capped at $6 million for which there was insufficient funds from the plan proponent to pay the fees in full. The transcript further referred to the D&O Litigation and how such proceeds, if any, will be used to pay the professionals' fees. Ultimately, however, the Debtors were unable to confirm their proposed joint plan when Steve Craig, an early sponsor, withdrew as the principal proponent of the plan thereby leaving the D&O Litigation as the only remaining major source of any potential distribution in both bankruptcy estates. The Movants were present and participated in all four RDI Mediation sessions along with their counsel, Ted Stolman of Freeman Freeman & Smiley, LLP, and were privy to settlement discussions in which Judge Clarkson served as the mediator.

On April 10, 2020, Debtor RDI moved to convert the chapter 11 case to one under chapter 7 which was granted on April 15, 2019. [Docket No. 577.]

Richard A. Marshack was appointed as the chapter 7 trustee. [Docket No. 578.] On April 15, 2020, a chapter 11 trustee was appointed in the RFS case. [RFS Docket No. 358.] Peter Mastan was appointed as the chapter 11 trustee in the RFS case. [RFS Docket No. 360.] The various motions filed in the chapter 7 case such as the §364 Motion and the Special Counsel Application motions pending demonstrate that at least one item of focus since conversion has been on the purported claims against Movants as insiders of the Debtor as the major source of funding for the estates. Similarly, the Chapter 11 trustee in the RFS Case has made a demand to RDI's insurance carrier on RDI's D&O policy on June 22, 2020. Thus far, according to Movants, no plausible claim under the purported D&O Litigation has been clearly articulated. Due to the impending retirement of Judge Bauer, the Debtor's case was first assigned to Judge Erithe Smith while the RFS Case was assigned to Judge Clarkson following the court's standing procedure of assigning cases based on the last digits of case numbers. For an unexplained reason, however, the §364 Motion and the Special Counsel Motion were scheduled in Judge Clarkson's calendar prior to having the order of transfer issued and even though the Debtor's case is the low numbered case of the two. On July 31, 2020, the court entered Administrative Order 20-07 dated July 15, 2020 reassigning the Debtor's case to Judge Clarkson as the presiding judge.

2. Recusal Standards

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455(a), a judge must disqualify himself if his impartiality might be reasonably questioned. "It is a general rule that the appearance of partiality is as dangerous as the fact of it." U.S. v. Conforte, 624 F.2d 869, 881 (9th Cir. 1980). "[O]pinions formed by the judge on the basis of facts introduced or events occurring in the course of the current proceedings, or of prior proceedings, do not constitute a basis for a bias or partiality motion unless they display a deep-seated favoritism or antagonism that would make fair judgment impossible." Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. 540, 555 (1994). In the absence of a legitimate reason to recuse himself, a judge should participate in the cases he is assigned. U.S. v. Holland, 519 F.3d 909, 912 (9th Cir. 2008). But, if it is a close case, the balance tips in favor of recusal. Id. Section 455(b), which requires recusal if the judge has personal bias or prejudice, is not implicated here although some passing reference is made to §455(b)(1) which requires recusal where the judge "has personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts concerning the proceeding." However, this does not seem to apply unless one accepts Movants' argument that the mediations amount to such an extra judicial obtaining of knowledge, a dubious proposition as discussed below.

Recusal is appropriate where "a reasonable person with knowledge of all the facts would conclude that the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned." Blixseth v. Yellowstone Mountain Club, LLC, 742 F.3d 1215, 1219 (9th Cir. 2014) citing Pesnell v. Arsenault, 543 F.3d 1038, 1043 (9th Cir. 2008); see also Holland, 519 F.3d at 913 (section 455(a) asks whether a reasonable person perceives a significant risk that the judge will resolve the case on a basis other than the merits). The appearance of impropriety can be enough for recusal; actual bias is not necessary. Id. citing Liljeberg v. Health Servs. Acq. Corp., 486 U.S. 847, 864-65 (1988); Yagman v. Republic Ins., 987 F.2d 622, 626 (9th Cir. 1993). Appearance is evaluated by looking at how the conduct would be seen by a reasonable person, not someone "hypersensitive or unduly suspicious." Id. citing Holland, 519 F.3d at 913 (9th Cir. 2008). Recusal under §455(a) is fact-driven and may turn on the subtleties of a specific case. The analysis should not be focused on comparisons to similar situations, but by an independent examination of the specific facts and circumstances at issue. Holland, 519 F.3d at 913.

Here, Movants assert that through his participation as mediator, Judge Clarkson acquired extrajudicial knowledge that would likely be excluded as evidence under FRE 408. Movants cite Kearny v. Milwaukee Cty., 2007 WL 3171395 at *2 (E.D. Wis. Oct. 26, 2007) for the proposition that once a judge has shed the role of a presiding judge and acted solely in the role of mediator, it is impossible to un-ring that bell; a judge who acts as a mediator without the expectation that the case may be re-assigned to him or her for the purposes of proceeding as the trial judge will almost invariably be presented with a case where impartiality may reasonably be questioned, thereby necessitating a recusal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 455(a). Specifically, Movants assert that with respect to (1) the D&O Litigation; and (2) the reasonableness of the chapter 11 professional fees, decisions on the merits of these two matters including orders to grant or deny certain motions affecting such D&O Litigation are tainted by the information, some of it sensitive and confidential, acquired outside of the record and evidence presented in the proceedings. Furthermore, Movants assert that to the extent the court, as the mediator, has been privy to confidential extrajudicial information or has been influenced by such to form an opinion on the merits of the D&O Litigation, the reasonableness of the professionals' fees or how unsecured creditors should be paid in this case stemming from information obtained during the mediation, the relief requested in this Motion is necessary and important to the fair administration of this bankruptcy case and prosecution of insider claims in this case. Moreover, Movants assert that granting the motion serves the public's interest in preserving the integrity of judicial proceedings by ensuring that the presiding judge will decide issues in the cases purely on their merits and free from prejudice or bias that may result from prior exposure to the cases. Movants also urge that recusal will protect the integrity of the mediation program encouraging parties to be forthright with their mediators in sharing sensitive information which might not be shared with the trier of fact. Thus, Movants' conclude, by any objective standard, Judge Clarkson's objectivity could reasonably be called into question. But Kearny does not appear to be the majority rule.

In response, Ch. 11 Trustee asserts that Judge Clarkson's prior involvement in a mediation concerning alleged claims against Officers and Directors is not actually an intrinsic part of this case, or the chapter 11 case of RFS. Furthermore, Ch. 11 Trustee asserts that the pursuit of the claims against Directors and Officers will likely be pursued in a different forum, not before Judge Clarkson in the Bankruptcy Court; indeed, to the extent that Ch. 11 Trustee pursues such claims, it would be Trustee's intent to have the claims heard in the Federal District Court or State Court, and not the Bankruptcy Court. As an apparent concession, Ch. 11 Trustee suggests that to avoid the appearance of partiality, the harm alleged as grounds for recusal could be addressed by a voluntary recusal by Judge Clarkson of any proceedings that relate to the claims against Directors and Officers (or presumably by a renewed motion for recusal). As a practical matter, Ch. 11 Trustee asserts that if any of D&O matters appears before Judge Clarkson at all, it would be in the form of a settlement motion. Any trial on those matters would not take place before Judge Clarkson.

WGH argues that Movants are ignoring significant 9th Circuit precedent that make clear that a judge's participation as mediator and later as presiding judge does not automatically result in a presumption of bias nor is acting as a mediator a source of extra-judicial information. For example, WHG cites U.S. v. Winston, 613 F.2d 221, 223 (9th Cir. 1980) where the court stated: "Section 455(b)(1) may alternatively require recusal in situations wherein the judge has pre-trial knowledge of the facts of a case, independent of any possible bias or partiality. In such instances, however, recusal is appropriate only when the information is derived from an extra-judicial source. Knowledge obtained in the course of earlier participation in the same case does not require that a judge recuse himself." However, this case did not involve a judge who may have been exposed to confidential information by attending a mediation, but rather the judge's information in Winston was acquired in the course of a pre-trial competency hearing. The oppositions do cite cases that stand for the general proposition that judges need not be recused solely because they acted as mediators prior to becoming the presiding judge over the case. See e.g. SEC v. ING USA Annuity & Life Ins. Co., 360 Fed.Appx. 826, 828 (9th Cir. 2009) (unpublished) ("There is no authority for the proposition that judges must recuse themselves if they served as mediators in a related proceeding.") However, as the caselaw in the 9th Circuit makes clear, each case is to be decided according to the unique facts and subtleties of that case, making such a motion somewhat resistant to bright line rules. The oppositions cite no authority for the proposition that recusal is extraordinary relief or carries a particularly heavy burden of persuasion. On the contrary, the caselaw unequivocally states that if there is a doubt, that doubt tips in favor of recusal.

The opponents also argue that judicial economy is served by denying the motion. The oppositions assert that these cases are quite complex, and thus, given Judge Clarkson's pre-existing familiarity with this case, judicial economy would be better served if Judge Clarkson remains the presiding judge. Furthermore, the oppositions assert that reassignment to yet another judge would result in substantial delay as it would take time for the new judge to adequately acquaint himself or herself with this case. Moreover, the oppositions also persuasively argue that the better option for all involved is to simply keep the bankruptcy cases before Judge Clarkson, and if claims for liability or other sensitive issues are brought against Movants, then they should seek to recuse Judge Clarkson from those specific proceedings rather than from the entire case. The oppositions also point out that Judge Clarkson does not have any of the actions described by Movants before him at this point. Thus, the oppositions conclude, the motion is not only largely unsupported by relevant authority, it is also premature.

In reply, Movants point out that Judge Clarkson's knowledge of this case was obtained not in his official capacity as a presiding judge, but in the course of an out-of-court mediation, which Movants argue is a meaningful distinction with respect to whether Judge Clarkson's knowledge of the case can be considered extra-judicial in nature. The reply also seeks to draw factual and legal distinctions between the cases cited by the oppositions and the present motion, which leaves something of a muddy picture. Reconciling all the competing issues is not at all easy.

Chapter 7

The court understands Movants' position but finds the oppositions more persuasive, even if the case law they cite arguably does not precisely support their position, or there is some authority going the other way. First, the court is persuaded that the motion, if granted, would result in unnecessary delay to the detriment of all involved. It is unknown how long it would take for a new judge to take over this complex case and get up to speed. Second, the motion is premature because as the oppositions point out, the issues causing the Movants' anxiety are not yet before Judge Clarkson and it is speculative whether they ever will be. The Chapter 11 Trustee asserts an intention to have all those issues taken to trial (if necessary) in a forum other than the bankruptcy court. Third, even if these issues went to trial in the bankruptcy court, Movants could move for Judge Clarkson to be recused or request Judge Clarkson to recuse himself in a trial on those issues, without the need to remove Judge Clarkson from the entire case. This would be much less disruptive and more efficient while still preserving the goals of mediation and would preserve what may be the most compelling issue as argued by Movants, i.e. that the appearance of impartiality is as important if not more so than the reality. In short, and viewed from the standpoint of a reasonable person, not an overly suspicious one, there is no compelling reason to recuse Judge Clarkson at this time. There may come such a time, as the oppositions seem to concede, but we are not there yet and until then the court sees no compelling need to recuse.

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the debtor's motion to approve as adequate its revised Disclosure Statement to accompany its First Amended Plan. The Disclosure Statement is still not adequate for at least the following reasons:

1. Sale of the real property in San Juan Capistrano, the premises for debtor's business, is promised no later than February 28, 2020. But just how this is to be accomplished without a §363(f) order is not explained and it is obvious that a plan providing for same is not yet possible. This needs better explanation and/or a more realistic timetable.
2. The plan still needs a better discussion as to how the equity interests are being treated. Presumably this belongs in Class 4 and there should be there a discussion about the absolute priority rule and the contribution of $20,000 in new value. Further, some discussion as to how/why that is the proper number is necessary given the requirements of "market testing" found in Bank of America NT & SA v. 203 N. La Salle Street Partnership 526 U.S. 434 (1999) would be in order.

3. The description about discharge at 21:1-3 should be corrected in view of §1141(d)(3) as suggested by the United States Trustee.
4. As indicated in the opposition of Seacoast Commerce Bank a better job could be done explaining how this plan is feasible if, as Seacoast argues, only about $13,000 is available on a net basis for monthly debt service after costs of operation. Normally, feasibility is a confirmation issue, but this would be the opportunity to explain in simple terms how this works.
5. Some discussion about the alleged $150,000 loan to an insider needs to be discussed and if it is not to be pursued, why.
6. A consistent explanation as to whether Northeast Bank is truly a fully secured creditor at $93,118 including post-petition assets is necessary, in order to evaluate the best interest of creditors test, as Seacoast argues.
7. Some discussion about the pending litigation against Seacoast is also necessary. Is this to be pursued post confirmation? If so, how is the litigation to be funded and what goal is sought? If a judgment were achieved what becomes of the proceeds?

Commerce Bank. The oppositions are both well taken, and the points raised need not be restated at elaborate length here. The court is primarily concerned about the following fundamental deficiencies:

1. The plan clearly violates the absolute priority rule found at §1129(b)(2) (B)(ii). The plan proposes only 1% to unsecured creditors in installments yet the principals retain governance and stock ownership. Seacoast, which itself may be the largest unsecured creditor, plans to vote against. No new value is mentioned. So, unless something else is true this plan is patently unconfirmable, and distribution of a disclosure statement on such a plan is a waste of time and resources. While the court does not usually prejudge confirmation issues, this one is too fundamental to ignore, and so either amendment or at least explanation is required;
2. The proposed treatment of Seacoast 's secured claim is also very problematic. Debtor proposes either to cramdown a payment over 30 years at 5% or a "consensual sale" of the underlying real estate collateral. But the timing and conditions of the proposed sale are unstated, not made subject to conditions and are, thus, illusory. Can the debtor sell whenever it feels like it? Whenever in future it thinks the market has appreciated enough, even if that takes years, or never? The alternative treatment is also a non-starter. An effective 100% loan to value claim is far riskier than a more conventional loan usually made as a percentage of value. Consequently, the increased risk element must be accommodated (paid for), and anything less is a legally impermissible imposition of the risk upon the lender. See In re North Valley Mall ,432 B.R, 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Although this is usually a confirmation issue, 5% is far too low for a commercial loan under any reasonable economic analysis, i.e. prime rate is 4.75% and must be "built up" from there even under a Till analysis. North Valley Mall is not the only analysis relied upon by courts, but this court happens to believe it is the most appropriate in a business, real estate context. Therefore, the court will not approve dissemination of disclosure upon such a patently unconfirmable plan.

3. Feasibility is very questionable. Again, normally this is judged at confirmation, but the court does not ignore that the MORS show a generally declining cash position, and this is while there has been a 9-month moratorium in debt payments. Had even reduced payments been made the debtor would be by now out of money. What, if anything, is expected to change this outlook?

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO 9-24-20 AT 11:00 A.M.
PER ORDER GRANTING CONTINUANCE OF PRE-TRIAL CONFERENCE ENTERED 9-04-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/27/20:

This is supposed to be a pre-trial conference. Sadly, it is not that and this is hardly the first time in this series of cases where the court has been sorely frustrated.

As required by the LBRs, the parties were to have met and conferred in good faith to narrow the issues so that trial time could be focused on those items truly in dispute. Local Rule 7016-1 sets forth a very specific timeline and list of duties incumbent on each side. At LBR 7016-1(b)(1)(C) Plaintiff was to have initiated a meet and confer at least 28 days before the date set for the pre-trial conference. According to Defendant's papers, this did not occur 28 days before the originally scheduled pretrial conference of Feb. 6, or indeed at all until February 13 when Plaintiff reportedly filed his "Pretrial Stipulation" in which he claims it was Defendants who "refused to participate in the pretrial stipulation process" necessitating what is actually a unilateral stipulation. Defendant on the next day, February 14, filed his Unilateral Pretrial Stipulation. Defendant does acknowledge at his page 2, line 1-2 that Plaintiff sent something over to Defendant on January 28, but it was reportedly "not complete in any respect." As to the original date of the Pretrial Conference of February 6, that was very late. Whether that document was anything close to what was later filed unilaterally on Feb. 13 is not clarified. But what is very clear is that these two unilateral "stipulations" are largely worthless in the main goal of narrowing issues inasmuch as the parties seem to be discussing two entirely different complaints. Defendant focuses on what the former trustee (now deceased) may have known about the existence of a loan undisclosed on the schedules made by Frank to WeCosign, Inc., which loan was reportedly worthless in any case, and about how that knowledge should be imputed to Plaintiff Marshack. But why the trustee's knowledge, imputed or otherwise, should justify an alleged misstatement or omission to list assets under oath, is never quite explained. One presumes Defendant will argue materiality. Plaintiff focuses on the alleged use of another corporation, Tara Pacific, as the repository of funds taken from WeCosign as an alleged fraudulent conveyance and then used by Frank and Tara as a piggy bank between 2010 and 2012 and upon alleged misstatements in the schedules about Tara's and Frank's actual average income. While this sounds like a fraudulent conveyance theory the gist seems to be that Tara and Frank were using ill-gotten gains to live on while denying in respective schedules that they had any income (or assets) thus comprising a false oath. There probably are connections between these different stories, but that is not made at all clear (and it must be made clear). Plaintiff's overlong "stipulation" is written more like a 'cut and paste' brief containing long tables with over 59 footnotes inserted. One presumes this represents a good faith compilation of bank records, but even that is left unclear. But the language used reads purely as advocacy, not an attempt to narrow the disputed facts in a way the other side can sign.

Buried in the Defendant's recitations (at page 4, ¶ 13) is the argument that the case should be dismissed as outside the statute of limitation (or statute of repose in Defendant's terms) described at §727(e)(1). Why this was not raised 50+ months ago when the action was filed by Rule 12(b) motion or otherwise is not explained. What the Defendant expects the court to do with this point now is also not explained.

In sum, this case is still a disorganized mess. This is not the first time the court has voiced its utter frustration with this series of cases. Rather than being ready for trial, we are very much still at the drawing board. The court is not happy about it as this is hardly a young case.

What is the remedy? The court could order sanctions against either side, or maybe both sides, and that would be richly deserved. The court could decide that Plaintiff as the party with the initial duty under the LBRs should suffer the brunt of just consequences by a dismissal, as the ultimate sanction. But however tedious and frustrating this has become the court would rather see these cases decided on their merits (if any) if that is possible. But what the court will not do is to further indulge these parties in disobeying the LBRs and generally continuing to shamle along, never getting anywhere. Therefore, it is ordered:

1. The parties will immediately meet and confer about reducing the two unilateral 'stipulations' into an intelligible, single, useful list of items not in dispute and therefore requiring no further litigation;
2. The resulting stipulation will be concise, user-friendly and focused on the actual legal issues to be tried;
3. The stipulation will contain a concise list of exhibits to be offered at trial identified by number for Plaintiff and letter for Defendant;
4. The parties will attempt in good faith to resolve any evidentiary objections to admission of the exhibits, and if agreement cannot be reached, state concisely the reasons for or against admissibility;
5. The stipulation will contain a list of witnesses to be called by each side, with a very brief synopsis of the expected testimony;

6. All factual matters relevant and truly in dispute will be listed, by short paragraph;
7. All legal issues to be decided will be separately listed, by paragraph;
8. Any threshold issues such as Defendants argument about statute of repose will be separately listed along with a suggested means of resolving the issue; and
9. Both sides will estimate expected length of trial, mindful that the court requires all direct testimony by declaration with the witnesses available at trial for live cross and re-direct.

In sum the parties are to do their jobs. If the court's order is not followed in enthusiastic good faith, and completely with the goal of narrowing the issues, and if the resulting product is not a concise, user-friendly joint pretrial stipulation, the offending party or parties will be subject to severe sanctions which may include monetary awards and/or the striking or either the complaint or answer.

Continue about 60 days to accomplish the above.

Tentative for 8/15/19:

Status conference continued to October 24, 2019 at 10:00AM

Once the confusion over which action, which claim, and which defendant remains is cleared up, a series of deadlines will be appropriate to expedite resolution.

Chapter 13

#1.00 Confirmation of Chapter 13 Plan
(cont'd from 8-19-20)

Docket 48

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/16/20:

It would appear that the major points of opposition: (1) eligibility based on lack of regular income and (2) best interest of creditors, can be resolved in favor of the plan. Are there other points of contention? If not, confirm.

Tentative for 8/19/20:

The Trustee's request for an order resetting bar date for exemption objections does not seem grounded in any authority, and therefore is denied. But other issues may remain, as listed by the Trustee:

Chapter 13 Trustee's Notes:

- 1) Need updated declaration re secured payments filed.
- 2) No provision for OC property tax claims filed. Objection filed, hearing 8/19.
- 3) need 2019 tax returns.
- 4) No provision for proof of claim #1, 2017 Ford Explorer.
- 5) Trustee requesting that schedule C objection dates and property valuation waived if case is converted back to chapter 7.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, the court encourages telephonic appearances through CourtCall on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. Telephonic appearances may be arranged by calling (866) 582-6878. If personal appearance is intended, please call the Courtroom Deputy at (714) 338-5304 by 4 p.m. the day before. Otherwise, the doors to the courtroom will be locked.

to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through August 31, 2020.

Tentative for 6/17/20:
This has been continued for a considerable period but progress seems minimal or nonexistent. Nothing was filed by debtor as of 6/11, yet the Trustee's specific points appear to be left unaddressed. Convert to Chapter 7?

Tentative for 4/15/20:
Debtor may have presented enough (barely) to overcome the "regular income" question, but the Trustee's other points remain to be addressed; (1) what about the 3d TD Diversified (2) Ford lease (3) evidence on monthly expenses and reasonableness of same (4) evidence of residence value for best interest of creditors question.

Tentative for 2/19/20:

Tentative for 6/17/20:

It is difficult to determine current status. All plan payments must be current and missing documents provided. Regarding arrearages, was this in the nature of paying the mortgagee on account of taxes advanced on Debtor's behalf? If it was paid to OC taxes directly, this was improper, as it should have been dealt with under the plan. An amended claim should be obtained from the lender either by stipulation or plan objection. No tentative.

Chapter 13

#38.00 Amended Objection To Claim Number 11 by Claimant Golden Star Development, Inc.

Docket 101

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/16/20:

This is an objection to allowance of this post-petition claim as an administrative claim. As §503 makes clear, the timing of a claim is only one element leading to allowance of a claim as administrative one entitled to receive money from property of the estate. There is little or no showing how or why this claim was a value conferred upon and necessary for the administration of the estate. To be clear, it might be a righteous obligation for which debtors are responsible, and it might have created a lien; it just might not be part of the Trustee's job to pay as part of the administration. The court makes no finding on the questions of whether the claim is valid (but non administrative) or secured, and discharge is not implicated. The court is in any event inclined to defer to the Superior Court proceeding currently pending to make the factual determinations. Sustain.

#11.00 Debtor's Motion to Convert Case From Chapter 7 to 11.

Docket 122

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/22/20:

The problem with this motion is that it is completely unsupported by any evidence. At most the declarations attest to a desire to explore a Chapter 11 plan but absolutely no details are given as to how that might be accomplished. It is also obvious that the conversion attempt is connected to the Trustee's motion to sell assets (see #12), so it would appear that the real motivation for this conversion attempt is to frustrate/block the Trustee's sale motion or other efforts to liquidate. While the court always prefers the good faith attempts of debtors to reorganize, this should not be mistaken for naivete. The Marrama case makes abundantly clear that good faith is a necessary prerequisite to conversion into a reorganization chapter. Such inquiry is heightened when it looks like a ploy to evade the trustee. Debtor might have made a closer case if she had given even the most basic explanation of just how she would manage this reorganization at this late date, and no idle promise of 120%+ or other of the moon and stars can convince under these circumstances, where concrete facts are what is needed.

(cont'd from 9-08-20 per order on stip request to cont the hrg date for the tr's mtn for order authorizing sale of litigation entered 8-28-20)

Docket 117

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/22/20:

The court had two concerns regarding this motion: (1) what is that is proposed to be sold, precisely described?, and (2) if the assets sold include trustee's avoidance powers under §§544,547,548 or 549, would the buyer have standing to pursue the actions post sale? On the second question there seems to be adequate authority in the Ninth Circuit supporting a conclusion that prudential standing would exist since, indisputably, creditors do benefit from the price, although the issue could have been more clear had there been a promised "rebate" of some portion of any proceeds to ensure that creditors got paid in full if, after administrative claims, the price is not sufficient to take out all unsecured claims. See Brookview Apts., LLC v. Hoer (In re Weigh), 576 B.R. 189, 205-06 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2017) citing Duckor Spradling & Metzger v. Baum (In re P.R.T. C. Inc.), 177 F.3d 774, 780-82 (9th Cir. 1999). But the first question remains. The description is vague in that inclusion of all rights of action, including trustee avoidance actions, is only one possible interpretation. From what is outlined in the motion it looks like the proposed actions would be in the nature of avoiding certain transactions as fraudulent conveyances, and possibly another as a post-petition transfer (honoring of a check post-petition), but the language used in the motion is susceptible to interpretation. The court will hear argument but is inclined to continue for clarification on this point, and possible re-noticing.

-09-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the motion of Judgment Creditor, Placentia Development Company, LLC ("PDC") to dismiss Bridgemark Corporation, LLC's ("Debtor's") Chapter 11 case pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1112(b) and/or motion for relief from the automatic stay pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §362 (action in nonbankruptcy forum). The motion is opposed by Debtor. No other party has filed any responsive papers.

1. Basic Background Facts

Debtor filed its Petition on January 14, 2020. PDC is the primary creditor owed approximately $42.5 million on account of a state court judgment entered after years of litigation over Debtor's unauthorized use of PDC's land for purposes of extracting oil. Debtor's principal, Robert J. Hall, testified under oath that the company does not have the ability to pay the judgment debt because Debtor's business involves a finite resource of constantly diminishing value. Debtor's second largest non-insider creditor is owed less than $25,000, and all of Debtor's other debts combined add up, at most, to a few hundred thousand. PDC reports that it is offering to acquire all such legitimate, non-insider debts at par. In other words, the judgment owed to PDC accounts for approximately 99.8% of the estate's debt. There do not appear to be any other debts listed as disputed, contingent, or unliquidated. The authorizing resolution appended to Debtor's Petition admits that the purpose of this chapter 11 filing is to allow Debtor a stay pending appeal because the Debtor (and one presumes, its principals) cannot afford a supersedeas bond. During the punitive damages portion of the state court trial this testimony was elicited:

"We cannot pay the 27 million We have no ability to pay any of this. ... I don't care how you do it. There's just no way around that. We don't have the ability to pay it and operate a business. It's done."
Trial Tr. (Ex. B to Kibler Declaration) at 3125:9-13."

Mr. Hall also testified that at best, Bridgemark might theoretically be able to pay the $27 million in compensatory damages at $1 million per year, interest-free, over 27 years. See Id. at 3156:20-23 ["We can't pay it. ... If they would let us pay a million dollars a year for 27 years with no interest, we might be able to work it out."] But as Mr. Hall also testified, Bridgemark is built on "an asset that's declining in value every year.... It just goes down and down and down." Id. at 3113:8-12.

By prior motion the court was informed that Debtor will attempt post judgment motions to reduce the judgment and/or obtain a new trial. No information is provided as to the status of any of those.

The court is also informed that PDC has filed a state court lawsuit against members of the Hall family, who are 100% equity holders of Debtor, alleging, among other things, that the Halls used Debtor as a vehicle to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars to affiliated entities in the form of "management fees" or "consulting fees," which the affiliated entities then – through non-arms' length "loans" to the Halls – used to purchase multi-million-dollar homes, extravagant cars and furnishings, valuable pieces of art, and luxury yachts for personal use and benefit.

Chapter 11

2. Motion to Dismiss & Relief from Stay Standards

Section 1112(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides:

"[O]n request of a party in interest, and after notice and a hearing, the court shall convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 or dismiss a case under this chapter, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate, for cause unless the court determines that the appointment under section 1104(a) of a trustee or an examiner is in the best interests of creditors and the estate."

The statute includes a non-exhaustive list of certain types of "cause," including "substantial or continuing loss to or diminution of the estate and the absence of a reasonable likelihood of rehabilitation," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(A), and "gross mismanagement of the estate," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(B).

Similarly, section 362(d) provides that "[o]n request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, the court shall grant relief from the stay provided under subsection (a) of this section ... for cause," and also provides the non-exhaustive example of "lack of adequate protection."

Given the non-exhaustive nature of "cause" referenced in both sections of the Code, courts have read the term "cause" to include bankruptcy filings that are not appropriate invocations of federal bankruptcy jurisdiction – such as filings in which the avowed purpose of the bankruptcy petition is to avoid posting an appellate bond, or where the petition seeks merely to move what is essentially a two-party dispute from a state court to a federal bankruptcy court. As a matter of shorthand, the case law interpreting §§362(d)(1) and 1112(b) often refer to these types of cause as dismissals for "bad faith" or for lack of "good faith." See generally Marsch v. Marsch (In re Marsch), 36 F.3d 825, 828 (9th Cir. 1994) [employing this terminology, but cautioning that it is misleading: "While the case law refers to these dismissals as dismissals for 'bad faith' filing, it is probably more accurate in light of the precise language of section 1112(b) to call them dismissals 'for cause.']. Thus, the shorthand phrase "good faith" (which does not appear in the statute) does not turn on an inquiry into subjective motivations, thoughts, or feelings. Instead, the question is whether a particular bankruptcy filing transgresses "several, distinct equitable limitations that courts have placed on Chapter 11 filings" in order to "deter filings that seek to achieve objectives outside the legitimate scope of the bankruptcy laws." Id.

In this context, whether there is "cause" for dismissal or relief from stay "depends on an amalgam of factors and not upon a specific fact." In re Mense, 509 B.R. 269, 277 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2014). Four pertinent factors include whether the debtor has unsecured creditors, cash flow, or sources of income to sustain a feasible plan of reorganization, and whether the case is "essentially a two-party dispute capable of prompt adjudication in state court." In re St. Paul Self Storage Ltd. P'ship, 185 B.R. 580, 582–83 (9th Cir. BAP 1995). Courts are particularly suspicious of filings in which the express purpose of the chapter 11 petition is to stay execution of a judgment without an appellate bond. See e.g., In re Integrated Telecom Express, Inc., 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004) ("[I]f there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court."). In such cases, courts consider some or all of the following factors to determine whether bankruptcy jurisdiction is being properly invoked:

- "Whether the debtor had financial problems on the petition date, other than the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor has relatively few unsecured creditors, other than the holder of the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor intends to pursue an effective reorganization within a reasonable period of time, or whether the debtor is unwilling or unable to propose a meaningful plan until the conclusion of the

- "Whether assets of the estate are being diminished by the combined ongoing expenses of the debtor, the chapter 11 proceedings, and prosecution of the appeal." In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 280 (footnotes and citations omitted).

"The bankruptcy court is not required to find that each factor is satisfied or even to weigh each factor equally. Rather, the ... factors are simply tools that the bankruptcy court employs in considering the totality of the circumstances." In re Prometheus Health Imaging, Inc., 2015 WL 6719804, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Nov. 2, 2015) (citations, internal quotation marks, and brackets omitted). Indeed, "[a] bankruptcy court may find one factor dispositive or may find bad faith even if none of the factors are present." In re Greenberg, 2017 WL 3816042, at *5 (9th Cir. BAP Aug. 31, 2017) (citing Mahmood v. Khatib (In re Mahmood), 2017 WL 1032569, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Mar. 17, 2017)).

3. Was Debtor's Petition Filed for a Proper Purpose?

PDC argues that Debtor's petition is a textbook bad faith filing. In support PDC cites In re Integrated Telecom Express, 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004), where the court stated bluntly: "if there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay provision to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court." PDC also cites In re Casey, 198 B.R. 910, 917–18 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1996) for the proposition that the "use [of] bankruptcy to defeat the state law appeal bond requirement" is not a "legitimate bankruptcy purpose."

In response Debtor argues that at least some courts have held that a chapter 11 filing can properly substitute for posting an appeal bond. For example, Debtor cites Marshall v. Marshall (In re Marshall), 721 F.3d 1032,

1048 (9th Cir. 2013) where the court found:

Here, unlike in Marsch and Boynton, the record suggests that Howard and Ilene's liquid assets were probably insufficient to satisfy the judgment or cover the cost of a supersedeas bond. The bankruptcy court found that the Fraud Judgment amounted to over $12 million plus interest, that the "custom" in Texas was to set appeal bonds at 150% of the judgment, and that Howard did not have sufficient liquid assets to post a bond of that size. Although the record does not invariably indicate that the Debtors could not finance a supersedeas bond, we cannot say that the bankruptcy court's determination was clearly erroneous. Moreover, notwithstanding their ability to finance a bond, Howard and Ilene's inclusion of the Fraud Judgment in their initial Plan suggests that they filed their bankruptcy petition for the proper purpose of reorganization, not as a mere ploy to avoid posting the bond.

Debtor argues that the language quoted above, and others expressing similar sentiment, is applicable to our case. Debtor also points out that it is not attempting to avoid posting an appeal bond, it simply cannot do so, which Debtor argues is a critical distinction.

PDC argues that the cases cited by Defendant must be viewed according to their unique factual context, rather than relying solely on the ultimate result. For example, PDC points out that in Marshall, the judgment creditor who moved to dismiss the case as a bad faith filing had already missed the claims bar date (which was November 15, 2002) when he filed the motion to dismiss (on December 13, 2002). See In re Marshall, 298 B.R. 670, 674 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2003). At the time the motion to dismiss was filed, the debtors had already proposed a plan that would pay every other creditor with timely claims in full. Id. It was in this context that the Circuit court held that the bankruptcy court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to dismiss for bad faith. Indeed, the Marshall Circuit court stated, "we agree with the bankruptcy court that '[p]erhaps the most compelling grounds for denying a motion to dismiss grounded on bad faith is the determination that a reorganization plan qualifies for confirmation." Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681)). PDC persuasively argues that it would be inappropriate to infer a broader rule from Marshall. PDC argues with some persuasion that the other cases cited by Debtor were ones in which the courts based their holdings on the unique circumstances before them and did not articulate rules of general applicability.

Similarly, on the relief of stay question, Debtor's citation to In re Badax, LLC, 608 B.R. 730 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2019), also appears to be misplaced. Debtor takes a small section of the opinion where the court stated that the conclusion of bad faith was not based solely on the debtor's failure to obtain a bond, but rather based on a totality of the circumstances. Id. at 741. However, PDC points out that the Badax court specifically held that relief from stay was granted because the case had been filed in an attempt to delay execution on an adverse judgment and also because "there [was] no basis to conclude that a speedy, efficient and feasible reorganization [was] realistic." Id.

In contrast PDC argues that the instant case is more similar in substance to several other cases including Windscheffel v. Montebello Unified School District (In re Windscheffel), 2017 WL 1371294 (9th Cir. BAP Apr. 3, 2017). In Windscheffel, the debtor filed an appeal of an approximately $3 million state court judgment, but "claimed that he was unable to post the required supersedeas bond to stay enforcement of the judgment." Id. at *1. "He filed bankruptcy to avoid posting the bond and to stay [the judgment creditor's] collection efforts." Id. The debtor had, at most, four unsecured creditors (including the judgment creditor). The debtor filed a proposed chapter 11 plan that was "a thinly veiled attempt to avoid the state court's award of punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest because it proposed to pay 49.22 percent of [the judgment creditor's] claim, which was (not coincidentally) the approximate amount of the state court judgment without punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest." Id. The debtor later amended his plan to provide that if the judgment were upheld on appeal, he would liquidate his assets and give the proceeds to the judgment creditor. Id. The Ninth Circuit BAP affirmed the bankruptcy court's holding that the "totality of the circumstances" warranted dismissal of the case for cause. Id. at *4.

PDC argues that Debtor has admitted in the authorizing resolution attached to its Petition that this case was filed to circumvent the requirement to post a supersedeas bond: "Since the Company lacks the financial resources to post a bond, the only way to protect the interests of all stakeholders [i.e., the Hall family] is to commence a case under chapter 11" Docket No. 1 at PDF page 5 of 101. PDC also points to the First Day Declaration, and specifically the section entitled "Events Leading to the Bankruptcy" which only mentions the judgment debt, and really nothing else, as the major cause of the bankruptcy filing. Therefore, PDC argues with some persuasion that it is obvious that the only purpose served by filing the Chapter 11 petition was to attempt to avoid the posting of an appeal bond. After all, Debtor's entire business model as amplified in Mr. Hall's testimony is built upon extracting a finite and irreplaceable resource, which might be said to make a reorganization over time inherently less feasible than other businesses.

PDC next argues that because the dispute is solely between PDC and Debtor, for purposes of a finding of bad faith, this case is fundamentally a two-party dispute, which is continuing even now. PDC cites In re Murray, 543 B.R. 484, 494–95 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016), aff'd, 565 B.R. 527 (S.D.N.Y. 2017), aff'd, 900 F.3d 53 (2d Cir. 2018), for the proposition that, "Bankruptcy is a collective remedy, with the original purpose – which continues to this day – to address the needs and concerns of creditors with competing demands to debtors' limited assets" As such, PDC argues, "[a] chapter 11 reorganization case has been filed in bad faith when it is an apparent two-party dispute that can be resolved outside of the Bankruptcy Court's jurisdiction." Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC v. Sholes (In re Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC), 2011 WL 4502102, at *10 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. Aug. 26,

PDC argues that there is no need for the "collective remedy" of bankruptcy as articulated above because there are no other creditors with competing demands to Debtor's assets. All other claims against Debtor are de minimis relative to the Judgment, and also appear to be undisputed. Cf. In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 (dismissing chapter 11 case where debtors had "few unsecured creditors" other than judgment creditor); In re Windscheffel, 2017 WL 1371294, at *5 (affirming dismissal of case where claims of other unsecured creditors were "negligible" compared to judgment creditor's claim). In fact, if the judgment debt did not exist, it appears Debtor would have more than sufficient cash on hand to pay any other outstanding debts without difficulty. See First Day Decl. ¶¶ 22 (stating that Debtor has unrestricted cash of approximately $4.2 million) & 28–30 (describing secured car loans, royalty obligations, and accounts payable totaling less than $700,000). PDC reminds the court that it also offers to acquire all legitimate, non-insider claims at par value, leaving no reason that such creditors cannot be paid in full.

Finally, PDC argues, citing In re Chu, 253 B.R. 92, 95 (S.D. Cal. 2000) that for purposes of a finding of bad faith, Debtor's prepetition improper conduct provides additional support for dismissing the case outright or granting relief of stay. Thus, use of a debtor's assets to fund the expenses of its principals is one factor indicative of bad faith. See, e.g., In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 n.26. PDC argues that Debtor's alleged tortious prepetition conduct, which precipitated the underlying lawsuit that ultimately led to the judgment (which included punitive damages), should be considered by the court. The court should also consider the allegations contained in the litigation PDC has pending against the Hall family, which alleges that family members essentially used Debtor as a piggy bank to mask income from Debtor.

Though perhaps not always perfect analogues, it appears that PDC's characterization of Ninth Circuit jurisprudence is more in line with the current case than those cases cited by Debtor. To be clear, the court is less concerned with Debtor's heated rhetoric impugning PDC's motivation in pursuing this motion (and PDC's allegations of post-petition misconduct by the Debtor and the Hall family) than it is with PDC's arguments that a reorganization is likely not feasible due to the enormous judgment debt and Debtor's ever diminishing product source. The court is also not impressed with Debtor's assertion that allowing PDC to collect on its judgment would amount necessarily to a business fatality. First, it is far from clear that PDC wants to "kill" the Debtor as it would seem far more logical to continue operations, at least until the judgment is paid. Perhaps not so clear is why the Hall family should get to stay in authority. Debtor's principals, as the trial court found, are responsible for this misfortune as indicated by the addition of punitive damages to the judgment.

The court also disagrees with Debtor's premise that simply because Debtor is currently operating a viable business, a successful reorganization is realistic. Even Debtor's authorities suggesting a Chapter 11 to avoid an appeal bond may serve a legitimate purpose do so largely because a reorganization benefitting an array of creditors with divergent interests seemed possible or even likely. See e.g. Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048-49 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681), citing Marsch, 36 F. 3d at 828 and In re Boynton, 184 B.R. 580, 581, 583 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1995). But little or no effort is made here to show how this Debtor can possibly confirm a non-consensual plan under these circumstances, where 99+% of the debt is in hostile hands. This must particularly be so where PDC has offered to make all other creditors whole either by buying the claims or by filing a competing plan. How does Debtor get away with claiming an impaired consenting class in those circumstances, even if separate classification maneuvers could succeed? Adding to this problem is Mr. Hall's admission that the assets are a diminishing resource, thus calling into question the feasibility of a long-term payout. Debtor may cite to 11 U.S.C. §1129 (c) which requires the court, when two plans are confirmable, to consider the interests of equity. But this assumes that Debtor's plan could in any event be confirmable, a somewhat dubious proposition. A plan that proposes nothing more than delay while the appeals are resolved should be regarded as "dead on arrival."

But the court is willing to give the Debtor a short but reasonable extension to answer these questions about just how probable a reorganization is or can be despite these obstacles. In this the court is uninterested in platitudes; rather, a point by point, connect the dots proposal to reorganization that could be plausibly crammed down is what is needed. Further, PDC may also amplify the record with a more complete evidentiary showing which might support a charge of prepetition fraud or mismanagement as discussed at §§1104(a)(1) (or implicated in 1112) thereby strengthening the argument that there is no legitimate reason for maintaining management. Debtor should not expect an extension of exclusivity, however, which will run out on or about May 14, 2020.

Continue hearing about 60 days to allow Debtor to explain how reorganization is feasible in these circumstances.

(cont'd from 8-13-20)

Docket 113

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/24/20:

This matter is distressing in that the court's sanctions orders reportedly remain unpaid, and debtor makes no showing of impossibility on payment, which might theoretically have been a defense to further contempt. He apparently just refuses to pay. That might be remedied if the levies undertaken by Foothill bear fruit, but nothing on that subject appears in the papers. But it does cause the court to wonder what, if anything, would be accomplished by upping the monetary sanction further. Foothill suggests that defiance is ongoing in the Third Amended Complaint in state court in that Sabrina Herman reiterates what Foothill characterizes as the same emotional damages claims as were already the subject of what the Trustee sold to Foothill. That is not so clear. Although as drafted the Third Amended Complaint recites at length the sad ten-year history of this dispute (to which end is not made clear) the prayer seems focused on the personal property (plants and urn), and any consequential damages that might emanate therefrom. So construed that might not violate this court's earlier order except that the court seems to remember a monetary cap, but it is not sure whether that relates to the possibility of emotional distress damages based on conversion of personalty (if such thing exists in California law). Presumably Sabrina Herman, and her husband acting as lawyer, will argue that the long recital of history in the Third amended Complaint is not an attempt to reopen the causes of action already sold but just to inform the state court on background. The court does observe this is now in limited jurisdiction court so there might be a de facto lid on damages in any event. So, the parties are invited to explain exactly how this conduct continues to violate this court's previous orders in such a way as to constitute ongoing contempt. But failure to pay what is already ordered is still an open question on that point.

Tentative for 8/13/20:

The sanction was doubled at the 7/23 hearing but reportedly nothing has been paid in whole or in part of any portion. Even more grave is the report that the Hermans have filed a motion before the state court for leave to amend the complaint which, although seemingly labelled as confined to negligent destruction of personal property, nevertheless asserts millions in damages for emotional distress and punitive damages, which, as a whole, seems a thinly disguised re-assertion of claims this court has already ruled were owned by the estate and sold by its trustee to Foothill. But, reportedly, the state court has relegated the amendment motion for the limited jurisdiction court to decide. Depending on how that goes it would seem that these proposed amendments may not be allowed, or at least not allowed consistent with the jurisdiction of that court deciding the question, and thus effectively foreclosed. In either case, it would seem that Mr. Herman does not intend to accept this court's decisions. The court is inclined to see whether the amendment is allowed by the limited jurisdiction court before assessing whether yet more sanctions or other measures are warranted.

Tentative for 7/23/20:

New for 7/23: Mr. Herman's objection to order for sanctions and stay of proceedings pending appeal. Mr. Herman argues that he has appealed this court's contempt order, which divests this court of jurisdiction. This objection was filed on 6/26/20.

The objection is linked to the notice of lodgment of the order requiring Herman to pay $2,000 as a sanction for his continuing violation of this court's May 11, 2020 contempt order.

Foothill and the Chapter 7 Trustee have filed a joint supplemental report noting Mr. Herman's continuing noncompliance. Per the report, Mr. Herman is continuing his campaign in state court asserting that this wife may make claims beyond that which this court set forth. The state court has apparently issued an OSC re dismissal and a separate OSC regarding the court's proposed transfer of the Surviving Claims to a court of limited jurisdiction (i.e. claims for damages of less than $25,000). These matters are set for hearing on August 7, 2020. Unsurprisingly, Mr. Herman has also failed to pay the sanction to Foothill as ordered.

Regarding Mr. Herman's assertion that the appeal divests this court of jurisdiction over the contempt order, Foothill cites Hoffman v. Beer Drivers and Salesmen's Local Union No. 88, 536 F.2d 1268, 1276 (9th Cir. 1976) for the proposition that, in the context of contempt proceedings like the ones here, "where the court supervises a continuing course of conduct and where as new facts develop additional supervisory action by the court is required, an appeal from the supervisory order does not divest the [court] of jurisdiction to continue its supervision, even though in the course of that supervision the court act upon or modifies the order from which the appeal is taken." Trustee further cites Hughes v. Sharp, 476 F.2d 975 (9th Cir. 1973), where the court noted, that when the contemnor is a party to the pending proceedings, and when those proceedings are still under way, the court lacks jurisdiction to consider the purported appeal from a contempt order as that order is interlocutory. The court stated that although this may seem harsh, a contemnor is not without recourse, as among his options is purging his contempt. Id. Foothill also notes that the notice of appeal was untimely and that a new appeal cannot be initiated by simply amending the notice of appeal; a new notice of appeal is required.

By contrast, Mr. Herman's objection is completely devoid of analysis and contains only vague citations to cases standing for the broad proposition that an appeal divests the bankruptcy court of jurisdiction over those aspects of the case involved in the appeal. But those cases cited by Mr. Herman do not undercut the cases cited by Foothill. Mr. Herman has not filed anything responsive to Foothill's supplemental report.

The message that the court sent to Mr. Herman at the last hearing on 6/25 was apparently not received, even when Mr. Herman was unambiguously ordered to pay a sanction of $2,000 to Foothill to put a sharper point on the message. Mr. Herman seems to be operating on the misguided assumption that his appeal puts him out of reach of this court, leaving him free to pursue conduct this court has already characterized as contumacious. However, as the case law cited above demonstrates, the court remains vested with the power to monitor Mr. Herman's ongoing misconduct, and modify the contempt order as necessary.

The court has already noted that Mr. Herman is playing with fire by continuing to ignore this court's orders. It does not appear, however, that Mr. Herman is altering his course. Rather, he persists, relying on legalistic arguments about finality of orders which, as explained above, are not persuasive. But this course is causing real, continuing damages to Foothill. So, the court has little choice but to raise the stakes in hopes of reaching the requisite coercion threshold. The sanction is doubled to $4,000, payable forthwith to Foothill. The court notes that the Superior Court has now also scheduled this matter on order to show cause for August 7, 2020. A further hearing will be scheduled for a mutually convenient date after August 7 to evaluate where we stand and whether yet more coercion is needed.

Tentative for 6/25/20:

Following the hearing on the OSC re: Contempt on April 29, Foothill Financial and Trustee jointly lodged an order on April 30. The official order issued on May 11. Mr. Herman filed an untimely objection to the lodged order.

To accompany his objection to the lodged order, Mr. Herman attached his own proposed order, which bears little resemblance to the actual ruling on the OSC and several other orders issued by this court.

The most consequential rewrite Mr. Herman makes to his proposed order is where he states that per our abstention order, he is allowed to pursue in state court all claims that may belong solely to his wife with no limit on value. This is despite the many orders issued by this court where the specific claims the court abstained from are listed. Foothill's response catalogues the various orders and judgments with the court's very clear language articulating the narrow scope of its abstention.

Mr. Herman appears to have seized upon the most miniscule ambiguity to deliberately disregard the language and spirit of this court's orders in an attempt to reframe his dismissed claims as belonging solely to his wife, thereby allowing him to re-litigate them in state court. Mr. Herman may have already filed a version of his order with the state court. Foothill and Trustee are understandably dismayed by this latest attempt to hinder and delay.

In light of this most recent and fairly egregious transgression, Foothill requests that the court now impose monetary sanctions. Foothill suggests that Mr. Herman should pay the fees incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's ongoing contempt, which Foothill estimates in its status report at $7,500.

Mr. Herman has filed his own status report asserting that the contempt order is on appeal and there is nothing else to be adjudicated by this court at this time, all matters now being with the district court.

Mr. Herman is playing with fire. Rather than displaying even a modicum of compunction after being adjudged to be in contempt, Mr. Herman asserts in his objection that his contempt is now purged, and that it never truly existed in the first place. Mr. Herman, we should not forget, is also an attorney, and is presumed to be able to understand court orders and the consequences for disregarding them. Thus, a measured and modest monetary sanction is likely appropriate, with the promise of more severe sanctions to follow if Mr. Herman continues to misconduct himself.

The court requests an update on whether Mr. Herman actually lodged a bogus form of order with the state court. Impose monetary sanctions of $2000 payable jointly to Foothill and Trustee.

Tentative for 4/29/20:

This is a hearing on the court's Order to Show Cause why Debtor, Richard P. Herman ("Debtor") should not be held in Contempt of Court for Violating Court Orders and The Automatic Stay. The OSC was issued on March 18, 2020. Specifically, the OSC requires that Debtor demonstrate:

(a) Why he should not be held in contempt for

i. his continuing efforts to exercise control over and interfere with the dismissal of the estate's claims in direct violation of the express provisions of this Court's orders and Judgment as well as the provisions of the automatic stay; and

ii. his continuing violation of this Court's permanent injunction by continuing to assert and pursue claims in the state court that this Court has enjoined him from asserting or pursuing.

(b) Why he should not be subjected to the following sanctions:

i. Imposition of a coercive fine, payable to the Court, for each day that he remains in contempt; and

ii. Compensatory damages incurred by Foothill and the Trustee as a result of Mr. Herman's contemptuous conduct, including the attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and appear at the hearing thereon, and any additional attorneys' fees and costs incurred by Foothill and/or the Trustee to respond and appear with respect to Mr. Herman's pleadings filed in the state court in violation of this Court's orders.

Both Debtor and Foothill Financial, L.P. ("Foothill") have filed timely responses.

Debtor's response is not persuasive. The main problem is that Debtor feigns ignorance or misunderstanding of this court's orders. Debtor appears to be arguing that his action(s) in state court are legitimate considering this court's abstention from adjudicating the remaining claims that were not deemed property of the estate. As argued effectively by Foothill in its response, this court has been clear in its delineation between what causes of action are and are not property of the estate. The court has clearly stated in prior adopted tentative rulings, the "surviving claims" are limited to claims for negligent damage to personal property in an amount not to exceed $3,500, and for his wife to pursue the same cause of action provided that she could establish that the damaged property was her separate property. These very narrow categories can have little relationship with what Debtor seems to persist in filing in the State Court.

As argued by Foothill, Mr. Herman is contending, here and in the State Court, that the "abstained claims" include claims other than the surviving claims identified by this court, which Mr. Herman argues are to be "defined in the State Court." Foothill notes that Debtor's response cites no authority or document that could possibly lead Debtor to such an understanding.

To aggravate the problem, Debtor is a licensed attorney of long standing, and so may be reasonably presumed to be able to understand court orders, and importantly, the consequences for ignoring them. Thus, his reported actions, which he does not deny, can be viewed as deliberate refusals to abide by this court's lawful orders.

Debtor's citation to Taggart is inapposite as Debtor does not really attempt to draw any parallels between Taggart and the present case, nor could he.

As Foothill correctly notes, unlike in Taggart, neither Foothill nor the Trustee has sought damages under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k), but rather this proceeding involves the court's authority to enforce its orders by imposing civil contempt remedies. Moreover, although there is more than ample basis for this court to find that Debtor's conduct was (and continues to be) "willful," the Supreme Court in Taggart expressly held that, in the civil contempt context, it is error to apply a subjective standard. Id. at 1804; see also In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) (no finding of bad faith or willful misconduct is required as "the focus is not on the subjective beliefs or intent of the contemnors in complying with the order, but whether in fact their conduct complied with the order at issue") (internal quotations omitted). Instead, the Supreme Court held, "[b]ased on the traditional principles that govern civil contempt, the proper standard is an objective one." Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 1804. Thus, Foothill argues, under Taggart, remedies for civil contempt are appropriate where "there is no objectively reasonable basis for concluding that the [contemnor's] conduct might be lawful under the . . . order." Id. at 1801 (rejecting a "good faith" defense and instead establishing an objective reasonableness standard in the context of contempt proceedings arising out of the violation of a discharge order).

The court has patiently entertained Debtor's numerous motions, many of which have been of dubious merit and suspected of being nothing more than attempts to delay enforcement of Foothill's legal rights. Many have been repetitive and do nothing but rehash the same issues. The court is now left with no option but to use its coercive powers to compel Debtor to abide by its orders. Thus, the question then is, what form should the coercive measures take? Foothill suggests the following measures be imposed:

1. Order Debtor to pay to the court a fine in the amount of $1,000 for each day that he remains in contempt, and direct that, in addition to ceasing and desisting from any further contemptuous behavior, Debtor shall cure his existing contempt forthwith by immediately filing with the State Court a notice: (1) withdrawing his motion for reconsideration seeking to set aside the State Court's dismissal of the Estate Claims as requested by the Trustee, and (2) affirming to the State Court that the only cause of action that the Hermans assert is the remaining single cause of action for negligent damage to personal property, which cause of action is limited to (a) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to his tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants) in an amount not to exceed $3,500"; and (b) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to her tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants), but only to the extent that Mrs. Herman can establish that the tangible personal property alleged to have been damaged was her sole and separate property as of the commencement of the bankruptcy case on October 17, 2017."

2. That the court compensate Foothill for its attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and this reply, and to appear at the hearing on the Order to Show Cause, by ordering Debtor to pay to Foothill, by no later than May 15, 2020, the amount of $6,000, which is the minimum amount of fees and costs incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's contempt.

The court will forbear from the harsher methods, for now. But Debtor must accept that the matter has been decided, and further gainsaying is not only a waste of resources but an affront to the court and to the other parties, and thus a further contempt. Debtor may purge his contempt by promptly filing a withdrawal of the reconsideration motion on the dismissal of the "Estate claim" and affirming that insofar as the State court action will continue, it will be confined to the limited issues as outlined in paragraph 1 above. The court will not rule upon the other suggested sanctions as outlined in paragraph 2, for now, pending a report to be filed at least 14 days before the continued hearing regarding the dismissal etc. mentioned above.

The court finds debtor is in contempt. Initial sanction is as outlined above. A further hearing will be scheduled in approximately 60 days when status of compliance, and thus possible further sanctions, will be considered.

(set at s/c held 8-15-19)
(cont'd from 9-10-20 per order continuance of pre-trial conf. entered 9-04-20)

Docket 1

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/24/20:

The court will spare all a long recital of the frustrations occasioned by the continued and dismal lack of cooperation in these related cases, or the parties' seeming indifference to either the court's orders or to the LBRs. The court will only state this is not the first time. Here we are, at the date of pretrial conference and we have nothing at all from the defendant, and what might be worse, no explanation either. So be it. Plaintiff's unilateral pretrial order is adopted. How the defendant can still make a case around those provisions is unclear. A trial date will be scheduled approximately three months hence. The court will hear argument whether this should be in person or via Zoom.

Tentative for 2/27/20:

This is supposed to be a pre-trial conference. Sadly, it is not that and this is hardly the first time in this series of cases where the court has been sorely frustrated.

As required by the LBRs, the parties were to have met and conferred in good faith to narrow the issues so that trial time could be focused on those items truly in dispute. Local Rule 7016-1 sets forth a very specific timeline and list of duties incumbent on each side. At LBR 7016-1(b)(1)(C) Plaintiff was to have initiated a meet and confer at least 28 days before the date set for the pre-trial conference. According to Defendant's papers, this did not occur 28 days before the originally scheduled pretrial conference of Feb. 6, or indeed at all until February 13 when Plaintiff reportedly filed his "Pretrial Stipulation" in which he claims it was Defendants who "refused to participate in the pretrial stipulation process" necessitating what is actually a unilateral stipulation. Defendant on the next day, February 14, filed his Unilateral Pretrial Stipulation. Defendant does acknowledge at his page 2, line1-2 that Plaintiff sent something over to Defendant on January 28, but it was reportedly "not complete in any respect." As to the original date of the Pretrial Conference of February 6, that was very late. Whether that document was anything close to what was later filed unilaterally on Feb. 13 is not clarified. But what is very clear is that these two unilateral "stipulations" are largely worthless in the main goal of narrowing issues inasmuch as the parties seem to be discussing two entirely different complaints. Defendant focuses on what the former trustee (now deceased) may have known about the existence of a loan undisclosed on the schedules made by Frank to WeCosign, Inc., which loan was reportedly worthless in any case, and about how that knowledge should be imputed to Plaintiff Marshack. But why the trustee's knowledge, imputed or otherwise, should justify an alleged misstatement or omission to list assets under oath, is never quite explained. One presumes Defendant will argue materiality. Plaintiff focuses on the alleged use of another corporation, Tara Pacific, as the repository of funds taken from WeCosign as an alleged fraudulent conveyance and then used by Frank and Tara as a piggy bank between 2010 and 2012 and upon alleged misstatements in the schedules about Tara's and Frank's actual average income. While this sounds like a fraudulent conveyance theory the gist seems to be that Tara and Frank were using ill-gotten gains to live on while denying in respective schedules that they had any income (or assets) thus comprising a false oath. There probably are connections between these different stories, but that is not made at all clear (and it must be made clear). Plaintiff's overlong "stipulation" is written more like a 'cut and paste' brief containing long tables with over 59 footnotes inserted. One presumes this represents a good faith compilation of bank records, but even that is left unclear. But the language used reads purely as advocacy, not an attempt to narrow the disputed facts in a way the other side can sign.

Buried in the Defendant's recitations (at page 4, ¶ 13) is the argument that the case should be dismissed as outside the statute of limitation (or statute of repose in Defendant's terms) described at §727(e)(1). Why this was not raised 50+ months ago when the action was filed by Rule 12(b) motion or otherwise is not explained. What the Defendant expects the court to do with this point now is also not explained.

In sum, this case is still a disorganized mess. This is not the first time the court has voiced its utter frustration with this series of cases. Rather than being ready for trial, we are very much still at the drawing board. The court is not happy about it as this is hardly a young case.

What is the remedy? The court could order sanctions against either side, or maybe both sides, and that would be richly deserved. The court could decide that Plaintiff as the party with the initial duty under the LBRs should suffer the brunt of just consequences by a dismissal, as the ultimate sanction. But however tedious and frustrating this has become the court would rather see these cases decided on their merits (if any) if that is possible. But what the court will not do is to further indulge these parties in disobeying the LBRs and generally continuing to shamle along, never getting anywhere.

Therefore, it is ordered:

1. The parties will immediately meet and confer about reducing the two unilateral 'stipulations' into an intelligible, single, useful list of items not in dispute and therefore requiring no further litigation;
2. The resulting stipulation will be concise, user-friendly and focused on the actual legal issues to be tried;

3. The stipulation will contain a concise list of exhibits to be offered at trial identified by number for Plaintiff and letter for Defendant;
4. The parties will attempt in good faith to resolve any evidentiary objections to admission of the exhibits, and if agreement cannot be reached, state concisely the reasons for or against admissibility;
5. The stipulation will contain a list of witnesses to be called by each side, with a very brief synopsis of the expected testimony;
6. All factual matters relevant and truly in dispute will be listed, by short paragraph;
7. All legal issues to be decided will be separately listed, by paragraph;
8. Any threshold issues such as Defendants argument about statute of repose will be separately listed along with a suggested means of resolving the issue; and
9. Both sides will estimate expected length of trial, mindful that the court requires all direct testimony by declaration with the witnesses available at trial for live cross and re-direct.

In sum the parties are to do their jobs. If the court's order is not followed in enthusiastic good faith, and completely with the goal of narrowing the issues, and if the resulting product is not a concise, user-friendly joint pretrial stipulation, the offending party or parties will be subject to severe sanctions which may include monetary awards and/or the striking or either the complaint or answer.

Continue about 60 days to accomplish the above.

#1.00 Motion Debtor's Motion for Order Dismissing Its Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Case Upon Distribution of Funds to Creditors

Docket 152

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/30/20:

One reason that this motion drew the opposition of the UST (and discomforts the court) is that a dismissal foregoes all protections otherwise available to creditors. This alternative is offered in the interest of efficiency, but that is not the court's only consideration. The court is somewhat comforted by the fact that monies are on deposit in trust with counsel. But also, we do not have (insofar as the court could tell) a final allowance of fees. Not all shortcuts can be accommodated for efficiency. For example, the court notes that interest to creditors is ignored although required under §726(a)(5). These issues can be minimized if the motion is continued with notice to all creditors and attaching a proposed distribution ledger including an increment for interest figured at the federal rate, with a short-form fee application (mere recital of accrued fees with time sheets sufficient). Then a provisional order could be expected allowing counsel to submit a post hearing dismissal order accompanied by a declaration that all checks have been paid.

Disclosure Statement to accompany its First Amended Plan. The Disclosure Statement is still not adequate for at least the following reasons:

1. Sale of the real property in San Juan Capistrano, the premises for debtor's business, is promised no later than February 28, 2020. But just how this is to be accomplished without a §363(f) order is not explained and it is obvious that a plan providing for same is not yet possible. This needs better explanation and/or a more realistic timetable.
2. The plan still needs a better discussion as to how the equity interests are being treated. Presumably this belongs in Class 4 and there should be there a discussion about the absolute priority rule and the contribution of $20,000 in new value. Further, some discussion as to how/why that is the proper number is necessary given the requirements of "market testing" found in Bank of America NT & SA v. 203 N. La Salle Street Partnership 526 U.S. 434 (1999) would be in order.
3. The description about discharge at 21:1-3 should be corrected in view of §1141(d)(3) as suggested by the United States Trustee.
4. As indicated in the opposition of Seacoast Commerce Bank a better job could be done explaining how this plan is feasible if, as Seacoast argues, only about $13,000 is available on a net basis for monthly debt service after costs of operation. Normally, feasibility is a confirmation issue, but this would be the opportunity to explain in simple terms how this works.
5. Some discussion about the alleged $150,000 loan to an insider needs to be discussed and if it is not to be pursued, why.
6. A consistent explanation as to whether Northeast Bank is truly a fully secured creditor at $93,118 including post-petition assets is necessary, in order to evaluate the best interest of creditors test, as Seacoast argues.

7. Some discussion about the pending litigation against Seacoast is also necessary. Is this to be pursued post confirmation? If so, how is the litigation to be funded and what goal is sought? If a judgment were achieved what becomes of the proceeds?

Deny

Tentative for 1/8/20:

This is debtor's motion for approval of disclosure statement as required under §1125(a)(1) as containing "adequate information." An adequacy finding is opposed in oppositions filed by both the UST and Seacoast Commerce Bank. The oppositions are both well taken, and the points raised need not be restated at elaborate length here. The court is primarily concerned about the following fundamental deficiencies:

1. The plan clearly violates the absolute priority rule found at §1129(b)(2) (B)(ii). The plan proposes only 1% to unsecured creditors in installments yet the principals retain governance and stock ownership. Seacoast, which itself may be the largest unsecured creditor, plans to vote against. No new value is mentioned. So, unless something else is true this plan is patently unconfirmable, and distribution of a disclosure statement on such a plan is a waste of time and resources. While the court does not usually prejudice confirmation issues, this one is too fundamental to ignore, and so either amendment or at least explanation is required;
2. The proposed treatment of Seacoast's secured claim is also very problematic. Debtor proposes either to cramdown a payment over 30 years at 5% or a "consensual sale" of the underlying real estate collateral. But the timing and conditions of the proposed sale are unstated, not made subject to conditions and are, thus, illusory. Can the debtor sell whenever it feels like it? Whenever in future it thinks the market has appreciated enough, even if that takes years, or never? The alternative treatment is also a non-starter. An effective 100% loan to value claim is far riskier than a more conventional loan usually made as a percentage of value. Consequently, the increased risk element must be accommodated (paid for), and anything less is a legally impermissible imposition of the risk upon the lender. See In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Although this is usually a confirmation issue, 5% is far too low for a commercial loan under any reasonable economic analysis, i.e. prime rate is 4.75% and must be "built up" from there even under a Till analysis. North Valley Mall is not the only analysis relied upon by courts, but this court happens to believe it is the most appropriate in a business, real estate context. Therefore, the court will not approve dissemination of disclosure upon such a patently unconfirmable plan.

3. Feasibility is very questionable. Again, normally this is judged at confirmation, but the court does not ignore that the MORS show a generally declining cash position, and this is while there has been a 9-month moratorium in debt payments. Had even reduced payments been made the debtor would be by now out of money. What, if anything, is expected to change this outlook?

#3.00 STATUS CONFERENCE RE: Motion For Order Determining Value Of Collateral (set from mtn hrg held on 7-22-20)

Docket 92

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/30/20:

Continue to October 28 @ 10:00. Appraisals to be exchanged within seven days and briefs from both sides (with appraisals as exhibits) to be filed not later than October 13, with sur replies, if any, not later than October 23. Counsel should address whether live testimony via Zoom or possibly in person, will be required.

Tentative for 7/22/20:

Debtor acknowledges he bears the burden of proof in this valuation motion under §506. He offers only his own declaration, which, although not entirely inadmissible as an owner, suffers from several problems such as the obvious self-interest as well as reductions dependent on expertise that the declarant does not evidentially possess (i.e. structural repairs, opinion on which side of the street is more valuable and the appropriate amount of reduction, even if true, etc.). Consequently, that burden is not carried. The IRS similarly offers declarations based on hearsay reports of computerized databases such as Zillow, or upon the county assessor, which is/are a notoriously inaccurate basis of current value. Moreover, the range of values, $900,000 to $1.3 million is significant and where the value falls may be quite significant (strategic) in determining treatment of junior liens. Consequently, the court cannot render an informed judgment on this record. Absent an agreed single appraiser, each side will be required to submit his/its own professional appraisal of the subject property. These are to be filed at least two weeks before the hearing. Depending on range of resulting values, there may be a further requirement of an evidentiary hearing. Continue.

Tentative for 3/7/19:

It would seem that the areas still subject to reasonable dispute all go to whether the Fus committed fraud between the inception of the credit in May of 2008 and the onset of the admitted fraud commencing October of 2008. Another issue would be the usual predicates to fraud such as reasonable reliance by bank personnel or auditors on statements made and materials given during that period. On damages, it might also.

While the court can identify the window of time that is relevant, it has no inclination to limit the means of discovery which can include all of the normal tools: depositions, subpoenas, including to third parties, and interrogatories and/or requests for admission.

- #2.00 STATUS CONFERENCE RE: Complaint For Avoidance And Recovery Of Unauthorized Post-Petition Transfer (con't from 5-27-20) (rescheduled from 5-28-2020 at 10:00 a.m. per court)

Docket 1

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/1/20:

Either off calendar or continue to coincide with compromise motion.

Tentative for 5/27/20:

The court's order to mediate was not a suggestion. As the court recollects, the amount in dispute is now down to $5800, is that right? If so, it is madness not to settle this. Since the parties seem not to be cooperating (neither side's position impresses), if a mediator is not agreed within ten days then each side to select a mediator, and those two will choose a single third person to serve as actual mediator for them from the panel. Mediation may occur remotely, but is to be completed within 90 days. The conference will be continued but if a mediation does not occur as ordered within the time allowed you may expect sanctions which could include striking of pleadings. Continue approximately 120 days.

Tentative for 2/20/20:

See #3.

#10.00 Motion To Set Aside Entry Of Default Of Olga Shabanets, As Trustee Of The 2012 Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Igor Shabanets Dated November 12, 2012; Olga Shabanets, an individual, To Complaint

Docket 31

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/1/20:

Plaintiff served a copy of the summons and complaint on Defendants on May 15, 2020, with an answer due by June 8, 2020. On July 15, 2020, Plaintiff sought entry of default against Defendants. Entry of default was made on July 15 and 16, 2020. This motion was filed on August 31, 2020.

Defendants' main argument is that the failure to respond to the summons and complaint was due to being served at the wrong address. Specifically, Defendants assert that Plaintiff mailed a copy of the Summons and Complaint to Defendants on May 15, 2020 to the address 2 Monarch Cove, Dana Point, CA 92692-4246. Olga asserts that she has not resided at 2 Monarch Cove, Dana Point, CA 92692 ("2 Monarch") since August 8, 2019. Therefore, she never received timely notice or service of the summons and complaint. She also asserts that she has meritorious defenses to the causes of action brought against her. Defendants attached an answer to the complaint as "Exhibit A" to this motion, but the Answer does not appear to have been separately filed.

On the surface, this seems to be "good cause." However, Plaintiff points out that Defendants' assertions are directly contradicted by filed pleadings and Olga's own statements. For example, Plaintiff asserts that on August 27, 2019, Olga was served at 2 Monarch with the summons and complaint in a different matter of Remares Global, LLC v. Olga Shabanets et al, Orange County Superior Court case No. 30-2019-01092348-CU ("State Action"). Plaintiff asserts that Olga never contested service and on February 11, 2020 filed her answer to the complaint. Attached as Exhibits "1" and "2" to the Request for Judicial Notice ("RJN") are copies of the proof of service and

Olga's answer. If Olga had not been residing at 2 Monarch after August 9, 2019, Plaintiff argues, she would not have received notice of the State Action and would not have filed an answer to the complaint. Also, Plaintiff asserts, at Olga's October 16, 2019 judgment debtor examination in a federal case, Olga stated she was living at 2 Monarch. See Exhibit "E" ("the transcripts") to the Forsley Decl. pg. 7, Ins. 14-15. When asked who else was living with her at 2 Monarch Olga said, "my mother and my child, my daughter." Olga was also asked "[a]t this time, does Igor Shabanets live at the Monarch Cove address," and she stated "no." "Igor Shabanets lives in jail right now." See Exhibit "E" to the Forsley Decl. pg. 9. Thus, at Olga's October 16, 2019 examination, Olga admitted she lives at 2 Monarch, and this statement seems to directly contradict Olga's declaration that she vacated 2 Monarch on August 8, 2019.

Similarly, Plaintiff asserts, on January 21, 2020 Igor Shabanets ("Debtor") filed a status report in his main bankruptcy case wherein he stated "Debtor resides with his family in the Dana Point, CA property[.]" Attached as Exhibit "3" to the RJN is a copy of the status report. This would seem to confirm, yet again, that Olga, Debtor, and their family lived together at 2 Monarch after August 2019 (i.e., after Debtor was released from jail) and again casts much doubt Olga's claim that she vacated 2 Monarch on August 8, 2019.

Defendants have not filed a reply. On the record before the court, Defendants have not put forth evidence beyond Olga's declaration that she resides or resided at a place other than 2 Monarch when service of the complaint and summons was executed. Furthermore, Olga's declaration is undermined by the evidence put forth by Plaintiff, which seems to establish that she did and likely continues to reside at 2 Monarch.

Defendants consequently fail their burden of proof to show any of the elements of Rule 60(b).

Deny.

#13.00 Defendants Motion For Summary Judgment

Docket 48

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/1/20:

This is Defendant, Dale S. Miller ("Miller's") Rule 56 motion for summary judgment sought against Plaintiff, Karen Sue Naylor ("Trustee"), the chapter 7 trustee for the estate of debtor, Anna's Linens, Inc. ("Debtor"). Trustee opposes the motion. As a matter of law, Miller argues, Trustee simply cannot establish that Miller received an insider preference ten months before the Debtor's bankruptcy petition. The alleged preference – a retirement benefit under a then-6-year-old deferred compensation plan – was remitted to Miller a month after he resigned from Debtor's board.

1. Summary Judgment Standards

FRBP 7056 makes FRCP 56 applicable in bankruptcy proceedings. FRCP 56(c) provides that judgment shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. FRCP 56(e) provides that supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein, and that sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit shall be attached thereto or served forthwith. FRCP 56(e) further provides that when a motion is made and supported as required, an adverse party may not rest upon mere allegations or denials but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. FRCP 56(f) provides that if the opposing party cannot present facts essential to justify its opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or continue the motion as is just.

A party seeking summary judgment bears the initial responsibility of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of material fact and establishing that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law as to those matters upon which it has the burden of proof. Celotex Corporation v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 2553 (1986); British Airways Board v. Boeing Co., 585 F.2d 946, 951 (9th Cir. 1978). The opposing party must make an affirmative showing on all matters placed in issue by the motion as to which it has the burden of proof at trial. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324. The substantive law will identify which facts are material. Only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2510 (1986). A factual dispute is genuine where the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party. Id. The court must view the evidence presented on the motion in the light most favorable to the opposing party. Id. If reasonable minds could differ on the inferences to be drawn from those facts, summary judgment should be denied. Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co, 398 U.S. 144, 157, 90 S. Ct. 1598, 1608 (1970).

2. Known Undisputed Facts

As far as the court can tell, the following facts are undisputed:

In January 2008, Debtor created the Anna's Linens Deferred Compensation Plan (the "Plan") which was amended and restated on December 1, 2008, (the "Amended Plan"). The purpose of the Amended Plan was "to provide specified benefits to Directors and a select group of management or highly compensated Employees who contribute materially to the continued growth, development and future business success of Anna's Linens, Inc., a Delaware corporation, and its subsidiaries, if any, that sponsor this Plan." The Amended Plan provides, in pertinent part:

1.31 "Retirement" ...shall mean with respect to a Participant who is a Director, a Separation from Service.

1.32 "Separation from Service" shall mean a termination of services provided by a Participant to his or her Employer, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, other than by reason of death or Disability as determined by the Committee in accordance with Treas. Reg. §1.409A-1h.

5.1 Retirement Benefit. If a Participant experiences a Separation from Service that qualifies as a Retirement, the Participant shall be eligible to receive his or her vested Account Balance in either a lump sum or annual or quarterly installment payments, as elected by the Participant in accordance with Section 5.2 (the "Retirement Benefit"). A Participant's Retirement Benefit shall be calculated as of the close of business on or around the applicable Benefit Distribution Date for such benefit, which shall be the date on which the Participant experiences a Separation from Service...

5.2 Payment of Retirement Benefit. ...(c) the lump sum payment shall be made, or installment payments shall commence, no later than 60 days after the Participant's Benefit Distribution Date.

On March 2, 2010, the Debtor entered into a Master Trust Agreement for Deferred Compensation Plan (the "Master Trust Agreement"). The Master Trust Agreement evidenced the establishment of a master trust (the "Trust") to hold and administer the assets of the Trust for the benefit of the Participants. Pursuant to the terms of the Amended Plan and Master Trust Agreement, the Debtor, among others, could authorize the transfer of funds or other assets from the Amended Plan to the Trust for the benefit of the Participants. Miller was a director of the Debtor for approximately 25 years until July 17, 2014, but as explained below, there may be reasons to not ascribe that pinpoint date undue significance. Miller was also a lawyer affiliated with the Theodora Oringer firm, that provided legal services to Debtor. Miller alleges that he stopped providing legal services for the Debtor well-before his tenure on the board of directors concluded and was never an employee of the Debtor. Miller was allegedly not responsible for the creation, implementation or establishment of the Plan or the Amended Plan, or the Trust.

As part of an equity transaction with Salus Capital Partners, LLC, which closed on July 18, 2014 (the "Transaction"), the Debtor's new control group appointed a new board of directors. Invitations to join the new board were extended in advance of the Transaction. Miller was not invited to join the new board. Immediately upon closing, the new board was constituted. On July 18, 2014, Miller sent a formal resignation letter dated July 17, 2014. (see Dkt. # 61, Decl. of Chris Minier, Ex. 20).

Upon the closing of the Transaction, and the end of his tenure as a board member, Miller was entitled to his "Retirement Benefit" under the Amended Plan which provides that a retirement distribution must be made with 60 days after a separation from service. On or about August 18, 2014, Miller received a distribution in the amount $134,276.71 from the Trust (the 'Transfer') on account of his Retirement Benefit. On June 14, 2015 ("Petition Date"), the Debtor filed for bankruptcy protection under chapter 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code"). Consequently, Miller's resignation and receipt of the transfer all occurred within the year preference period. On March 30, 2016, the bankruptcy case was converted to chapter 7. On June 13, 2018, Trustee commenced this adversary proceeding against Miller under §§547 and 550 to recover the Transfer.

3. The Record Is Likely Incomplete

The motion and opposition present different characterizations of the same story. The motion, as might be expected, presents a version with relatively straightforward facts, which, taken as true, could lead to an obvious conclusion. The problem is that as this is a motion for summary judgment, the court is obliged to view the facts in the light most favorable to Trustee as the nonmoving party. Trustee argues that complex issues of both law and fact remain, and therefore, the motion should not be decided without a clear record. Specifically, Trustee has raised questions about Miller's association with the law firm Theodora Oringher, which provided legal services to Debtor. Miller, as an affiliate of that firm, asserts that he stopped providing legal services to Debtor well-before the conclusion of his tenure on Debtor's board, but Trustee argues that there is ample evidence that the firm continued to provide legal services to Debtor. So, the Movant's affiliation with the law firm within the preference period, and how that affiliation might affect his standing as an "insider" of Debtor, remains murky. Trustee's ongoing discovery efforts are aimed, at least in part, at finding out what, if any, relationship Miller continued to have with Debtor through his law firm after his resignation from Debtor's board. Trustee will also be inquiring about the scope of the law firm's legal representation of Debtor during the time of the Salus refinancing transaction and creation of the deferred compensation plan.

To that end, Trustee asserts that there will likely be a need to engage expert witnesses, and generally more detailed discovery than initially anticipated because of the sheer volume of documents in Trustee's possession. Trustee is also engaged in several other deferred compensation adversary proceedings in this bankruptcy case, and Trustee requires time to resolve the various discovery disputes and sort through the relative mountain of information. The current discovery completion date in the deferred compensation adversaries is November 4, 2020, but Trustee expects that an extension will be required. Regarding this motion, Trustee asserts that Miller has still not completed his responses to the Trustee's discovery requests (at the time the motion was filed). Due to this delay, Trustee asserts that no depositions have yet been taken. The ongoing pandemic has likely contributed to the delay in getting depositions scheduled and taken. Miller argues that Trustee has already had ample time and opportunity to complete its discovery given the age of the case, and so this motion should be decided before discovery is closed. However, Trustee reports that the parties plan to attend mediation beginning in October as details are currently being finalized.

The court is wary of attempting to adjudicate a motion for summary judgment when there is the possibility that the motion might be premature. The court understands that this adversary proceeding is already over two years old, but the court also understands that granting this motion based on an incomplete record will likely draw an appeal, causing yet more delays. Besides, the court is aware that a mediation is scheduled for the very near future, which if successful, would resolve some or all the issues in this adversary proceeding. But still, Movant is entitled to a ruling on what he has put forward to evaluate whether he is entitled to a decision in his favor as a matter of law.

4. Was Miller an Insider for Purpose of a Preferential Transfer?

11 U.S.C. §547(b)(4)(B) provides:

"(b)Except as provided in subsections (c) and (i) of this section, the trustee may, based on reasonable due diligence in the circumstances of the case and taking into account a party's known or reasonably knowable affirmative defenses under subsection (c), avoid any transfer of an interest of the debtor in property—(4) made—...(B)between ninety days and one year before the date of the filing of the petition, if such creditor at the time of such transfer was an insider[.]"

The court has encountered this issue before in this adversary proceeding, albeit in the context of a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings. There is significant similarity between the arguments advanced in this motion and the unsuccessful motion for judgment on the pleadings. Nearly two years ago this court addressed the crucial question in its November 8, 2018 adopted tentative ruling, as follows:

"Additionally, the parties argue at length over the fascinating question of whether the transfer was 'arranged' while Defendant was an insider and that should inform on the question of when the 'transfer' occurred for preference analysis. See e.g. In re EECO, Inc., 138 B.R. 260, 263 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1992). The Trustee argues persuasively that clearly Defendant was an insider when the debtor's Deferred Compensation scheme was created in 2010, the date of resignation may be part of an expansive definition of what is meant by 'arranged' and it is illogical (almost laughable) to believe that Defendant could defeat this status by simply resigning only a few days or weeks before actually receiving the funds.

While the court could delve into the split of authority on this question, it really does not need to. That is for the simple reason that the preamble to §101(31) provides:

'The term 'insider' includes—

- (B) if the debtor is a corporation- [i.e. director of the debtor]
- (ii) officer of the debtor....' (italics added)

This language has been interpreted as illustrative, not exclusive, and requires a factual inquiry and determination where the policy and logic of the Code require that certain persons be treated as insiders although not strictly within the enumerated categories of §101(31). See e.g. Shubert v. Lucent Technologies, Inc. (In re Winstar Communications, Inc.), 554 F. 3d 382, 394-96 (3d Cir. 2009); In re O'Neill, 550 B.R.482, 516 (Dist. N.D. 2016); Damir v. Trans-Pacific National Bank (In re Kong), 196 B.R. 167, 171 (N.D. Cal. 1996); In re Orsa Associates, 99 B.R. 609, 621 (Bankr. E.D.Pa. 1989); In re Babcock Dairy, 70 B.R. 657, 660 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1986). So, whether Defendant might be an 'insider' as alleged does not depend wholly on his status as an officer [or director], even if that date could be pinpointed for purposes of a Rule 12(c) motion without resort to facts outside the pleadings." See Order Denying Motion for Judgment on The Pleadings, Dkt. #26, Ex. 1. (italics added)

Stated another way, just because a director may have resigned a few days before receiving his check [or in this case a month or so] does not settle the issue, as the "includes" language makes clear that formal status as officer or director at the precise moment of receipt is not determinative, nor logically should it be. The Code seeks to probe situations where despite formal status on moment of transfer there might be reasons to look behind labels into the reality of situations. A rigid rule could obviously be exploited by any insider who resigns minutes before receiving the funds. That would make a mockery of the law. The court recognizes that Miller argues he was effectively out of the decisional loop as early as mid-July 2014 when the new board was installed, or even before. But, given that date, even if the court were to adopt rigid approaches, it cannot be gainsaid that Miller was indeed a statutory insider within the year in which the transfer occurred, and so the only question is whether the intervening month or so should make a difference. Certainly, ten seconds should not logically be enough. How about two hours? A week? A month? If a month is materially different, why? It is undisputed that the mechanism was set up before, when Miller was an insider.

As one might expect, Miller has bolstered his latest motion with more authority, much of from outside the 9th Circuit, though he largely leaves his main authority intact. In any case, as set forth in the opposition, many of the cases cited by Miller are sufficiently distinguishable as to limit their value. For example, Miller cites Butler v. David Shaw, Inc., 72 F.3d 437, 441-42 (4th Cir. 1996), where the court held that the relevant question is whether the creditor "was an insider at the time of the challenged transfers" and noting that Plaintiff's argument otherwise "rests upon a strained interpretation of the term 'transfer[.]'" Trustee points out that in Butler, the Fourth Circuit rejected an argument that a series of related transactions constituted one transaction for purposes of determining insider status. Butler at 441-42. The Butler court reasoned that a transfer by check (which was the challenged transaction in Butler) is not an ongoing process but is only executed on the date the issuing bank honors the check. Id. at 442. That seems to be a different situation than is present here where the mechanism for the transfer was put in place while Miller was an insider. Miller argues that by resigning, he ceased instantly to be an insider, and because the funds were not transferred immediately before or immediately after his resignation, he could not have been an "insider" within the meaning of the statute. Miller is arguing for a rigid rule standing for the proposition that for purposes of determining insider status, the only relevant date is when the funds were transferred (i.e. when the money officially changed accounts). This rigidity, Miller argues, would be in keeping with the Supreme Court's preference for bright-line rules. But again, this is merely persuasive authority as Miller has not cited caselaw from this circuit that supports such a cut and dry interpretation. Furthermore, the preference for bright-line rules expressed by the Supreme Court in Barnhill v. Johnson, 503 U.S. 393, 399 (1992) was given in the context of determining when payment by check effectively constituted a transfer, but that's a mechanical, banking issue, not what confronts the court here. It would seem that a more wholistic approach is both warranted and desirable on the facts presented here. As noted above, this court has, for policy reasons, made known its skepticism that this case warrants such rigidity as the potential for abuse and circumvention of the bankruptcy system seems obvious.

Still, even if Miller's interpretation of the law were correct, the court has doubts that the facts, as alleged here, are as definitive and comprehensive as argued. For example, one of the cases Miller cites from this circuit is Damir v. Trans-Pacific National Bank (In re Kong), 196 B.R. 167, 171 (N.D. Cal. 1996), where the court explained that, in determining whether a creditor is also an insider:

"[w]hat the courts have examined under the facts of each case has been the nature of the relationship between the debtor and the creditor, and whether that relationship, defined in terms of control or undue influence, gave the creditor the power to have its debts repaid. But the cases agree that the relationship and power must be more than the debtor-creditor relationship itself."

As noted above, this is precisely what Trustee states she intends to investigate through discovery. It is understandable that Miller would prefer summary judgment be granted at this point because his sworn declaration assures the court that there was no such relationship. But it would be singularly inequitable to cut Trustee off at the knees by simply accepting Miller's declaration as the definitive authority on the subject, especially given Miller's obvious self-interest. It may very well come to pass that Trustee is unable to unearth any facts that would cast doubt on Miller's declaration, and if that were to occur, Miller's declaration might be persuasive. But to end the inquiry before the completion of the court-sanctioned discovery period would likely provide good justification for an appeal. To put it another way, viewing the facts of the case, including the procedural posture, in the light most favorable to Trustee as the nonmoving party, the scale tips toward denying the motion.

5. Conclusion

Chapter 7

Miller cites caselaw that could be interpreted to favor his position, but few if any of the cases are from this circuit, making it far from a "slam dunk." Moreover, this court is very skeptical of such a "brightline rule" in any event. As discovery is still ongoing (proceeding at a glacial pace for various reasons), it remains conceivable that Trustee could yet discover evidence that bolsters her position against Miller. Uncertainty over completeness of the factual record, on top of the dubious nature of a brightline rule, makes the court uncomfortable in a Rule 56 context. Discovery is set to close, as of now, in a little over a month's time, though that might be extended. The parties are also scheduled to attend mediation in the coming weeks, which if productive, could resolve this case without further expenditure of time and expense. Thus, for these reasons, the motion will be ...

#3.00 Plan Confirmation Hearing Re:Plan Of Reorganization

Docket 342

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO 12-02-20 AT 10:00 A.M.
PER ORDER APPROVING STIPULATION TO CONTINUE THE HEARING ON CONFIRMATION OF DEBTOR'S CHAPTER 11 PLAN
ENTERED 9-18-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/24/20:

The U.S. Trustee's objection was not timely, but Debtor still responded. So, the court will assume away the procedural issues. In response to the UST's objection: Debtor filed an amended plan (mistakenly entered as an amended disclosure statement) on June 16. Debtor also filed a separate response directly addressing the concerns identified in the UST's objection. This response includes additional proposed language that, if ultimately adopted into the plan, would likely address the UST's comments. As of this writing on (6/24), the UST has not filed anything further. No other interested party has filed a response of any kind to the DS.

The DS itself is not particularly user friendly as it does not have a table of contents, nor any accompanying brief to make the document easily navigable. Furthermore, while most of the required disclosures can be found in some form in the DS, it seems to be missing background information such as Debtor's financial history and events leading up to filing the petition. The DS has several exhibits: but the exhibits lack explanations of what they are and how they fit into the proposed plan of reorganization.

Debtor states that all disputes have been resolved, aside from the IRS and Citizens Bank Claims, which the newly added language in the proposed plan purports to address. Debtor states that the plan will pay 100% of the allowed creditor claims. When the UST commented on the DS, the court very likely would have found the DS to have inadequate information. The proposed additional language would, if ultimately adopted, likely satisfy the UST's concerns, and the court's.

Although the DS could benefit from additional background information about Debtor's case: it may not be necessary. However, the new proposed language should be integrated into the DS. In sum: Debtor's DS is not an easy document to navigate and has some technical Deficiencies, but likely nothing fatal. The UST's objection has been addressed, though the UST may not have had an opportunity to review the proposed changes. No other party in interest has objected or opposed the DS. If the UST does not comment further before the hearing, the DS can likely be approved.

Conditionally approve.

Adv#: 8:19-01131 Estate of William L. Seay et al v. Thomas H. Casey

#6.00 Motion To Dismiss Second Amended Adversary Complaint

Docket 67

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/8/20:

Defendant Thomas H. Casey ("Trustee" or "Defendant"), chapter 7 trustee for the estate of debtor, Robert Ferrante ("Debtor"), brings this motion to dismiss the Second Amended Complaint ("SAC") filed by the Estate of William L. Seay ("Seay" or "Plaintiff") pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Seay opposes the motion.

1. FRCP 12(b)(6) Standards

FRCP 12(b)(6) requires a court to consider whether a complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). There are cases that justify, or compel, granting a motion to dismiss. The line between totally unmeritorious claims and others must be carved out case by case by the judgment of trial judges, and that judgment should be exercised cautiously on such a motion. Id.

"While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-65 (2007) A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id. Threadbare recital of elements supported by conclusory statements is not sufficient. Id.

2. Brief Background

The following is a condensed summary of the relevant factual and procedural background. On May 4, 2004, Col. Seay obtained a judgment against Debtor in the principal amount of $2,471,057.16 ("Judgment"). The Judgment was perfected against real property assets of the Debtor in Orange County by the recording of an abstract of judgment with the Orange County Recorder's Office on May 20, 2004 ("Seay Lien"). The Judgment was unanimously affirmed in the Second District Court of Appeal in 2005. Under California law, the Seay Lien attached to all real property interests of the Debtor in Orange County whether existing on the date of recordation or acquired in the future, whether legal or equitable, fixed or contingent. Code of Civ. Proc. § 697.340(a). The Seay Lien gained and continues to gain interest at the rate of 10% per annum, may be renewed every five years and must be renewed every ten years. When renewed, the accrued interest is added to principal to create a new principal amount, which amount then gains interest at 10% per annum until the next renewal. The Seay Judgment was always timely renewed. Thus, on the petition date, the Judgment had grown to $3.877

Although Debtor claimed only $500 in assets in his schedules, Defendant decided to pursue the case as an asset case based upon evidence received from attorney Thomas Vogele ("Vogele"). Trustee employed Vogele's law firm to act as his counsel. Third party Remar Investments LP ("Remar") is a Nevada limited partnership which held a $2 million trust deed recorded in second position (or perhaps third behind Seay) against the Property located at 518 Harbor Island Drive, Newport Beach, CA 92660 ("the Property" or "518 Property") on December 27, 2010. (See generally, 8:16-cv-00337-MWF ("Remar Appeal"), Sept. 13, 2016 Order affirming Judgment, Dkt. 23.) The 2010 note and trust deed, executed by Debtor's ex father-in-law Oscar Chacon as trustee of the 518 Harbor Island Drive Trust, "took out" a 2009 note and trust deed of $1.5 million recorded on September 25, 2009. Id. In a consolidated adversary action both Defendant Trustee and Col. Seay alleged that Remar was Debtor's confederate and coconspirator in a scheme to enter into bogus transactions in order to defeat creditor claims and place artificially high encumbrances on the 518 Property.

Third party 518 Harbor Island Drive Trust ("Trust I") was a defectively formed Qualified Personal Residence Trust ("QPRT") created by Debtor on September 16, 1994 to hold title to the 518 Property. At the time of its formation, Debtor was in a separate Chapter 7 proceeding filed in December 1993. Debtor was the settlor, sole trustee and residual beneficiary of the Trust I. Trust I held nominal title to the Property from 1994 to 2001, and again from 2006 to 2014. (Remar Appeal, Dkt. 23.) The BAP ruled, however, that Trust I terminated in December 1998 at which time it reverted to Debtor individually. (In re Ferrante, 2015 WL 5064807 (9th Cir. B.A.P. Aug. 26, 2015) (unpublished), also at 9th Cir. Case No. 14- 1222, Dkt. 49.). Trust I was revoked by Trustee on April 7, 2014, at which time the Residence formally became an asset of the estate. But the asset was fully encumbered and had no equity. It can be argued that the property was already owned at that time by Debtor by reason of the BAP's finding, as described above, and thus the revocation of Trust I was unnecessary, or title had become entangled under yet further trusts, as described below.

Third party 518 Harbor Island Drive Trust III ("Trust III") is a separate and expressly revocable trust self-settled by Debtor on or about March 23, 2001. Trust III continuously held record title to the 518 Property from 2001 through September 29, 2006, including on May 20, 2004 when the Seay Judgment was recorded in Orange County, California. Both the Bankruptcy Court and District Court have ruled that because Trust III was expressly revocable, the Seay Judgment attached to the 518 Property on the date of recordation, despite ostensibly different record title.

Thomas Vogeles is a lawyer who practices in Orange County, California, through his law firm Thomas Vogeles & Associates APC ("TVA"). On the petition date, TVA represented creditor W&W Properties. In September of 2010, TVA entered into an agreement with Defendant to act as Special Litigation Counsel to the insolvent estate on a contingent fee basis to initiate litigation to recover money and property of Debtor (and hence of the estate) that was undeclared in the Schedules.

On April 7, 2014, the Trustee and Seay entered into a fully integrated written contract structured as a "Carve Out" agreement (the "Compromise Agreement" or the "Agreement"). The contract was executed four years after the petition and more than three years after appointment of Vogeles as special litigation counsel. The Agreement expressly provided that Col. Seay would defer 50% of the sums to which he was entitled under his lien to be later recouped from recoveries in the Trustee's Adversary Action. The Agreement obligated the estate to pay Col. Seay the deferred amount, plus fees and costs of every kind and nature, plus all remaining amounts under his judgment lien, from the proceeds of litigation recoveries. One of the items in contention is the corresponding obligation of Defendant to actively litigate the Adversary Action in order to obtain sufficient recovery to pay back the sums Seay carved out and subordinated under the Compromise Agreement. Defendant Trustee can point to ¶ 2.1.8 which reserves to the Defendant the right to discontinue any litigation the Trustee thought to be unproductive and offers Seay the right of first refusal in purchase of any such right of action.

On June 19, 2017, well over three years after the Agreement was executed, the Trustee filed the Motion to Abandon "Certain Assets." Trustee researched the value of the Remaining Assets and determined that "the assets are burdensome to the Estate or of inconsequential value and benefit to the Estate." Prior to filing the Motion to Abandon, Trustee attempted to sell these Remaining Assets to Seay. The Remaining Assets were ultimately sold to Seay as authorized by Court order.

On July 3, 2019, Plaintiff filed a Complaint, commencing the above captioned action (the "Action"). On August 2, 2019, the Trustee filed a Motion to Dismiss the Adversary Complaint (the "original Motion to Dismiss") on several grounds, including that Plaintiffs' claims were barred by the doctrines of quasi-judicial immunity, and constituted collateral attacks on the properly entered orders of the Bankruptcy Court. In response, on August 22, 2019, Plaintiff filed the First Amended Complaint ("FAC"). The Trustee filed a second motion to dismiss the FAC. On June 10, 2020, the Court dismissed the FAC and granted the Seay Estate leave to amend. Tentative Ruling at Page 12. The court's rationale was set forth in the court's Tentative Ruling, which was adopted by the court in its final ruling. The court ruled that the Trustee is entitled to quasi-judicial immunity in his individual capacity and may only be sued in his representative capacity. Id. The court further ruled that certain of Plaintiff's allegations, such as those related to undue influence, duress, and menace, were barred by judicial estoppel. The court dismissed the FAC to allow the Seay Estate to amend the FAC to clarify that the Trustee is named in his representative capacity only. Id. The court also ruled that Plaintiff's capacity to sue as estate representative must be amended as required by California law, a defect that applies equally to this Motion. Id. On August 9, 2020, Plaintiff filed the SAC.

In the SAC, like the FAC, Plaintiff alleges three claims for relief:

- (1) Restitution of Benefits Conferred After Unilateral Rescission;
- (2) Common Count for Money Had and Received;
- (3) Declaratory and Injunctive Relief Regarding the Proceeds in the Segregated Account

3. The First Claim for Relief

Plaintiff's first claim for relief seeks restitution following alleged unilateral rescission. Rescission results in extinguishment of an underlying contract. Cal. Civ. Code §1688. If successful, the party seeking rescission is freed of his/her obligations under the contract. Larsen v. Johannes, 7 Cal. App. 3d 491, 501 (1970). As relevant here, unilateral rescission is permissible where: (1) the consent of the party rescinding, or of any party jointly contracting with him, was given by mistake, or obtained through duress, menace, fraud, or undue influence, exercised by or with the connivance of the party as to whom he rescinds, or of any other party to the contract jointly interested with such party; (2) the consideration for the obligation of the rescinding party fails, in whole or in part, through the fault of the counterparty; (3) the consideration for the obligation of the rescinding party, before it is rendered to him, fails in a material respect from any cause; or (4) the public interest will be prejudiced by permitting the contract to stand. See Cal. Civ. Code §1689(b)(1).

Plaintiff seeks rescission on the grounds that: (1) "Col. Seay's consent to the contract was obtained by duress, menace, fraud and undue influence exercised by [the Trustee];" (2) "the consideration for Seay's promise failed in whole or part, through the fault of [the Trustee];" (3) "the consideration for Seay's promise failed from any cause before it was rendered to him;" (4) "the contract was entered into due to a mistake of material fact and law by the parties concerning Trust I;" and (5) "the contract is against public policy . . . because the Property was fully encumbered." For reasons explained below, none of these theories withstand scrutiny.

In this court's June 10, 2020 tentative ruling, the court stated:

"As noted above, in the motion to approve the Agreement, both parties agreed that the negotiations, though tense, were conducted in good faith. Plaintiff filed papers in support of the motion to approve the Agreement. It is not clear why duress or undue influence were not argued when the court approved the Agreement. If Plaintiff felt that he was being forced to accept the Agreement against his will or better judgment, it should have been raised at the time. It was not, but instead the court was specifically urged to approve the Agreement by Plaintiff." (Tentative Ruling, p. 9-10).

"Perhaps the better part of valor is to grant the motion or strike portions of the FAC to the extent that they are based on duress or undue influence at the inception, because even though they appear to be properly pled, under judicial estoppel doctrines should have been brought to the court's attention at the time the Agreement was approved. Instead, at that time, Plaintiff apparently took the opposite position, and so cannot be heard now to argue this point." Id. at 10.

The court sees no reason to revisit the allegation that the Compromise Agreement was the product of duress, menace, or undue influence. No facts, and certainly no new facts are given in the SAC suggesting any of these factors existed, nor dealing with the judicial estoppel implicit in urging one thing upon the court to approve the Compromise Agreement, and now taking the opposition position.

However, in dismissing the FAC, the court did not close the door on Plaintiff's fraud claim, but simply stated that the allegations were pled with insufficient particularity to comport with the requirement from Rule 9(b). Allegations of fraud are subject to a heightened pleading standard. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) ("Rule 9(b)"). In all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud shall be stated "with particularity." Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b); Desaigoudar v. Meyercord, 223 F3d 1020, 1022-1023 (9th Cir. 2000). Even though the substantive elements of a state law fraud cause of action are determined by state law, those elements must be pleaded with particularity as required by Rule 9(b) when brought in federal court. Vess v. Ciba-Geigy Corp. USA, 317 F3d 1097, 1103 (9th Cir. 2003). Although malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally, such allegations must still meet the plausibility standard. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 686-87. Rule 9(b) demands that the circumstances constituting the alleged fraud "be specific enough to give defendants notice of the particular misconduct ... so that they can defend against the charge and not just deny that they have done anything wrong." Kearns v. Ford Motor Company, 567 F.3d 1120, 1124 (9th Cir. 2009) (quoting Bly-Magee v. California, 236 F.3d 1014, 1019 (9th Cir. 2001)) (ellipsis in original). "Averments of fraud must be accompanied by 'the who, what, when, where, and how' of the misconduct charged." Kearns, 567 F. 3d at 1124. Fraud averments failing to meet the Rule 9(b) "particularity" standard are disregarded, and the remaining allegations evaluated to see if a valid claim has been stated. Vess, 317 F3d at 1105. Plaintiff also asserts, citing Wong v. Stoler, 237 Cal. App. 4th 1375 (2015), that rescission is an available remedy for misstatements of any kind, whether intentional, negligent or innocent by a fiduciary if the statements caused plaintiff to enter into the contract.

Here, Trustee asserts, and the court is inclined to agree, that Plaintiff has not asserted facts, taken as true, that would tend to demonstrate that Trustee or any of his associates, intentionally misled, misrepresented, or otherwise acted with fraudulent intent in obtaining Plaintiff's consent to the Agreement at the time the Agreement was signed and approved by the court.

Plaintiff does take portions from various emails sent between and among the parties that, taken together, form a mosaic from which a picture of fraudulent behavior could arguably be gleaned. The emails suggest that Trustee and Vogele used "high-pressure" tactics upon Plaintiff to get him to sign onto the Compromise Agreement, but again, missing from the SAC is anything that suggests fraudulent intent at the time the Compromise Agreement came into existence. As Trustee argues, the closest Plaintiff really comes to clearly articulating a fraud claim against Trustee is found in paragraph 47 of the SAC, which states:

"Plaintiff alleges on information and belief that Defendant lacked the intent to comply with the estate's contractual obligations from the start. At all times Defendant had intended to cause Col. Seay to rely on his assurance to his detriment. Col. Seay reasonably relied on the Trustee's express promises in the contract and on Vogele's assurances as set forth in the "hammer and tong" email in executing the agreement. Col. Seay was induced to enter into the contract, a recognized basis for rescission, by Vogele's verbal and written misrepresentations that the estate would fulfill its obligations under the contract, actively litigate adversary claims to completion, bring millions of dollars into the estate and repay the deferred sale proceeds to Col. Seay. The truth was that neither Vogele nor Casey intended to litigate the Adversary claims for any period longer than it took to sell the 518 Property and to soak up the sale proceeds by their billings. At no time did Vogele or Casey have any intent to repay the Seay advance."

As noted, the paragraphs preceding the quoted passage, even taken as true, do not form a clear picture of fraud in the inducement. Indeed, as Trustee points out the quoted passage from the SAC is mainly conclusory and appears to just presume ill-intent rather than actually showing any facts supporting it. Conclusory statements of fraud and misrepresentation—or, as is the case here, unsupported statements of Defendant's purported intent on the basis of information and belief—are likely insufficient. Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC, 2019 WL 4747669 at *7-8 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 20, 2019). Plaintiff must clearly set out the precise circumstances that constitute fraud, or such allegations must be disregarded. Vess, 317 F3d at 1105. Regarding the Wong case cited by Plaintiff, Trustee persuasively argues that Wong is not as broad as Plaintiff asserts. Rather, Trustee notes that the Wong court observed, "[u]nder California law, negligent misrepresentation is a species of actual fraud and a form of deceit ... [and] a single misstatement as to a material fact, knowingly made with intent to induce another into entering the contract, will, if believed and relied on by that other, afford a complete ground for rescission[.]" Wong, 237 Cal. App. 4th at 1388. Trustee also notes that in Wong, the trial court expressly found that the seller had made misrepresentations and did so with reckless disregard. Id. As noted above, the court does not see any allegations of clear-cut misrepresentation, or even of negligent misrepresentations much less statements made with reckless disregard, whether by Trustee or any of his associates. All the court sees is an agreement that, for various reasons, went bad and Plaintiff did not receive what he hoped he would get. After all, there are no guarantees in litigation, everybody knows that, and especially parties well-represented by counsel such as in the Compromise Agreement's negotiation and approval. Moreover, Trustee was expressly permitted to abandon the adversary proceeding if he felt it was wise to do so. Paragraph 2.1.8, in describing the Trustee's duties under the agreement, provides:

Actively litigate all remaining claims in the Adversary and seek recovery of all available property for the Chapter 7 Estate, including but not limited to trial, post-trial motions and prosecution of any appeals arising out of the decision of the Court, to the extent Trustee determines such litigation will likely result in reasonable recovery to the Chapter 7 Estate. In the event Trustee decides to abandon any cause of action or litigation, Col Seay shall have first right of refusal to purchase all right, title and interest in said claim to pursue said litigation on his own behalf in his sole discretion, subject to further Court approval which shall include appropriate overbid procedures. (emphasis added)

trustee. Certainly, it cannot be reasonably argued that a trustee would be compelled to pursue any and all theories however far-fetched or however remote might be the prospect of monetary recovery, nor would the court approve such a thing. Indeed, as recognized throughout these pleadings, this administration proved to be extraordinarily expensive and the litigation was hard fought. The intricate defenses and evasions erected by Ferrante with assistance of others proved difficult to overcome, and the chances of recovering back the amounts expended in pursuit were close questions. The Trustee did the prudent thing in not digging a deeper hole when not warranted by the prospects of monetary recovery. Moreover, Seay ended up owning all of these claims for $1, a prospect he never could have expected but for the Compromise Agreement. Implicit in Plaintiff's argument is that somehow Seay was denied the benefit of his bargain. But that holds no water either. Seay bargained for and obtained things he had no other right to expect such as Trustee revocation of Trust I (that it might arguably have been unnecessary is also beyond the point), employment of the Trustee's avoiding powers in an attempt to augment the estate, resistance to Remar and others who sought to foreclose on the Harbor Island property, and recognition of the validity of Seay's lien. All of this consideration was undeniably received as bargained for. That Plaintiff feels disappointed by this outcome is understandable, but a cause of action for fraud in the inducement, even by negligent misrepresentation, is just not made on these alleged facts.

Trustee also appears to be correct when he asserts that Plaintiff has failed to adequately support a claim for rescission based on failure of the consideration pursuant to the Compromise Agreement. Trustee persuasively argues this leg of Plaintiff's argument is merely an expression of frustration at not getting what he hoped he had bargained for. The court notes that this same argument was put forth in the FAC, and the court found it lacking support then, and maintains that opinion. Indeed, the court noted that the decision not to pursue certain claims owned by the estate did not render the consideration illusory. On the contrary, the court noted that there was express provision in the Agreement that contemplated such an outcome. The court stated in its tentative ruling:

"According to Plaintiff, the basic terms of the Agreement were that Col. Seay agreed to 'defer' receipt of $1.6 million (half) attributable to his lien from the sale of the Property ('Deferred Seay Proceeds') to enable the insolvent estate the liquidity to pursue Debtor and third parties for recovery of damages and undeclared assets. In this characterization the Deferred Seay Proceeds were to be later paid back out of recoveries from litigation by Trustee along with additional fees, costs and interest which accrued. But the Agreement provides for at least a subordination, and, as it developed, there was nothing left with which to pay the subordinated half of the proceeds. The Trustee was given express authority in the Agreement not to administer assets he deemed not worthwhile or feasible to administer (as any competent trustee would) and Seay was given the express option to first acquire them, which he ultimately did for $1 (on each of two separate occasions)[.] The court approved the Agreement by Order entered on June 18, 2014 at a hearing after notice to creditors in which Seay actively joined in support of the Agreement." (Tentative Ruling, p. 5-6)

Thus, it appears that, again, Plaintiff has failed to plead facts that would tend to show a failure of consideration as to the Compromise Agreement that would support the cause of action for rescission.

Next Plaintiff argues that the cause of action for rescission is viable because Plaintiff has asserted facts that would tend to show that the compromise agreement was the result of a mistake of law and/or fact. A mistake of law is when a person knows the facts as they really are but has a mistaken belief as to the legal consequences of those facts. See, e.g., In re Marriage of Mansell, 217 Cal.App.3d 219, 234 (1989). A mistake of law exists only when (1) all parties think they know and understand the law but all are mistaken in the same way, or (2) when one side misunderstands the law at the time of contract and the other side knows it, but does not rectify that misunderstanding. Cal. Civ. Code § 1578. In paragraph 81 of SAC, Plaintiff alleges that there was the misimpression "that unless the facially irrevocable Trust I was revoked, the Seay lien was unenforceable. Vogele was able to induce Seay to execute the agreement by holding revocation hostage and refusing to revoke Trust I unless Seay signed. The misrepresentations of the law and fact by Vogele are grounds for rescission[.]"

Plaintiff alleges further in paragraphs 82 through 84 that:

"Only in 2015 did facts emerge which showed that Trust I was irrelevant to the enforceability of the Seay lien for two reasons. First, Col. Seay subpoenaed documents from Bank of America which revealed that Trust I did not own the asset when the Seay judgment was recorded in 2004. Instead the expressly revocable Trust III held record title from 2001- 2006 including the date the Seay judgment was recorded. Because Trust III was revocable the Seay lien immediately attached to the Residence under Probate Code § 18200. The discovery of Trust III led directly to the entry of the February 2016 judgment establishing Seay's priority and an order affirming the judgment in District Court in September 2016. If the parties had known of Trust III's ownership on the date of recordation the contract would not have been entered into by Col. Seay and the Vogele threats would have had no force. Second, on August 26, 2015 the BAP ruled that Trust I terminated in 1998 for failure to comply with IRS regulations and reverted to Debtor individually. The BAP opinion is now final. Therefore, as a matter of law the property was owned by Debtor individually at all times from 1998 forward and Debtor was the judgment debtor under the Seay judgment. Even though the Trustee now knows that Trust I did not exist since 1998, he continues to mischaracterize the effect of his revocation of Trust I. He insists that the Seay lien only attached to the 518 Property when he revoked Trust I. In fact the Seay lien attached to the 518 Property a full ten years before the Trustee revoked, on May 20, 2004, when the judgment was recorded and the asset was owned by the expressly revocable Trust III."

Trustee argues that the court should disregard these allegations of mistake of fact and law, and cites Alevy v. Seneca Ins. Co. Inc., 2012 WL 13012460 at *13 (C.D. Cal. 2012), where the court rejected a theory of mistake of law, where among other things, "[p]laintiff was represented by... counsel who bore the responsibility of making himself familiar with all pertinent aspects of the policy... and "[p]laintiff's counsel simply failed to take advantage of that opportunity to argue [the alleged mistake of law]." Trustee then points out that during the lengthy and tense negotiations, Plaintiff was at all times represented by counsel and that fact is acknowledged in the Agreement itself. Furthermore, Trustee also points out that the Agreement specifically acknowledges numerous factual and legal disputes in existence at the time of contracting, and resolution of such issues without the necessity of litigation was a material part of the benefit of the bargain, which seems logical as this type of Agreement is usually aimed at reducing or eliminating the need for litigation. Finally, Trustee points out that in the Plaintiff's papers in supporting the Agreement, Plaintiff acknowledged a dispute over the continued validity of the Seay lien and argued that approval of the Agreement would settle that question. Thus, Trustee persuasively argues, Plaintiff should be estopped from arguing mistake of law or fact because the dispute was known at the time of the Agreement's formation and it was Plaintiff's express desire to not engage in further litigation. As stated above, the revocation of Trust I was only part of the global arrangement, even it was Trust III that held title as determined by the BAP, that would still have required the Trustee's revocation, and the parties decided to make common cause against Ferrante and his confederates.

Plaintiff's last argument asserts that the Agreement is offends public policy because the property was fully encumbered and Trustee's administration of such an asset violates the Justice Department Guidelines and public policy as promulgated by the Office of the United States Trustee unless the agreement returns a meaningful dividend to unsecured creditors. Again, the June 10, 2020 Tentative Ruling speaks to this issue, where the court stated on page 12:

"Regrettably, this kind of very expensive administration where unsecured creditors end up with nothing is not even unusual, and every case must be evaluated in its own light. This was an extremely difficult case. The facts presented to the Trustee and his lawyers at the time of the Agreement were very daunting, and the Trustee is not to be faulted for making a calculated effort."

Trustee then cites In re Mednet, 251 B.R. 103, 108 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2000) where the court explained that there is no requirement that "services result in a material benefit to the estate in order for the professional to be compensated; the applicant must demonstrate only that the services were 'reasonably likely' to benefit the estate at the time the services were rendered." That is almost precisely the sentiment given by the court in its June 10 tentative ruling. Defendant made calculated efforts but from what the court can see the problem was that many of the defendants proved too evanescent or impecunious to be responsible in monetary recovery, or at least compared to the expense of chasing them. The court sees nothing in the SAC that would change that opinion, and so public policy is not offended.

For the reasons stated, Plaintiff's SAC has not shown the existence of facts, accepted as true, that would support a cause of action for effective rescission (and hence restitution) because both persuasive counter authority and ample evidence in the record, including many of Plaintiff's own statements and representations to the court, severely undercut the Iqbal and Twombly requirements for plausibility.

4. The Second Claim for Relief

Trustee asserts that the second claim, Common Count for Money Had and Received, is entirely dependent on the viability of the first cause of action.

Chapter 7

Quoting paragraph 96 of the SAC, Trustee argues that ("Under California law, a party to a contract may plead a cause of action for restitution after unilateral rescission by way of a common count for money had and received, and hereby does so." But as discussed above, Plaintiff's asserted justifications for unilateral rescission are largely unsupported by law and fact, and non-existent.

5. The Third Claim for Relief

Plaintiff's Third Claim for Relief for Declaratory Judgment also fails. Plaintiff seeks an order declaring that the Carve-Out in the Agreement constitutes "cash collateral" entitled to "adequate protection" which requires Plaintiff to prevail on the claim for rescission. Pursuant to the Agreement, Col. Seay agreed to Carve-Out 50% of the proceeds of the sale of the Property to be disbursed to the estate. The Agreement provided that the balance of his claim will be unsecured and subordinated to other unsecured and administrative claims. As the Court has expressed in its July 21, 2020 adopted Tentative Ruling: "[w]ithout a lien, Seay cannot now be heard to argue about cash collateral or adequate protection, as those concepts are only appropriate in the context of a secured claim." See Tentative Ruling on Plaintiff's Motion for Order Requiring Accounting, Restoration of Unauthorized Payments, And Adequate Protection at 24-25. As such, Plaintiff's declaratory judgment claim for adequate protection cannot stand without the rescission claim, and Plaintiff has, again, failed to state a claim pursuant to Rule 12(b) (6).

6. Conclusion

Although Plaintiff's SAC contains more factual detail than the FAC, it makes little difference because many of the arguments are simply arguments that the court has heard and rejected before. Plaintiff marshals facts as best he is able, but in the end, does not quite paint the picture that Plaintiff would like the court to see. Furthermore, Trustee has convincingly presented counter authority and evidence in the record that casts serious doubt upon the allegations, but more importantly, on whether the allegations can support any of the asserted causes of actions within the Iqbal and Twombly standards. As the court has opined in the past, this was an extremely difficult case and any trustee would have encountered some or all of the same issues as Trustee did here.

The remaining question is whether Plaintiff should be given further leave to amend. Trustee persuasively argues that this is Plaintiff's third bite (maybe fourth depending on how counted) at the apple and that if this motion is granted it is extremely unlikely that Plaintiff will be able to make any new arguments that would move the needle. The court has already expressed its skepticism that there is really anything here besides a bitterly disappointed plaintiff. Thus, in keeping with the spirit of the original Compromise Agreement that spawned this litigation, further litigation seems both unnecessary and undesirable. Further leave to amend will be denied.

MARK LEONARD

DEBTOR

Docket 54

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/13/20:

This is an admitted single asset real estate case. There is likely no equity although debtor has produced an optimistic appraisal at $1.41 million which, if accurate, might suggest a sliver of equity above costs of sale, but eroding fast. Strangely, movant did not check the box for relief under §362(d)(3) although it would seem that section does apply since no plan is filed and no payments were made within 90 days of the petition (although debtor alleges he has offered $9000 per month). But even without reference to §363(d)(3) under (d)(2) it is likely there is no equity [based on the fact that the property has been on the market several months without result] and the property is not necessary to an effective reorganization. Effective is the key word as derived from United Savings v. Timbers of Inwood Forest 484 U.S. 365, 355 (1988) to mean one in prospect within a reasonable time. There likely is no reorganization possible to service this much debt and the only solution is a sale, but that has been ineffective to date at the listing price or at any price that would clear the debt. It is not reasonable to impose all of the risk upon the creditor without better prospects of a solution at hand.

Grant under (d)(2) and (d)(3).

Docket 2809

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/13/20:

This is a motion to approve compromise by and between the chapter 7 trustee, Karen Sue Naylor ("Trustee") on the one hand, and Linda Martz-Gomez ("Plaintiff"), on her own behalf and on behalf of others similarly situated, on the other, as to the claims asserted against the estate in class action adversary proceeding no. 8:15-ap-01293-TA, Pursuant to F.R.B.P. 9019 and 7023. The motion is joined by the Plaintiff. The motion is opposed by Anna's Linens, Inc.'s ("Debtor's") former President and CEO, Scott Gladstone ("Gladstone").

1. Background

The Debtor filed a voluntary Chapter 11 on June 14, 2015 (the "Petition Date"). An Order Converting Case to Chapter 7 was entered on March 30, 2016 (the "Conversion Order") [Dkt. No. 1455]. Trustee was appointed on March 31, 2016 [Dkt. No. 1458]. Debtor was a specialty retailer offering home textiles, furnishings, and décor through a chain of 261 company owned retail stores throughout 19 states in the United States, including Puerto Rico and Washington, D.C. It was headquartered in Costa Mesa, California, and employed a workforce of over 2,500. As of the Petition

Date, the Debtor remained in operation but immediately thereafter requested that the Court authorize the commencement of asset sales and store closures, which were intended to complete liquidation of the Debtor's operating assets in short order. Various employees were terminated on about June 19, 2015, without the distribution of notices allegedly required under either the WARN Act or CAL-WARN Act.

A. The WARN Act Adversary Proceeding.

Certain employees of the Debtor contend that the Debtor's post-petition termination of their employment was in violation of the WARN Act or CAL-WARN Act, and on July 1, 2015 filed their Class Action Adversary Proceeding Complaint [Violation of Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act, 29 U.S.C. §§ 2101 – 2109 and California Labor Code §§ 1400 et seq.] (the "Adversary Complaint"), commencing the Adversary Proceeding [Adv. Dkt. 1]. Linda Martz-Gomez, a district manager employed by the Debtor in Texas, filed the Adversary Complaint in her capacity as Class Representative.

By the Adversary Complaint, the Class Representative sought damages, on an allowed first priority administrative claim basis pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(1)(A), in an amount "equal to the sum of: unpaid wages, salary, commissions, bonuses, accrued holiday pay, accrued vacation pay pension and 401(k) contributions and other ERISA benefits, for 60 days, that would have been covered and paid under the then applicable employee benefit plans had that coverage continued for that period", or alternatively, for a determination that "the first $12,475 of the "WARN Act claims of Plaintiff and each of the similarly situated former employees were entitled to priority status under 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(4) and (5)", with the remainder allowed as a

On August 24, 2015, the Debtor filed its Answer to Class Action Adversary Proceeding Complaint [Violation of Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act, 29 U.S.C. §§ 2101– 2019 and California Labor Code §§ 1400 et seq.] [Adv. Dkt. 12], admitting that the Class Representative and certain other employees were discharged on or about June 19, 2015 without any WARN Act notifications, but otherwise generally denying the allegations of the Adversary Complaint and asserting affirmative defenses based upon certain exceptions (liquidating fiduciary, unforeseen business circumstances, and faltering company) to the provisions of the WARN statutes.

On December 18, 2015, the Class Representative filed her Motion for Class Certification and Related Relief [Adv. Dkt. 19]. The Debtor opposed class certification, filing its Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for Class Certification and Related Relief [Adv. Dkt. 25], with the Class Representative thereafter filing her Reply in Support of Motion for Class Certification and Related Relief [Adv. Dkt. 27]. At a hearing held on February 25, 2016, the court granted the Motion for Class Certification, with an order as to same entered on March 14, 2016 (the "Class Certification Order") [Adv. Dkt. 34]. The Class Certification Order appoints the Class Representative and appoints the firm of Outten & Golden LLP as Class Counsel. The Class Certification Order further (a) approved a proposed form of notice to the Class, (b) instructed the Debtor to provide Class Counsel with the names and addresses of Class members, (c) directed Class Counsel to serve the approved form of notice on the Class and thereafter file a sworn statement affirming compliance with such directive, (d) established the deadline for any Class member to opt-out of the Class and directed Class Counsel to thereafter file a sworn statement listing the names of any persons who have opted out of the Class, and (e) found that the notice requirements established were the "best notice practicable under the circumstances and constitute[d] due and sufficient notice to all class members in full compliance with the notice requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 23."

On March 30, 2016, the Conversion Order was entered and on April 27, 2016 the Class Representative served her first round of formal discovery on the Trustee. Thereafter the Parties entered into a series of stipulations to modify adversary case scheduling orders regarding discovery deadlines and related pleadings. The Parties have reportedly been engaged in good faith, arms-length settlement discussions since 2018, including the informal exchange of damage calculations and relevant documents and information.

On or about January 1, 2020, two of the attorneys at Class Counsel formed a new firm, Raisner Roupinian LLP, and, with the consent of Class Counsel and the Class Representative, the representation of the Class Representative and the Class was transferred to the new firm. As such, when the term Class Counsel is used hereinafter and in the Proposed Settlement Agreement, the reference is to the Raisner Roupinian firm.

B. Current Status of the Estate.

As of this date, the assets of the Estate consist of, among other things, cash in the approximate amount of $7,328,865.01. Of this amount, $700,000 has been earmarked for the benefit of specific classes of creditors per orders of the court entered pre-conversion. As set forth in the Declaration of Chapter 7 Trustee, Karen Sue Naylor, in Support of Interim Fee Applications, General Case Status [Dkt. No. 2791], filed with the Court on June 9, 2020:

"As of the date hereof, multiple adversary proceedings remain pending. One, referred to in the R&S Application as the "Warn Act Adversary", involves the claims of the Debtor's former employees for alleged post-petition violations of the Federal and California WARN Act statutes, and seeks multiple seven-figures in damages. With the assistance of my special litigation counsel in that matter, settlement discussions are progressing, and I hope to have this matter, which will result in a Chapter 11 administrative claim against the Estate, resolved this year. Until this adversary is resolved and the Chapter 11 administrative claim determined/allowed, Trustee is unable to create a claims waterfall analysis demonstrating likely distributions to Chapter 11 administrative creditors or seek an order of the Court authorizing interim distributions to Chapter 11 administrative creditors."

Four preference recovery adversary proceedings are pending against officers of the Debtor who took withdrawals from the Debtor's Deferred Compensation Plan. By these adversary proceedings, Trustee is seeking to recover approximately $1,200,000. As set forth in the R&S Application, these adversary proceedings are being vigorously defended by the defendants, with the Debtor's D&O carrier reimbursing the defendants their costs of defense. Don Fife is Trustee's expert witness in these adversary proceedings. His expert report was transmitted to the defendants on June 5, 2020, a discovery cut-off date of August 28, 2020 is pending, and the matters are scheduled for pre-trial conference on October 29, 2020.

Lastly, an adversary action was commenced against Gladstone seeking to recover damages for his alleged negligence in failing to direct the Debtor to abide by the Federal and California WARN Act statutes when he ordered postpetition layoffs. This alleged failure resulted in the commencement of the WARN Act Adversary referenced above. The adversary against Mr. Gladstone is presently being held in abeyance until the WARN Act Adversary is resolved, as such resolution will establish the Estate's alleged damages.

This Motion relates to the "WARN Act Adversary" and, if approved by the Court, will fix the Estate's damages against Gladstone, the Debtor's former president, and his alleged negligence in failing to direct the Debtor to abide by the Federal and California WARN Act statutes when he ordered post-petition layoffs, as asserted in Naylor v. Scott Gladstone, et al., 8:17-ap-01105 TA.

2. The Settlement Agreement

As described by Trustee, the salient terms of the proposed Settlement Agreement are as follows:

(1) The Class, as defined in the order granting class certification that was entered on March 14, 2016, is comprised of: the Class Representative and all other similarly situated former employees who worked at or reported to the facility located at 3550 Hyland Avenue, Costa Mesa, California who were terminated without cause on or about June 19, 2015, within 30 days of June 19, 2015, or in anticipation of, or as the foreseeable consequence of, the mass layoff or plant closing ordered by Defendants on or about June 19, 2015, who are affected employees, within the meaning of 29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(5), and who have not filed a timely request to opt-out of the class. The members of the Class (the "Class Members") are listed on Exhibit A to the Proposed Settlement Agreement;

(3) The Trustee makes no representations or warranties regarding the ultimate distribution to be received by the Class on account of the Settlement Class Claim and/or the Settlement Payment through the Trustee Final Report ("TFR") process, however the Trustee may seek Court approval to make an interim distribution to all holders of allowed Chapter 11 administrative claims following final court approval of the Proposed Settlement;

(4) The Proposed Settlement Payment shall be used to satisfy any and all obligations of the Estate to the Class, including but not limited to the obligation to pay the Class Representative Service Payment, Class Counsel's Fees, Class Counsel's Expenses, Settlement Administration Costs, and all payroll taxes including the Debtor's or the Estate's portion of the payroll taxes, as defined in Paragraph 6(a) of the Proposed Settlement Agreement;

(5) In exchange for the allowance of the Settlement Class Claim, and any distributions from the Estate on account of such allowed claim, the Class Representative and Class Members shall fully and completely release the Trustee, the Estate and the Debtor for any and all claims arising out of the alleged WARN Act and CAL-WARN Act violations as alleged in the Adversary Proceeding, including waivers of known and unknown claims pursuant to California Civil Code Section 15425;

(6) The Proposed Settlement Agreement establishes the specific obligations of Class Counsel and the Settlement Administrator in administering the Proposed Settlement Payment, and the mechanism for seeking court approval of the Proposed Settlement, including notices to the Class, objections to the settlement procedures by Class Members, and the treatment of any residual Proposed Settlement Payment funds. In particular, Class Counsel shall be responsible for the production and mailing of all notices required to be provided to the Class Members ("Class Notices"). The address of Class Counsel will be used as the return address for the Class Notices and Class Counsel will respond to all inquiries of the Class arising from or related to the Proposed Settlement. Subject to the Trustee's review and approval, Class Counsel shall be responsible for calculating the allocation of each Class Member's net share of the Proposed Settlement Payment. In addition, certain Class Members have filed formal proofs of claim ("POCs") against the Estate, some of which include claims for WARN Act violations. The Trustee will provide Class Counsel with all such POCs. Class Counsel will review such POCs and provide the Trustee with a schedule setting forth the portion of each claim appropriately attributable to the Allowed Class Claim. With the information provided by Class Counsel, the Trustee will file, as appropriate, objections to such POCs to reduce the claims by the amounts identified by Class Counsel. Class Counsel and the affected Class Members agree not to oppose the reduction of their respective POCs consistent with the information provided by Class Counsel. The Trustee is not precluded from including in any such objections additional objections to other aspects of the POCs not related to the WARN Act violation claims compromised by the terms of the Proposed Settlement Agreement;

"Settlement Administration Costs" means the fees and expenses reasonably and necessarily incurred by the Settlement Administrator as a result of administering the Proposed Settlement, as approved by the Court, including but not limited to: all costs and fees associated with preparing, issuing, and mailing any and all notices and other correspondence to Class Members; all costs and fees associated with mailing the Class Members' pro rata shares and all other payments required by the Proposed Settlement; all costs and fees associated with preparing any other notices, reports, or filings to be prepared in the course of administering the Proposed Settlement; and any other costs and fees incurred or charged by the Settlement Administrator in connection with the execution of its duties under the Proposed Settlement, including without limitation printing, distributing, and tracking documents for the Proposed Settlement, tax reporting, submitting payroll taxes on behalf of the Debtor or the Estate from the Settlement Payment, and providing necessary reports and declarations at the Parties' request. Class Counsel has retained the services of American Legal Claim Services, LLC as the Settlement Administrator, and the Trustee, on behalf of the Estate, agrees not to oppose Settlement Administration Costs not to exceed $7,000;

(8) Class Counsel's Fees and Class Counsel's Expenses. The Trustee, on behalf of the Estate, agrees not to oppose an application or motion by Raisner Roupinian LLP for an award of their attorneys' fees ("Class Counsel's Fees") in the amount of up to one-third (1/3) of the Settlement Payment, net of (a) litigation expenses (including costs associated with the production and mailing of the notice of settlement and the cost of the settlement administrator) not to exceed $10,000 ("Class Counsel's Expenses"), and (b) the Class Representative Service Payment (defined below). The Trustee, on behalf of the Estate, agrees not to oppose a one-time payment of Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000) to Class Representative Linda Martz-Gomez as compensation for her service in this matter and in exchange for a general release of all known and unknown claims ("Class Representative Service Payment"). The Settlement Administrator shall determine the amount of any Payroll Taxes that will become due and owing and shall withhold such amounts. All such Payroll Taxes shall be paid promptly to the appropriate taxing authorities. The Settlement Administrator shall determine the employer's share of all FICA and UI amounts which shall be deducted from the Proposed Settlement Payment and shall pay the employees' share of such taxes by deducting such amounts from the Class Members' pro rata shares of the Proposed Settlement Payment. The Settlement Administrator shall be responsible for fulfilling reporting requirements, including federal and state payroll tax returns, the issuance of Forms W-2 and other required federal and state tax forms, and related matters. For the purpose of calculating applicable taxes, the Parties agree that eighty percent (80%) of the amounts actually paid to the Class Members after deducting Class Counsel's Fees and Expenses, including the cost of the Settlement Administrator, and the Class Representative's Service Payment, but before deducting employee taxes, shall constitute wages reportable on Internal Revenue Service Form W-2, and twenty percent (20%) shall constitute health insurance payment amounts not subject to backup withholding or employment taxes to the extent consistent with Internal Revenue Code Regulations;

At the Fairness Hearing, the Parties shall request that the Bankruptcy Court shall consider final approval of the Proposed Settlement. The Proposed Settlement is subject to entry of a final order by the court, after notice and hearing to creditors and parties in interest, in accordance with applicable law and local rules (the "Settlement Order"). The Settlement Order shall be deemed final when fourteen (14) days have elapsed from the entry of the Settlement Order, with no notice of appeal filed, or after the Settlement Order is finally affirmed on appeal, whichever first occurs; and,

Attached hereto as Exhibit "2" is the proposed form of notice to Class Members of the Proposed Settlement, the Fairness Hearing, and their right to object to the Proposed Settlement (the "Notice"). The Parties submit that the Notice comports with the requirements of FRBP 7023(e) and provides fair and reasonable notice to the Class Members of the Proposed Settlement and the right of any Class Members to request exclusion from the Class pursuant to section (e)(5).

in good faith and it is fair and equitable. Martin v. Kane (In re A & C Properties), 784 F.2d 1377, 1381 (9th Cir. 1986). In determining the fairness, reasonableness, and adequacy of a proposed settlement agreement, the court must consider:

1. The probability of success in the litigation;
2. The difficulties, if any, to be encountered in the matter of collection;
3. The complexity of the litigation involved, and the expense, inconvenience and delay necessarily attending it; and
4. The paramount interest of the creditors and a proper deference to their reasonable views in the premises. Id.

The court does not need to conduct an exhaustive investigation into the validity of the asserted claim. U.S. v. Alaska Nat'l Bank of the North (Matter of Walsh Const., Inc.), 669 F.2d 1325, 1328 (9th Cir. 1982). It is sufficient that the court determines that the claim has a substantial foundation and is not clearly invalid as a matter of law, or that the outcome of the claim's litigation is doubtful. Id. The court must determine whether the compromise is in the best interest of the bankruptcy estate. A & C Properties, 784 F.2d at 1382. These factors are separately analyzed below:

a. Probability of Success in Litigation

Trustee argues that it is unclear whether the Class Representative will ultimately succeed in establishing the claims of the Class against the Estate. While the Trustee, based upon the advice of her special litigation counsel, believes that the Estate may have defenses to the claims asserted under the WARN Act, it is less clear that such defenses will be effective against the claims asserted under the CAL-WARN Act. Trustee contends that the terminations were caused by a sudden and dramatic event outside of Debtor's control and that, at the time WARN notice was due, it was actively seeking capital or financing that would have allowed it to avoid the terminations. (Adv. Dkt. 12 at 11). Plaintiff contends that the terminations were foreseeable more than 60 days prior to June 19, 2015, and that the events that led to the terminations were not only foreseeable, but inevitable. Plaintiff also contends that the unforeseeable business circumstances exception does not apply under the CAL-WARN Act, that the Trustee is foreclosed from asserting the faltering company exception under the CAL-WARN Act because no determination from the Department of Industrial Relations (DIR) was requested at the time of the layoffs, and that none of the federal WARN Act statutory exceptions are applicable because, among other things, no written notice was provided to the Class Members.

Gladstone argues that Trustee has a high likelihood of success defending against the Plaintiff's federal WARN Act claims but only possibly (not necessarily likely) a lower likelihood of success in defending against Plaintiff's CAL-WARN Act claims. Gladstone argues that at the very least, a Settlement Payment of $1.2 million is unjustifiably high. Gladstone argues that the Trustee obtained no or little discount on the WARN Act claims even though the Trustee is settling at a very early stage of the lawsuit, without requiring the WARN Act Plaintiffs to conduct any discovery and without causing the Plaintiff's and their counsel to incur any cost or fees in prosecution of their claims. Furthermore, Gladstone argues that there is nothing complicated about the WARN Act claims alleged by Plaintiffs or the Estate's defenses thereto. According to Gladstone, certain of the Estate's defenses, such as the "faltering company" exception raise issues of law that can easily be adjudicated through a pre-trial and dispositive motion, thus potentially avoiding the need to conduct lengthy or costly discovery.

days' wages and benefits at $1.9 million for the smaller class of 111 class members, exclusive of reimbursable medical expenses compensable under California Labor Code 1402(a)(2), the employer's payroll obligations, the cost of providing notice to the class, and the cost of administering the settlement. The proposed settlement amount, allegedly, represents an approximately 60% recovery of the fuller Class' maximum WARN damages again, exclusive of reimbursable medical expenses compensable under California Labor Code 1402(a)(2), the employer's payroll obligations, the cost of providing notice to the class, and the cost of administering the settlement. Plaintiff asserts that should the proposed settlement not be approved, and the Class were to prevail on the merits, Class Counsel would seek its attorneys' fees, pursuant to 29 U.S.C. § 2104(a)(6). Under those circumstances, Class Counsel estimates the exposure to the estate could easily exceed $3 million. (Roupinian Decl., ¶ 19).

There seems to be general agreement that Trustee's likelihood of successfully defending against the federal WARN Act claims is higher than on the CAL-WARN Act claims. But even a high likelihood of success does not equate to certainty, whereas a settlement does. To that end, Trustee points out that the "faltering company" defense may not find purchase here because, she argues, under 29 U.S.C. sec. 2102(b)(1) and Cal. Lab. Code sec. 1402.5(d), the exception applies to single site plant closures, not mass layoffs as occurred in this case. In any event, litigation, regardless of how strong a defense may seem, is likely to be expensive and laborious. Also, Plaintiff points out, if the settlement is not approved, the estate is potentially exposed to more than twice the amount of the settlement. Trustee notes that, Gladstone aside, no other interested party, creditor or otherwise, has opposed this settlement. Trustee posits that Gladstone's true motive in opposing this motion is that he seeks to avoid or at least limit the Estate's claims against him for his alleged negligence as CEO and Chairman of the Board of the Debtor in failing to ensure that the applicable WARN statute(s) was/were complied with when he ordered the June 2015 post-petition mass layoff of the Debtor's employees. Furthermore, Gladstone's assertion that the issues are not complicated itself seems overly simplistic as it is unknown what evidence might be discovered and how the potential litigation would shake out, especially given the partial description of Plaintiff's litigation strategy.

b. Difficulty in Collection

By mutual agreement this factor does not apply.

c. The complexity of the litigation involved, and the expense, inconvenience and delay necessarily attending it

As noted above, Gladstone asserts that the litigation ought to be straightforward and the issues are not complex. In fact, Gladstone asserts that many of the issues raised can be dispensed with through dispositive and pre-trial motions. Unsurprisingly, Plaintiff and Trustee assume the opposite position. For example, Plaintiff asserts that the allegations and the Debtor's defenses to the claims under the WARN Acts are fact intensive and require discovery. Discovery regarding the Debtor's financial affairs leading up to the terminations would also be fact intensive and lengthy, significantly reducing the funds ultimately available for creditors. Plaintiff also points out that it is likely that, regardless of the outcome of a trial, there would be an appeal, resulting in further lengthy delays. Trustee also points to her own diligence in retaining special counsel to litigate the WARN Act claims, whose efforts of over more than year enabled targeted and productive settlement discussions, which result in the proposed Settlement Agreement. Trustee has also taken steps to liquidate certain estate assets, which resulted in greater recoveries for Chapter 11 administrative claims, which claims total in excess of $5,400,000 before consideration of the Proposed Settlement. Thus, Trustee argues, her diligence in this matter undercut the suggestion that she is merely feigning concern over delays in the WARN Act litigation. Trustee and Plaintiff have persuasively argued that the issues involved could potentially become quite complex given the fact intensive nature of the allegations. This factor tilts in favor of granting the motion. But the biggest issue the court sees is part of this A&C Properties factor, i.e. ongoing expense from diminishing resources. The court will call it the "melting ice cube" factor. Consider the Trustee's report on the estate's current financial condition:

"At present I hold cash in the approximate amount of $7,328,572.67. Of that amount, $700,000 has been earmarked for the benefit of specific classes of creditors as per orders of the Court entered pre-conversion. At present, allowed and unpaid Chapter 11 administrative claims (Section 503(b)(9) claims, landlords, miscellaneous chapter 11 unpaid vendor claims and the claims of employed professionals) are approximately $5,400,000, before the Proposed Settlement, with additional claims requiring my review. The total likely distribution to allowed Chapter 11 administrative claims cannot be finally determined until after final administration and allowance of final Chapter 7 costs fees and costs. As such it remains uncertain whether Chapter 11 administrative claims will be paid in full, with or without the Proposed Settlement." Trustee's Reply, p. 25.

Do the arithmetic. The Trustee is reporting that the estate is already teetering on administrative insolvency assuming only a $1.2 million recovery for the class. Depending on how the remaining litigation pans out, it is altogether likely that even administrative claims will not be paid in full in this case. So, the ancient proverb comes to mind: "If you find yourself in a hole...stop digging."

Trustee argues that absent settlement, the Parties anticipate another year or perhaps two of expensive litigation, including formal discovery, before the Class Claim will be brought to trial. Of particular importance, Trustee argues, the Proposed Settlement provides for the complete administration, calculation, and payment of the Class Claims, including withholding and funding of payroll taxes, both of Class members and of the Estate, thereby eliminating the substantial administrative costs the Estate would incur in performing these services.

Gladstone argues that the proposed Settlement Agreement is not in the best interests of the estate's creditors because it proposes to treat the class members as entitled to administrative claims. Gladstone points out, citing Czyzewski v. Jevic Holding Corp., 137 S. Ct. 973, 979 (2017), that the Bankruptcy Code sets forth a basic system of priority, which ordinarily determines the order in which the bankruptcy court will distribute assets of the estate. Gladstone also asserts that at least one post-Jevic court has recognized that "[i]n light of the Supreme Court's recent ruling in Jevic, parties who seek approval of settlements that provide for a distribution in a manner contrary to the Code's priority scheme should be prepared to prove that the settlement is not only 'fair and equitable' ... but also that any deviation from the priority scheme for a portion of the assets is justified because it serves a significant Code-related objective." In re Fryar, 570 B.R. 602, 610 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2017).

Here, Gladstone argues, it is possible that class members would only be entitled to fourth or fifth priority as wage claims with the balance of the claims that is not entitled to priority under Sections 507(a)(4)-(5) treated as a bifurcated unsecured claim. 11 U.S. Code § 507(a)(4)-(5); see In re First Magnus Fin. Corp., 403 B.R. 659, 666 (D. Ariz. 2009) (holding that WARN Act damages should not be awarded administrative priority status because they "are not necessary to maintain the debtor as a going concern, nor are they necessary to preserve the bankruptcy estate during the liquidation process.") Both Trustee and Gladstone acknowledge that there is persuasive authority suggesting that post-petition WARN Act claims can be entitled to administrative priority, but there does not appear to be controlling authority in the Ninth Circuit. Plaintiff also points out that settling the case now obviates the need for expenditure of time and money in litigation, which works to the benefit of all creditors.

As there does not appear to be controlling authority in this circuit on the issue of priority for these class members it is difficult to assess this issue with precision. But as noted, there is at least a line of authority that suggests administrative claim priority status for post-petition WARN Act plaintiffs is the correct posture. See In re Powermate Holding Corporation, 394 B.R. 765, 776-77 (Bankr. D. Del. 2008) (construing WARN claims as severance pay, the court determined that the WARN claims "vest" at the time of the employees' termination, thereby making them entitled to administrative expense claims in a post-petition termination.) Furthermore, Trustee argues that all courts addressing the issue conclude that employee terminations which occur after the commencement of the case would satisfy section 503(b)(1)(A)(ii). See In re First Magnus Fin. Corp., 390 B.R. 667, 679 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2008), aff'd, 403 B.R. 659 (D. Ariz. 2009); In re Powermate Holding Corp., 394 B.R. 765 (Bankr. D. Del. 2008); In re Philadelphia Newspapers, LLC, 433 B.R. 164, 173-74 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2010). Trustee's persuasive authority is likely sufficient for purposes of this motion. The issue is unquestionably a gamble. Gladstone's argument to keep plowing ahead in the hope this is resolved in favor of the estate sounds like an encouragement to continue doubling down on a shaky bet in the hopes of winning, which is considerably easier to argue if one is using other people's money.

Finally, although Gladstone asserts his own status as a creditor, it likely bears repeating that no other creditor or interested party opposed the motion or joined Gladstone's opposition to the proposed Settlement Agreement, and Gladstone's self interest in keeping the settlement low or non-existent cannot be ignored. Thus, although Gladstone may not be pleased with the Settlement Agreement for any number of reasons, his dissatisfaction alone does not mean that the Settlement Agreement is not in the best interests of the estate's creditors taken as whole.

4. Compliance with FRBP 7023

FRBP 7023 (e) provides, in pertinent part:

(e) The Claims, issues, or defenses of a certified class may be settled, voluntarily dismissed, or compromised only with the court's approval. The following procedures apply to a proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise:

- (1) The court must direct notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who would be bound by the proposal.
- (2) If the proposal would bind class members, the court may approve it only after a hearing and on finding that it is fair, reasonable, and adequate.
- (3) The parties seeking approval must file a statement identifying any agreement made in connection with the proposal.
- (4) If the class action was previously certified under rule 23(b)(3), the court may refuse to approve a settlement unless it affords a new opportunity to request exclusion to individual class members who had an earlier opportunity to request exclusion but did not do so.

(5) Any class member may object to the proposal if it requires court approval under this subdivision (e); the objection may be withdrawn only with the court's approval.

Here, Trustee asserts that the Proposed Settlement satisfies the above requirements in that:

- (1) The Parties are requesting that the court approve the proposed form of Notice, which is fair and reasonable, providing a comprehensive description of the Proposed Settlement and the options of each Class Member in considering same;
- (2) The Parties are requesting that the court preliminarily or conditionally approve the Proposed Settlement, thereafter, requiring a Fairness Hearing so that it may determine that the Proposed Settlement is in fact fair, reasonable and adequate;
- (3) The full, complete and fully executed Proposed Settlement Agreement is attached to this Motion for the review and consideration by each Class Member, and the Motion provides an overview of the material terms of the Proposed Settlement;
- (4) The Court has previously certified the Class and Class Members were afforded an opportunity to request exclusion, with three such individuals doing so; and,
- (5) The Proposed Settlement requires court approval, and proposed Notice describes for each Class Member the right to object and the deadline for filing any such objections.

It appears the Rule 23 as adopted into FRBP 7023 is or will be complied with under the Settlement.

5. Conclusion

Trustee and Plaintiff have persuasively argued that the A&C Properties factors favor granting the motion over Gladstone's opposition, as the Settlement Agreement appears to have been the result of arm's-length negotiations, is fair and equitable, is carefully considered and serves the best interests of the creditors. As a practical matter, the Trustee is doing what the court expects her to do, that is, keeping a close eye on the relative benefit of continued litigation considering the lack of available resources. This is particularly so in a borderline administratively insolvent case which this one appears likely to be. The proposed Settlement Agreement also appears to comply with the requirements of FRBP 7023, and for all these reasons should be approved.

Tentative for 8/5/20:
This is an oft-continued request for use of cash collateral. As the court recalls, there is only a very marginal slice of equity in the collateral. The court has repeatedly stated (starting in November) that status quo cannot be expected to last indefinitely, and the tentative from last time (5/27) said one last extension would be granted. But the court observes now that somehow confirmation of the plan has moved to September 2. The June MOR shows a dwindling cash balance. To exacerbate the court's concern, no further status report is offered, although Ms. Altieri does file a declaration suggesting that everything is unfolding more or less as expected, with only a temporary lull in rental payments due to the pandemic. Unless the secured creditor is willing to go along further the court sees little encouragement on this record or reason to continue the use beyond September 2. So, despite the court's earlier admonition we should continue on the same basis until the continued confirmation hearing, but further continuances of that date should not be expected and, if sought, had better include the secured creditor's acquiescence as it may be without further use of cash collateral. It probably also goes without saying that the proposed plan should be the very best

Docket 66

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/14/20:

This is a hearing on confirmation on the debtor's Amended plan. This hearing was continued at least twice from May 27, 2020 to address some of the issues identified in the court's tentative ruling of that date, which tentative opinion is incorporated herein. The major remaining issues are cramdown interest rate and feasibility. The debtor has offered the expert opinion of J. Michael Issa, principal of the financial advisory firm, GlassRatner Advisory & Capital Group attached to his declaration of August 10, 2020.

The objecting creditor, judgment creditor Stephanie Bryson, Class 2E, has filed an opposing brief but no expert opinion. It is unclear whether U.S. Bank, Class 2B, who filed an objection to confirmation considered in the May 27 tentative, still opposes. The major obstacles to confirmation are considered below:

1. Cramdown Interest Rate

The court cannot confirm the plan over the objection of an impaired class of secured creditors, such as Bryson, unless the court determine under the relevant portion of §1129(b)(2)(A)(i) that the payments promised under the plan provide the present value of the secured claim. As both sides acknowledge, the present value analysis is the mirror image of interest rate.

So, the promised interest rate (in this case of 5% interest only over 180 monthly payments, or 15 years) leaves a balloon of $330,386 due in full at the end of the plan term. The question is, adjusted for all appropriate market and risk factors, does this treatment amount to the present value of the claim, which appears to be the full $330,386? The parties seem to agree with this court's conclusion expressed in In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010), and as expressed in other authorities, that a plan may not by cramdown impose uncompensated risk on the objecting secured creditor. So, to determine the appropriate rate a variety of circumstances/factors must be evaluated. Among these are market interest rates adjusted for such factors as residential vs. commercial, inflationary pressures generally, terms of repayment and the like. To be clear, there is never a true "market" rate analysis because no lender will voluntarily make the proposed treatment as a new loan; if that were the case, one presumes the debtor would refinance. Instead, the court in cramdown analysis looks at all applicable factors to find as near a proxy as possible, one that appropriately reflects all the factors adjusted for circumstances.

One such factor here is that the proposed treatment of Class 2E is for interest only, with no amortization of principal at all. In some situations, this might be thought to be a factor somewhat lowering interest rates on shorter term loans where the principal is well protected. But in a situation like this one, where the "borrower" is a debtor in possession and proposes a long term plan (15 years), who apparently lacks the resources to amortize the principal at all, on balance the court regards this as a riskier proposition and a factor creating upward pressure on interest rates to compensate for that risk. See e.g. In re McCombs Properties VIII, 91 B.R. 907, 910-12 (Bankr. C.D. Ca. 1988). Neither side analyses this factor in any helpful way.

Mr. Issa opines that a Till approach, which takes a near riskless rate such as prime rate and then adds a few points as adjustments (in a vague, somewhat arbitrary and unexplained manner) is not appropriate for this case. The court agrees, not only because the Till court relied upon the prime rate, which is not used in real estate loans, but also because that was a truck loan in a Chapter 13 of short duration. Therefore, the analysis appropriate to a longer-term real estate loan relies on fundamentally different analysis.

A closer line of authority is this court's opinion in North Valley Mall. In North Valley Mall, this court opined that a more principled approach was to break a proposed treatment as a "loan" analyzed in tranches, that is, a percentage of a 100% LTV loan can be thought of in at least three segments, or tranches, a percentage equating to more or less conforming loans, say up to 70% LTV, for which there is usually abundant data in the marketplace because real lenders make real loans on this basis every day. Sure, some adjustment is made for poor or no credit, or other factors such as conforming vs non-conforming, but there is still abundant data available. The trickier portions of the North Valley approach is fixing the second, or mezzanine tranche of say the next 20% of riskier "hard money" loans (usually in the range of 7 or 8%) combining to 90% LTV, and the very trickiest in the last 10% up to 100% of value, where no lender (outside maybe the Mafia) would touch the transaction on any basis. A suitable proxy in North Valley for that last tranche was said to be the average of what equity investors into highly leveraged transactions would expect as a return. This is usually quite a high number, say 20% per annum, as was the case in North Valley Mall. Then the court combines the tranches in weighted fashion to reach a blended rate for cramdown.

Bryson analyses the proposed rate using the North Valley approach, argues that 5% is therefore way too low and instead suggests the North Valley approach would yield a blended rate of 10.5%. Unfortunately, no expert is retained on behalf of Bryson. Mr. Issa does not utilize North Valley but adopts instead a "modified market rate" approach. Mr. Issa acknowledges that "an efficient market for traditional debt" does not exist for the Chandler property because there is, at best $25,000 or so of value therein for the Bryson lien to attach to behind almost $700,000 of senior debt. Thus, this property is well over 100% LTV and effectively yielding almost no collateral value at all (maybe 4% in Mr. Issa's view) after costs of sale. Mr. Issa correctly observes that no lender would touch this on any basis and even under a North Valley approach nothing but the very highest tranche (the so-called equity investor tranche) exists to add to the blended rate on a partially secured basis. He does opine, however, that "an efficient market likely does exist..." for the Bryson position on the Adams Street property which he observes attaches to about $278,000 of value behind $825,828 of senior debt. He calls this a 75% LTV situation, but the court is somewhat confused unless what he means is this is only compared to what the court in North Valley called mezzanine debt, i.e. effectively hard money loans into heavily mortgaged situations with correspondingly higher rates based on increased risk. He does seem to acknowledge that in any event the analog for market analysis has to be on 100% LTV situations for the combined loan structure, but since Bryson is in junior most position, the only apt comparison for her position is to the riskier portion of the mezzanine tranche or even to the leveraged equity positions only. In other words, the comparison is not like in North Valley to blended rates where a single loan is broken into tranches and then re-blended, but instead only to the riskiest junior positions.

Mr. Issa opines the appropriate rate is 7.1% for the Boston area "for this product." He cites in a footnote to an article by Eisfeldt and Demers from the National Bureau of Economics Research dated December 2015. Well, maybe, but the court would be very surprised to see that the conditions regarding that investment data are in any way comparable to those present in this case. To be comparable, the investments would have to have been into very highly leveraged situations, that is, where the "equity" investment is behind maybe 80% LTV of existing debt. The court does not doubt that some investors would venture into such situations but would be extremely surprised to see only a demand for 7.1% annualized return in comparable situations. Indeed, the court "googled" the Eisfeldt and Demers paper. It is 56 pages of somewhat dense and technical economic jargon. It looks to the court's reading that while at page 42 in a table there is reference to a 7.1% rate of return in the Boston area, insofar as the court can understand it, this represents an overall investment return rate into rental housing generally, not particularized so as to correspond to only highly leveraged investments such as pertains here. So, the court is left to doubt the "market rate" analysis at any level.

At pp. 8-9 of his report Mr. Issa does opine that an approach would be to blend a 3.22-3.95% rate pertaining to 75% LTV loans on investment properties generally with the 7.1%. But again, it is left very unclear that the 75% LTV rate is comparable to what we have in the case at bar. The comparison here is not to loans up to 75% of value, but to hard money loans behind 75% existing debt thus 100% LTV, a much riskier pool which assuredly commands a higher rate. So, the conclusion he reaches at page 9 of the report that on a blended basis the rate should be near 5% is very suspect. He does opine at pp. 10-11 that the court can reinforce the loan rate with a total debt to net income ratio in this case ($151,536 combined income to total debt as called for in the plan of $122,114) which he says is within the standard debt service coverage ratio of 1.22x, or within the "standard metric" of between 1.2 to 1.4% used in financing of income property [but see feasibility analysis infra]. But another unsupported assumption is utilized in attempting to reconcile the 7.1% equity investment rate and the 3.22-3.95% market rate for 75% LTV properties for a resulting average of about 5%; he simply averages the two rates together. (see footnote 11). He does not attempt to weight either result. No explanation is offered for this approach and, as the court observes, even the 7.1% rate is highly suspect since it is left unclear that such a number corresponds to investments in income properties in the Boston area generally, or more usefully to a particularized rate of investments into highly leveraged properties only. In sum, the opinion does not persuade the court that 5% is anywhere near the appropriate rate to yield "present value" even before one considers any further boost required to deal with the fact that the loan in question is non-amortizing, interest only.

2. Feasibility

Chapter 11

As Mr. Issa analyzed it, the income to debt ratio is 1.22x. But that assumption depends on getting a very low cramdown interest rate, such that the yearly debt service for the Bryson obligation is only $16,519. But if the cramdown rate is more like 10% or about $33,000 per annum the total debt service amounts to more like $140,595, or in ratio terms 1.07x. Granted, this is still within (barely) the stated expected net income of $151,536. But the proposal to not amortize the obligation at all creates a whole additional set of issues. If the obligation is fully amortized at 10% over 15 years, the payment jumps to $3550 monthly or $42,600 annually which bumps debt payments to almost exactly projected income. Who knows what markets will look like in 15 years, and no details are given that the court sees telling us just how debtor will be able to refinance the property when the balloon comes due? Also, debtor relies on various assumptions such as the bonus component of her income will remain steady at an average of $12,000 per annum, or that repairs, and maintenance of the properties will remain manageable within existing budget.

3. Conclusion

The plan is not "fair and equitable" as pertains to the objecting creditor, Bryson, in that the cramdown interest rate of 5% fails to account properly for all risks and thus does not yield present value of the secured claim. The plan cannot be confirmed as written for that reason. Also, debtor bears the burden on proving not only that issue but the related issue of feasibility. On feasibility, if the interest rate is adjusted to give present value the resulting budget is extremely tight. The court is agnostic on the question of whether it is, nevertheless, sufficient since feasibility does not mean guaranteed performance, only more likely than not.

Deny. The court will hear argument as to where we should go from here.

Chapter 11

Tentative for 5/27/20:

This is the hearing on confirmation of debtor's plan. It is opposed in objections filed by two creditors.

A. Bryson

The first objection comes from judgment creditor from Class 2E, Stephanie Bryson ("Bryson"). Bryson obtained a judgment against Debtor in the amount of $270,658.85. Bryson has liens on two properties located in Massachusetts, the Chandler property and the Adams property. The Chandler property was valued at $775,000 (though Bryson values it at $795,000). The Adams property was valued at $978,300 (Bryson values it at $1,240,000).

The plan proposes to pay off debt of $330,386.91 (as of 10/22/19) over a period of 180 months, with monthly "interest only" payments of $1,376.61, then a balloon payment of $330,386.91 at the end of the plan.

Bryson argues that the plan does not satisfy the best interest of creditors test. Bryson does not believe that the Debtor's liquidation analysis is accurate, due partly to the undervaluing of the encumbered properties. If Bryson's fair market valuations are used instead of Debtor's, then the result is a net positive instead of negative. Bryson concedes that after administrative costs were factored in a chapter 7 liquidation there would still be nothing left for unsecured creditors, whereas the current plan provides for at least some recovery for unsecured creditors. Despite this fact, Bryson argues that the plan still cannot be considered fair and equitable.

Specifically, Bryson argues that the 5% interest rate contemplated in the plan is not adequate to account for the risks involved. Bryson is not a lender and her Massachusetts judgment accrues interest at 12% per year. Bryson asserts that she could foreclose on the Massachusetts properties, which would pay the judgment debt in full. Bryson asserts that the plan also has feasibility issues, and the interest rate must be adjusted to account for that risk.

Bryson asserts that the plan relies on rental income from two properties in Massachusetts. Any unplanned or prolonged vacancy throws the plan into doubt. Furthermore, Bryson asserts that Debtor's financial history suggests that her projected income is optimistic to say the least. The properties are also old and may need repairs over the life of the plan. Those repairs could come at significant cost, which again, would jeopardize the plan. The supplement to the Bryson opposition states that Debtor is including a $16,000 annual bonus from her employer, Clean Energy. However, it appears that the bonus will be in the form of stock, not cash. Thus, Bryson concludes that the plan is simply not feasible and should not be confirmed. Not raised by Bryson, but of concern to the court, is what happens at the end of 180 months on the balloon? One imagines that the debtor will either refinance or sell, but the prospect of so doing should at least be explained. Interest-only, non-amortizing lien treatments are inherently riskier than fully amortizing. This is because the creditor is never put in a position of comfort on its principal, but always hangs on the precipice. There may be a further complication here in that Massachusetts rate of interest on judgment liens is reported to be 12%, which means that the balance will actually increase over time, unless it is intended that the cramdown rate supplant the state judgment rate. That point needs clarification and briefing.

This is not inherently unconfirmable, but the fundamental precept is that the risks imposed must be fully paid. In the court's view, 5% is too low to accomplish "present value" under §1129(b)(2)(A) considering this point and that Bryson appears to be in second position, with little or no cushion. See In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Debtor argues for the prime plus approach found in Till and argues that North Valley Mall is distinguishable. But her argument is not convincing. What is the principled difference between a judgment lien and a defaulted loan? They are both

'allowed secured claims' and that is what the Code requires be given present value if paid over time. Debtor confuses resort to market data to help analyze what is present value (an economic concept informed by data) with the fact that most data available happens to originate in the loan marketplace. That is because lenders consult varied data when deciding whether to extend credit, and many factors such as collateral value and creditworthiness go into the analysis. That is a process done before the fact. But that does not change the fact that both are secured claims being paid over time so their origin seems immaterial after the fact where the court in cramdown analysis is asked to make a determination of factors in situations where no real market exists. Even if the court could be persuaded that the Till approach (which was after all about a truck loan and seemingly even less relevant) were correct, a 1.75% adjustment is still way too low.

B. U.S. Bank National Association

The real property that is the subject of this Objection is located at 33 Chandler Street, Newton, MA 02458 (the "Property"). Creditor holds a security interest in the Property as evidenced by a Note and Mortgage executed by the Debtor. Said Note and Mortgage are attached to Creditor's proof of claim (the "Proof of Claim") which was filed in the instant case as Claim No. 5-1. The Proof of Claim provides for a secured claim in the amount of $590,127.29. This amount has increased since the petition date as interest has accrued and Creditor has made post-petition escrow advances to protect its interest in the Property. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is $617,465.04. Creditor's claim is treated in the Plan under Class "2B." The Plan provides that the Debtor will pay Creditor's claim the amount of $590,127.29, over 360 months (30 years) at 4.625% interest, with equal monthly payments of $3,034.08.

The Plan fails to provide for maintenance of property insurance and timely payment of property taxes. The Plan should specify whether Debtors intend to maintain property insurance and tax payments directly or through establishment of an escrow account with Creditor. Creditor has advanced approximately $7,597.52 for post-petition property taxes on account of the Property. The Plan does not provide for reimbursing Creditor for such advances which were made post-petition for the benefit of the estate. Such advances qualify as administrative expenses and must be cured on or before the effective date of the plan.

The Plan indicates that the value of the Property is $775,000.00. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is $617,465.04. The plan provides for a total secured claim in the reduced amount of $590,127.29. As the plan fails to provide for the full amount of Creditor's secured claim, Debtor's Plan cannot be confirmed as is, and the portion that is payable as an administrative claim must be dealt with.

C. Conclusion

The objections raise some good points regarding feasibility. According to Bryson, Debtor's own financial data demonstrate that she will not be able to make good on the plan payments. This plan appears to have a very (perhaps overly) optimistic outlook on Debtor's finances. Further, expenditures that may be necessary are not addressed at all, like insurance, maintenance, and the fact that there may be a $7597.52 administrative claim.

Debtor points out that Bryson has not provided any analysis as to what the appropriate interest rate would be. Debtor also points out that under the plan, unsecured creditors get at least some recovery, whereas in a liquidation, they would receive nothing. While, of course, the court wants unsecured creditors to get something, this does not substitute for the fact that it is debtor's burden to prove not only feasibility, but that cramdown treatment is providing the present value of the objecting secured claims and that this plan is better than liquidation. This has not been done. Furthermore, Debtor asserts that the First Amended Plan provides that all secured creditors encumbering the Rental Properties will receive deferred cash payments totaling the allowed amount of their claims while retaining their liens on the Rental Properties. But this assertion is devoid of analysis and, on a true present value basis, probably wrong. As Debtor's plan seems to be premised on everything going as planned over the 15 (or even thirty) years of this Chapter 11 plan, with little or no wiggle room, and while not even apparently dealing with all likely expenses, the court requires Debtor to answer Bryson's concerns about feasibility. Given the current economic climate, Debtor should account for the realistic probability of sustained occupancy in the rental properties as well as her own employment prospects.

No tentative. Continue for approximately 30 days to afford one final opportunity to fill in the gaps.

The purpose of a disclosure statement is "to give all creditors a source of information which allows them to make an informed choice regarding the approval or rejection of a plan." Duff v. U.S. Trustee (In re California Fidelity, Inc.), 198 B.R. 567, 571 (9th Cir. BAP 1996). "Adequate information" is defined under 11 U.S.C. Sec. 1125(a)(1) as "information of a kind, and in sufficient detail, as far as is reasonably practicable in light of the nature and history of the debtor and the condition of the debtor's books and records, that would enable a hypothetical reasonable investor typical of holders of claims or interest of the relevant class to make an informed judgment about the plan, but adequate information need not include such information about any other possible or proposed plan."

Bryson's objections notwithstanding (though feasibility seems questionable), the DS appears to provide adequate information. It is also worth noting that the DS has not drawn any other opposition. The plan may ultimately not be confirmable if feasibility proves too speculative, as it very well might be given the current economic climate, or if cramdown is attempted and the value of the rental properties is too low as Bryson has alleged, suggesting that creditors will do better in a liquidation (the so-called best interest of creditors test). Debtor will have the burden on these issues in order to achieve confirmation, but at this stage, the DS does not appear deficient from an information standpoint, especially with the detailed risk factors analysis.

Grant. Set confirmation date and deadlines.

Appearance is optional.

Chapter 13

#1.00 Confirmation Of Chapter 13 Plan
(cont'd from 9-16-20)

Docket 5

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/21/20:

Need an order regarding the sustained objection regarding mortgage arrearages. If there is a continuing discrepancy between what the filed proofs of claim say regarding tax and mortgage claims, it is incumbent upon debtor to obtain either amended claims or an order.

Tentative for 6/17/20:

It is difficult to determine current status. All plan payments must be current and missing documents provided. Regarding arrearages, was this in the nature of paying the mortgagee on account of taxes advanced on Debtor's behalf? If it was paid to OC taxes directly, this was improper, as it should have been dealt with under the plan. An amended claim should be obtained from the lender either by stipulation or plan objection. No tentative.

#6.00 Trustee's Motion For Order: Authorizing Sale Of Litigation Rights (A) Outside The Ordinary Course Of Business; (B) Free And Clear Of Liens; (C) Subject To Overbids; And (D) For Determination Of Good Faith Purchaser Under Section 363(M)
(cont'd from 9-22-20)

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO DECEMBER 1, 2020 AT 11:00 A.M. PER ORDER ENTERED 10/1/2020

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/22/20:

The court had two concerns regarding this motion: (1) what is that is proposed to be sold, precisely described?, and (2) if the assets sold include trustee's avoidance powers under §§544,547,548 or 549, would the buyer have standing to pursue the actions post sale? On the second question there seems to be adequate authority in the Ninth Circuit supporting a conclusion that prudential standing would exist since, indisputably, creditors do benefit from the price, although the issue could have been more clear had there been a promised "rebate" of some portion of any proceeds to ensure that creditors got paid in full if, after administrative claims, the price is not sufficient to take out all unsecured claims. See Brookview Apts., LLC v. Hoer (In re Weigh), 576 B.R. 189, 205-06 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2017) citing Duckor Spradling & Metzger v. Baum (In re P.R.T. C. Inc.), 177 F.3d 774, 780-82 (9th Cir. 1999). But the first question remains. The description is vague in that inclusion of all rights of action, including trustee avoidance actions, is only one possible interpretation. From what is outlined in the motion it looks like the proposed actions would be in the nature of avoiding certain transactions as fraudulent conveyances, and possibly another as a post-petition transfer (honoring of a check post-petition), but the language used in the motion is susceptible to interpretation. The court will hear argument but is inclined to continue for clarification on this point, and possible re-noticing.

#7.00 Debtor's Motion to Convert Case From Chapter 7 to 11.
(cont'd from 9-22-20)

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO DECEMBER 1, 2020 AT 11:00 A.M. PER ORDER ENTERED 10/1/2020

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/22/20:

The problem with this motion is that it is completely unsupported by any evidence. At most the declarations attest to a desire to explore a Chapter 11 plan but absolutely no details are given as to how that might be accomplished. It is also obvious that the conversion attempt is connected to the Trustee's motion to sell assets (see #12), so it would appear that the real motivation for this conversion attempt is to frustrate/block the Trustee's sale motion or other efforts to liquidate. While the court always prefers the good faith attempts of debtors to reorganize, this should not be mistaken for naivete. The Marrama case makes abundantly clear that good faith is a necessary prerequisite to conversion into a reorganization chapter. Such inquiry is heightened when it looks like a ploy to evade the trustee. Debtor might have made a closer case if she had given even the most basic explanation of just how she would manage this reorganization at this late date, and no idle promise of 120%+ or other of the moon and stars can convince under these circumstances, where concrete facts are what is needed.

Deny.

#1.00 United States Trustee Motion To Dismiss Case Pursuant To 11 U.S.C. § 1112(B)

Docket 105

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/28/20:

This appears to be a very challenging case, but debtor has not only failed to file a plan by the deadline, but he shows little else by way of determination to meet the challenge, such as staying current on MORs. Moreover, the most recently filed reports show no accumulation of cash which will certainly be necessary to meet §1129(a)(9)(C). This case has all the signs of going nowhere so the court is inclined to GRANT the motion, but will not decline a short continuance if the UST is convinced there is a purpose to be served.

#2.00 EVIDENTIARY HEARING RE: Motion For Order Determining Value Of Collateral
(set from mtn hrg held on 7-22-20)
(set from s/c hrg held on 9-30-20)

Docket 92

 VACATED  REASON: OFF CALENDAR - ORDER APPROVING STIPULATION BETWEEN THE DEBTOR AND THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA RESOLVING DEBTOR'S MOTION FOR ORDER DETERMINING VALUE OF COLLATERAL ENTERED 10-22-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/30/20:

Continue to October 28 @ 10:00. Appraisals to be exchanged within seven days and briefs from both sides (with appraisals as exhibits) to be filed not later than October 13, with sur replies, if any, not later than October 23. Counsel should address whether live testimony via Zoom or possibly in person, will be required.

Tentative for 7/22/20:

Debtor acknowledges he bears the burden of proof in this valuation motion under §506. He offers only his own declaration, which, although not entirely inadmissible as an owner, suffers from several problems such as the obvious self-interest as well as reductions dependent on expertise that the declarant does not evidentially possess (i.e. structural repairs, opinion on which side of the street is more valuable and the appropriate amount of reduction, even if true, etc.). Consequently, that burden is not carried. The IRS similarly offers declarations based on hearsay reports of computerized databases such as Zillow, or upon the county assessor, which is/are a notoriously inaccurate basis of current value. Moreover, the range of values, $900,000 to $1.3 million is significant and where the value falls may be quite significant (strategic) in determining treatment of junior liens. Consequently, the court cannot render an informed judgment on this record. Absent an agreed single appraiser, each side will be required to submit his/its own professional

#15.00 Post-Confirmation Status Conference Re: Chapter 11 Plan (set from confirmation hrg. held 4-29-20)
(re-scheduled from 10-22-20)

Docket 87

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/28/20:

Does debtor anticipate administrative closing with reopening to coincide with eligibility for discharge?

Appearance: optional

Tentative for 4/29/20:

This plan is likely confirmable. Debtor notes that the absolute priority mle likely finds unusual cation here: mainly due to the fact that there is no dissenting class of unsecured creditors. Is this true as to Class 2A, which did not vote? Thus, Debtor concludes that the absolute priority rule is probably inapplicable in the usual sense. Instead: Debtor asserts that he will be providing "new value" in the amount of $5,000. By ddng so, Debtor argues, the present equity owner may fully retain his equity interests in the reorganized debtor even though there is no real "dissenting class" to accommodate. (See Debtor's confirmation brief at pp. 24-26).

Although Debtor' s plan is likely confirmable, it must be amended to take out subsection (D) from section III of the plan. This subsection, entitled "Termination of Obligations In The Event of Unprocessed Payments" states:

"Any cash, checks or other property which is distributed pursuant to the Plan which is: a) returned as undeliverable without a proper forwarding address; b) which was not mailed or delivered because of the absence of a proper address to which to mail or deliver; c) any payment which is not negotiated within 60 days of the date of such check shall be paid over to Reorganized Debtor and Reorganized Debtor shall have no further obligations to such creditor. If the obligation of the creditor is secured against collateral and terminated under this provision, the lien securing the obligation shall also be void and terminated." (Plan: pp. 18-19)

This provision has created problems when it has surfaced in other cases. Debtor's counsel should be reminded that such a provision has previously been found to be offensive to equity (as counsel should remember). As such, the plan is likely confirmable once this provision is removed.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Tentative for 10/30/19:
Status?

Tentative for 8/7/19:
Employment in near future is the lynchpin to continued presence in Chapter 11. Without that, it appears liquid assets will continue to dwindle. 9 months is given as the horizon, but this is excessive. 90 days is more likely. Continue once more to October 30, 2019.

The UST's comments are all well taken and each should be addressed. Further, while unemployed the court cannot see how feasibility can be shown. The court will hear argument as to what might be an appropriate hiatus until the court converts the case for lack of reasonable prospect of reorganization.

P.S. The hiatus suggested at the end of debtor's response is acceptable for at least the first 90 days. Continue to a date near then.

#16.00 Defendant Motion to Dismiss First Amended Complaint Pursuant to F.R.C.P. 12(b)(6), Incorporated by F.R.B.P. 7012

Docket 65

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/29/20:

This is Defendant Hamid Rowshan's ("Defendant's") motion to dismiss the first amended complaint ("FAC") filed by plaintiff and chapter 7 trustee, Richard Marshack ("Plaintiff") pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Defendants and debtors Fariborz and Natasha Wasoughkia ("Debtors") filed an answer to the complaint asserting, among other affirmative defenses, failure to state any claim entitling Plaintiff to relief. However, it is not clear whether Debtors join in this motion. Defendant Wells Fargo Bank N.A ("Wells Fargo") had its deadline to respond to the FAC extended to November 27, 2020 by stipulation, which was approved by this court on September 30, 2020. Plaintiff opposes the motion.

1. Brief Procedural Background

On March 16, 2020, Trustee initiated an adversary proceeding against Defendants by filing a complaint to avoid and recover certain transfers pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 549 and 550, to turnover property of the estate, to quiet title to real property, and for injunctive relief. On May 5, 2020, Defendant filed a motion to dismiss Trustee's complaint. On May 14, 2020, Wells Fargo filed a similar motion to dismiss Trustee's complaint. Given the significant overlap, the court considered both motions in tandem and at the hearing on June 3, 2020, granted both motions based largely on the finding that all of Plaintiff's causes of action were ostensibly barred by the applicable statutes of limitations, and that applicability of the equitable tolling doctrine was not supported by sufficient facts plausibly stated. The court granted 60 days leave to amend. The court's tentative ruling from the June 3 hearing is incorporated herein by reference. Plaintiff filed the FAC on August 3, 2020. Defendant filed the present motion on September 14, 2020.

2. Factual Background

The factual background for this motion is largely the same as the factual background provided in this court's June 3, 2020 adopted tentative ruling on the motion to dismiss the original complaint. That factual recitation is incorporated herein by reference. The court will note where new material facts are asserted as they correspond to each cause of action in the FAC.

3. The FAC

The FAC contains nine claims for relief:

- (1) Avoidance of unrecorded deed pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §544(a) against only Defendant;
- (2) Avoidance of fraudulent transfer pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(1) against only Defendant, which derives from 11 U.S.C § 544(b);
- (3) Avoidance of fraudulent transfer pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2) against only Defendant which derives from §544(b);
- (4) Avoidance of fraudulent transfer pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.05 against only Defendant which derives from §544(b);

(5) Avoidance of unauthorized post-petition transfer pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §549 against Defendant and Wells Fargo;

(6) Recovery of avoided transfers pursuant to 11 U.S.C. 550 against all defendants;

(7) Turnover of property of the estate pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§541 and 542 against Defendant;

(8) Action to quiet title to real property against all defendants;

(9) Injunctive relief against all defendants.

4. Motion to Dismiss Standards

FRCP 12(b)(6) requires a court to consider whether a complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). There are cases that justify, or compel, granting a motion to dismiss. The line between totally unmeritorious claims and others must be carved out case by case by the judgment of trial judges, and that judgment should be exercised cautiously on such a motion. Id.

"While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-65 (2007) A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id. Threadbare recitals of elements supported by conclusory statements are not sufficient. Id.

5. Are Plaintiff's Claims Time Barred?

In granting the motion to dismiss the original complaint back in June, the court extensively discussed the issue of equitable tolling and ultimately held that equitable tolling could not save Plaintiff's complaint as originally pled. Though light on analysis, Defendant's current motion to dismiss has again raised the statutes of limitations or repose as an affirmative and complete defense, arguing that all causes of action are still time barred and not saved by equitable tolling.

As the court sees it, three major factual disputes of consequence are present. The first concerns the original transfer from Debtors to Defendant. Defendant asserts that the Eastvale Property was conveyed to him by Debtors on September 24, 2008, which was more than 2 years before Debtors filed their petition. This deed was apparently never recorded. Plaintiff argues that the operative grant deed was recorded in August of 2013, nearly three years after Debtors filed their petition. Stated another way, this first factual dispute likely governs whether the Eastvale Property is or was property of the estate. The second major factual dispute is whether Debtors' interest in the Eastvale Property was public information and relatively easy to locate through a title search. The third major factual dispute is whether Defendant and Debtors agreed to conceal assets in order to defraud creditors. Although the court is not obliged to make findings of fact in a Rule 12 context, the court is obliged to test the plausibility of asserted facts and allegations under the Twombly and Iqbal standards. As is set forth in more detail below, the question is whether Plaintiff has adequately pled facts in the FAC plausibly supporting the doctrine of equitable tolling since admittedly applicable statutes of limitation or repose have long expired.

When the court last took up this matter in June, the court urged Plaintiff to, at his discretion, amend the complaint to allege facts specifically targeted at the two prongs required to trigger the doctrine of equitable tolling: (1) the Plaintiff and original trustee's exercise of reasonable diligence in discovering the Eastvale Property; and (2) the extraordinary circumstance(s) that prevented either or both of them from discovering the existence of the Eastvale Property before the expiration of the applicable statutes of limitation/repose. See In re Dugger, 2012 WL 2086562, at *7 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. June 8, 2012). To Plaintiff's credit, he has so amended his complaint, but the question then becomes, are the amendments enough to support the doctrine of equitable tolling? It is worth remembering that in the Ninth Circuit, equitable tolling is extraordinary relief and not to be granted lightly. See Cal. Franchise Tax Bd. V. Kendall (In re Jones), 657 F.3d 921, 926 (9th Cir. 2011) ("equitable tolling principles are...applied 'only sparingly' and generally in situations in which a party was precluded by some obstacle from acting within the limitations period.")

Regarding the first prong, exercise of reasonable diligence, the FAC details the original trustee's efforts to discover the existence of all property of the estate. The court is already aware of many of these efforts, and notes that the original trustee may have and likely did simply overlook the property because he relied on a third-party LexisNexis search, rather than going through a title company. (See June 3, 2020 Tentative ruling, p. 7) Again, Plaintiff asserts that he and the prior trustee are not required to conduct an exhaustive search, but only a reasonable one. The Eastvale property was of record in Debtors' name because the 2008 deed to Defendants was still unrecorded as of the petition. Plaintiff also argues that in granting Wells Fargo Bank's Motion, it appears that the issues of whether the Prior Trustee had a duty to investigate whether the estate had an interest in the Eastvale Property and whether Plaintiff had a duty to investigate the post-petition transfer of the Eastvale Property were incorrectly conflated. Of course, this raises questions because as Wells Fargo pointed out in the last proceeding, a proper title search likely would have revealed the Debtors' interests in the Eastvale Property going back to 2007 as was demonstrated in the Mahdavi adversary proceeding. The Trustee in the FAC argues that the court should overrule this argument because in the Mahdavi action, Debtors' interest in the Eastvale Property was only revealed through painstaking research carried out by a licensed real estate broker and creditor of Debtors. Thus, Plaintiff concludes, the effort required to find this information would be well-beyond the exercise of reasonable diligence. We must remember that this was a petition filed in Orange County whereas the Eastvale Property is in Riverside county and the Eastvale Property is not mentioned at all in the petition and schedules, nor, apparently, was it mentioned in the 341(a) testimony. We apparently do not have a transcript of that proceeding but Plaintiff argues that the standard questions about whether the schedules accurately reflecting all property would have revealed this information, if honestly answered.

The court appreciates the effort put forth in the FAC to close the gaps previously identified in the record. At this stage the court is required to take Plaintiff's allegations as true and view them in the light most favorable to him. Under Twombly and Iqbal the court is also obliged to test the plausibility of the allegations. Here, the court notes that the FAC's description of the arduous effort required to discover Debtors' interest in the Eastvale Property does not appear to be supported by reference to any evidence in the record.

Similarly, Plaintiff's opposition does not reference any evidence to support these assertions. But this is a Rule 12 motion, where the court does not look outside the complaint but can rely upon the allegations of fact, provided they are plausible and plausibly support a theory of relief. The 2008 transfer occurred roughly 11 years prior to the complaint and more than two years before the petition. Plaintiff is seemingly barred by the statutes of limitations as the longest lookback period of any the asserted causes of action is 7 years from the date of transfer. (See Cal. Civ. Code §3439.09), but this does not account for the possibility of equitable tolling, which the court views as a basis for overlooking statutes of limitations (and maybe also statutes of repose) if equity requires it.

Defendant argues that on the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th §544(b) claims (which borrow a theory of relief from applicable state law), equitable tolling cannot enlarge the longest limitations period found in Cal. Civ. Code §3439.09, even under an equitable tolling theory. For this proposition is cited two authorities, Roach v. Lee, 369 F. Supp, 2d 1194 (C.D. Cal. 2005) and Macedo v. Bosio, 86 Cal. App. 4th 1044(2001). Although the Roach court did hold that the California statute was meant as an outside limitation designed to trump any counter argument based on fraudulent concealment, it never reached the federal doctrine of equitable tolling, so the court is not persuaded this is on point with our case, particularly since other authority, such as Milby v. Templeton (In re Milby), 875 F. 3d 1229, 1232 (9th Cir.2017) have held the doctrine of equitable tolling is "read into every federal statute of limitation." Citing Holmberg v. Armbrecht, 327 U.S. 392, 397, 66 S. Ct. 582, (1946) (italics added). Of course, Defendant will argue the operative statute of repose found at Civil Code §3439.09 is California's, not federal. But the court in response notes that even if 544(b) adopts state law rather than federal, normally limitations are procedural questions governed by federal statutes. Further, such an approach is antithetical to the point of equitable tolling which essentially says that under certain circumstances where the trustee is diligent and must overcome extraordinary circumstances, equity prevails and it does not serve equity to say that some limitation intervenes to cut off relief despite any circumstances, however egregious. Also, equitable tolling would overcome alternative limitations such as 11 U.S.C. §546, which specifically catalogs within its terms actions brought under §544, and both subsections (a) and (b) of that statute comprise separate claims for relief in the FAC. This interpretation is supported by cases such as Rund v. Bank of Am. Corp. (In re EPD Inv. Co., LLC), 523 B.R. 680 (9th Cir. B.A.P. 2015) where the court explained,

"[B]y enacting the Code, Congress has expressed an intent to regulate bankruptcy and maximize the bankruptcy estate for the benefit of creditors. Congress enacted § 544(b) and § 546(a) to foster a trustee's ability to avoid fraudulent transfers of property under state law and to recover that property for the benefit of the estate." Id. at 691

"Although § 544(b) does not explicitly preempt state law, inclusion of § 546(a) in the Code evidences Congress' intent to subordinate state law restrictions." Id. (internal citations and quotations omitted)

The Rund court concluded,

"In considering both California and federal law, we conclude the time bar set forth in Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.09(c) frustrates Congress' intent in § 546 and collides with federal bankruptcy law. And, unlike the probate statute at issue in Phar-Mor, we see no substantial countervailing state interest that outweighs Congress' goal of maximizing the bankruptcy estate for the benefit of creditors. Therefore, pursuant to the Supremacy Clause, the state law must yield." Id. at 691-92 (internal citations and quotations omitted)

It should be noted that Rund never squarely reached the question of equitable tolling (Rund, 523 B.R. at 690) but goes on to hold that the two-year post-petition limitation found at 11 U.S.C. §546 would still apply. But the Rund decision could be read to hold that any existing theory of relief viable as of the petition date could not be cut off by intervention of a state law statute of repose such as Civil Code §3439.09 but remains subject to federal preemption. Logically this would apply here as the theory of relief under § 544(b) was viable as of the petition date and the federal limitation of §546(a) is subject generally to the equitable tolling doctrine. Rund, 523 B.R. at 691.

But the diligence prong is only the first of two. Plaintiff must still demonstrate some kind of extraordinary circumstance(s) that prevented discovery of Debtors' interest in the property. Plaintiff argues that, as former business partners, Defendant and Debtors conspired to conceal the Eastvale Property, and possibly other assets, in order to defraud creditors, which Plaintiff asserts, is an extraordinary circumstance that prevented discovery. Again, Trustee's assertions are light on evidentiary support, and there is at least some evidence going the other way. Defendant maintains that the Eastvale Property was conveyed to him in 2008 for nominal consideration and more than two years before Debtors filed their petition. Defendant submits a copy of the notarized grant deed in support of this assertion. Defendant also maintains that despite their history as business partners, Defendant had no knowledge of Debtors' bankruptcy case. Really? Defendant concedes that he failed to record his interest in the Eastvale Property until 2013 but gives no reason for this curious and extended delay. Moreover, there were a series of conveyances back and forth between Defendant and the Debtors in August and December 2013 which remain unexplained but appear to be related to attempts to refinance the property. One wonders if the prospective lenders were made aware of true beneficial ownership in those transactions. But the court does not weigh evidence in a Rule 12 motion. Rather, the task is to weigh whether a plausible theory of relief is alleged. The allegation of an active conspiracy between former business partners, combined with the unexplained delay in recording the 2008 deed for five years, and the unexplained substitution of an entirely different deed (what was that about?) that was actually recorded in 2013, and other attendant curiosities, makes the allegation of an active conspiracy to conceal plausible enough as "extraordinary circumstances" to get past a Rule 12 motion.

5. Property of the Estate?

Defendant argues that existence of property of the estate is not sufficiently alleged. Presumably this relates only to the §549 theory. The court disagrees. Paragraphs 9-14 make clear that Plaintiff alleges not only were the Debtors holders of record title as of the petition date, the unrecorded 2008 deed was an artifice to be used to disguise the debtors' true beneficial ownership. Moreover, §541(a)(1) makes clear that equitable ownership, as well as legal ownership, can constitute property of the estate, and ongoing equitable ownership of the Debtors is clearly alleged. This is enough for Rule 12 purposes.

6. Conclusion

This motion should be denied because the Trustee has alleged just enough to cross the threshold of plausibility needed to survive a Rule 12(b) motion. This is not to say that there are not large questions remaining in this case, including whether under all the facts and circumstances equitable tolling is truly appropriate, which may be revisited either at trial or in a Rule 56 context. But it is to say that enough is given to construct a plausible theory of relief considering doubts are resolved at this stage against the motion and in favor of Plaintiff.

Chapter 7

#4.00 Motion for Order Disallowing Debtors' Claimed Exemption and Requiring Turnover of Non-Exempt Funds

Docket 36

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 11/3/20:

This is the chapter 7 trustee, Jeffrey Golden's ("Trustee's") motion for order disallowing debtors Antoine and Kelly Johnson's ("Debtors") claimed exemption and requiring turnover of non-exempt funds. Debtors oppose the motion.

1. Background

Debtors filed a Voluntary Petition under Chapter 7 on December 19, 2014. Jeffrey I. Golden was the duly appointed and acting Chapter 7 Trustee of the resulting Estate. After investigation of the affairs of the Debtors, including a review of the schedules and statements and questioning of the Debtors during a Trustee Meeting under 11 U.S.C. § 341(a), Trustee found no assets to be administered, and filed a "no asset report" on February 2, 2015. The Debtors received their discharge on April 6, 2015, and the case was closed the following day.

Thereafter, Trustee received correspondence dated October 10, 2019 from Archer Systems, LLC ("Archer"), the court-appointed settlement administrator in multi-district litigation relating to an allegedly harmful diabetes medication apparently prescribed to Debtor Antoine A. Johnson. According to the correspondence, the Debtors retained counsel to stake their claim ("Claim") in the product liability litigation, based upon an injury date of September 8, 2014, which was pre-petition. The Claim is apparently in the process of being cleared for settlement in a gross amount of $466,400, with a projected net of approximately $260,924.53.

Trustee notified Archer on October 15, 2019 that the Estate has an interest in the Claim, which was not scheduled by the Debtors or disclosed to Trustee, and which therefore remained property of the Estate even after the closing of the case under 11 U.S.C. § 554(d) (assuming the September 8, 2014 date is accurate). At Trustee's request, the Office of the United States Trustee filed a motion seeking the reopening of the case for the administration of the Claim. The motion was granted by Order entered March 19, 2020, and Trustee was reappointed. (See Docket, Exhibit "A", Docket Nos. 29, 30.) Five months later, the Debtors filed amended Schedules B and C, adding the Claim as an asset (identified as "Personal Injury Claim Settlement"), valued at $259,000, and claiming the Claim as exempt in full under Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 704.140(b).

2. Is the Asset Property of The Estate and/or Exempt?

The answer, as Trustee argues, is that it is probably too early to decide. Debtors argue that Trustee's motion fails to sufficiently link the settlement to the pre-bankruptcy past, which is the test Trustee's motion must pass. See 11 U.S.C. §541(a)(1). Further, Debtors argue that even if Trustee could establish such a connection, the asset would be exempt under Cal. Civ. Proc. §704.140, which exempts awards of damages or settlements arising from a personal injury to the extent necessary to support a spouse or dependents of the judgment debtor. Trustee asserts that he has reason to believe that he can show such a link to the period prior to Debtors' bankruptcy case, including using Debtors own schedules. At present, Trustee, the date of Debtor's initial injury is not known, which makes assessing whether the estate has an interest impossible or at least difficult at this point. As to the claim of exemption, Trustee cites In re Milden, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 7726 at *18 (9th Cir. 1997) citing In re Haaland, 89 B.R. 845 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1988), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds sub nom. Haaland v. Corporate Management, Inc., 172 B.R. 74, 77 (S.D. Cal. 1989) for the proposition that the exemption under § 704.140 does not apply to past earnings. Trustee asserts that there is no evidence to establish when Mr. Johnson became disabled, or what the value of his lost wages would have been from that point to the date of filing. Thus, Trustee concludes, the non-exempt portion of the Estate's interest in the Claim is an unknown, at present.

Trustee suggests continuing this matter to a date in mid-December because the claims bar date is November 30. Trustee asserts that, to date, claims total only $8,381.18. A continuance to a date in mid-December would allow for the establishment of the body of creditors, the presentation of additional evidence concerning lost wages, and possible settlement negotiations concerning a reasonable resolution of the Estate's interest in the proceeds. Debtors argue that principles of equity tilt toward finding in their favor. However, if the asset is property of the estate, then it should be made available for distribution to Debtors' pre-petition creditors and the question is whether any part is exemptible. Thus, Trustee probably has the right of it. Also, Trustee points out that because the issue is properly framed as a proceeding to determine the validity, priority, or extent of a lien or other interest in property, ownership of the asset must be determined through an adversary proceeding.

#2.00 Creditor's Motion to Dismiss Chapter 11 Case As A Bad Faith Filing

Docket 37

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 11/4/20:

This is creditor, WVJP 2018-3, LP's ("WVJP") motion to dismiss debtor, Bryan J. Klinger's ("Debtor's") Chapter 11 bankruptcy case pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1112(b) as a bad faith filing. Debtor opposes the motion.

1. Background

The following facts, as far as the court can tell, are not disputed. On October 13, 2009, WVJP's assignor, Centro Watt Property Owner I, LLC ("Centro Watt"), obtained a default judgment (the "Judgment") in the original amount of $153,368.58 against Debtor and another person (Tobie Ann Collins) in the litigation entitled Centro Watt Property Owner L LLC v. Tobie Ann Collins, et al., Superior Court of California, County of Orange, Case No. 30-2008 00102765-CU-BC-WJC (the "State Court Litigation"). On November 18, 2009 and November 19, 2009, abstracts of judgment were recorded with the Orange County Recorder and the San Diego County Recorder, respectively. On August 14, 2019, the Judgment was assigned to WVJP, and an Acknowledgment of Assignment of Judgment was filed in the State Court Litigation on August 26, 2019. On September 17, 2019, WVJP filed in the State Court Litigation an Application for and Renewal of Judgment (the "Renewal Application"), thereby renewing the Judgment in the amount of $297,732.42. WVJP recorded the Renewal Application with the Orange County Recorder's Office on September 23, 2019, and with the San Diego County Recorder's Office on September 24, 2019.

Chapter 11

On or about December 16, 2019, Debtor filed in the State Court Litigation a motion to vacate renewal of the Judgment. WVJP opposed the Debtor's motion. After the parties fully briefed the motion, the Honorable James J. Di Cesare of the Orange County Superior Court heard the Debtor's motion. Before the hearing, Judge Di Cesare issued a detailed Tentative Ruling. Among the findings contained in Judge Di Cesare's Tentative Ruling were the following:

Defendant seeks to vacate the renewed judgment which is based upon the original default judgment that was entered in October of 2009. Defendant seeks to vacate the renewed judgment on the grounds that he was never served with the summons and complaint.

In reaching a decision, a trial court would consider such factors as the timing of the testimony, overall candor of parties/witnesses, reasonableness and level of recall, contemporaneous information versus less contemporaneous statements, as well as consideration to motives.

Here, in weighing the testimony of the Klingers, against the opposing evidence, the Court finds that the Defendant has not met the burden to show by a preponderance of the evidence, that the service did not occur. The Court found significant the contemporaneous statements of the registered process server, including that the process server was indeed at the Defendant's residence at the time, something the moving papers were unclear about but was brought out by in the subsequent filings. The Court found significant the revelation in the Opposition that the Defendant had made contact with the plaintiff's counsel about this lawsuit in July of 2010, which was information omitted from within the moving papers. When weighing all of this and the other evidence, and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom, Defendant's evidence did not reach the hurdle of defeating the opposing evidence to establish by a preponderance of the evidence, that the renewed judgment must be set aside.

For these reasons, the Motion is denied. See O'Neil Declaration, ¶¶ 7 and Ex. 9.

WVJP argues that on June 9, 2020 (after significant delays caused by the COVID-19 pandemic and the Superior Court's closure for a number of weeks), Judge Di Cesare issued his formal order denying the Debtor's motion to vacate the Judgment. WVJP asserts that, with interest at the statutory rate of 10% per annum, the renewed Judgment amount, which was $297,732.42 as of September 17, 2019, now totals at least $327,505.66 ($297,732.42 x 110%), exclusive of additional attorneys' fees incurred and to be incurred by WVJP.

On August 14, 2020, the Debtor filed a voluntary petition under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code. The Debtor reveals the following in his Schedules (Docket No. 18): The Debtor is unemployed. The Debtor's spouse nets $2,775.24 per month from her work. The Debtor's two rental properties (Festival Drive and Orchard) net $2,100 per month. Aside from the Judgment, Debtors unsecured debt totals only $3,646.73, which is comprised of a handful of minor debts, the largest of which is only $1,492.50. Docket No. 18 at pp. 12-15. WVJP asserts that during the meeting of creditors on September 14, 2020, under questioning by the United States Trustee's counsel and WVJP's counsel, the Debtor admitted the following:

- (1) The mortgages on the Debtor's real properties are paid current;
- (2) The property taxes on the Debtor's real properties are paid current
- (3) The homeowner's association dues on the Debtor's real properties are paid current.

Chapter 11

Based on the foregoing facts, most, if not all, of which are not really contested by Debtor, WVJP argues that Debtor is using this bankruptcy proceeding as a delaying tactic on enforcement the Judgment against him, and also impermissibly seeking to have his case re-litigated in this court.

2. Is This Case A Bad Faith Filing?

Bankruptcy Code section 1112 provides, in pertinent part:

(b)(l) Except as provided in paragraph (2) and subsection (c), on request of a party in interest, and after notice and a hearing, the court shall convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 or dismiss a case under this chapter, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate, for cause unless the court determines that the appointment under section 1104(a) of a trustee or an examiner is in the best interests of creditors and the estate.

(2) The court may not convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 or dismiss a case under this chapter if the court finds and specifically identifies unusual circumstances establishing that converting or dismissing the case is not in the best interests of creditors and the estate, and the debtor or any other party in interest establishes that-

(A) there is a reasonable likelihood that a plan will be confirmed within the timeframes established in sections 1121(e) and 1129(e) of this title, or if such sections do not apply, within a reasonable period of time; and (B) the grounds for converting or dismissing the case include an act or omission of the debtor other than under paragraph (4)(A)-- (i) for which there exists a reasonable justification for the act or omission; and (ii) that will be cured within a reasonable period of time fixed by the court.

Although §1112 does not expressly mention "bad faith" as a ground to dismiss a Chapter 11 case, bad faith in filing a Chapter 11 case constitutes "cause" for dismissal under section 1112. See Marsch v. Marsch (In re Marsch), 36 F.3d 825, 828-29 (9th Cir. 1994) ("courts have overwhelmingly held that a lack of good faith in filing a Chapter 11 petition establishes cause for dismissal"); see also Stolrow v. Stolrow's, Inc. (In re Stolrow's, Inc.), 84 B.R. 167, 170 (BAP 9th Cir. 1988) ("It is appropriate to dismiss a Chapter 11 case for cause if it appears that the petition was filed in bad faith"). The Debtor "bears the burden of proving that the petition was filed in good faith." Leavitt v. Soto (In re Leavitt), 209 B.R. 935, 940 (BAP 9th Cir. 1997); In re Powers, 135 B.R. 980, 997 (Bankr. C.D. Cal.1991) ("courts have consistently held that once a debtor's good faith is in issue, the debtor bears the burden of proving the petition was filed in good faith"). Several, but not all, of the following conditions typically exist when a bankruptcy case is filed in bad faith:

- (1) The debtor has one asset, such as a tract of undeveloped or developed real property.
- (2) The secured creditors' liens encumber this tract.
- (3) There are generally no employees except for the principals.
- (4) There is little or no cash flow, and no available sources of income to sustain a plan of reorganization or to make adequate protection payments.
- (5) Typically, there are only a few, if any, unsecured creditors whose claims are relatively small.
- (6) The property has usually been posted for foreclosure because of arrearages on the debt and the debtor has been unsuccessful in defending actions against the foreclosure in state court.

(7) Alternatively, the debtor and one creditor may have proceeded to a stand-still in state court litigation, and the debtor has lost or has been required to post a bond which it cannot afford.

(8) Bankruptcy offers the only possibility of forestalling loss of the property.

(9) There are sometimes allegations of wrongdoing by the debtor or its principals.

(10) The "new debtor syndrome," in which a one-asset entity has been created or revitalized on the eve of foreclosure to isolate the insolvent property and its creditors, exemplifies, although it does not uniquely categorize, bad faith cases. See Little Creek Devel. Co. v. Commonwealth Devel. Corp. (In re Little Creek Devel. Co.), 779F.2d 1068, 1072 (5thCir.1986).

Not all the Little Creek factors need be present to dismiss a case for lack of good faith. See In re Southern California Sound Systems, Inc., 69 B.R. 893,899 (Bankr. S.D. Cal.1987) (dismissing a Chapter 11 case where only four of the Little Creek factors were present).

Here, WVJP argues that no fewer than 8 of the 10 Little Creek factors are present: First, WVJP's lien encumbers the Debtor's real properties, notwithstanding the Debtor's misrepresentation in his Schedule F that WVJP is unsecured. Second, there are no employees: The Debtor manages his real properties on his own. See the O'Neill Declaration at 113. Third, the Debtor has disposable income of only $1,229.24 per month, which is insufficient to make plan payments or to pay even the interest that is accruing on WVJP's secured claim. Fourth, there are only four unsecured creditors, their claims total only $3,646.73, and the largest unsecured claim is only $1,492.50. The Debtor has more than $15,000 in cash, which is more than enough to fully pay the insignificant unsecured claims immediately. See Docket No. 18, p. 4. Fifth, WVJP plans to "foreclose" by conducting one or more Sheriffs sales of the Debtor's real properties, and the Debtor has been unable to prevent such sales in that he litigated and lost his motion to set aside the Judgment in the State Court Litigation. Sixth, the Debtor and WVJP have proceeded to a stand-still in the State Court Litigation, leaving WVJP with a Judgment and the Debtor unable to set aside that Judgment. Seventh, bankruptcy offers the only possibility of forestalling loss of any of the Debtor's real properties. And Eighth, the Debtor omitted material facts from his state court motion to set aside the Judgment, claiming he was never served, despite having had contact with Centro Watt's counsel back in 2010; and the Debtor filed misleading bankruptcy schedules, falsely claiming that WVJP is unsecured and deliberately failing to correct inaccuracies in his bankruptcy schedules even after being informed of the same at his creditor meeting. Thus, WVJP concludes, the Little Creek factors and the accompanying undisputed facts weigh heavily in favor of finding that this bankruptcy case was filed in bad faith.

As noted, Debtor does not directly dispute many of the facts asserted against him, including those above. Instead, Debtor makes the rather tall assertion that WVJP may not have a judgment against him after all as WVJP has provided insufficient admissible evidence that the judgment was ever effectively assigned to WVJP, and as such, WVJP has no standing to bring this motion. Moreover, Debtor asserts that WVJP has failed to authenticate Judge Di Cesare's order denying Debtor's motion to vacate the default judgment against him. Furthermore, Debtor once again argues that he was never properly served with summons and complaint in the original action, which led to the default judgment against him.

There are obvious problems with these arguments. They read as so much grasping at straws. But the main problem is that Debtor has had the opportunity to and likely did raise many of these arguments in the State Court Litigation proceeding to vacate the default judgment back in late 2019 before Judge Di Cesare. For the reasons explained in his tentative ruling, Judge Di Cesare did not find Debtor's arguments convincing. Debtor asserts that the state court did not resolve whether WVJP actually held the judgment or whether the judgment itself was valid, only that Debtor did not meet his burden to vacate the default judgment. Debtor suggests that an adversary proceeding would be necessary to determine such questions. It would seem to the court that Debtor is likely incorrect on at least one of those assertions. In deciding that Debtor failed to carry his burden of demonstrating cause to vacate the default judgment, the court was, in effect, ruling that the default judgment against Debtor was valid. The only arguably remaining question is whether WVJP is the valid holder of the judgment. Again, this question appears to have been resolved in public state court filings (See O'Neill Declaration, Ex. 4 and Declaration of Steven Gallagher, Ex. 1). Thus, even if an adversary proceeding were commenced, it is not clear what purpose that would accomplish beyond running up fees for both Debtor and WVJP, as a Rule 56 motion asserting issue and/or claim preclusion would likely immediately follow.

The bankruptcy court is not the proper venue to lodge an appeal or to simply re-litigate that which has already been decided in state court, which, apparently by his own admission, is what Debtor is doing here. Courts in the Ninth Circuit have held that bad faith exists where a debtor files a petition with the only intention of defeating state court litigation. In re Leavitt, 209 B.R. at 940. As noted, Debtor bears the burden of proving that the petition was filed in good faith. For all of Debtor's attempts to obscure the critical facts with various evidentiary objections, Debtor, rather tellingly, never actually denies the veracity of the allegations themselves. Thus, Debtor has not carried his burden of demonstrating that the bankruptcy petition was filed in good faith.

Moreover, aside from attempting to re-litigate the State Court Litigation and the Judgment, this Chapter 11 has all the earmarks of a "dead on arrival" reorganization case and Debtor has not even begun to show how the requirements of §1112(b)(2)(A) might be fulfilled here. Debtor never even addresses the daunting proposition of trying to cramdown a plan when 98% of the debt is held by one hostile creditor. The absolute priority rule would also be an obstacle in that almost certainly the WVJP debt would have to be paid in full for the Debtor to keep anything. See 11 U.S.C. §1129(b)(2)(B). While one might construct a farfetched scenario whereby these challenges could be procedurally met (arguably), the court does not see how there is enough income here to make any such plan feasible as required in §1129(a)(11) nor could the plan be in "good faith" as is required under §1129(a)(3). But adding to these problems, the court agrees that Rooker-Feldman prohibits this court from hearing any case which is, in effect, a rehash of the lost attempts at undoing the Judgment in state court. Using the bankruptcy system for this sole purpose is improper and the motion should be granted.

Tentative for 5/13/20:

This matter is on calendar because permitted use of cash collateral is set to expire as of the hearing per previous order. Nothing further has been filed as of 5/8. Status? The March MOR shows slightly positive cash flow, so, absent objection, the logical order would seem to be continued authority on same terms and conditions for about 60 days.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

Debtor filed an amended motion for use of cash collateral on 4/1/20. Unfortunately, this amended motion is likely untimely because there is nearly no time for any other party to respond before the hearing date on 4/8. In any case, the new amended motion does not appear to address Banc of California's objections to continued use of cash collateral. Therefore, the amended motion should be continued to allow creditors, including Banc of California, adequate time to respond. In the meantime, Debtor should answer Banc of California's allegations of misusing cash collateral.

Continue for about two weeks on same terms. Debtor to address Banc Of California's points. Appearance is optional.

Tentative for 11/4/20:

Continue on same terms and conditions to January 6, 2020 @10:00 a.m. which is after the "drop dead" date established in the recent relief of stay order, at which point debtor will have to report upon whether there is anything that can be reasonably done in this case.

Tentative for 8/12/20:

Secured Creditor's concerns are understandable. The court is unclear as to how Debtor proposes to pay the creditors. The Subject Property has been on the market for more than six months and Secured Creditor asserts that not a single offer has come in. Debtor vaguely states that there are marketing efforts going on, but nothing besides the pandemic to explain why no offers are forthcoming. The Subject Property has also recently converted to a rental property. Does Debtor still plan on selling the Subject Property? If not, vague reference is made to a possible refinance to pay creditors. What would that look like? What is the proposed timeline? The motion does not provide answers to these questions. However, the court is generally supportive of Debtors in possession taking steps to preserve value of collateral, and that appears to be what Debtor intends to do with the cash collateral. Perhaps the better part of valor is to grant the motion on an interim or temporary basis with a status conference scheduled in the near future so that Debtor can put together a proposal for paying Secured Creditor, whether through a sale, a refinance, or some other arrangement. If the court is not satisfied with the arrangement, the motion will be denied.

for at least two reasons. First, the valuation comes from the debtor which, of course, is self-serving. While it is true that owners are not disqualified from opining as to the value of assets they own, that does not mean that the court has to give them the same weight as valuations from professional appraisers. Of course, the creditor does not offer a professional appraisal either.

But the second concern arises from the fact that apparently the property has been for sale for six months, without result. This suggests downward adjustments may be in order. In the end the property has to be maintained and managed, or it will not generate any income and will not show well for sale either. Consequently, the court is inclined to grant the motion for a four-month trial basis with the proviso that all rents must be used for property upkeep and management only, with no more than a 10% management fee paid to any insider, including the daughter.

(cont'd from 9-24-20)

Docket 113

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 11/5/20:

This is the oft-continued status conference on what Foothill and the trustee argue is ongoing contempt of this court's earlier rulings: (1) defining what was and what was not sold by the Trustee to Foothill and (2) imposing a monetary sanction for conduct in the state court seeming to contradict those orders by contumacious persistence in attempting to litigate the same claims in state court. The Hermans are now on their Third Amended Complaint in a state court of limited jurisdiction. The issue this court has (as alluded to in the 9/24 tentative) is that it is no longer clear what is being litigated is necessarily inconsistent with this court's earlier orders. The action seems now to be focused upon the urn and the plants, and alleged damages arising from alleged misconduct by Foothill either in disposing of those items in conjunction with Foothill's eviction of the Hermans. Or from delay in returning them to the Hermans. Reportedly, the urn was returned, and its possession no longer is an issue. What might be an issue, however, is whether any emotional distress type damages are recoverable under California law and if they are, whether they would be appropriate here. The parties each cite California caselaw and /or statutes suggesting either that it is not (Foothill) or that it is (Herman). So long as it is made clear to the state court that causation of such damages, if any, is confined to the plants and to the urn, and are not somehow a parcel with the alleged wrongful foreclosure or eviction, this is not a bankruptcy issue and are probably outside the ambit of this court's orders. The court is inclined to let the parties hash this out in state court where it belongs. About nonpayment of the monetary sanction already imposed, levy of the writs for amounts already ordered is quite sufficient and the court is not disposed to other more intrusive methods.

Absent a clear violation of the above basics, this court believes its role is at an end.

No further status conference is to be scheduled but may be put on calendar if the need arises.

Tentative for 9/24/20:

This matter is distressing in that the court's sanctions orders reportedly remain unpaid, and debtor makes no showing of impossibility on payment, which might theoretically have been a defense to further contempt. He apparently just refuses to pay. That might be remedied if the levies undertaken by Foothill bear fruit, but nothing on that subject appears in the papers. But it does cause the court to wonder what, if anything, would be accomplished by upping the monetary sanction further. Foothill suggests that defiance is ongoing in the Third Amended Complaint in state court in that Sabrina Herman reiterates what Foothill characterizes as the same emotional damages claims as were already the subject of what the Trustee sold to Foothill. That is not so clear. Although as drafted the Third Amended Complaint recites at length the sad ten-year history of this dispute (to which end is not made clear) the prayer seems focused on the personal property (plants and urn), and any consequential damages that might emanate therefrom. So construed that might not violate this court's earlier order except that the court seems to remember a monetary cap, but it is not sure whether that relates to the possibility of emotional distress damages based on conversion of personalty (if such thing exists in California law). Presumably Sabrina Herman, and her husband acting as lawyer, will argue that the long recital of history in the Third amended Complaint is not an attempt to reopen the causes of action already sold but just to inform the state court on background. The court does observe this is now in limited jurisdiction court so there might be a de facto lid on damages in any event. So, the parties are invited to explain exactly how this conduct continues to violate this court's previous orders in such a way as to constitute ongoing contempt. But failure to pay what is already ordered is still an open question on that point.

No tentative.

Tentative for 8/13/20:

The sanction was doubled at the 7/23 hearing but reportedly nothing has been paid in whole or in part of any portion. Even more grave is the report that the Hermans have filed a motion before the state court for leave to amend the complaint which, although seemingly labelled as confined to negligent destruction of personal property, nevertheless asserts millions in damages for emotional distress and punitive damages, which, as a whole, seems a thinly disguised re-assertion of claims this court has already ruled were owned by the estate and sold by its trustee to Foothill. But, reportedly, the state court has relegated the amendment motion for the limited jurisdiction court to decide. Depending on how that goes it would seem that these proposed amendments may not be allowed, or at least not allowed consistent with the jurisdiction of that court deciding the question, and thus effectively foreclosed. In either case, it would seem that Mr. Herman does not intend to accept this court's decisions. The court is inclined to see whether the amendment is allowed by the limited jurisdiction court before assessing whether yet more sanctions or other measures are warranted.

Tentative for 7/23/20:

New for 7/23: Mr. Herman's objection to order for sanctions and stay of proceedings pending appeal. Mr. Herman argues that he has appealed this court's contempt order, which divests this court of jurisdiction. This objection was filed on 6/26/20.

The objection is linked to the notice of lodgment of the order requiring Herman to pay $2,000 as a sanction for his continuing violation of this court's May 11, 2020 contempt order.

Foothill and the Chapter 7 Trustee have filed a joint supplemental report noting Mr. Herman's continuing noncompliance. Per the report, Mr. Herman is continuing his campaign in state court asserting that this wife may make claims beyond that which this court set forth. The state court has apparently issued an OSC re dismissal and a separate OSC regarding the court's proposed transfer of the Surviving Claims to a court of limited jurisdiction (i.e. claims for damages of less than $25,000). These matters are set for hearing on August 7, 2020. Unsurprisingly, Mr. Herman has also failed to pay the sanction to Foothill as ordered.

Regarding Mr. Herman's assertion that the appeal divests this court of jurisdiction over the contempt order, Foothill cites Hoffman v. Beer Drivers and Salesmen's Local Union No. 88, 536 F.2d 1268, 1276 (9th Cir. 1976) for the proposition that, in the context of contempt proceedings like the ones here, "where the court supervises a continuing course of conduct and where as new facts develop additional supervisory action by the court is required, an appeal from the supervisory order does not divest the [court] of jurisdiction to continue its supervision, even though in the course of that supervision the court act upon or modifies the order from which the appeal is taken." Trustee further cites Hughes v. Sharp, 476 F.2d 975 (9th Cir. 1973), where the court noted, that when the contemnor is a party to the pending proceedings, and when those proceedings are still under way, the court lacks jurisdiction to consider the purported appeal from a contempt order as that order is interlocutory. The court stated that although this may seem harsh, a contemnor is not without recourse, as among his options is purging his contempt. Id. Foothill also notes that the notice of appeal was untimely and that a new appeal cannot be initiated by simply amending the notice of appeal; a new notice of appeal is required.

By contrast, Mr. Herman's objection is completely devoid of analysis and contains only vague citations to cases standing for the broad proposition that an appeal divests the bankruptcy court of jurisdiction over those aspects of the case involved in the appeal. But those cases cited by Mr. Herman do not undercut the cases cited by Foothill. Mr. Herman has not filed anything responsive to Foothill's supplemental report.

The message that the court sent to Mr. Herman at the last hearing on 6/25 was apparently not received, even when Mr. Herman was unambiguously ordered to pay a sanction of $2,000 to Foothill to put a sharper point on the message. Mr. Herman seems to be operating on the misguided assumption that his appeal puts him out of reach of this court, leaving him free to pursue conduct this court has already characterized as contumacious. However, as the case law cited above demonstrates, the court remains vested with the power to monitor Mr. Herman's ongoing misconduct, and modify the contempt order as necessary.

The court has already noted that Mr. Herman is playing with fire by continuing to ignore this court's orders. It does not appear, however, that Mr. Herman is altering his course. Rather, he persists, relying on legalistic arguments about finality of orders which, as explained above, are not persuasive. But this course is causing real, continuing damages to Foothill. So, the court has little choice but to raise the stakes in hopes of reaching the requisite coercion threshold. The sanction is doubled to $4,000, payable forthwith to Foothill. The court notes that the Superior Court has now also scheduled this matter on order to show cause for August 7, 2020. A further hearing will be scheduled for a mutually convenient date after August 7 to evaluate where we stand and whether yet more coercion is needed.

Tentative for 6/25/20:

Following the hearing on the OSC re: Contempt on April 29, Foothill Financial and Trustee jointly lodged an order on April 30. The official order issued on May 11. Mr. Herman filed an untimely objection to the lodged order.

To accompany his objection to the lodged order, Mr. Herman attached his own proposed order, which bears little resemblance to the actual ruling on the OSC and several other orders issued by this court.

The most consequential rewrite Mr. Herman makes to his proposed order is where he states that per our abstention order, he is allowed to pursue in state court all claims that may belong solely to his wife with no limit on value. This is despite the many orders issued by this court where the specific claims the court abstained from are listed. Foothill's response catalogues the various orders and judgments with the court's very clear language articulating the narrow scope of its abstention.

Mr. Herman appears to have seized upon the most miniscule ambiguity to deliberately disregard the language and spirit of this court's orders in an attempt to reframe his dismissed claims as belonging solely to his wife, thereby allowing him to re-litigate them in state court. Mr. Herman may have already filed a version of his order with the state court. Foothill and Trustee are understandably dismayed by this latest attempt to hinder and delay.

In light of this most recent and fairly egregious transgression, Foothill requests that the court now impose monetary sanctions. Foothill suggests that Mr. Herman should pay the fees incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's ongoing contempt, which Foothill estimates in its status report at $7,500.

Mr. Herman has filed his own status report asserting that the contempt order is on appeal and there is nothing else to be adjudicated by this court at this time, all matters now being with the district court.

Mr. Herman is playing with fire. Rather than displaying even a modicum of compunction after being adjudged to be in contempt, Mr. Herman asserts in his objection that his contempt is now purged, and that it never truly existed in the first place. Mr. Herman, we should not forget, is also an attorney, and is presumed to be able to understand court orders and the consequences for disregarding them. Thus, a measured and modest monetary sanction is likely appropriate, with the promise of more severe sanctions to follow if Mr. Herman continues to misconduct himself.

The court requests an update on whether Mr. Herman actually lodged a bogus form of order with the state court. Impose monetary sanctions of $2000 payable jointly to Foothill and Trustee.

Tentative for 4/29/20:

This is a hearing on the court's Order to Show Cause why Debtor, Richard P. Herman ("Debtor") should not be held in Contempt of Court for Violating Court Orders and The Automatic Stay. The OSC was issued on March 18, 2020. Specifically, the OSC requires that Debtor demonstrate:

(a) Why he should not be held in contempt for

- i. his continuing efforts to exercise control over and interfere with the dismissal of the estate's claims in direct violation of the express provisions of this Court's orders and Judgment as well as the provisions of the automatic stay; and responses.

Debtor's response is not persuasive. The main problem is that Debtor feigns ignorance or misunderstanding of this court's orders. Debtor appears to be arguing that his action(s) in state court are legitimate considering this court's abstention from adjudicating the remaining claims that were not deemed property of the estate. As argued effectively by Foothill in its response, this court has been clear in its delineation between what causes of action are and are not property of the estate. The court has clearly stated in prior adopted tentative rulings, the "surviving claims" are limited to claims for negligent damage to personal property in an amount not to exceed $3,500, and for his wife to pursue the same cause of action provided that she could establish that the damaged property was her separate property. These very narrow categories can have little relationship with what Debtor seems to persist in filing in the State Court.

As argued by Foothill, Mr. Herman is contending, here and in the State Court, that the "abstained claims" include claims other than the surviving claims identified by this court, which Mr. Herman argues are to be "defined in the State Court." Foothill notes that Debtor's response cites no authority or document that could possibly lead Debtor to such an understanding.

To aggravate the problem, Debtor is a licensed attorney of long standing, and so may be reasonably presumed to be able to understand court orders, and importantly, the consequences for ignoring them. Thus, his reported actions, which he does not deny, can be viewed as deliberate refusals to abide by this court's lawful orders.

Debtor's citation to Taggart is inapposite as Debtor does not really attempt to draw any parallels between Taggart and the present case, nor could he.

As Foothill correctly notes, unlike in Taggart, neither Foothill nor the Trustee has sought damages under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k), but rather this proceeding involves the court's authority to enforce its orders by imposing civil contempt remedies. Moreover, although there is more than ample basis for this court to find that Debtor's conduct was (and continues to be) "willful," the Supreme Court in Taggart expressly held that, in the civil contempt context, it is error to apply a subjective standard. Id. at 1804; see also In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) (no finding of bad faith or willful misconduct is required as "the focus is not on the subjective beliefs or intent of the contemnors in complying with the order, but whether in fact their conduct complied with the order at issue") (internal quotations omitted). Instead, the Supreme Court held, "[b]ased on the traditional principles that govern civil contempt, the proper standard is an objective one." Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 1804. Thus, Foothill argues, under Taggart, remedies for civil contempt are appropriate where "there is no objectively reasonable basis for concluding that the [contemnor's] conduct might be lawful under the . . . order." Id. at 1801 (rejecting a "good faith" defense and instead establishing an objective reasonableness standard in the context of contempt proceedings arising out of the violation of a discharge order).

The court has patiently entertained Debtor's numerous motions, many of which have been of dubious merit and suspected of being nothing more than attempts to delay enforcement of Foothill's legal rights. Many have been repetitive and do nothing but rehash the same issues. The court is now left with no option but to use its coercive powers to compel Debtor to abide by its orders. Thus, the question then is, what form should the coercive measures take? Foothill suggests the following measures be imposed:

1. Order Debtor to pay to the court a fine in the amount of $1,000 for each day that he remains in contempt, and direct that, in addition to ceasing and desisting from any further contemptuous behavior, Debtor shall cure his existing contempt forthwith by immediately filing with the State Court a notice: (1) withdrawing his motion for reconsideration seeking to set aside the State Court's dismissal of the Estate Claims as requested by the Trustee, and (2) affirming to the State Court that the only cause of action that the Hermans assert is the remaining single cause of action for negligent damage to personal property, which cause of action is limited to (a) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to his tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants) in an amount not to exceed $3,500"; and (b) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to her tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants), but only to the extent that Mrs. Herman can establish that the tangible personal property alleged to have been damaged was her sole and separate property as of the commencement of the bankruptcy case on October 17, 2017."

2. That the court compensate Foothill for its attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and this reply, and to appear at the hearing on the Order to Show Cause, by ordering Debtor to pay to Foothill, by no later than May 15, 2020, the amount of $6,000, which is the minimum amount of fees and costs incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's contempt.

The court will forbear from the harsher methods, for now. But Debtor must accept that the matter has been decided, and further gainsaying is not only a waste of resources but an affront to the court and to the other parties, and thus a further contempt. Debtor may purge his contempt by promptly filing a withdrawal of the reconsideration motion on the dismissal of the "Estate claim" and affirming that insofar as the State court action will continue, it will be confined to the limited issues as outlined in paragraph 1 above. The court will not rule upon the other suggested sanctions as outlined in paragraph 2, for now, pending a report to be filed at least 14 days before the continued hearing regarding the dismissal etc. mentioned above.

The court finds debtor is in contempt. Initial sanction is as outlined above. A further hearing will be scheduled in approximately 60 days when status of compliance, and thus possible further sanctions, will be considered.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/1/20:

Personal appearance is not required. The hearing will be via ZoomGov. Links have been posted. It appears that nothing has changed since last we met on this subject and the contemnor is as defiant as ever. Interestingly, he apparently now refuses to testify as to the disposition of the money rather than "double down" on any of his previous stories or those reported from his brother. Trustee requests that an inference be drawn from this blanket refusal. The court will hear argument on that point and how it affects continuing contempt. The court took some hope from our last meeting that the debtor actually wanted to testify, to make clear that his impossibility defense had merit. But no, nothing has changed, apparently. But this is also true regarding the pandemic so, absent a violation of furlough terms, the status quo should continue until the earlier of a purging of the contempt or a lifting of the danger from the virus. Set continued status conference date.

This is the oft-continued hearing for status conferences concerning Kenneth Gharib's ("contemnor"), ongoing contempt, as well as a hearing on his motion late-filed on January 12 as #17 on calendar, styled as: "Notice of Motion and Motion to Dismiss the Sanction Order; Defense of Impossibility to Comply as of January 2017." The court repeats verbatim below the tentative decision from its September 14, 2017 hearings because, regrettably, nothing or almost nothing has changed. For those earlier hearings and conferences the court wrote:

"This is the continued status conference regarding Mr. Gharib's ongoing contempt, purging the contempt and/or regarding the defense of impossibility. At the last status conference June 16, 2016 the court continued the matter until August 24, 2016. In the meantime the Trustee filed a motion for continuance until September 14 and, in turn, Mr. Gharib on August 15 filed a "Motion to Dismiss Sanction Order Due to Impossibility to Comply..." which was not set for separate hearing, but is construed as part of the ongoing issue of the impossibility defense. Mr. Gharib has been in custody under this court's order since May of 2015.

It is clear that the contemnor has the burden of proving impossibility. But Mr. Gharib has cited Falstaff Brewing Corp. v. Miller Brewing Co., 702 F. 2d 770 (9th Cir. 1983) for the proposition that impossibility is a complete defense, even if self-induced. Id. at 779-82 n. 7 quoting United States v. Rylander, 656 F. 2d 1313, 1318 n. 4 (9th Cir. 1981). As the Trustee has argued, this authority is somewhat dubious since the discussion in Falstaff is in dicta and one of the authorities relied upon by the Falstaff court, United States v. Rylander, was later overturned in United States v. Rylander, 460 U.S. 752, 103 S. Ct. 1548 (1983). Further, on the very question before us, i.e. the question of self-induced impossibility, the Ninth Circuit has ruled subsequently to Falstaff in Federal Trade Commission v. Affordable Media, LLC, 179 F. 3d 1228 (9th Cir 1999) that self-induced impossibility, particularly in the asset protection trust context, is not a defense to civil contempt or at least that the contemnor's burden of proof on the point is very high. Id. at 1239-41. Instead, the contemnor must still prove "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to comply. Id. at 1241 citing Rylander, 460 U.S. at 757, 103 S. Ct. 1548. Moreover, on that point and in that context the court is justified in maintaining a healthy skepticism, as did the Affordable Media court. Id. at 1242. See also In re Marciano, 2013 WL 180057*5 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 17, 2013); In re Lawrence, 251 B.R. 630, 651-52 (S.D. Fla. 2000); United States v. Bright, 2009 WL 529153*4-5 (Feb. 27, 2009).

Here, with even a mild degree of skepticism it is sufficient to find that Mr. Gharib has not met his burden of proving "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to purge the contempt. While this is not exactly an asset protection trust context as in Affordable Media, we have a near cousin of this phenomenon, i.e. multiple transfers to apparent sham corporations. As near as the court can understand it, Mr. Gharib argues that he has had no access or control over any funds since losing all of the $11.9 million+ he claimed under penalty of perjury to own in November 2012 in filings made with this court. In previous briefs some of the subject proceeds from the Hillsborough sale were traced by the Trustee into two previously unidentified corporations, Office Corp and D Coffee Shop. In response to this evidence and in Mr. Gharib's own words:

"In March of 2015, foreigner [sic] investors decided to terminate their contract and business with Gharib. Foreigner investors demanded and instructed Gharib to close all bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp and Hayward Corporation in Bank of America and transfer the remaining balance to Office Corp. Gharib followed foreigner investors demand and instruction and he closed both bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp in Bank of America. The remaining balance of approximately six hundred thousand dollars was transferred to Office Corp per foreigner investors' demand and instruction. Gharib never was the owner of funds or shareholder of Office Corporation. Gharib has no knowledge who owned stocks of Office Corp and foreigner investors never revealed to Gharib either. Shortly after, Gharib was detained in May 2015. While Gharib was in custody, trustee subpoenaed Office Corp bank account in Bank of America (see exhibit "26 and 27"). Office Corp's bank statements show the authorized signer was Mrs. Firouzabadi. Approximately three hundred thousand dollars of funds in that account was spent in a variety of items and the remaining funds were transferred to D Coffee Shop Corp (see exhibit "26"). Trustee also subpoenaed D Coffee Shop Corporation bank account in Bank of America (See exhibit "28" and "29"). D Coffee Shop Corp's bank statements show Mr. Rushtabadi was authorized signer and the remaining balance in D Coffee Shop Corp's account was spent in variety of items, and nothing left over in that account as of December 2015, 8 months ago. Gharib has no information why and for what purpose the funds were spent in both Office Corp and D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was incarcerated during that period (May to December 2015). Gharib has no information as to identity of stock holder of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was not part of any of the above Corporations in any way or shape... Gharib did not have any interest or ownership in any of the above corporations at all. It is undisputable that that all funds (whether proceed of sales of Hillsborough or Foreigner investors' money) in both corporations were spent and gone (definitely not by Gharib)...."

Gharib's "Motion to Dismiss..." filed August 15, 2016 at pp. 4-5

Since the last hearing the Trustee has been unable to find or subpoena Mr. Rushtabadi, Gharib's brother. That a brother would be apparently so indifferent to Mr. Gharib's ongoing incarceration so as to offer his assistance or at least testimony is by itself rather noteworthy, particularly since Mr. Rushtabadi does know of the incarceration and makes telephone calls at Gharib's behest. But the Trustee was able to depose Ms. Firouzabadi August 26, 2016 [See Trustee's Exhibit "4"]. From her testimony it develops that she had a romantic relationship with Gharib allegedly ending in about 2014 and that, believing he was a successful businessman, she trusted him and allowed him to use her signature on various items and documents on things she apparently does not understand. [Transcript p. 57, line 16-19]. But, importantly, she testified she had absolutely no knowledge of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop corporations or of any transfers therefrom [Transcript p. 75, line 6-7] and identified that her purported signature on several of said corporations' papers offered as exhibits by the Trustee were forgeries. [Transcript at p. 56, line 1-17] Interestingly, she also testified that Mr. Rushtabadi, the brother, requested by telephone just before the deposition that she leave the country. [Transcript pp. 22-23] Why she should leave her home on such short notice at Mr. Rushtabadi's request was not clarified but the implication is pretty clear, to avoid service just as Mr. Rushtabadi has reportedly done (at least so far).

In sum, the court is even less persuaded than before that Mr. Gharib does not have continuing access to funds and the ability to control funds, suing various shills, to purge the contempt either in part or in whole. His stories about what happened to the Hillsborough proceeds, about phantom investments in Iranian real estate, unnamed "foreigner investors" and the like, have absolutely no substance or corroboration and defy all credibility. The few details offered have proven to be either outright lies or very suspect, at best. In sum, Mr. Gharib's burden of proving impossibility has not been carried."

The only developments that could be construed as "new" do not help the contemnor's case. The Trustee now reports that his investigation reveals that the contemnor's brother, Steven Rushtabadi, has depleted all of the remaining money from the account maintained by D Coffee Shop Corporation's (a subsequent transferee from Office Corporation, itself a transferee from the debtor) at Bank of America in a series of over-the-counter withdrawals, presumably in cash. For a few weeks between January 11 through February 26, 2016 (See, Exhibits "2" and "3" to Trustee's Declaration) these withdrawals are supported by video evidence of Mr. Rushtabadi receiving the cash. But it appears that the incremental depletion of the account has actually gone on for months earlier in cash withdrawal amounts alternating between $4500 and $3500. Exhibit "1." But the court notes that all withdrawals appear to be below the regulatory threshold of $10,000. The contemnor argues that it is impossible now to comply with the court's order because he is indigent and has no control over either his brother's or Ms. Firouzabadi's activities (or funds). The contemnor correctly points out that many of these transfers occurred after he was confined. But the court is not so naïve as to believe that transfers to corporations ostensibly controlled by a one-time girlfriend and a brother necessarily means that the contemnor has no ongoing control. At the very least it is the contemnor's burden to prove this to be the case and that burden is manifestly not carried here. The simple fact that Mr. Rustabadi refuses to cooperate by giving testimony, either in response to the Trustee's subpoenas or, conspicuously, even in support of his own brother's testimony which might relieve contemnor's incarceration, renders this whole line of excuse very dubious. Equally dubious is the argument that because the contemnor has allegedly not formally communicated with either the girlfriend or the brother in several months according to the contemnor's declaration and the records of the Metropolitan Detention Center, this must mean he has no ongoing control. But the court declines to take such an inference. Even less persuasive is the argument that the District Court has approved an in forma pauperis waiver of fees; all this means is that someone at the District Court believes what contemnor has said in an application, not that it is necessarily true. Rather, absent some more compelling and direct evidence to the contrary (such as declarations from Mr. Rustabadi or Ms. Firouzabadi), the court is more inclined to believe the more plausible scenario; i.e. the transfers from debtor to Office Corporation and then to corporations controlled by such close relatives or friends, were not mere coincidences, but were designed to camouflage the contemnor's ongoing control. Also disturbing is the Trustee's point made in page 5 of his Opposition: i.e. that several properties which contemnor claims were foreclosed upon as evidence of his indigence were actually transferred to a corporation, Las Vegas Investment, Inc., ostensibly controlled by the brother, Mr. Rushtabadi, using the name Steven Rush. If true this is yet further evidence that contemnor continues to control his investments using his brother as a shell. In sum, the court sees even less reason to find that impossibility has been proven.

ongoing contempt and/or defense of impossibility

Chapter 7

Tentative for 9/14/16:

This is the continued status conference regarding Mr. Gharib's ongoing contempt, purging the contempt and/or regarding the defense of impossibility. At the last status conference June 16, 2016 the court continued the matter until August 24, 2016. In the meantime the Trustee filed a motion for continuance until September 14 and ,in turn, Mr. Gharib on August 15 filed a "Motion to Dismiss Sanction Order Due to Impossibility to Comply..." which was not set for separate hearing, but is construed as part of the ongoing issue of the impossibility defense. Mr. Gharib has been in custody under this court's order since May of 2015.

It is clear that the contemnor has the burden of proving impossibility. But Mr. Gharib has cited Falstaff Brewing Corp. v. Miller Brewing Co., 702 F. 2d 770 (9th Cir. 1983) for the proposition that impossibility is a complete defense, even if self-induced. Id. at 779-82 n. 7 quoting United States v. Rylander, 656 F. 2d 1313, 1318 n. 4 (9th Cir. 1981). As the Trustee has argued, this authority is somewhat dubious since the discussion in Falstaff is in dicta and one of the authorities relied upon by the Falstaff court, United States v. Rylander, was later overturned in United States v. Rylander, 460 U.S. 752, 103 S. Ct. 1548 (1983). Further, on the very question before us, i.e. the question of self-induced impossibility, the Ninth Circuit has ruled subsequently to Falstaff in Federal Trade Commission v. Affordable Media, LLC, 179 F. 3d 1228 (9th Cir 1999) that self-induced impossibility, particularly in the asset protection trust context, is not a defense to civil contempt or at least that the contemnor's burden of proof on the point is very high. Id. at 1239-41. Instead, the contemnor must still prove "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to comply. Id. at 1241 citing Rylander, 460 U.S. at 757, 103 S. Ct. 1548. Moreover, on that point and in that context the court is justified in maintaining a healthy skepticism, as did the Affordable Media court. Id. at 1242. See also In re Marciano, 2013 WL 180057*5 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 17, 2013); In re Lawrence, 251 B.R. 630, 651-52 (S.D. Fla. 2000); United States v. Bright, 2009 WL 529153*4-5 (Feb. 27, 2009).

Here, with even a mild degree of skepticism it is sufficient to find that Mr. Gharib has not met his burden of proving "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to purge the contempt. While this is not exactly an asset protection trust context as in Affordable Media, we have a near cousin of this phenomenon, i.e. multiple transfers to apparent sham corporations. As near as the court can understand it, Mr. Gharib argues that he has had no access or control over any funds since losing all of the $11.9 million+ he claimed under penalty of perjury to own in November 2012 in filings made with this court. In previous briefs some of the subject proceeds from the Hillsborough sale were traced by the Trustee into two previously unidentified corporations, Office Corp and D Coffee Shop. In response to this evidence and in Mr. Gharib's own words:

"In March of 2015, foreigner [sic] investors decided to terminate their contract and business with Gharib. Foreigner investors demanded and instructed Gharib to close all bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp and Hayward Corporation in Bank of America and transfer the remaining balance to Office Corp. Gharib followed foreigner investors demand and instruction and he closed both bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp in Bank of America. The remaining balance of approximately six hundred thousand dollars was transferred to Office Corp per foreigner investors' demand and instruction. Gharib never was the owner of funds or shareholder of Office Corporation. Gharib has no knowledge who owned stocks of Office Corp and foreigner investors never revealed to Gharib either. Shortly after, Gharib was detained in May 2015. While Gharib was in custody, trustee subpoenaed Office Corp bank account in Bank of America (see exhibit "26 and 27"). Office Corp's bank statements show the authorized signer was Mrs. Firouzabadi. Approximately three hundred thousand dollars of funds in that account was spent in a variety of items and the remaining funds were transferred to D Coffee Shop Corp (see exhibit "26"). Trustee also subpoenaed D Coffee Shop Corporation bank account in Bank of America (See exhibit "28" and "29"). D Coffee Shop Corp's bank statements show Mr. Rushtabadi was authorized signer and the remaining balance in D Coffee Shop Corp's account was spent in variety of items, and nothing left over in that account as of December 2015, 8 months ago. Gharib has no information why and for what purpose the funds were spent in both Office Corp and D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was incarcerated during that period (May to December 2015). Gharib has no information as to identity of stock holder of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was not part of any of the above Corporations in any way or shape... Gharib did not have any interest or ownership in any of the above corporations at all. It is undisputable that that all funds (whether proceed of sales of Hillsborough or Foreigner investors' money) in both corporations were spent and gone (definitely not by Gharib)...."

Gharib's "Motion to Dismiss..." filed August 15, 2016 at pp. 4-5

Since the last hearing the Trustee has been unable to find or subpoena Mr. Rushtabadi, Gharib's brother. That a brother would be apparently so indifferent to Mr. Gharib's ongoing incarceration so as to not offer his assistance or at least testimony is by itself rather noteworthy, particularly since Mr. Rushtabadi does know of the incarceration and makes telephone calls at Gharib's behest. But the Trustee was able to depose Ms. Firouzabadi August 26, 2016 [See Trustee's Exhibit "4"]. From her testimony it develops that she had a romantic relationship with Gharib allegedly ending in about 2014 and that, believing he was a successful businessman, she trusted him and allowed him to use her signature on various items and documents on things she apparently does not understand. [Transcript p. 57, line 16-19]. But, importantly, she testified she had absolutely no knowledge of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop corporations or of any transfers therefrom [Transcript p. 75, line 6-7] and identified that her purported signature on several of said corporations' papers offered as exhibits by the Trustee were forgeries. [Transcript at p. 56, line 1-17] Interestingly, she also testified that Mr. Rushtabadi, the brother, requested by telephone just before the deposition that she leave the country. [Transcript pp. 22-23] Why she should leave her home on such short notice at Mr. Rushtabadi's request was not clarified but the implication is pretty clear, to avoid service just as Mr. Rushtabadi has reportedly done (at least so far).

In sum, the court is even less persuaded than before that Mr. Gharib does not have continuing access to funds and the ability to control funds, using various skills, to purge the contempt either in part or in whole. His stories about what happened to the Hillsborough proceeds, about phantom investments in Iranian real estate, unnamed "foreigner investors" and the like, have absolutely no substance or corroboration and defy all credibility. The few details offered have proven to be either outright lies or very suspect, at best. In sum, Mr. Gharib's burden of proving impossibility has not been carried.

Deny motion to dismiss. Continue for further evaluation conference.

(cont'd from 11-12-20 per court's own mtn)

Docket 444

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 11/17/20:

This is a dispute over whether debtor has cooperated with a judgment debtor examination previously ordered by the court. The charge generally is that Dr. Amster refuses to give meaningful answers on basic questions and/or to produce documents under post judgment requests regarding such basic issues that such documents should exist and be under the judgment debtors' control. The court agrees the excerpts provided show a combative and uncooperative posture. The remedy sought is that the continued examination occur in open court and/or that a discovery referee be appointed. Regarding "open court" that might be a challenge inasmuch as presently during the pandemic no live sessions of court are normally conducted. Rather, this remedy would necessarily involve some kind of hearing on ZoomGov. This might be accommodated, one supposes, but surely the judgment creditor is not proposing that this court sit and observe the discovery attempts for hours at a time. Why a Zoom hearing would in that case be any better than a videotaped deposition is not explained. An alternative is mentioned; appointment of a discovery referee. But the court notes that FRCP Rule 53, which provides for appointment of special masters, is not applicable in bankruptcy under FRBP 9031. The court will hear argument as to whether this is a viable route. In any case the court will hear argument as to how a referee, if appointed, can expect payment of his/her fees, and by that is not meant simply issuing a bill to judgment debtors and hoping to receive its payment. Also, the question of monetary sanctions over and above the judgment should be briefed as well. The judgment debtors will be ordered to provide all requested documents by the deadline below, or provide a written statement explaining inability to produce them. Legalistic objections to production are deemed waived. All questions are to be answered without objection, or if a legitimate objection is to be interposed, it will be accompanied by a contemporaneous detailed explanation. The court will hold a follow-up hearing to evaluate whether sanctions should also be imposed.

(cont'd from 11-12-20 at 2:00 p.m. per court's own mtn)

Docket 177

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 11/17/20:

This is the continued hearing on the Trustee's Motion to Approve a Compromise with creditor Remares. The court had tentatively ruled in favor of granting the compromise motion at the October 15 hearing. However, creditor Vibe Micro filed a very late objection and the court continued the hearing for further briefing. The Vibe Micro objection seems to mainly rely on a dubious reading of CCP §1710.50, which suggests, from its reading of subsection (a)(1), that a stay of enforcement goes into effect automatically. The court does not share this interpretation because, at the very least, the language suggests an order of some kind is the operative step. This portion of the statute reads:

(a) The court shall grant a stay of enforcement where:

- (1) An appeal from the sister state judgment is pending or may be taken in the state which originally rendered the judgment. Under this paragraph, enforcement shall be stayed until the proceedings on appeal have been concluded or the time for appeal has expired.

However, §1710.50 continues in subsection (c):

"[t]he court shall grant a stay of enforcement under this section on such terms and conditions as are just including but not limited to the following: (1)The court may require an undertaking in an amount it determines to be just, but the amount of the undertaking shall not exceed double the amount of the judgment creditor's claim."

Remares takes this language to mean enforcement is not automatically stayed both because subsection (a) speaks of an order or "grant" and further because the court has discretion to add its own conditions. This position appears to be supported by caselaw, including Magalnick v. Magalnick, 98 Cal. App. 3d 753 (1979), and Blizzard Energy, Inc. v. Schaefers, 44 Cal. App. 5th 295 (2020). In Magalnick, the court observed:

"[W]hile it is true the clerk of the court is required to enter judgment merely upon the filing of an application therefor under Code of Civil Procedure sections 1710.15 and 1710.25... no writ of execution generally may issue until the judgment creditor has served upon his debtor a notice of entry of the judgment, which service itself likewise affords the debtor an opportunity to move for the judgment's vacation." Magalnick, 98 Cal. App. 3d at 757-58.

In Blizzard, the court of appeal found no abuse of discretion where the Superior Court required the posting of a bond for a stay pending appeal of a sister-state judgment. Blizzard, 44 Cal. App. 5th at 299. The underlying judgment was for, inter alia, fraud, and when the bond was not posted, no stay was granted. Id. Accordingly, the Superior Court's ruling was affirmed. Id. at 300.

Remares also argues that, although Vibe Micro did not raise this point, CCP § 1710.45(a) does automatically stay enforcement for the first 30 days after service of the notice of entry of judgment unless a party seeks court permission to enforce its judgment. However, here, through an ex parte application, Remares requested and obtained a state court order allowing it to record its abstract during the 30-day period. Thus, as Remares recorded its abstract pursuant to a state court order, it likely has a valid and enforceable lien on the 2 Monarch property.

Chapter 7

Debtor also filed a late opposition, which argues that the A&C Properties factors weigh against granting the motion largely because 2 Monarch was transferred to the Irrevocable Trust, which would make it not property of the estate. Remares asserts, likely correctly, that the Motion should be granted over Debtor's opposition because Debtor provided no admissible evidence that 2 Monarch was transferred to the Irrevocable Trust. The main evidence offered is in the form of the declaration of Mr. Thomas Parker. However, as Remares' evidentiary objections point out, Mr. Parker's declaration appears to be riddled with hearsay, and lacking substantially in foundation. With little or no evidence to support his position, Debtor has not demonstrated that the settlement is not in the best interests of the Estate. Moreover, Remares argues, if the Irrevocable Trust genuinely claimed an interest in 2 Monarch, it should have intervened in the fraudulent transfer adversary matter, and Debtor does not have standing to assert claims of the Irrevocable Trust. Furthermore, the court simply disagrees that the A&C Properties factor preponderate against the compromise. Debtor again is trying to control property, or influence the outcome of property, which he paradoxically claims is not part of his estate. Meanwhile, Remares reports that Debtor continues to live at 2 Monarch while not paying 2 Monarch's mortgage, property taxes, insurance, or homeowner association fees. This is eroding the equity in 2 Monarch which could go to the Estate or a creditor such as Remares. Remares argues that if the Motion is granted, the Chapter 7 Trustee will be able to resolve two adversary matters saving the Estate much in attorney's fees and can then sell 2 Monarch to stop the equity from being further eroded and to bring monies to the Estate. Trustee echoes Remares' arguments. Debtor did not file any reply to either Remares or Trustee. It likely would not matter, in any case, because Debtor is unlikely to be able to argue around both the standing and lateness problems, and in fact, Debtor does not even attempt to establish his standing to oppose the motion, nor does he offer any explanation for tardiness of the opposition. In sum,

#1.00 Confirmation Of Chapter 13 Plan
(cont'd from 10-21-20)

Docket 10

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 11/18/20:

The Trustee and MAMAD correctly observe that on the secured claim maturing before the term of the plan, merely curing arrearages is unavailable but rather the whole of the claim must be paid. This also raises big feasibility questions. Also, the plan does not provide for all creditors as observed by the Trustee.

Appearance required.

Tentative for 10/21/20:

The proper amount of arrearages on the MAMAD claim must be given in the plan. Other deficiencies as noted by the trustee must also be met.

#5.00 Confirmation Of Chapter 13 Plan

Docket 2

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 11/18/20:

The court relies upon counsel's reading on the question of whether the missing tax returns were in fact ones necessarily filed. But if they are not required to be filed because of debtor's very low income, the remaining issues raised by the trustee are not persuasive. The fact that minimal yield is to be given to the lone unsecured non priority creditor, or that the bulk of payments are actually going to the attorney, are, absent other factors not present here, not by themselves reason to deny confirmation. If mechanically a destination for the payments needs to be established the court presumes either the debtor or the trustee will avail of Rule 3004. The court sees no bad faith and the issue of Chapter 13s not involving a second discharge has already been resolved in favor of the debtor. See In re Boukatch.

Chapter 7

#14.00 Debtor's Motion to Convert Case From Chapter 7 to 11.
(cont'd from 10-27-20 per order on stip. re: the cont. joint hrg. on the trustee's mtn to sell and the defendant's mtn to convert entered 10-01-20)

Docket 122

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO 2-02-21 AT 11:00 A.M.
PER ORDER ON STIPULATED REQUEST REGARDING THE
CONTINUED HEARING ON THE DEBTOR'S MOTION TO CONVERT
ENTERED 11-17-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/22/20:

The problem with this motion is that it is completely unsupported by any evidence. At most the declarations attest to a desire to explore a Chapter 11 plan but absolutely no details are given as to how that might be accomplished. It is also obvious that the conversion attempt is connected to the Trustee's motion to sell assets (see #12), so it would appear that the real motivation for this conversion attempt is to frustrate/block the Trustee's sale motion or other efforts to liquidate. While the court always prefers the good faith attempts of debtors to reorganize, this should not be mistaken for naivete. The Marrama case makes abundantly clear that good faith is a necessary prerequisite to conversion into a reorganization chapter. Such inquiry is heightened when it looks like a ploy to evade the trustee. Debtor might have made a closer case if she had given even the most basic explanation of just how she would manage this reorganization at this late date, and no idle promise of 120%+ or other of the moon and stars can convince under these circumstances, where concrete facts are what is needed.

(cont'd from 10-27-20 per order on stip. re: the cont. joint hrg. on the trustee's mtn to sell and the defendant's mtn to convert entered 10-01-20)

Docket 117

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 9/22/20:

The court had two concerns regarding this motion: (1) what is that is proposed to be sold, precisely described?, and (2) if the assets sold include trustee's avoidance powers under §§544, 547, 548 or 549, would the buyer have standing to pursue the actions post sale? On the second question there seems to be adequate authority in the Ninth Circuit supporting a conclusion that prudential standing would exist since, indisputably, creditors do benefit from the price, although the issue could have been more clear had there been a promised "rebate" of some portion of any proceeds to ensure that creditors got paid in full if, after administrative claims, the price is not sufficient to take out all unsecured claims. See Brookview Apts., LLC v. Hoer (In re Weigh), 576 B.R. 189, 205-06 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2017) citing Duckor Spradling & Metzger v. Baum (In re P.R.T. C. Inc.), 177 F. 3d 774, 780-82 (9th Cir. 1999). But the first question remains. The description is vague in that inclusion of all rights of action, including trustee avoidance actions, is only one possible interpretation. From what is outlined in the motion it looks like the proposed actions would be in the nature of avoiding certain transactions as fraudulent conveyances, and possibly another as a post-petition transfer (honoring of a check post-petition), but the language used in the motion is susceptible to interpretation. The court will hear argument but is inclined to continue for clarification on this point, and possible re-noticing.

DISBURSING AGENT:

FEE: $61,427.00

EXPENSES: $1,627.01

Docket 765

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/2/20:

There does not appear to be objection to allowance of the amounts requested. The dispute goes only to payment in view of possible administrative insolvency. This is a case with a confirmed Chapter 11 plan so it does not appear that there is any discrepancy in priority, with all allowed fees of the same priority, i.e. Chapter 11 administrative. The problem arises in that some of the fees awarded to SWE and the Rosenberg firm are on appeal to the Ninth Circuit. Moreover, yet more fees may be incurred in execution of the plan in amounts unknown. Consequently, the fees and costs requested in this application are allowed and the plan agent is authorized to partially disburse as much of the allowed amounts as in his discretion he determines can be prudently and safely paid without resulting in unbalanced payments among all administrative claimants holding allowed claims if/when funds are ultimately exhausted. He may use as a guideline what has previously been actually paid in the course of the case as a percentage of what has been previously allowed (although appealed), and apply that percentage to the newly allowed fees. This is a guideline only and the court relies upon the plan agent to make any adjustments resulting in lower payment as will afford a reasonable cushion against anticipated further allowed fees.

PER ORDER APPROVING SECOND STIPULATION TO CONTINUE THE HEARING ON CONFIRMATION OF DEBTOR'S CHAPTER 11
ENTERED 11-17-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 6/24/20:

The U.S. Trustee's objection was not timely, but Debtor still responded. So, the court will assume away the procedural issues. In response to the UST's objection: Debtor filed an amended plan (mistakenly entered as an amended disclosure statement) on June 16. Debtor also filed a separate response directly addressing the concerns identified in the UST's objection. This response includes additional proposed language that, if ultimately adopted into the plan, would likely address the UST's comments. As of this writing on (6/24), the UST has not filed anything further. No other interested party has filed a response of any kind to the DS.

The DS itself is not particularly user friendly as it does not have a table of contents, nor any accompanying brief to make the document easily navigable. Furthermore, while most of the required disclosures can be found in some form in the DS, it seems to be missing background information such as Debtor's financial history and events leading up to filing the petition. The DS has several exhibits: but the exhibits lack explanations of what they are and how they fit into the proposed plan of reorganization.

Debtor states that all disputes have been resolved, aside from the IRS and Citizens Bank Claims, which the newly added language in the proposed plan purports to address. Debtor states that the plan will pay 100% of the allowed creditor claims. When the UST commented on the DS, the court very likely would have found the DS to have inadequate information. The proposed additional language would, if ultimately adopted, likely satisfy the UST's concerns, and the court's.

Although the DS could benefit from additional background information about Debtor's case: it may not be necessary. However, the new proposed language should be integrated into the DS. In sum: Debtor's DS is not an easy document to navigate and has some technical Deficiencies, but likely nothing fatal. The UST's objection has been addressed, though the UST may not have had an opportunity to review the proposed changes. No other party in interest has objected or opposed the DS. If the UST does not comment further before the hearing, the DS can likely be approved.

Conditionally approve.

#11.00 Motion For Approval Of Chapter 11 Disclosure Statement

Docket 151

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/2/20:

This disclosure statement has major issues and cannot be approved in its current form, and Debtor seems to acknowledge that at least some amendment is required. For example, Debtor concedes that the issues with the descriptions of the classes and Exhibit C's projections as flagged by the UST probably require further attention.

Regarding the absolute priority rule, both the U.S. Trustee and Wells Fargo argue that there is no "new value" being added consistent with factors articulated in the Ninth Circuit. Under the absolute priority rule shareholder participation may be permitted with the cram-down of a non-consenting impaired class to the extent that shareholders supply new value to the Debtor. The new value corollary allows equity holders to retain their interests if they provide value under a plan that is (1) new, (2) substantial, (3) in money or money's worth, (4) necessary for a successful reorganization, and (5) reasonably equivalent to the value or interest received. Bonner Mall P'ship v. U.S. Bancorp Mortgage Co. (In re Bonner Mall P'ship), 2 F.3d 899, 908 (1993). Proving the new value corollary is a purely factual determination. Id. at 911. The objecting parties argue that in this case, the equity holder's proposed "new value" contribution of waiver of his administrative wage claim of $76,163.08 (DS p. 25 of 78) clearly does not constitute a new value contribution as recognized in this Circuit. By contrast, Debtor asserts that this is a different situation from the cases cited by the objecting parties in that his contribution is the waiver of his administrative claims, rather than any pre-petition claims and so provides "new value" because the contribution is new, substantial (i.e. arguably not de minimis, even though it is less than 1% of the total unsecured claims because unsecured creditors would get nothing in a liquidation), is actual money as the administrative claim is for salary, definitely necessary for the reorganization as it will provide at least something for general unsecured creditors, and is directly equivalent to the value or interest received. In support of the argument debtor only cites to a single case from the 1930s, Case v. Los Angeles Lumber Products Co., 308 U.S. 106 (1939). This is a major sticking point and it is not clear whether the facts of this case support a finding of “new value.” Further, no effort is made to explain how the quantum of new value has been market tested as seems to be required under the Supreme Court’s teaching found in Bank of America NT&SA v. 203 N. La Salle St. Ptsp., 526 U.S. 434, 119 S. Ct. 1411 (1999). As Debtor has acknowledged other shortcomings requiring amendment, the “new value” issue should also be briefed in greater length and detail by the Plan proponent and objecting parties.

Wells Fargo notes that the DS is incomplete because it does not provide adequate information as to why its second secured lien is being treated as wholly unsecured whilst claims of other junior creditors are being treated as partially secure. Debtor asserts that this situation exists because of very limited funds available combined with Wells Fargo’s stubbornness in reaching a compromise on plan treatment, which in turn caused Debtor to seek compromises with the junior creditors in an effort to create a consenting class. Debtor does not cite any authority suggesting that Wells Fargo’s senior lien can be essentially leap frogged in priority, which makes this explanation somewhat dubious.

The other objections common to all of the objecting parties has to do with valuation of assets, including Debtor’s potential claims, possible avoidance actions against Debtor’s principal, and how Debtor can truly fund the Plan. Debtor asserts that valuations of the Debtor’s assets are based on Debtor’s schedules as well as the declaration of Debtor’s principal. As to sources of funds for the plan, as noted above, Debtor has requested leave to amend this section of the DS.

Overall, the DS is not ready to be approved. Beyond its acknowledged shortcomings, it relies on broad readings of caselaw that, based on these facts, might bend the law too far. The recovery for unsecured creditors is also extremely low at less than 1%. Still, even a tiny recovery is likely preferable to a zero recovery, which is what Debtor argues a liquidation in chapter 7 would produce. But, as the plan’s viability depends in large part on being able to generate income not consistently seen to date, and confirmation remains unclear given the absolute priority rule, an amended disclosure statement would need to provide more convincing analysis regarding the "new value" issue.

Chapter 11

This matter is on calendar because permitted use of cash collateral is set to expire as of the hearing per previous order. Nothing further has been filed as of 5/8. Status? The March MOR shows slightly positive cash flow, so, absent objection, the logical order would seem to be continued authority on same terms and conditions for about 60 days.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

Debtor filed an amended motion for use of cash collateral on 4/1/20. Unfortunately, this amended motion is likely untimely because there is nearly no time for any other party to respond before the hearing date on 4/8. In any case, the new amended motion does not appear to address Banc of California's objections to continued use of cash collateral. Therefore, the amended motion should be continued to allow creditors, including Banc of California, adequate time to respond. In the meantime, Debtor should answer Banc of California's allegations of misusing cash collateral.

Continue for about two weeks on same terms. Debtor to address Banc Of California's points. Appearance is optional.

Tentative for 1/22/20:

Continue same terms until April 8, 2020 at 10:00 a.m.

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the motion of Judgment Creditor, Placentia Development Company, LLC ("PDC") to dismiss Bridgemark Corporation, LLC's ("Debtor's") Chapter 11 case pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1112(b) and/or motion for relief from the automatic stay pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §362 (action in nonbankruptcy forum). The motion is opposed by Debtor. No other party has filed any responsive papers.

1. Basic Background Facts

Debtor filed its Petition on January 14, 2020. PDC is the primary creditor owed approximately $42.5 million on account of a state court judgment entered after years of litigation over Debtor's unauthorized use of PDC's land for purposes of extracting oil. Debtor's principal, Robert J. Hall, testified under oath that the company does not have the ability to pay the judgment debt because Debtor's business involves a finite resource of constantly diminishing value. Debtor's second largest non-insider creditor is owed less than $25,000, and all of Debtor's other debts combined add up, at most, to a few hundred thousand. PDC reports that it is offering to acquire all such legitimate, non-insider debts at par. In other words, the judgment owed to PDC accounts for approximately 99.8% of the estate's debt. There do not appear to be any other debts listed as disputed, contingent, or unliquidated. The authorizing resolution appended to Debtor's Petition admits that the purpose of this chapter 11 filing is to allow Debtor a stay pending appeal because the Debtor (and one presumes, its principals) cannot afford a supersedeas bond. During the punitive damages portion of the state court trial this testimony was elicited:

"We cannot pay the 27 million We have no ability to pay any of this. ... I don't care how you do it. There's just no way around that. We don't have the ability to pay it and operate a business. It's done." Trial Tr. (Ex. B to Kibler Declaration) at 3125:9-13."

Mr. Hall also testified that at best, Bridgemark might theoretically be able to pay the $27 million in compensatory damages at $1 million per year, interest-free, over 27 years. See Id. at 3156:20-23 ["We can't pay it. ... If they would let us pay a million dollars a year for 27 years with no interest, we might be able to work it out."] But as Mr. Hall also testified, Bridgemark is built on "an asset that's declining in value every year.... It just goes down and down and down." Id. at 3113:8-12.

By prior motion the court was informed that Debtor will attempt post judgment motions to reduce the judgment and/or obtain a new trial. No information is provided as to the status of any of those.

The court is also informed that PDC has filed a state court lawsuit against members of the Hall family, who are 100% equity holders of Debtor, alleging, among other things, that the Halls used Debtor as a vehicle to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars to affiliated entities in the form of "management fees" or "consulting fees," which the affiliated entities then – through non-arms' length "loans" to the Halls – used to purchase multi-million-dollar homes, extravagant cars and furnishings, valuable pieces of art, and luxury yachts for personal use and benefit.

Section 1112(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides:

"[O]n request of a party in interest, and after notice and a hearing, the court shall convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 or dismiss a case under this chapter, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate, for cause unless the court determines that the appointment under section 1104(a) of a trustee or an examiner is in the best interests of creditors and the estate."

The statute includes a non-exhaustive list of certain types of "cause," including "substantial or continuing loss to or diminution of the estate and the absence of a reasonable likelihood of rehabilitation," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(A), and "gross mismanagement of the estate," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(B).

Similarly, section 362(d) provides that "[o]n request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, the court shall grant relief from the stay provided under subsection (a) of this section ... for cause," and also provides the non-exhaustive example of "lack of adequate protection."

Given the non-exhaustive nature of "cause" referenced in both sections of the Code, courts have read the term "cause" to include bankruptcy filings that are not appropriate invocations of federal bankruptcy jurisdiction – such as filings in which the avowed purpose of the bankruptcy petition is to avoid posting an appellate bond, or where the petition seeks merely to move what is essentially a two-party dispute from a state court to a federal bankruptcy court. As a matter of shorthand, the case law interpreting §§362(d)(1) and 1112(b) often refer to these types of cause as dismissals for "bad faith" or for lack of "good faith." See generally Marsch v. Marsch (In re Marsch), 36 F.3d 825, 828 (9th Cir. 1994) [employing this terminology, but cautioning that it is misleading: "While the case law refers to these dismissals as dismissals for 'bad faith' filing, it is probably more accurate in light of the precise language of section 1112(b) to call them dismissals 'for cause.'"]. Thus, the shorthand phrase "good faith" (which does not appear in the statute) does not turn on an inquiry into subjective motivations, thoughts, or feelings. Instead, the question is whether a particular bankruptcy filing transgresses "several, distinct equitable limitations that courts have placed on Chapter 11 filings" in order to "deter filings that seek to achieve objectives outside the legitimate scope of the bankruptcy laws." Id.

In this context, whether there is "cause" for dismissal or relief from stay "depends on an amalgam of factors and not upon a specific fact." In re Mense, 509 B.R. 269, 277 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2014). Four pertinent factors include whether the debtor has unsecured creditors, cash flow, or sources of income to sustain a feasible plan of reorganization, and whether the case is "essentially a two-party dispute capable of prompt adjudication in state court." In re St. Paul Self Storage Ltd. P'ship, 185 B.R. 580, 582–83 (9th Cir. BAP 1995). Courts are particularly suspicious of filings in which the express purpose of the chapter 11 petition is to stay execution of a judgment without an appellate bond. See e.g., In re Integrated Telecom Express, Inc., 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004) ("[I]f there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court."). In such cases, courts consider some or all of the following factors to determine whether bankruptcy jurisdiction is being properly invoked:

- "Whether the debtor had financial problems on the petition date, other than the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor has relatively few unsecured creditors, other than the holder of the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor intends to pursue an effective reorganization within a reasonable period of time, or whether the debtor is unwilling or unable to propose a meaningful plan until the conclusion of the litigation"; and
- "Whether assets of the estate are being diminished by the combined ongoing expenses of the debtor, the chapter 11 proceedings, and prosecution of the appeal." In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 280 (footnotes and citations omitted).

"The bankruptcy court is not required to find that each factor is satisfied or even to weigh each factor equally. Rather, the ... factors are simply tools that the bankruptcy court employs in considering the totality of the circumstances." In re Prometheus Health Imaging, Inc., 2015 WL 6719804, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Nov. 2, 2015) (citations, internal quotation marks, and brackets omitted). Indeed, "[a] bankruptcy court may find one factor dispositive or may find bad faith even if none of the factors are present." In re Greenberg, 2017 WL 3816042, at *5 (9th Cir. BAP Aug. 31, 2017) (citing Mahmood v. Khatib (In re Mahmood), 2017 WL 1032569, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Mar. 17, 2017)).

3. Was Debtor's Petition Filed for a Proper Purpose?

PDC argues that Debtor's petition is a textbook bad faith filing. In support PDC cites In re Integrated Telecom Express, 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004), where the court stated bluntly: "if there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay provision to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court." PDC also cites In re Casey, 198 B.R. 910, 917–18 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1996) for the proposition that the "use [of] bankruptcy to defeat the state law appeal bond requirement" is not a "legitimate bankruptcy purpose."

In response Debtor argues that at least some courts have held that a chapter 11 filing can properly substitute for posting an appeal bond. For example, Debtor cites Marshall v. Marshall (In re Marshall), 721 F.3d 1032, 1048 (9th Cir. 2013) where the court found:

Here, unlike in Marsch and Boynton, the record suggests that Howard and Ilene's liquid assets were probably insufficient to satisfy the judgment or cover the cost of a supersedeas bond. The bankruptcy court found that the Fraud Judgment amounted to over $12 million plus interest, that the "custom" in Texas was to set appeal bonds at 150% of the judgment, and that Howard did not have sufficient liquid assets to post a bond of that size. Although the record does not invariably indicate that the Debtors could not finance a supersedeas bond, we cannot say that the bankruptcy court's determination was clearly erroneous. Moreover, notwithstanding their ability to finance a bond, Howard and Ilene's inclusion of the Fraud Judgment in their initial Plan suggests that they filed their bankruptcy petition for the proper purpose of reorganization, not as a mere ploy to avoid posting the bond.

Debtor argues that the language quoted above, and others expressing similar sentiment, is applicable to our case. Debtor also points out that it is not attempting to avoid posting an appeal bond, it simply cannot do so, which Debtor argues is a critical distinction.

PDC argues that the cases cited by Defendant must be viewed according to their unique factual context, rather than relying solely on the ultimate result. For example, PDC points out that in Marshall, the judgment creditor who moved to dismiss the case as a bad faith filing had already missed the claims bar date (which was November 15, 2002) when he filed the motion to dismiss (on December 13, 2002). See In re Marshall, 298 B.R. 670, 674 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2003). At the time the motion to dismiss was filed, the debtors had already proposed a plan that would pay every other creditor with timely claims in full. Id. It was in this context that the Circuit court held that the bankruptcy court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to dismiss for bad faith. Indeed, the Marshall Circuit court stated, "we agree with the bankruptcy court that '[p]erhaps the most compelling grounds for denying a motion to dismiss grounded on bad faith is the determination that a reorganization plan qualifies for confirmation.'" Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681)). PDC persuasively argues that it would be inappropriate to infer a broader rule from Marshall. PDC argues with some persuasion that the other cases cited by Debtor were ones in which the courts based their holdings on the unique circumstances before them and did not articulate rules of general applicability.

Similarly, on the relief of stay question, Debtor's citation to In re Badax, LLC, 608 B.R. 730 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2019), also appears to be misplaced. Debtor takes a small section of the opinion where the court stated that the conclusion of bad faith was not based solely on the debtor's failure to obtain a bond, but rather based on a totality of the circumstances. Id. at 741. However, PDC points out that the Badax court specifically held that relief from stay was granted because the case had been filed in an attempt to delay execution on an adverse judgment and also because "there [was] no basis to conclude that a speedy, efficient and feasible reorganization [was] realistic." Id.

In contrast PDC argues that the instant case is more similar in substance to several other cases including Windscheffel v. Montebello Unified School District (In re Windscheffel), 2017 WL 1371294 (9th Cir. BAP Apr. 3, 2017). In Windscheffel, the debtor filed an appeal of an approximately $3 million state court judgment, but "claimed that he was unable to post the required supersedeas bond to stay enforcement of the judgment." Id. at *1. "He filed bankruptcy to avoid posting the bond and to stay [the judgment creditor's] collection efforts." Id. The debtor had, at most, four unsecured creditors (including the judgment creditor). The debtor filed a proposed chapter 11 plan that was "a thinly veiled attempt to avoid the state court's award of punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest because it proposed to pay 49.22 percent of [the judgment creditor's] claim, which was (not coincidentally) the approximate amount of the state court judgment without punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest." Id. The debtor later amended his plan to provide that if the judgment were upheld on appeal, he would liquidate his assets and give the proceeds to the judgment creditor. Id. The Ninth Circuit BAP affirmed the bankruptcy court's holding that the "totality of the circumstances" warranted dismissal of the case for cause. Id. at *4.

PDC argues that Debtor has admitted in the authorizing resolution attached to its Petition that this case was filed to circumvent the requirement to post a supersedeas bond: "Since the Company lacks the financial resources to post a bond, the only way to protect the interests of all stakeholders [i.e., the Hall family] is to commence a case under chapter 11" Docket No. 1 at PDF page 5 of 101. PDC also points to the First Day Declaration, and specifically the section entitled "Events Leading to the Bankruptcy" which only mentions the judgment debt, and really nothing else, as the major cause of the bankruptcy filing. Therefore, PDC argues with some persuasion that it is obvious that the only purpose served by filing the Chapter 11 petition was to attempt to avoid the posting of an appeal bond. After all, Debtor's entire business model as amplified in Mr. Hall's testimony is built upon extracting a finite and irreplaceable resource, which might be said to make a reorganization over time inherently less feasible than other businesses.

PDC next argues that because the dispute is solely between PDC and Debtor, for purposes of a finding of bad faith, this case is fundamentally a two-party dispute, which is continuing even now. PDC cites In re Murray, 543 B.R. 484, 494–95 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016), aff'd, 565 B.R. 527 (S.D.N.Y. 2017), aff'd, 900 F.3d 53 (2d Cir. 2018), for the proposition that, "Bankruptcy is a collective remedy, with the original purpose – which continues to this day – to address the needs and concerns of creditors with competing demands to debtors' limited assets" As such, PDC argues, "[a] chapter 11 reorganization case has been filed in bad faith when it is an apparent two-party dispute that can be resolved outside of the Bankruptcy Court's jurisdiction." Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC v. Sholes (In re Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC), 2011 WL 4502102, at *10 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. Aug. 26, 2011).

PDC argues that there is no need for the "collective remedy" of bankruptcy as articulated above because there are no other creditors with competing demands to Debtor's assets. All other claims against Debtor are de minimis relative to the Judgment, and also appear to be undisputed. Cf. In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 (dismissing chapter 11 case where debtors had "few unsecured creditors" other than judgment creditor); In re Windscheffel, 2017 WL 1371294, at *5 (affirming dismissal of case where claims of other unsecured creditors were "negligible" compared to judgment creditor's claim). In fact, if the judgment debt did not exist, it appears Debtor would have more than sufficient cash on hand to pay any other outstanding debts without difficulty. See First Day Decl. ¶¶ 22 (stating that Debtor has unrestricted cash of approximately $4.2 million) & 28–30 (describing secured car loans, royalty obligations, and accounts payable totaling less than $700,000). PDC reminds the court that it also offers to acquire all legitimate, non-insider claims at par value, leaving no reason that such creditors cannot be paid in full.

Finally, PDC argues, citing In re Chu, 253 B.R. 92, 95 (S.D. Cal. 2000) that for purposes of a finding of bad faith, Debtor's prepetition improper conduct provides additional support for dismissing the case outright or granting relief of stay. Thus, use of a debtor's assets to fund the expenses of its principals is one factor indicative of bad faith. See, e.g., In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 n.26. PDC argues that Debtor's alleged tortious prepetition conduct, which precipitated the underlying lawsuit that ultimately led to the judgment (which included punitive damages), should be considered by the court. The court should also consider the allegations contained in the litigation PDC has pending against the Hall family, which alleges that family members essentially used Debtor as a piggy bank to mask income from Debtor.

Though perhaps not always perfect analogues, it appears that PDC's characterization of Ninth Circuit jurisprudence is more in line with the current case than those cases cited by Debtor. To be clear, the court is less concerned with Debtor's heated rhetoric impugning PDC's motivation in pursuing this motion (and PDC's allegations of post-petition misconduct by the Debtor and the Hall family) than it is with PDC's arguments that a reorganization is likely not feasible due to the enormous judgment debt and Debtor's ever diminishing product source. The court is also not impressed with Debtor's assertion that allowing PDC to collect on its judgment would amount necessarily to a business fatality. First, it is far from clear that PDC wants to "kill" the Debtor as it would seem far more logical to continue operations, at least until the judgment is paid. Perhaps not so clear is why the Hall family should get to stay in authority. Debtor's principals, as the trial court found, are responsible for this misfortune as indicated by the addition of punitive damages to the judgment.

The court also disagrees with Debtor's premise that simply because Debtor is currently operating a viable business, a successful reorganization is realistic. Even Debtor's authorities suggesting a Chapter 11 to avoid an appeal bond may serve a legitimate purpose do so largely because a reorganization benefitting an array of creditors with divergent interests seemed possible or even likely. See e.g. Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048-49 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681), citing Marsch, 36 F. 3d at 828 and In re Boynton, 184 B.R. 580, 581, 583 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1995). But little or no effort is made here to show how this Debtor can possibly confirm a non-consensual plan under these circumstances, where 99+% of the debt is in hostile hands. This must particularly be so where PDC has offered to make all other creditors whole either by buying the claims or by filing a competing plan. How does Debtor get away with claiming an impaired consenting class in those circumstances, even if separate classification maneuvers could succeed? Adding to this problem is Mr. Hall's admission that the assets are a diminishing resource, thus calling into question the feasibility of a long-term payout. Debtor may cite to 11 U.S.C. §1129 (c) which requires the court, when two plans are confirmable, to consider the interests of equity. But this assumes that Debtor's plan could in any event be confirmable, a somewhat dubious proposition. A plan that proposes nothing more than delay while the appeals are resolved should be regarded as "dead on arrival."

But the court is willing to give the Debtor a short but reasonable extension to answer these questions about just how probable a reorganization is or can be despite these obstacles. In this the court is uninterested in platitudes; rather, a point by point, connect the dots proposal to reorganization that could be plausibly crammed down is what is needed. Further, PDC may also amplify the record with a more complete evidentiary showing which might support a charge of prepetition fraud or mismanagement as discussed at §§1104(a)(1) (or implicated in 1112) thereby strengthening the argument that there is no legitimate reason for maintaining management. Debtor should not expect an extension of exclusivity, however, which will run out on or about May 14, 2020.

Continue hearing about 60 days to allow Debtor to explain how reorganization is feasible in these circumstances.

(cont'd from 9-24-20)

Docket 1

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/3/20:

It is more than disappointing that we still cannot accomplish even the simplest of tasks in this case, i.e. a joint pretrial stipulation. The court will order the two counsel to meet at a time and place to be set upon the record for purposes of combining the two unilateral stipulations into a useable joint pretrial stipulation. If the parties cannot agree then, as the LBRs contemplate, there shall be set forth a list of the areas of disagreement in the single document. The court expects that everything that can be agreed upon will be and that each side will extend its utmost cooperation. This is the last chance to do this right before sanctions are imposed which can include either /or striking of pleadings or monetary sanctions. Continue to January 28, 2021 @ 10:00 a.m. for further pretrial conference and evaluation of the effort. Appearance required.

Tentative for 9/24/20:

The court will spare all a long recital of the frustrations occasioned by the continued and dismal lack of cooperation in these related cases, or the parties' seeming indifference to either the court's orders or to the LBRs. The court will only state this is not the first time. Here we are, at the date of pretrial conference and we have nothing at all from the defendant, and what might be worse, no explanation either. So be it. Plaintiff's unilateral pretrial order is adopted. How the defendant can still make a case around those provisions is unclear. A trial date will be scheduled approximately three months hence. The court will hear argument whether this should be in person or via Zoom.

Tentative for 2/27/20:

This is supposed to be a pre-trial conference. Sadly, it is not that and this is hardly the first time in this series of cases where the court has been sorely frustrated.

As required by the LBRs, the parties were to have met and conferred in good faith to narrow the issues so that trial time could be focused on those items truly in dispute. Local Rule 7016-1 sets forth a very specific timeline and list of duties incumbent on each side. At LBR 7016-1(b)(1)(C) Plaintiff was to have initiated a meet and confer at least 28 days before the date set for the pre-trial conference. According to Defendant's papers, this did not occur 28 days before the originally scheduled pretrial conference of Feb. 6, or indeed at all until February 13 when Plaintiff reportedly filed his "Pretrial Stipulation" in which he claims it was Defendants who "refused to participate in the pretrial stipulation process" necessitating what is actually a unilateral stipulation. Defendant on the next day, February 14, filed his Unilateral Pretrial Stipulation. Defendant does acknowledge at his page 2, line1-2 that Plaintiff sent something over to Defendant on January 28, but it was reportedly "not complete in any respect." As to the original date of the Pretrial Conference of February 6, that was very late. Whether that document was anything close to what was later filed unilaterally on Feb. 13 is not clarified. But what is very clear is that these two unilateral "stipulations" are largely worthless in the main goal of narrowing issues inasmuch as the parties seem to be discussing two entirely different complaints. Defendant focuses on what the former trustee (now deceased) may have known about the existence of a loan undisclosed on the schedules made by Frank to WeCosign, Inc., which loan was reportedly worthless in any case, and about how that knowledge should be imputed to Plaintiff Marshack. But why the trustee's knowledge, imputed or otherwise, should justify an alleged misstatement or omission to list assets under oath, is never quite explained. One presumes Defendant will argue materiality. Plaintiff focuses on the alleged use of another corporation, Tara Pacific, as the repository of funds taken from WeCosign as an alleged fraudulent conveyance and then used by Frank and Tara as a piggy bank between 2010 and 2012 and upon alleged misstatements in the schedules about Tara's and Frank's actual average income. While this sounds like a fraudulent conveyance theory the gist seems to be that Tara and Frank were using ill-gotten gains to live on while denying in respective schedules that they had any income (or assets) thus comprising a false oath. There probably are connections between these different stories, but that is not made at all clear (and it must be made clear). Plaintiff's overlong "stipulation" is written more like a 'cut and paste' brief containing long tables with over 59 footnotes inserted. One presumes this represents a good faith compilation of bank records, but even that is left unclear. But the language used reads purely as advocacy, not an attempt to narrow the disputed facts in a way the other side can sign.

Buried in the Defendant's recitations (at page 4, ¶ 13) is the argument that the case should be dismissed as outside the statute of limitation (or statute of repose in Defendant's terms) described at §727(e)(1). Why this was not raised 50+ months ago when the action was filed by Rule 12(b) motion or otherwise is not explained. What the Defendant expects the court to do with this point now is also not explained.

In sum, this case is still a disorganized mess. This is not the first time the court has voiced its utter frustration with this series of cases. Rather than being ready for trial, we are very much still at the drawing board. The court is not happy about it as this is hardly a young case.

What is the remedy? The court could order sanctions against either side, or maybe both sides, and that would be richly deserved. The court could decide that Plaintiff as the party with the initial duty under the LBRs should suffer the brunt of just consequences by a dismissal, as the ultimate sanction. But however tedious and frustrating this has become the court would rather see these cases decided on their merits (if any) if that is possible. But what the court will not do is to further indulge these parties in disobeying the LBRs and generally continuing to shamle along, never getting anywhere. Therefore, it is ordered:

1. The parties will immediately meet and confer about reducing the two unilateral 'stipulations' into an intelligible, single, useful list of items not in dispute and therefore requiring no further litigation;
2. The resulting stipulation will be concise, user-friendly and focused on the actual legal issues to be tried;
3. The stipulation will contain a concise list of exhibits to be offered at trial identified by number for Plaintiff and letter for Defendant;
4. The parties will attempt in good faith to resolve any evidentiary objections to admission of the exhibits, and if agreement cannot be reached, state concisely the reasons for or against admissibility;
5. The stipulation will contain a list of witnesses to be called by each side, with a very brief synopsis of the expected testimony;
6. All factual matters relevant and truly in dispute will be listed, by short paragraph;
7. All legal issues to be decided will be separately listed, by paragraph;
8. Any threshold issues such as Defendants argument about statute of repose will be separately listed along with a suggested means of resolving the issue; and

9. Both sides will estimate expected length of trial, mindful that the court requires all direct testimony by declaration with the witnesses available at trial for live cross and re-direct.

In sum the parties are to do their jobs. If the court's order is not followed in enthusiastic good faith, and completely with the goal of narrowing the issues, and if the resulting product is not a concise, user-friendly joint pretrial stipulation, the offending party or parties will be subject to severe sanctions which may include monetary awards and/or the striking or either the complaint or answer.

Continue about 60 days to accomplish the above.

#24.00 Motion To Set Aside Entry Of Default Of Olga Shabanets, As Trustee Of The 2012 Irrevocable Trust Agreement Of Igor Shabanets Dated November 12, 2012; Oldga Shabnets, An Individual, To Complaint

Docket 57

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/3/20:

Defendant, Olga Shabanets and her 2012 Trust have filed this second motion to set aside the default judgment. Her motion is substantially similar to the one she filed a few months ago, which was denied. The differences between the old motion and the new one are the declarations attached. Otherwise, they appear to be almost identical. But, as discussed below, the new declarations add little clarity as to why Olga failed to file an answer to the summons and complaint. For clarity, the prior tentative from October 1, 2020 is incorporated herein by reference.

As the opposition to the current motion points out, there are several inconsistencies in Olga's latest version of events, as follows:

The dates at which Olga resided at 2 Monarch Cove seem to vary from the last declaration in which Olga stated that she was forced to leave 2 Monarch in August of 2019, but now she states that she moved back into or visited 2 Monarch in September of 2019 and vacated once again in October of 2019 (allegedly permanently).

The opposition also notes that the signatures on Olga's old declaration and new declaration are completely different, which may be an indicator that one or both of the declarations are not truly hers. In fact, a look at the signature on the latest declaration purporting to be Olga's looks very similar to Zinaida Lysenko's (Olga's mother) signature found on her declaration. Allegedly, Olga does not speak or write in English which adds a dimension of uncertainty since no translation of her purported declaration is offered. In any case, it is at least suspicious and, therefore, unreliable.

The new motion also does not explain whether Olga set-up mail forwarding when she left 2 Monarch in August of 2019, whether she collected old mail when she returned to 2 Monarch in September of 2019, whether her mother delivered any mail to her, and why she did not learn of the lawsuit against her and the Trust through her attorney, Boice, who was also timely served with a copy of the summons and complaint.

As in the previous motion, Olga has again not demonstrated that the failure to answer the complaint was excusable and not the result of her own culpable actions or inaction. Similarly, as in the previous motion, the latest motion does not demonstrate that Olga has a meritorious defense, but reads like threadbare recitals of causes of action without sufficient supporting facts alleged or analysis to determine whether such a defense would be viable.

In sum, this latest motion, like the previous motion, leaves the court with several unanswered questions, of which it is Olga's burden to clarify in order to succeed on this motion. Thus, Olga has again not carried her burden and the motion will be denied.

#29.00 Motion to Dismiss Adversary Complaint Pursuant to FRCP 12(b)(6)

Docket 5

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/3/20:

This is the Defendants' Motion to Dismiss under Rule 12(b).

The Defendants, Farhad and Nasim Mohebbi, were married in 1991. They purchased two properties during their marriage, known as the Sonrisa and Weyburn properties (the "Properties"). The Sonrisa Property is located 30282 Sonrisa Lane, Laguna Niguel, California 90201. The Weyburn Property is located 24812 Weyburn Drive, Laguna Hills, California 92653. During their marriage, Nasim's earnings were the primary source of income for the marital community. The Debtors filed a petition for dissolution of their marriage on April 14, 2006 and lived apart for about a year and a half.

Allegedly as a result of their separation, they executed a Marriage Settlement Agreement that detailed how they would deal with their Properties and other assets. It divided the Debtors' community property and gave Nasim, the wife, the Properties as her separate property. Farhad, the husband, obtained his chiropractic practice as his separate property. The Debtors were separated and apart for more than a year. They reconciled and remarried about 11 months after the Marriage Settlement Agreement and, prior to remarrying, they executed a Premarital Agreement. The essence of the Premarital Agreement provided that whatever property that was held by either party prior to marriage, including Nasim's ownership of the Properties, would continue to be separate property. Furthermore, it included that any other property purchased during marriage would be the separate property of whoever acquired the property. In March 2010, the Debtors executed a Property Agreement, which was created allegedly for estate planning purposes. The effect of it was that it only confirmed that the Properties were Nasim's separate property. It did not purport to transfer any interest in the Properties.

The Chapter 7 Trustee, the Plaintiff, for the bankruptcy estate of the Debtor, Farhad Mohebbi, has filed a complaint for Judgment: (1) imposing a resulting trust on the Properties and an order declaring title in the Properties to be in the name of the Trustee for the benefit of the estate and Nasim; (2) declaring the Properties to be property of the Estate; (3) requiring that the Properties be turned over to the Trustee for the benefit of the estate; (4) that the Trustee may sell both the Estate's interest and interest of Nasim; (5) awarding Trustee's attorney's fees and costs and (g) For other relief just and proper.

In their Rule 12(b) motion Defendants urge the following points:

1. Argument #1: There were no Transfers of Property that would Create a Resulting Trust

Trustee argues that Farhad transferred title to the Properties to Nasim but intended to retain the benefit or occupancy of the Properties. In the complaint, the Trustee argues that Farhad transferred only bare legal title to the Properties, as an intra-family transfer for no consideration. The Trustee argues that Nasim took bare legal title to both the Properties as joint tenants and that the Debtor, Farhad, did not intend Nasim to receive his beneficial share of the interest in Properties. More so, the Trustee alleges that the Debtor continued to live in, receive benefits and enjoy the Properties and even made payments relating to it. Based on that the Trustee believes that she is entitled to the imposition of a trust on the Properties and an order declaring title to the Properties to be in the name of both Debtors as joint tenants and thus part of the bankruptcy estate.

Defendants argue that there were no transfers of property that would create a resulting trust. Defendants argue that Farhad had no intention to retain any of his interest in the Properties. Evidence of this was that there was fair consideration given which was that Farhad received his practice in exchange of Nasim getting title to the Properties. Under this theory Farhad received no benefits from the Properties. Furthermore, after reconciling, the Debtors formed a Trust and executed a Property Agreement. This, according to the Defendants, only confirmed that the Properties were still Nasim's separate properties. Furthermore, Farhad lived with his friend and then mother when they were separated which allegedly shows that he did not benefit from the Properties nor did he intend to receive a benefit in the future.

Farhad Mohebbi

Thus, as the argument goes, there was no actual transfer of interest that would create a trust. Rather the only transfer of the Properties that occurred was done pursuant to a 2007 Divorce Judgment with the intention to distribute the community property of the Debtors from their first marriage. The goal of this Agreement was allegedly to give Nasim the benefit of the Properties as an unmarried person and to exclusion of Farhad and that Farhad would enjoy the benefits of his chiropractic practice. Any agreements that were signed by the Debtors allegedly just made sure that Nasim would keep her separate property as separate and that even after their remarriage, the property they obtained would be separate.

2. Argument #2: The Only Transfer of Property Occurred in June 2007 and is Beyond Any Applicable Statutes of Limitation.

The Trustee's argument is that a resulting trust was created because the Properties were in the name of both Defendants, both parties continued to enjoy the Properties and thus, in equity, the estate should be entitled to those Properties in the bankruptcy estate

The Defendants argue that the only transfer of property was from the 2007 Divorce Judgment and was done for the purpose of equally distributing the community property from their first marriage. Furthermore, the Defendants argue that even if the Trustee's claim that the transfer was wrong or improper, six years have passed since that transfer and it exceeds the statute of limitations. Defendants argue that the Trustee could bring an action no more than one year after the transfer was made.

3. Argument #3: Since the Trustee's Argument for a Resulting Trust must fail, the Additional Relief requested in conjunction with the Claim for Declaratory Relief, Turnover and Authorization to Sell Must Also Fail.

In the Complaint Trustee is requesting declaratory relief in the form of a judicial declaration that that Farhad is a joint owner of the Properties and not just Nasim. The Trustee further requests that such interests be declared property of the bankruptcy estate. The Trustee also asks for an order that would compel the turnover of the Properties again for the benefit of the estate so it could be used for the Debtor's creditors. Lastly, the Trustee asks for an order that the Trustee can sell both the Estate's interest and Nasim's interest.

Defendants respond that because the Trustee's cause of action failed to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted pursuant to FRCP 12 (b)(6) then any additional relief that the Trustee requested in conjunction with the claim as a corollary should also be denied and/or the remedies associated with the claim such as turnover or sale of joint interest should also be dismissed.

4. Rule 12(b) Standards

A motion to dismiss for a failure to state a claim is governed by FRCP Rule 12 (b)(6) and applies to adversary proceedings in bankruptcy cases. FRBP 7012 (b). FRCP 12(b)(6) requires a court to consider whether a complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). There are cases that justify, or compel, granting a motion to dismiss. The line between totally unmeritorious claims and others must be carved out case by case by the judgment of trial judges, and that judgment should be exercised cautiously on such a motion. Id.

"While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do."

Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-65 (2007) A complaint must contain enough factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S.662, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id. Threadbare recitals of elements supported by conclusory statements are not sufficient. Id. The facts stated by the nonmoving party from the record are accepted as true and any inferences that are drawn by the court are in the favor of the nonmoving party. Everest & Jennings, Inc. v. Am Motorists Ins. Co. 23 F. 3d 226 (1994). Furthermore, the court has to find whether it is beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts support their claim. Id. This standard has been tempered in the Iqbal and Twombly cases to require that the plaintiff must state enough facts that create a plausible claim for relief. But it has not changed that Rule 12(b) motions are not the place to sort out disputed questions of fact. Instead, the court must indulge all disputes of fact in favor of the nonmoving party. As discussed below, this precept alone is enough to defeat this motion.

5.. A Resulting Trust is a Remedy Derived from Circumstances and Limitations Runs from a Date Uncertain

A resulting trust is remedial and is created when a transferor makes or causes to be made a disposition of property in circumstances where equity seeks to prevent an inequitable result. Under Defendants' cited case Tawansy v. Leslie (In re Raymond Renaissance Theatre), 583 B.R. 735, 746 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2018) such an implied trust does not need a writing or express declaration of trust; it is dependent on the circumstances. Id. citing Honkanen v. Hopper (In re Honkanen) 446 B.R. 373, 379 (9th Cir BAP 2011) and Swimmer v. Moeller (In re Moeller), 466 B.R. 525 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 2012). The statute of limitation on a resulting trust does not begin to run until there has been a repudiation of the trust. McCosker v. McCosker, 122 Cal. App. 2d 498, 501 (1954). In an action to establish a trust and for accounting related to resulting trust, the applicable statute of limitations is four years. Id.

Furthermore, under Cal. Code Civ Procedure §343, an action for relief must be commenced within four years after the cause of action shall have accrued, which may not have even begun pre-petition given the resulting trust theory and lack of any repudiation.

6. Conclusion

Based on the facts and the law of this case the Motion to Dismiss cannot be granted. First, it is replete with questions of fact which cannot be decided in a Rule 12 context. For example, Defendants urge that the court be persuaded by a declaration from their attorney about the bona fides of his documents prepared in connection with the divorce and property separation. But the court is confined to the four corners of the complaint in a Rule 12 motion, and the court cannot say that the theory alleged by the Trustee is so implausible as to run afoul of the Iqbal and Twombly standard. In the complaint, the Trustee has provided grounds for jurisdiction for the bankruptcy court under 28 USC §1334 and 11 USC §§105 and 323. The Trustee has also included allegations enough, if proven, to show why she is entitled to relief and has made several demands for the relief sought, which include declaratory relief and turnover of the Properties and more. None of this is to say that the result might not be different in a Rule 56 context or at trial where the parties may consult the evidentiary record; it is to say, however, that at this stage a statement of the case is made sufficient to defeat a Rule 12 motion.

#3.00 Motion for Order Disallowing Debtors' Claimed Exemption and Requiring Turnover of Non-Exempt Funds
(cont'd from 11-03-20)

Docket 36

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/8/20:

The court incorporates herein its previous tentative from Nov. 3. At the Trustee's suggestion the court continued the hearing to a date which would allow determination of the body of claims after a claims bar, which was thought to be a modest number ,thereby creating a path to settlement. What is the status?

Tentative for 11/3/20:

This is the chapter 7 trustee, Jeffrey Golden's ("Trustee's") motion for order disallowing debtors Antoine and Kelly Johnson's ("Debtors'") claimed exemption and requiring turnover of non-exempt funds. Debtors oppose the motion.

1. Background

Debtors filed a Voluntary Petition under Chapter 7 on December 19, 2014. Jeffrey I. Golden was the duly appointed and acting Chapter 7 Trustee of the resulting Estate. After investigation of the affairs of the Debtors, including a review of the schedules and statements and questioning of the Debtors during a Trustee Meeting under 11 U.S.C. § 341(a), Trustee found no assets to be administered, and filed a "no asset report" on February 2, 2015. The Debtors received their discharge on April 6, 2015, and the case was closed the following day.

Thereafter, Trustee received correspondence dated October 10, 2019 from Archer Systems, LLC ("Archer"), the court-appointed settlement administrator in multi-district litigation relating to an allegedly harmful diabetes medication apparently prescribed to Debtor Antoine A. Johnson. According to the correspondence, the Debtors retained counsel to stake their claim ("Claim") in the product liability litigation, based upon an injury date of September 8, 2014, which was pre-petition. The Claim is apparently in the process of being cleared for settlement in a gross amount of $466,400, with a projected net of approximately $260,924.53.

Trustee notified Archer on October 15, 2019 that the Estate has an interest in the Claim, which was not scheduled by the Debtors or disclosed to Trustee, and which therefore remained property of the Estate even after the closing of the case under 11 U.S.C. § 554(d) (assuming the September 8, 2014 date is accurate). At Trustee's request, the Office of the United States Trustee filed a motion seeking the reopening of the case for the administration of the Claim. The motion was granted by Order entered March 19, 2020, and Trustee was reappointed. (See Docket, Exhibit "A", Docket Nos. 29, 30.) Five months later, the Debtors filed amended Schedules B and C, adding the Claim as an asset (identified as "Personal Injury Claim Settlement"), valued at $259,000, and claiming the Claim as exempt in full under Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 704.140(b).

2. Is the Asset Property of The Estate and/or Exempt?

The answer, as Trustee argues, is that it is probably too early to decide. Debtors argue that Trustee's motion fails to sufficiently link the settlement to the pre-bankruptcy past, which is the test Trustee's motion must pass. See 11 U.S.C. §541(a)(1). Further, Debtors argue that even if Trustee could establish such a connection, the asset would be exempt under Cal. Civ. Proc. §704.140, which exempts awards of damages or settlements arising from a personal injury to the extent necessary to support a spouse or dependents of the judgment debtor. Trustee asserts that he has reason to believe that he can show such a link to the period prior to Debtors' bankruptcy case, including using Debtors own schedules. At present, Trustee, the date of Debtor's initial injury is not known, which makes assessing whether the estate has an interest impossible or at least difficult at this point. As to the claim of exemption, Trustee cites In re Milden, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 7726 at *18 (9th Cir. 1997) citing In re Haaland, 89 B.R. 845 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1988), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds sub nom. Haaland v. Corporate Management, Inc., 172 B.R. 74, 77 (S.D. Cal. 1989) for the proposition that the exemption under § 704.140 does not apply to past earnings. Trustee asserts that there is no evidence to establish when Mr. Johnson became disabled, or what the value of his lost wages would have been from that point to the date of filing. Thus, Trustee concludes, the non-exempt portion of the Estate's interest in the Claim is an unknown, at present.

Trustee suggests continuing this matter to a date in mid-December because the claims bar date is November 30. Trustee asserts that, to date, claims total only $8,381.18. A continuance to a date in mid-December would allow for the establishment of the body of creditors, the presentation of additional evidence concerning lost wages, and possible settlement negotiations concerning a reasonable resolution of the Estate's interest in the proceeds. Debtors argue that principles of equity tilt toward finding in their favor. However, if the asset is property of the estate, then it should be made available for distribution to Debtors' pre-petition creditors and the question is whether any part is exemptible. Thus, Trustee probably has the right of it. Also, Trustee points out that because the issue is properly framed as a proceeding to determine the validity, priority, or extent of a lien or other interest in property, ownership of the asset must be determined through an adversary proceeding.

This is an oft-continued request for use of cash collateral. As the court recalls, there is only a very marginal slice of equity in the collateral. The court has repeatedly stated (starting in November) that status quo cannot be expected to last indefinitely, and the tentative from last time (5/27) said one last extension would be granted. But the court observes now that somehow confirmation of the plan has moved to September 2. The June MOR shows a dwindling cash balance. To exacerbate the court's concern, no further status report is offered, although Ms. Altieri does file a declaration suggesting that everything is unfolding more or less as expected, with only a temporary lull in rental payments due to the pandemic. Unless the secured creditor is willing to go along further the court sees little encouragement on this record or reason to continue the use beyond September 2. So, despite the court's earlier admonition we should continue on the same basis until the continued confirmation hearing, but further continuances of that date should not be expected and, if sought, had better include the secured creditor's acquiescence as it may be without further use of cash collateral. #5.00 Confirmation Of Chapter 11 Plan

(set from 4-08-20 discl stmt hrg)
(cont'd from 10-14-20)

Docket 66

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/9/20:

It would appear that there is no remaining opposition to confirmation, the issues of plan treatment of the judgment creditor having been resolved by stipulation. This assumes the previous opposition of U.S. Bank has been resolved. Confirm as modified by stipulation.

Tentative for 10/14/20:

This is a hearing on confirmation on the debtor's Amended plan. This hearing was continued at least twice from May 27, 2020 to address some of the issues identified in the court's tentative ruling of that date, which tentative opinion is incorporated herein. The major remaining issues are cramdown interest rate and feasibility. The debtor has offered the expert opinion of J. Michael Issa, principal of the financial advisory firm, GlassRatner Advisory & Capital Group attached to his declaration of August 10, 2020.

The objecting creditor, judgment creditor Stephanie Bryson, Class 2E, has filed an opposing brief but no expert opinion. It is unclear whether U.S. Bank, Class 2B, who filed an objection to confirmation considered in the May 27 tentative, still opposes. The major obstacles to confirmation are considered below:

1. Cramdown Interest Rate

Chapter 11

The court cannot confirm the plan over the objection of an impaired class of secured creditors, such as Bryson, unless the court determine under the relevant portion of §1129(b)(2)(A)(i) that the payments promised under the plan provide the present value of the secured claim. As both sides acknowledge, the present value analysis is the mirror image of interest rate. So, the promised interest rate (in this case of 5% interest only over 180 monthly payments, or 15 years) leaves a balloon of $330,386 due in full at the end of the plan term. The question is, adjusted for all appropriate market and risk factors, does this treatment amount to the present value of the claim, which appears to be the full $330,386? The parties seem to agree with this court's conclusion expressed in In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010), and as expressed in other authorities, that a plan may not by cramdown impose uncompensated risk on the objecting secured creditor. So, to determine the appropriate rate a variety of circumstances/factors must be evaluated. Among these are market interest rates adjusted for such factors as residential vs. commercial, inflationary pressures generally, terms of repayment and the like. To be clear, there is never a true "market" rate analysis because no lender will voluntarily make the proposed treatment as a new loan; if that were the case, one presumes the debtor would refinance. Instead, the court in cramdown analysis looks at all applicable factors to find as near a proxy as possible, one that appropriately reflects all the factors adjusted for circumstances.

One such factor here is that the proposed treatment of Class 2E is for interest only, with no amortization of principal at all. In some situations, this might be thought to be a factor somewhat lowering interest rates on shorter term loans where the principal is well protected. But in a situation like this one, where the "borrower" is a debtor in possession and proposes a long term plan (15 years), who apparently lacks the resources to amortize the principal at all, on balance the court regards this as a riskier proposition and a factor creating upward pressure on interest rates to compensate for that risk. See e.g. In re McCombs Properties VIII, 91 B.R. 907, 910-12 (Bankr. C.D. Ca. 1988). Neither side analyses this factor in any helpful way.

Mr. Issa opines that a Till approach, which takes a near riskless rate such as prime rate and then adds a few points as adjustments (in a vague, somewhat arbitrary and unexplained manner) is not appropriate for this case. The court agrees, not only because the Till court relied upon the prime rate, which is not used in real estate loans, but also because that was a truck loan in a Chapter 13 of short duration. Therefore, the analysis appropriate to a longer-term real estate loan relies on fundamentally different analysis.

A closer line of authority is this court's opinion in North Valley Mall. In North Valley Mall, this court opined that a more principled approach was to break a proposed treatment as a "loan" analyzed in tranches, that is, a percentage of a 100% LTV loan can be thought of in at least three segments, or tranches, a percentage equating to more or less conforming loans, say up to 70% LTV, for which there is usually abundant data in the marketplace because real lenders make real loans on this basis every day. Sure, some adjustment is made for poor or no credit, or other factors such as conforming vs non-conforming, but there is still abundant data available. The trickier portions of the North Valley approach is fixing the second, or mezzanine tranche of say the next 20% of riskier "hard money" loans (usually in the range of 7 or 8%) combining to 90% LTV, and the very trickiest in the last 10% up to 100% of value, where no lender (outside maybe the Mafia) would touch the transaction on any basis. A suitable proxy in North Valley for that last tranche was said to be the average of what equity investors into highly leveraged transactions would expect as a return. This is usually quite a high number, say 20% per annum, as was the case in North Valley Mall. Then the court combines the tranches in weighted fashion to reach a blended rate for cramdown.

Bryson analyses the proposed rate using the North Valley approach, argues that 5% is therefore way too low and instead suggests the North Valley approach would yield a blended rate of 10.5%. Unfortunately, no expert is retained on behalf of Bryson. Mr. Issa does not utilize North Valley but adopts instead a "modified market rate" approach. Mr. Issa acknowledges that "an efficient market for traditional debt" does not exist for the Chandler property because there is, at best $25,000 or so of value therein for the Bryson lien to attach to behind almost $700,000 of senior debt. Thus, this property is well over 100% LTV and effectively yielding almost no collateral value at all (maybe 4% in Mr. Issa's view) after costs of sale. Mr. Issa correctly observes that no lender would touch this on any basis and even under a North Valley approach nothing but the very highest tranche (the so-called equity investor tranche) exists to add to the blended rate on a partially secured basis. He does opine, however, that "an efficient market likely does exist..." for the Bryson position on the Adams Street property which he observes attaches to about $278,000 of value behind $825,828 of senior debt. He calls this a 75% LTV situation, but the court is somewhat confused unless what he means is this is only compared to what the court in North Valley called mezzanine debt, i.e. effectively hard money loans into heavily mortgaged situations with correspondingly higher rates based on increased risk. He does seem to acknowledge that in any event the analog for market analysis has to be on 100% LTV situations for the combined loan structure, but since Bryson is in junior most position, the only apt comparison for her position is to the riskier portion of the mezzanine tranche or even to the leveraged equity positions only. In other words, the comparison is not like in North Valley to blended rates where a single loan is broken into tranches and then re-blended, but instead only to the riskiest junior positions.

Mr. Issa opines the appropriate rate is 7.1% for the Boston area "for this product." He cites in a footnote to an article by Eisfeldt and Demers from the National Bureau of Economics Research dated December 2015. Well, maybe, but the court would be very surprised to see that the conditions regarding that investment data are in any way comparable to those present in this case. To be comparable, the investments would have to have been into very highly leveraged situations, that is, where the "equity" investment is behind maybe 80% LTV of existing debt. The court does not doubt that some investors would venture into such situations but would be extremely surprised to see only a demand for 7.1% annualized return in comparable situations. Indeed, the court "googled" the Einfeldt and Demers paper. It is 56 pages of somewhat dense and technical economic jargon. It looks to the court's reading that while at page 42 in a table there is reference to a 7.1% rate of return in the Boston area, insofar as the court can understand it, this represents an overall investment return rate into rental housing generally, not particularized so as to correspond to only highly leveraged investments such as pertains here. So, the court is left to doubt the "market rate" analysis at any level.

At pp. 8-9 of his report Mr. Issa does opine that an approach would be to blend a 3.22-3.95% rate pertaining to 75% LTV loans on investment properties generally with the 7.1%. But again, it is left very unclear that the 75% LTV rate is comparable to what we have in the case at bar. The comparison here is not to loans up to 75% of value, but to hard money loans behind 75% existing debt thus 100% LTV, a much riskier pool which assuredly commands a higher rate. So, the conclusion he reaches at page 9 of the report that on a blended basis the rate should be near 5% is very suspect. He does opine at pp. 10-11 that the court can reinforce the loan rate with a total debt to net income ratio in this case ($151,536 combined income to total debt as called for in the plan of $122,114) which he says is within the standard debt service coverage ratio of 1.22x, or within the "standard metric" of between 1.2 to 1.4% used in financing of income property [but see feasibility analysis infra]. But another unsupported assumption is utilized in attempting to reconcile the 7.1% equity investment rate and the 3.22-3.95% market rate for 75% LTV properties for a resulting average of about 5%; he simply averages the two rates together. (see footnote 11). He does not attempt to weight either result. No explanation is offered for this approach and, as the court observes, even the 7.1% rate is highly suspect since it is left unclear that such a number corresponds to investments in income properties in the Boston area generally, or more usefully to a particularized rate of investments into highly leveraged properties only. In sum, the opinion does not persuade the court that 5% is anywhere near the appropriate rate to yield "present value" even before one considers any further boost required to deal with the fact that the loan in question is non-amortizing, interest only.

2. Feasibility

As Mr. Issa analyzed it, the income to debt ratio is 1.22x. But that assumption depends on getting a very low cramdown interest rate, such that the yearly debt service for the Bryson obligation is only $16,519. But if the cramdown rate is more like 10% or about $33,000 per annum the total debt service amounts to more like $140,595, or in ratio terms 1.07x. Granted, this is still within (barely) the stated expected net income of $151,536. But the proposal to not amortize the obligation at all creates a whole additional set of issues. If the obligation is fully amortized at 10% over 15 years, the payment jumps to $3550 monthly or $42,600 annually which bumps debt payments to almost exactly projected income. Who knows what markets will look like in 15 years, and no details are given that the court sees telling us just how debtor will be able to refinance the property when the balloon comes due? Also, debtor relies on various assumptions such as the bonus component of her income will remain steady at an average of $12,000 per annum, or that repairs, and maintenance of the properties will remain manageable within existing budget.

3. Conclusion

The plan is not "fair and equitable" as pertains to the objecting creditor, Bryson, in that the cramdown interest rate of 5% fails to account properly for all risks and thus does not yield present value of the secured claim. The plan cannot be confirmed as written for that reason. Also, debtor bears the burden on proving not only that issue but the related issue of feasibility. On feasibility, if the interest rate is adjusted to give present value the resulting budget is extremely tight. The court is agnostic on the question of whether it is, nevertheless, sufficient since feasibility does not mean guaranteed performance, only more likely than not.

Deny. The court will hear argument as to where we should go from here.

Tentative for 5/27/20:

This is the hearing on confirmation of debtor's plan. It is opposed in objections filed by two creditors.

A. Bryson

The first objection comes from judgment creditor from Class 2E, Stephanie Bryson ("Bryson"). Bryson obtained a judgment against Debtor in the amount of $270,658.85. Bryson has liens on two properties located in Massachusetts, the Chandler property and the Adams property. The Chandler property was valued at $775,000 (though Bryson values it at $795,000). The Adams property was valued at $978,300 (Bryson values it at $1,240,000).

The plan proposes to pay off debt of $330,386.91 (as of 10/22/19) over a period of 180 months, with monthly "interest only" payments of $1,376.61, then a balloon payment of $330,386.91 at the end of the plan.

Bryson argues that the plan does not satisfy the best interest of creditors test. Bryson does not believe that the Debtor's liquidation analysis is accurate, due partly to the undervaluing of the encumbered properties. If Bryson's fair market valuations are used instead of Debtor's, then the result is a net positive instead of negative. Bryson concedes that after administrative costs were factored in a chapter 7 liquidation there would still be nothing left for unsecured creditors, whereas the current plan provides for at least some recovery for unsecured creditors. Despite this fact, Bryson argues that the plan still cannot be considered fair and equitable.

Specifically, Bryson argues that the 5% interest rate contemplated in the plan is not adequate to account for the risks involved. Bryson is not a lender and her Massachusetts judgment accrues interest at 12% per year. Bryson asserts that she could foreclose on the Massachusetts properties, which would pay the judgment debt in full. Bryson asserts that the plan also has feasibility issues, and the interest rate must be adjusted to account for that risk.

Bryson asserts that the plan relies on rental income from two properties in Massachusetts. Any unplanned or prolonged vacancy throws the plan into doubt. Furthermore, Bryson asserts that Debtor's financial history suggests that her projected income is optimistic to say the least. The properties are also old and may need repairs over the life of the plan. Those repairs could come at significant cost, which again, would jeopardize the plan. The supplement to the Bryson opposition states that Debtor is including a $16,000 annual bonus from her employer, Clean Energy. However, it appears that the bonus will be in the form of stock, not cash. Thus, Bryson concludes that the plan is simply not feasible and should not be confirmed. Not raised by Bryson, but of concern to the court, is what happens at the end of 180 months on the balloon? One imagines that the debtor will either refinance or sell, but the prospect of so doing should at least be explained. Interest-only, non-amortizing lien treatments are inherently riskier than fully amortizing. This is because the creditor is never put in a position of comfort on its principal, but always hangs on the precipice. There may be a further complication here in that Massachusetts rate of interest on judgment liens is reported to be 12%, which means that the balance will actually increase over time, unless it is intended that the cramdown rate supplant the state judgment rate. That point needs clarification and briefing.

This is not inherently unconfirmable, but the fundamental precept is that the risks imposed must be fully paid. In the court's view, 5% is too low to accomplish "present value" under §1129(b)(2)(A) considering this point and that Bryson appears to be in second position, with little or no cushion. See In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Debtor argues for the prime plus approach found in Till and argues that North Valley Mall is distinguishable. But her argument is not convincing. What is the principled difference between a judgment lien and a defaulted loan? They are both 'allowed secured claims' and that is what the Code requires be given present value if paid over time. Debtor confuses resort to market data to help analyze what is present value (an economic concept informed by data) with the fact that most data available happens to originate in the loan marketplace. That is because lenders consult varied data when deciding whether to extend credit, and many factors such as collateral value and creditworthiness go into the analysis. That is a process done before the fact. But that does not change the fact that both are secured claims being paid over time so their origin seems immaterial after the fact where the court in cramdown analysis is asked to make a determination of factors in situations where no real market exists. Even if the court could be persuaded that the Till approach (which was after all about a truck loan and seemingly even less relevant) were correct, a 1.75% adjustment is still way too low.

B. U.S. Bank National Association

The real property that is the subject of this Objection is located at 33 Chandler Street, Newton, MA 02458 (the "Property"). Creditor holds a security interest in the Property as evidenced by a Note and Mortgage executed by the Debtor. Said Note and Mortgage are attached to Creditor's proof of claim (the "Proof of Claim") which was filed in the instant case as Claim No. 5-1.

Chapter 11

The Proof of Claim provides for a secured claim in the amount of $590,127.29. This amount has increased since the petition date as interest has accrued and Creditor has made post-petition escrow advances to protect its interest in the Property. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is $617,465.04. Creditor's claim is treated in the Plan under Class "2B." The Plan provides that the Debtor will pay Creditor's claim the amount of $590,127.29, over 360 months (30 years) at 4.625% interest, with equal monthly payments of $3,034.08.

The Plan fails to provide for maintenance of property insurance and timely payment of property taxes. The Plan should specify whether Debtors intend to maintain property insurance and tax payments directly or through establishment of an escrow account with Creditor. Creditor has advanced approximately $7,597.52 for post-petition property taxes on account of the Property. The Plan does not provide for reimbursing Creditor for such advances which were made post-petition for the benefit of the estate. Such advances qualify as administrative expenses and must be cured on or before the effective date of the plan.

The Plan indicates that the value of the Property is $775,000.00. The current payoff balance for Creditor's claim through June 10, 2020 is $617,465.04. The plan provides for a total secured claim in the reduced amount of $590,127.29. As the plan fails to provide for the full amount of Creditor's secured claim, Debtor's Plan cannot be confirmed as is, and the portion that is payable as an administrative claim must be dealt with.

C. Conclusion

The objections raise some good points regarding feasibility. According to Bryson, Debtor's own financial data demonstrate that she will not be able to make good on the plan payments. This plan appears to have a very (perhaps overly) optimistic outlook on Debtor's finances. Further, expenditures that may be necessary are not addressed at all, like insurance, maintenance, and the fact that there may be a $7597.52 administrative claim.

Debtor points out that Bryson has not provided any analysis as to what the appropriate interest rate would be. Debtor also points out that under the plan, unsecured creditors get at least some recovery, whereas in a liquidation, they would receive nothing. While, of course, the court wants unsecured creditors to get something, this does not substitute for the fact that it is debtor's burden to prove not only feasibility, but that cramdown treatment is providing the present value of the objecting secured claims and that this plan is better than liquidation. This has not been done. Furthermore, Debtor asserts that the First Amended Plan provides that all secured creditors encumbering the Rental Properties will receive deferred cash payments totaling the allowed amount of their claims while retaining their liens on the Rental Properties. But this assertion is devoid of analysis and, on a true present value basis, probably wrong. As Debtor's plan seems to be premised on everything going as planned over the 15 (or even thirty) years of this Chapter 11 plan, with little or no wiggle room, and while not even apparently dealing with all likely expenses, the court requires Debtor to answer Bryson's concerns about feasibility. Given the current economic climate, Debtor should account for the realistic probability of sustained occupancy in the rental properties as well as her own employment prospects.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

The purpose of a disclosure statement is "to give all creditors a source of information which allows them to make an informed choice regarding the approval or rejection of a plan." Duff v. U.S. Trustee (In re California Fidelity, Inc.), 198 B.R. 567, 571 (9th Cir. BAP 1996). "Adequate information" is defined under 11 U.S.C. Sec. 1125(a)(1) as "information of a kind, and in sufficient detail, as far as is reasonably practicable in light of the nature and history of the debtor and the condition of the debtor's books and records, that would enable a hypothetical reasonable investor typical of holders of claims or interest of the relevant class to make an informed judgment about the plan, but adequate information need not include such information about any other possible or proposed plan."

Bryson's objections notwithstanding (though feasibility seems questionable), the DS appears to provide adequate information. It is also worth noting that the DS has not drawn any other opposition. The plan may ultimately not be confirmable if feasibility proves too speculative, as it very well might be given the current economic climate, or if cramdown is attempted and the value of the rental properties is too low as Bryson has alleged, suggesting that creditors will do better in a liquidation (the so-called best interest of creditors test). Debtor will have the burden on these issues in order to achieve confirmation, but at this stage, the DS does not appear deficient from an information standpoint, especially with the detailed risk factors analysis.

Tentative for 12/9/20:

This is a motion to sell real property free of liens, with liens attaching to proceeds under §363(f). The motion is opposed by several creditors, but some of those objections seem to have been resolved. The Bank's conditional opposition is resolved if its lien gets paid from escrow, which appears to be acceptable to debtor. The objection of Jennifer Fox French who holds a domestic claim is resolved by depositing the net proceeds in an account along with the claimed homestead pending further order. The objections of Scullion and Aguirre, who are general unsecured creditors, is easily disposed of. The price obtained is reportedly the best available under the circumstances and no real reason to disagree papers in the papers. Reportedly, debtor is unable to further service the mortgage debt so the possibility of relief of stay and foreclosure looms, wiping out the recovery of all creditors. Besides, if the property is being sold under market the objectors could make their own offer.

#8.00 Motion To Dismiss Bankruptcy Case Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. 1112(b)

Docket 35

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/9/20:

This motion to dismiss is brought by creditors Al Hassas and Sweet Lemons, LLC ("Movants") as a bad faith filing pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b). Debtor opposes the motion.

1. Background

The relationship between the Movants and the Debtor goes back to February 4, 2015, at which time the Debtor engaged the Movants as consultants, on a non-exclusive basis, to generate, negotiate and/or manage various business opportunities for Debtor in connection with Debtor's "World of Dance" Brand. Jonelis Decl., ¶2, Ex. A. In exchange and in consideration for the Movants rendering of consultant services, the Debtor agreed, along with other consideration including an Executive Producer Credit on the show, to pay the Movants a pre-determined percentage of all gross monies and other consideration ("GMOC") received by Debtor in connection with the various business opportunities that arose out of or related to the Movants' services (the "Projects") and afford the Movants the option to purchase certain shares of Debtor's voting common stock at an exercise price of One Dollar Fifty Cents ($1.50) per share pursuant to a mutually agreed vesting schedule as set forth in the Agreement. Id. With respect to any Projects concerning Debtor's production of domestic or international television programs featuring the "World of Dance" Brand, Debtor agreed to pay the Movants forty percent (40%) of the GMOC received by Debtor in connection therewith.

During the Movants' consultant services, the Debtor reportedly established a successful and highly profitable business relationship between with Universal Television, LLC, which resulted in Debtor's production of the NBC television program World of Dance (the "WOD TV Show"). Jonelis Decl., ¶3. From April 2016 until April 2017, the Debtor paid the Movants 40% of the GMOC received by the Debtor in connection with WOD TV Show without objection. Jonelis Decl., ¶4. However, in April 2017, despite allegedly having continued to receive substantial GMOC from Universal in connection with the WOD TV Show, and despite allegedly having previously paid the Movants 40% of its GMOC from the Show, according to Movants Debtor suddenly and unexpectedly refused to pay the Movants any further monies. Id. Litigation in state court followed.

Movants provide a lengthy recitation of the procedural history of the contentious litigation, the settlement, Debtor's breach of that settlement, efforts to recuse various judicial officers and finally, for our purposes, the large arbitration award in favor of Movants in the approximate amount of $715,000. On the eve of the expected hearing in state court on the arbitration award confirmation, Debtor filed the petition initiating this bankruptcy proceeding.

2. Was Debtor's Filing Made in Bad Faith?

Bad faith filing of a Chapter 11 Petition is cause for dismissal. Marsch v. Marsch (In re Marsch), 36 F.3d 825, 828, 829 (9th Cir. 1994). In Marsch, the court noted that "although section 1112(b) does not explicitly require that the cases be filed in good faith, courts have overwhelmingly held that a lack of good faith in filing a Chapter 11 Petition establishes cause for dismissal." Marsch 36 F.3d at 828. "The test is whether a debtor is attempting to unreasonably deter and harass creditors or attempting to effect a speedy efficient reorganization on a feasible basis". Marsch, 36 F.3d at 828-829, citing In re Arnold, 806 F.2d, 937, 939 (9th Cir. 1986).

When the verbiage is stripped to its essence, what this case essentially comes down to is Debtor's claim that, due to massive financial losses suffered as a result of the pandemic, it simply cannot afford to pay the arbitration award or post an appeal bond, at least not in lump sum. Therefore,

Debtor argues, it (and creditors) would benefit from reorganizing, which is a proper purpose under Chapter 11. Movants believe, based on Debtor's alleged conduct in prior proceedings, that Debtor is simply engaging in more obstructive gamesmanship and attempting to hinder the confirmation of the award or possibly trying to avoid paying it at all. Movants allege that Debtor has dramatically undervalued or failed to disclose property of the estate. For example, Movants assert that Debtor has intellectual property of considerable value but failed to attribute much or any value to it. Finally, Movants note that, except for the arbitration award, Debtor has few if any other creditors, which Movants argue, leads to the inescapable conclusion that when all of Debtor's sources of revenue are disclosed and properly valued, Debtor will be solvent, and thus will have no valid bankruptcy purpose in this Subchapter V.

But Movants' analysis is grossly simplistic. Even if the court could indulge the speculation that certain assets allegedly comprised of expected revenue streams were as valuable as Movants allege (and Debtor denies), no one seriously alleges these assets could be instantly monetized enough to pay the arbitration award. Rather, Debtor plausibly argues that it will need time through reorganization to preserve those streams of income and/or to undertake rehabilitative efforts to restore the business longer term.

Although Movants create a picture of bad faith on Debtor's part based on past conduct up to and possibly including this bankruptcy proceeding, it is likely too early to dismiss this case as a bad faith filing simply because we do not have enough information upon which to decide. The court is sympathetic to Movants' frustration. There may be a better and more efficient alternative available. According to the docket, Movants have not yet moved for relief from the automatic stay as this case was only filed a little more than a month ago. A motion for relief from the automatic stay, if granted, would allow Movants to confirm the arbitration award in state court (but not to undertake levies), which should not take long as the state court was reportedly on the cusp of doing so anyway. Allowance of a disputed claim will be an indispensable step in any event. This court has absolutely no inclination to second guess the efforts of the Superior Court in that matter, and abstention to allow liquidation of the claim (but not levies) would almost certainly be granted.

Additionally, a Subchapter V case is not exactly a picnic. It is by design on an expedited timetable. A plan and possibly a disclosure will be required in very short order. Moreover, the Debtor has the appointed Trustee to contend with who will need to be, at least on a preliminary basis, convinced of a reasonable best effort in a proposed plan, especially if, as appears this case may require an attempted cramdown of 90% of the allowed debt. The Debtor can see what is ahead and should not expect extensions absent demonstrated ability to put something meaningful together in short order. If that cannot be done, then another motion to dismiss or convert will be entertained.

March 30, 2016 (the "Conversion Order") [Dkt. No. 1455]. Trustee was appointed on March 31, 2016 [Dkt. No. 1458]. Debtor was a specialty retailer offering home textiles, furnishings, and décor through a chain of 261 company owned retail stores throughout 19 states in the United States, including Puerto Rico and Washington, D.C. It was headquartered in Costa Mesa, California, and employed a workforce of over 2,500. As of the Petition Date, the Debtor remained in operation but immediately thereafter requested that the Court authorize the commencement of asset sales and store closures, which were intended to complete liquidation of the Debtor's operating assets in short order. Certain employees of the Debtor contend that the Debtor's post-petition termination of their employment was in violation of the WARN Act or CAL-WARN Act, and on July 1, 2015 filed their Class Action Adversary Proceeding Complaint [Violation of Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act, 29 U.S.C. §§ 2101 – 2109 and California Labor Code §§ 1400 et seq.] (the "Adversary Complaint"), commencing the Adversary Proceeding [Adv. Dkt. 1]. Linda Martz-Gomez, a district manager employed by the Debtor in Texas, filed the Adversary Complaint in her capacity as Class Representative.

By the Adversary Complaint, the Class Representative sought damages, on an allowed first priority administrative claim basis pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(1)(A), in an amount "equal to the sum of: unpaid wages, salary, commissions, bonuses, accrued holiday pay, accrued vacation pay pension and 401(k) contributions and other ERISA benefits, for 60 days, that would have been covered and paid under the then applicable employee benefit plans had that coverage continued for that period", or alternatively, for a determination that "the first $12,475 of the "WARN Act claims of Plaintiff and each of the similarly situated former employees were entitled to priority status under 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(4) and (5)", with the remainder allowed as a general unsecured claim. [Adversary Complaint, Adv. Dkt. 1].

On August 24, 2015, the Debtor filed its Answer to Class Action Adversary Proceeding Complaint [Violation of Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act, 29 U.S.C. §§ 2101– 2019 and California Labor Code §§ 1400 et seq.] [Adv. Dkt. 12], admitting that the Class Representative and certain other employees were discharged on or about June 19, 2015 without any WARN Act notifications, but otherwise generally denying the allegations of the Adversary Complaint and asserting affirmative defenses based upon certain exceptions (liquidating fiduciary, unforeseen business circumstances, and faltering company) to the provisions of the WARN statutes.

On December 18, 2015, the Class Representative filed her Motion for Class Certification and Related Relief [Adv. Dkt. 19]. The Debtor opposed class certification, filing its Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for Class Certification and Related Relief [Adv. Dkt. 25], with the Class Representative thereafter filing her Reply in Support of Motion for Class Certification and Related Relief [Adv. Dkt. 27]. At a hearing held on February 25, 2016, the court granted the Motion for Class Certification, with an order as to same entered on March 14, 2016 (the "Class Certification Order") [Adv. Dkt. 34]. The Class Certification Order appoints the Class Representative and appoints the firm of Outten & Golden LLP as Class Counsel. The Class Certification Order further (a) approved a proposed form of notice to the Class, (b) instructed the Debtor to provide Class Counsel with the names and addresses of Class members, (c) directed Class Counsel to serve the approved form of notice on the Class and thereafter file a sworn statement affirming compliance with such directive, (d) established the deadline for any Class member to opt-out of the Class and directed Class Counsel to thereafter file a sworn statement listing the names of any persons who have opted out of the Class, and (e) found that the notice requirements established were the "best notice practicable under the circumstances and constitute[d] due and sufficient notice to all class members in full compliance with the notice requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 23."

On March 30, 2016, the Conversion Order was entered and on April 27, 2016 the Class Representative served her first round of formal discovery on the Trustee. Thereafter the Parties entered into a series of stipulations to modify adversary case scheduling orders regarding discovery deadlines and related pleadings. The Parties have reportedly been engaged in good faith, arms-length settlement discussions since 2018, including the informal exchange of damage calculations and relevant documents and information.

On or about January 1, 2020, two of the attorneys at Class Counsel formed a new firm, Raisner Roupinian LLP, and, with the consent of Class Counsel and the Class Representative, the representation of the Class Representative and the Class was transferred to the new firm. As such, when the term Class Counsel is used hereinafter and in the Proposed Settlement Agreement, the reference is to the Raisner Roupinian firm.

has been earmarked for the benefit of specific classes of creditors per orders of the court entered pre-conversion. As set forth in the Declaration of Chapter 7 Trustee, Karen Sue Naylor, in Support of Interim Fee Applications, General Case Status [Dkt. No. 2791], filed with the Court on June 9, 2020:

"As of the date hereof, multiple adversary proceedings remain pending. One, referred to in the R&S Application as the "Warn Act Adversary", involves the claims of the Debtor's former employees for alleged post-petition violations of the Federal and California WARN Act statutes, and seeks multiple seven-figures in damages. With the assistance of my special litigation counsel in that matter, settlement discussions are progressing, and I hope to have this matter, which will result in a Chapter 11 administrative claim against the Estate, resolved this year. Until this adversary is resolved and the Chapter 11 administrative claim determined/allowed, Trustee is unable to create a claims waterfall analysis demonstrating likely distributions to Chapter 11 administrative creditors or seek an order of the Court authorizing interim distributions to Chapter 11 administrative creditors."

Four preference recovery adversary proceedings are pending against officers of the Debtor who took withdrawals from the Debtor's Deferred Compensation Plan. By these adversary proceedings, Trustee is seeking to recover approximately $1,200,000. As set forth in the R&S Application, these adversary proceedings are being vigorously defended by the defendants, with the Debtor's D&O carrier reimbursing the defendants their costs of defense. Don Fife is Trustee's expert witness in these adversary proceedings. His expert report was transmitted to the defendants on June 5, 2020, a discovery cut-off date of August 28, 2020 is pending, and the matters are scheduled for pre-trial conference on October 29, 2020.

Lastly, an adversary action was commenced against Gladstone seeking to recover damages for his alleged negligence in failing to direct the Debtor to abide by the Federal and California WARN Act statutes when he ordered postpetition layoffs. This alleged failure resulted in the commencement of the WARN Act Adversary referenced above. The adversary against Mr. Gladstone is presently being held in abeyance until the WARN Act Adversary is resolved, as such resolution will establish the Estate's alleged damages.

This Motion relates to the "WARN Act Adversary" and, if approved by the Court, will fix the Estate's damages against Gladstone, the Debtor's former president, and his alleged negligence in failing to direct the Debtor to abide by the Federal and California WARN Act statutes when he ordered post-petition layoffs, as asserted in Naylor v. Scott Gladstone, et al., 8:17-ap-01105 TA.

2. The Settlement Agreement

As described by Trustee, the salient terms of the proposed Settlement Agreement are as follows:

(1) The Class, as defined in the order granting class certification that was entered on March 14, 2016, is comprised of: the Class Representative and all other similarly situated former employees who worked at or reported to the facility located at 3550 Hyland Avenue, Costa Mesa, California who were terminated without cause on or about June 19, 2015, within 30 days of June 19, 2015, or in anticipation of, or as the foreseeable consequence of, the mass layoff or plant closing ordered by Defendants on or about June 19, 2015, who are affected employees, within the meaning of 29 U.S.C. §

2101(a)(5), and who have not filed a timely request to opt-out of the class. The members of the Class (the "Class Members") are listed on Exhibit A to the Proposed Settlement Agreement;

(2) The Class shall be allowed a Chapter 11 administrative claim, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(1)(A) (the "Settlement Class Claim"), in the amount of $1,200,000.00 (the "Proposed Settlement Payment");

(3) The Trustee makes no representations or warranties regarding the ultimate distribution to be received by the Class on account of the Settlement Class Claim and/or the Settlement Payment through the Trustee Final Report ("TFR") process, however the Trustee may seek Court approval to make an interim distribution to all holders of allowed Chapter 11 administrative claims following final court approval of the Proposed Settlement;

(4) The Proposed Settlement Payment shall be used to satisfy any and all obligations of the Estate to the Class, including but not limited to the obligation to pay the Class Representative Service Payment, Class Counsel's Fees, Class Counsel's Expenses, Settlement Administration Costs, and all payroll taxes including the Debtor's or the Estate's portion of the payroll taxes, as defined in Paragraph 6(a) of the Proposed Settlement Agreement;

(5) In exchange for the allowance of the Settlement Class Claim, and any distributions from the Estate on account of such allowed claim, the Class Representative and Class Members shall fully and completely release the Trustee, the Estate and the Debtor for any and all claims arising out of the alleged WARN Act and CAL-WARN Act violations as alleged in the Adversary

Proceeding, including waivers of known and unknown claims pursuant to California Civil Code Section 15425;

(6) The Proposed Settlement Agreement establishes the specific obligations of Class Counsel and the Settlement Administrator in administering the Proposed Settlement Payment, and the mechanism for seeking court approval of the Proposed Settlement, including notices to the Class, objections to the settlement procedures by Class Members, and the treatment of any residual Proposed Settlement Payment funds. In particular, Class Counsel shall be responsible for the production and mailing of all notices required to be provided to the Class Members ("Class Notices"). The address of Class Counsel will be used as the return address for the Class Notices and Class Counsel will respond to all inquiries of the Class arising from or related to the Proposed Settlement. Subject to the Trustee's review and approval, Class Counsel shall be responsible for calculating the allocation of each Class Member's net share of the Proposed Settlement Payment. In addition, certain Class Members have filed formal proofs of claim ("POCs") against the Estate, some of which include claims for WARN Act violations. The Trustee will provide Class Counsel with all such POCs. Class Counsel will review such POCs and provide the Trustee with a schedule setting forth the portion of each claim appropriately attributable to the Allowed Class Claim. With the information provided by Class Counsel, the Trustee will file, as appropriate, objections to such POCs to reduce the claims by the amounts identified by Class Counsel. Class Counsel and the affected Class Members agree not to oppose the reduction of their respective POCs consistent with the information provided by Class Counsel. The Trustee is not precluded from including in any such objections additional objections to other aspects of the POCs not related to the WARN Act violation claims compromised by the terms of the Proposed Settlement Agreement;

(7) Allocation of the Settlement Payment and Disbursement of the Net Settlement Amount to Class Members. The "Net Settlement Fund" is the Proposed Settlement Payment less the Class Representative Service Payment, Class Counsel's Fees, Class Counsel's Expenses, Settlement Administration Costs, and the Debtor's or the Estate's share of payroll taxes. "Settlement Administration Costs" means the fees and expenses reasonably and necessarily incurred by the Settlement Administrator as a result of administering the Proposed Settlement, as approved by the Court, including but not limited to: all costs and fees associated with preparing, issuing, and mailing any and all notices and other correspondence to Class Members; all costs and fees associated with mailing the Class Members' pro rata shares and all other payments required by the Proposed Settlement; all costs and fees associated with preparing any other notices, reports, or filings to be prepared in the course of administering the Proposed Settlement; and any other costs and fees incurred or charged by the Settlement Administrator in connection with the execution of its duties under the Proposed Settlement, including without limitation printing, distributing, and tracking documents for the Proposed Settlement, tax reporting, submitting payroll taxes on behalf of the Debtor or the Estate from the Settlement Payment, and providing necessary reports and declarations at the Parties' request. Class Counsel has retained the services of American Legal Claim Services, LLC as the Settlement Administrator, and the Trustee, on behalf of the Estate, agrees not to oppose Settlement Administration Costs not to exceed $7,000;

(8) Class Counsel's Fees and Class Counsel's Expenses. The Trustee, on behalf of the Estate, agrees not to oppose an application or motion by Raisner Roupinian LLP for an award of their attorneys' fees ("Class Counsel's Fees") in the amount of up to one-third (1/3) of the Settlement Payment, net of (a) litigation expenses (including costs associated with the production and mailing of the notice of settlement and the cost of the settlement administrator) not to exceed $10,000 ("Class Counsel's Expenses"), and (b)

The Class Representative Service Payment shall be characterized as non-employee compensation to the Class Representative and shall be reported to any applicable taxing authorities on behalf of the Class Representative on a Form 1099 issued to the Class Representative with her taxpayer identification number;

All such Payroll Taxes shall be paid promptly to the appropriate taxing authorities. The Settlement Administrator shall determine the employer's share of all FICA and UI amounts which shall be deducted from the Proposed Settlement Payment and shall pay the employees' share of such taxes by deducting such amounts from the Class Members' pro rata shares of the Proposed Settlement Payment. The Settlement Administrator shall be responsible for fulfilling reporting requirements, including federal and state payroll tax returns, the issuance of Forms W-2 and other required federal and state tax forms, and related matters. For the purpose of calculating applicable taxes, the Parties agree that eighty percent (80%) of the amounts actually paid to the Class Members after deducting Class Counsel's Fees and Expenses, including the cost of the Settlement Administrator, and the Class Representative's Service Payment, but before deducting employee taxes, shall constitute wages reportable on Internal Revenue Service Form W-2, and twenty percent (20%) shall constitute health insurance payment amounts not subject to backup withholding or employment taxes to the extent consistent with Internal Revenue Code Regulations;

The Parties shall also request a date for a fairness hearing ("Fairness Hearing"). At the Fairness Hearing, the Parties shall request that the Bankruptcy Court shall consider final approval of the Proposed Settlement. The Proposed Settlement is subject to entry of a final order by the court, after notice and hearing to creditors and parties in interest, in accordance with applicable law and local rules (the "Settlement Order"). The Settlement Order shall be deemed final when fourteen (14) days have elapsed from the entry of the Settlement Order, with no notice of appeal filed, or after the Settlement Order is finally affirmed on appeal, whichever first occurs; and, motion by the trustee after notice and a hearing. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9019(a). A bankruptcy court should affirm a compromise agreement if it was negotiated in good faith and it is fair and equitable. Martin v. Kane (In re A & C Properties), 784 F.2d 1377, 1381 (9th Cir. 1986). In determining the fairness, reasonableness, and adequacy of a proposed settlement agreement, the court must consider:

1. The probability of success in the litigation;
2. The difficulties, if any, to be encountered in the matter of collection;
3. The complexity of the litigation involved, and the expense, inconvenience and delay necessarily attending it; and
4. The paramount interest of the creditors and a proper deference to their reasonable views in the premises. Id.

The court does not need to conduct an exhaustive investigation into the validity of the asserted claim. U.S. v. Alaska Nat'l Bank of the North (Matter of Walsh Const., Inc.), 669 F.2d 1325, 1328 (9th Cir. 1982). It is sufficient that the court determines that the claim has a substantial foundation and is not clearly invalid as a matter of law, or that the outcome of the claim's litigation is doubtful. Id. The court must determine whether the compromise is in the best interest of the bankruptcy estate. A & C Properties, 784 F.2d at 1382. These factors are separately analyzed below:

a. Probability of Success in Litigation

Trustee argues that it is unclear whether the Class Representative will ultimately succeed in establishing the claims of the Class against the Estate. While the Trustee, based upon the advice of her special litigation counsel, believes that the Estate may have defenses to the claims asserted under the WARN Act, it is less clear that such defenses will be effective against the claims asserted under the CAL-WARN Act. Trustee contends that the terminations were caused by a sudden and dramatic event outside of Debtor's control and that, at the time WARN notice was due, it was actively seeking capital or financing that would have allowed it to avoid the terminations. (Adv. Dkt. 12 at 11). Plaintiff contends that the terminations were foreseeable more than 60 days prior to June 19, 2015, and that the events that led to the terminations were not only foreseeable, but inevitable. Plaintiff also contends that the unforeseeable business circumstances exception does not apply under the CAL-WARN Act, that the Trustee is foreclosed from asserting the faltering company exception under the CAL-WARN Act because no determination from the Department of Industrial Relations (DIR) was requested at the time of the layoffs, and that none of the federal WARN Act statutory exceptions are applicable because, among other things, no written notice was provided to the Class Members.

Gladstone argues that Trustee has a high likelihood of success defending against the Plaintiff's federal WARN Act claims but only possibly (not necessarily likely) a lower likelihood of success in defending against Plaintiff's CAL-WARN Act claims. Gladstone argues that at the very least, a Settlement Payment of $1.2 million is unjustifiably high. Gladstone argues that the Trustee obtained no or little discount on the WARN Act claims even though the Trustee is settling at a very early stage of the lawsuit, without requiring the WARN Act Plaintiffs to conduct any discovery and without causing the Plaintiff's and their counsel to incur any cost or fees in prosecution of their claims. Furthermore, Gladstone argues that there is nothing complicated about the WARN Act claims alleged by Plaintiffs or the Estate's defenses thereto. According to Gladstone, certain of the Estate's defenses, such as the "faltering company" exception raise issues of law that can easily be adjudicated through a pre-trial and dispositive motion, thus potentially avoiding the need to conduct lengthy or costly discovery.

Plaintiff argues that the settlement figure is not unreasonable and Class Counsel initially calculated the Class' maximum WARN damages of 60 days' wages and benefits at $1.9 million for the smaller class of 111 class members, exclusive of reimbursable medical expenses compensable under California Labor Code 1402(a)(2), the employer's payroll obligations, the cost of providing notice to the class, and the cost of administering the settlement. The proposed settlement amount, allegedly, represents an approximately 60% recovery of the fuller Class' maximum WARN damages again, exclusive of reimbursable medical expenses compensable under California Labor Code 1402(a)(2), the employer's payroll obligations, the cost of providing notice to the class, and the cost of administering the settlement. Plaintiff asserts that should the proposed settlement not be approved, and the Class were to prevail on the merits, Class Counsel would seek its attorneys' fees, pursuant to 29 U.S.C. § 2104(a)(6). Under those circumstances, Class Counsel estimates the exposure to the estate could easily exceed $3 million. (Roupinian Decl., ¶ 19).

There seems to be general agreement that Trustee's likelihood of successfully defending against the federal WARN Act claims is higher than on the CAL-WARN Act claims. But even a high likelihood of success does not equate to certainty, whereas a settlement does. To that end, Trustee points out that the "faltering company" defense may not find purchase here because, she argues, under 29 U.S.C. sec. 2102(b)(1) and Cal. Lab. Code sec. 1402.5(d), the exception applies to single site plant closures, not mass layoffs as occurred in this case. In any event, litigation, regardless of how strong a defense may seem, is likely to be expensive and laborious. Also, Plaintiff points out, if the settlement is not approved, the estate is potentially exposed to more than twice the amount of the settlement. Trustee notes that, Gladstone aside, no other interested party, creditor or otherwise, has opposed this settlement. Trustee posits that Gladstone's true motive in opposing this motion is that he seeks to avoid or at least limit the Estate's claims against him for his alleged negligence as CEO and Chairman of the Board of the Debtor in failing to ensure that the applicable WARN statute(s) was/were complied with when he ordered the June 2015 post-petition mass layoff of the Debtor's employees. Furthermore, Gladstone's assertion that the issues are not complicated itself seems overly simplistic as it is unknown what evidence might be discovered and how the potential litigation would shake out, especially given the partial description of Plaintiff's litigation strategy.

b. Difficulty in Collection

By mutual agreement this factor does not apply.

c. The complexity of the litigation involved, and the expense, inconvenience and delay necessarily attending it

As noted above, Gladstone asserts that the litigation ought to be straightforward and the issues are not complex. In fact, Gladstone asserts that many of the issues raised can be dispensed with through dispositive and pre-trial motions. Unsurprisingly, Plaintiff and Trustee assume the opposite position. For example, Plaintiff asserts that the allegations and the Debtor's defenses to the claims under the WARN Acts are fact intensive and require discovery. Discovery regarding the Debtor's financial affairs leading up to the terminations would also be fact intensive and lengthy, significantly reducing the funds ultimately available for creditors. Plaintiff also points out that it is likely that, regardless of the outcome of a trial, there would be an appeal, resulting in further lengthy delays. Trustee also points to her own diligence in retaining special counsel to litigate the WARN Act claims, whose efforts of over more than year enabled targeted and productive settlement discussions, which result in the proposed Settlement Agreement. Trustee has also taken steps to liquidate certain estate assets, which resulted in greater recoveries for Chapter 11 administrative claims, which claims total in excess of $5,400,000 before consideration of the Proposed Settlement. Thus, Trustee argues, her diligence in this matter undercut the suggestion that she is merely feigning concern over delays in the WARN Act litigation. Trustee and Plaintiff have persuasively argued that the issues involved could potentially become quite complex given the fact intensive nature of the allegations. This factor tilts in favor of granting the motion. But the biggest issue the court sees is part of this A&C Properties factor, i.e. ongoing expense from diminishing resources. The court will call it the "melting ice cube" factor. Consider the Trustee's report on the estate's current financial condition:

"At present I hold cash in the approximate amount of $7,328,572.67. Of that amount, $700,000 has been earmarked for the benefit of specific classes of creditors as per orders of the Court entered pre-conversion. At present, allowed and unpaid Chapter 11 administrative claims (Section 503(b)(9) claims, landlords, miscellaneous chapter 11 unpaid vendor claims and the claims of employed professionals) are approximately $5,400,000, before the Proposed Settlement, with additional claims requiring my review. The total likely distribution to allowed Chapter 11 administrative claims cannot be finally determined until after final administration and allowance of final Chapter 7 costs fees and costs. As such it remains uncertain whether Chapter 11 administrative claims will be paid in full, with or without the Proposed Settlement." Trustee's Reply, p. 25.

Do the arithmetic. The Trustee is reporting that the estate is already teetering on administrative insolvency assuming only a $1.2 million recovery for the class. Depending on how the remaining litigation pans out, it is altogether likely that even administrative claims will not be paid in full in this case. So, the ancient proverb comes to mind: "If you find yourself in a hole...stop digging."

d. Best Interest of Creditors

Chapter 7

Trustee argues that absent settlement, the Parties anticipate another year or perhaps two of expensive litigation, including formal discovery, before the Class Claim will be brought to trial. Of particular importance, Trustee argues, the Proposed Settlement provides for the complete administration, calculation, and payment of the Class Claims, including withholding and funding of payroll taxes, both of Class members and of the Estate, thereby eliminating the substantial administrative costs the Estate would incur in performing these services.

Gladstone argues that the proposed Settlement Agreement is not in the best interests of the estate's creditors because it proposes to treat the class members as entitled to administrative claims. Gladstone points out, citing Czyzewski v. Jevic Holding Corp., 137 S. Ct. 973, 979 (2017), that the Bankruptcy Code sets forth a basic system of priority, which ordinarily determines the order in which the bankruptcy court will distribute assets of the estate. Gladstone also asserts that at least one post-Jevic court has recognized that "[i]n light of the Supreme Court's recent ruling in Jevic, parties who seek approval of settlements that provide for a distribution in a manner contrary to the Code's priority scheme should be prepared to prove that the settlement is not only 'fair and equitable' ... but also that any deviation from the priority scheme for a portion of the assets is justified because it serves a significant Code-related objective." In re Fryar, 570 B.R. 602, 610 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2017).

Here, Gladstone argues, it is possible that class members would only be entitled to fourth or fifth priority as wage claims with the balance of the claims that is not entitled to priority under Sections 507(a)(4)-(5) treated as a bifurcated unsecured claim. 11 U.S. Code § 507(a)(4)-(5); see In re First

Magnus Fin. Corp., 403 B.R. 659, 666 (D. Ariz. 2009) (holding that WARN Act damages should not be awarded administrative priority status because they "are not necessary to maintain the debtor as a going concern, nor are they necessary to preserve the bankruptcy estate during the liquidation process.") Both Trustee and Gladstone acknowledge that there is persuasive authority suggesting that post-petition WARN Act claims can be entitled to administrative priority, but there does not appear to be controlling authority in the Ninth Circuit. Plaintiff also points out that settling the case now obviates the need for expenditure of time and money in litigation, which works to the benefit of all creditors.

As there does not appear to be controlling authority in this circuit on the issue of priority for these class members it is difficult to assess this issue with precision. But as noted, there is at least a line of authority that suggests administrative claim priority status for post-petition WARN Act plaintiffs is the correct posture. See In re Powermate Holding Corporation, 394 B.R. 765, 776-77 (Bankr. D. Del. 2008) (construing WARN claims as severance pay, the court determined that the WARN claims "vest" at the time of the employees' termination, thereby making them entitled to administrative expense claims in a post-petition termination.) Furthermore, Trustee argues that all courts addressing the issue conclude that employee terminations which occur after the commencement of the case would satisfy section 503(b)(1)(A)(ii). See In re First Magnus Fin. Corp., 390 B.R. 667, 679 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2008), aff'd, 403 B.R. 659 (D. Ariz. 2009); In re Powermate Holding Corp., 394 B.R. 765 (Bankr. D. Del. 2008); In re Philadelphia Newspapers, LLC, 433 B.R. 164, 173-74 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2010). Trustee's persuasive authority is likely sufficient for purposes of this motion. The issue is unquestionably a gamble. Gladstone's argument to keep plowing ahead in the hope this is resolved in favor of the estate sounds like an encouragement to continue doubling down on a shaky bet in the hopes of winning, which is considerably easier to argue if one is using other people's money.

Finally, although Gladstone asserts his own status as a creditor, it likely bears repeating that no other creditor or interested party opposed the motion or joined Gladstone's opposition to the proposed Settlement Agreement, and Gladstone's self interest in keeping the settlement low or non-existent cannot be ignored. Thus, although Gladstone may not be pleased with the Settlement Agreement for any number of reasons, his dissatisfaction alone does not mean that the Settlement Agreement is not in the best interests of the estate's creditors taken as whole.

4. Compliance with FRBP 7023

FRBP 7023 (e) provides, in pertinent part:

(e) The Claims, issues, or defenses of a certified class may be settled, voluntarily dismissed, or compromised only with the court's approval. The following procedures apply to a proposed settlement, voluntary dismissal, or compromise:

- (1) The court must direct notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who would be bound by the proposal.
- (2) If the proposal would bind class members, the court may approve it only after a hearing and on finding that it is fair, reasonable, and adequate.
- (3) The parties seeking approval must file a statement identifying any agreement made in connection with the proposal.
- (4) If the class action was previously certified under rule 23(b)(3), the court may refuse to approve a settlement unless it affords a new opportunity to request exclusion to individual class members who had an earlier opportunity to request exclusion but did not do so.

(5) Any class member may object to the proposal if it requires court approval under this subdivision (e); the objection may be withdrawn only with the court's approval.

Here, Trustee asserts that the Proposed Settlement satisfies the above requirements in that:

(1) The Parties are requesting that the court approve the proposed form of Notice, which is fair and reasonable, providing a comprehensive description of the Proposed Settlement and the options of each Class Member in considering same;

(2) The Parties are requesting that the court preliminarily or conditionally approve the Proposed Settlement, thereafter, requiring a Fairness Hearing so that it may determine that the Proposed Settlement is in fact fair, reasonable and adequate;

(3) The full, complete and fully executed Proposed Settlement Agreement is attached to this Motion for the review and consideration by each Class Member, and the Motion provides an overview of the material terms of the Proposed Settlement;

(4) The Court has previously certified the Class and Class Members were afforded an opportunity to request exclusion, with three such individuals doing so; and,

(5) The Proposed Settlement requires court approval, and proposed Notice describes for each Class Member the right to object and the deadline for filing any such objections.

Chapter 7

It appears the Rule 23 as adopted into FRBP 7023 is or will be complied with under the Settlement.

5. Conclusion

Trustee and Plaintiff have persuasively argued that the A&C Properties factors favor granting the motion over Gladstone's opposition, as the Settlement Agreement appears to have been the result of arm's-length negotiations, is fair and equitable, is carefully considered and serves the best interests of the creditors. As a practical matter, the Trustee is doing what the court expects her to do, that is, keeping a close eye on the relative benefit of continued litigation considering the lack of available resources. This is particularly so in a borderline administratively insolvent case which this one appears likely to be. The proposed Settlement Agreement also appears to comply with the requirements of FRBP 7023, and for all these reasons should be approved.

Chapter 7

Continue status conference 90 days with expectation that a substitution motion, and maybe Rule 56, will be filed in the meantime.

Tentative for 3/7/19:

It would seem that the areas still subject to reasonable dispute all go to whether the Fus committed fraud between the inception of the credit in May of 2008 and the onset of the admitted fraud commencing October of 2008. Another issue would be the usual predicates to fraud such as reasonable reliance by bank personnel or auditors on statements made and materials given during that period. On damages, it might also.

While the court can identify the window of time that is relevant, it has no inclination to limit the means of discovery which can include all of the normal tools: depositions, subpoenas, including to third parties, and interrogatories and/or requests for admission.

#12.00 Andrew R. Corcoran's Motion To Dismiss Or In The Alternative Stay Or Transfer (cont'd from 11-12-20 per court's mtn)

Docket 38

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/10/20:

This is a Motion to Dismiss this adversary proceeding based on lack of personal jurisdiction pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2), or in the alternative, to stay or transfer this adversary proceeding, of defendant Andrew Corcoran joined by Defendant Matthew Browndorf (collectively "Defendants"). The motion is opposed by plaintiff, Peleus Insurance Company ("Plaintiff").

1. Defendants' Alternative Remedy of Staying This Adversary Proceeding Is Warranted

The parties report that there is a matter currently pending in Maryland District Court that involves the substantially the same parties and subject matter. Furthermore, that matter was initiated several months prior to this adversary proceeding. Plaintiff believes that this court is the proper venue as it argues that this court can exercise personal jurisdiction over all necessary parties. Plaintiff also reports that there is a motion to dismiss in the Maryland matter based on an alleged failure to join a necessary party under Rule 12(b) (7). Plaintiff believes that motion to dismiss will succeed. Defendants believe the Maryland motion to dismiss will fail and assert that this court cannot properly exercise personal jurisdiction.

According to the status report filed on 12/3, Plaintiff reports that the Maryland motion to dismiss is expected to be fully briefed by 12/14 (just after the hearing on this motion). The hearing date for the Maryland motion to dismiss is unknown, but likely not too long after the completion of the briefing. Plaintiff has also filed a motion with the District Court of the Central District of California to withdraw the reference. That motion is set for hearing before Judge Kronstadt on March 29, 2021.

There is a lot going on in this case to say the least. The motion and subsequent papers indicate that the threshold issue of personal jurisdiction is likely to be complex and hotly contested. There are also two pending motions that could have a major impact on this adversary proceeding, but the outcome of those motions is obviously uncertain at present. Matters will clarify one way or another soon. Thus, for reasons of judicial economy, comity, deterrence of potential forum shopping, and the need to avoid parallel litigation and/or inconsistent rulings, this court will grant a stay of proceedings as an alternative form of relief as suggested in the motion. This relief can likely be justified under the "First to File" doctrine, a discretionary rule in which the court must consider whether a complaint containing the same issues and parties has already been filed in another district. Alltrade, Inc. v. Uniweld Prods., 946 F.2d 622, 625 (1991). This rule is not to be applied mechanically or too rigidly and the policy underlying the rule should not be disregarded lightly. Id. at 625, 627-28. In other words, the rule does not require perfect identity of issues and parties. See Audio Entertainment Network, Inc. v. AT&T, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 34500 at *3. "[I]t is not an abuse of discretion, and therefore not reversible error, for a district court judge to weigh the facts and conclude that the rule should apply." Alltrade, 946 F.2d at 628.

The stay should likely remain in effect until after Judge Kronstadt has issued a ruling on the motion to withdraw the reference in late March or early April. By that time, the District Court in Maryland will likely have also ruled on the 12(b)(7) motion and we will have a much clearer picture of what is and needs to be happening to move this matter forward, including potentially revisiting this motion.

Grant a temporary stay of proceedings pending the outcome of both the Maryland motion to dismiss and the motion to withdraw the reference. A continued status conference is scheduled April 8, 2021 at which time the court requires a full update and, if then appropriate consistent with other rulings, will establish deadlines.

2. Facts

As recited by Trustee, the following facts are undisputed:

A. Pre-Bankruptcy

On October 8, 2012, Debtor executed a document entitled Revocable Trust Agreement of Igor Shabanets, with Debtor as the settlor of a series of trusts described in the revocable trust agreement and reserving the right to revoke the trust agreement at any time. Debtor and his wife, Olga Shabanets ("Olga") were designated as the co-trustees of the Revocable Trust. On November 12, 2012, Debtor executed a document creating a trust entitled the 2012 Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Igor Shabanets ("Irrevocable Trust"). Olga was designated as the trustee of the Irrevocable Trust. On September 28, 2016, Omeranio Investments filed a lawsuit in Florida State Court, initiating an action captioned Remares Global LLC, as assignee of Omeranio Investments, Ltd. v. Vishmu & AI LLC, et al., case no. 50-2016-CA-011045 ("Florida Action"). On August 7, 2018, Debtor was joined into the Florida Action as Defendant.

On August 28, 2018, shortly after being named Defendant in the Florida Action, Debtor made or caused to be made multiple transfers of securities ("Securities"), with a value of $3,385,713.12, from an account with Merrill Lynch in the name of the Revocable Trust, account number ending in -4643 ("Revocable Trust Account"), to another account with Merrill Lynch in the name of the Irrevocable Trust, account ending in -4561 ("Irrevocable Trust Account"). Also, on August 28, 2018, Debtor made or caused to be made a cash transfer in the amount of $5,659.32 from the Revocable Trust Account to the Irrevocable Trust Account. On August 29, 2018, Debtor made or caused to be made a cash transfer in the amount of $754,007.59 from the Revocable Trust Account to the Irrevocable Trust Account. The August 28, 2018 and August 29, 2018 cash transfers together total $759,666.91 (collectively, the "Cash Transfers"). On September 27, 2018, Debtor transferred by grant deed his interest in property located at 9875 Rimmele Drive, Beverly Hills, California, with an estimated value between $1.5 million to $2.5 million, for no consideration, to IOS Properties, LLC, a Nevada limited liability company wholly owned by the Irrevocable Trust. On April 22, 2019, a money judgment in the amount of $10,314,112.97 was entered against Debtor in the Florida Action.

On April 23, 2019, Debtor made or caused to be made a cash transfer in the amount of $399,185.00 from a personal bank account with Bank of America to the Irrevocable Trust Account. Collectively, all transfers to the Irrevocable Trust Account described above from August 28, 2018 through April 23, 2019 will be referred as the "Transfers." The Transfers total $4,544,565.03. On May 2, 2019, Remares recorded a Judgment Lien Certificate with the Florida Secretary of State which Remares asserts caused a lien to be placed on all of Debtor's personal property, which Remares contends included or should include the securities and cash transfers. On May 3, 2019, Remares filed a sister-state judgment in California in Orange County Superior Court and judgment was entered in favor of Remares against Debtor for $10,324,378.84.17. On May 7, 2019, Remares caused the Florida court to issue a Writ of Garnishment, served upon Merrill Lynch, which Remares asserts placed another lien on the Debtor's property, including the securities and cash transfers. On August 15, 2019, Remares caused the California Court to issue a writ of execution ("California Writ").

On August 26, 2019, the California Writ and a Notice of Levy were served on Merrill Lynch, and subsequently, on August 28, 2019, the same were served on Debtor. Remares asserts this placed a third lien on the securities and cash transfers. On September 17, 2019, Remares caused Debtor to be served with a California Order to Appear for Examination ("ORAP"), which Remares asserts caused a fourth lien to be placed on the securities and cash transfers. On October 1, 2019, an abstract of judgment for $4.5 million was entered against Debtor in favor of creditor Global Approach, Inc. ("Global"), in connection with case number 30-2019-01101713-CU-EN-CJC filed in the Superior Court of California, County of Orange. On October 30, 2019, Debtor transferred via grant deed his interest in real estate property located in Dana Point, CA, with an estimated value of $6 million, to Rock Star Beverly Hills, LLC, a company of which Debtor is the principal.

B. The Bankruptcy and Adversary Proceedings

On August 22, 2019, Remares filed a complaint against Olga and Olga Shabanets as Trustee of 2012 Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Igor Shabanets, u/a/d November 12, 2012 ("Shabanets Trust"), Igor Shabanets, and Merrill Lynch, under California Code of Civil Procedure §§ 3439.04 and 3439.05 to avoid fraudulent conveyance, initiating case number 30-2019-01092348-CU-NP-CJC in the Superior Court for the County of Orange ("State Court Action"). On December 20, 2019, Remares filed the FAC in the State Court Action. On December 21, 2019, Debtor filed a voluntary petition for bankruptcy under Chapter 11 of Title 11 of the United States Code ("Petition Date").

Between January 6-7, 2020 Debtor filed his schedules and statements of financial affairs. Pursuant to Debtor's statements, Debtor claims only $2,700 in assets, debt in excess of $91 million, provides that Debtor was/is a party to ten (10) different lawsuits involving creditors within one (1) year of filing of the petition, asserts that the debts are

On January 7, 2020, Debtor filed amended schedules A/B and disclosing two accounts with Merrill Lynch, account numbers ending in -4643 and -4561.28 These accounts were previously defined as the Revocable Trust Account and Irrevocable Trust Account.

On January 9, 2020, Remares filed a notice of removal of the State Court Action ("Removal Action"), initiating this adversary proceeding. On January 21, 2020, as Adv. Dk. No. 10, Remares filed a motion to order Merrill Lynch to deposit certain funds in the Court's registry. On February 7, 2020, as Adv. Dk. No. 24, the Court entered an order instructing Merrill Lynch to deposit $3,033,215.05 ("Funds") into the bankruptcy court register. The Funds consist of $2,546,806.49 in securities and cash in the Irrevocable Trust Account and $482,780.80 in funds Debtor had in 529 college savings accounts. On February 10, 2020, as Adv. Dk. No. 26, defendants, Olga and Olga Shabanets as Trustee of 2012 Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Igor Shabanets, u/a/d November 12, 2012 ("Shabanets Trust") filed a Notice of Consent to Removal. Also on February 10, 2020, the Court entered an order converting Debtor's bankruptcy case to Chapter 7. On February 11, 2020, Trustee was appointed as the Chapter 7 trustee. Also on February 11, 2020, as Adv. Dk. No. 27, defendants Olga, individually and in her capacity as the trustee of the Shabanets Trust, and Debtor filed an Answer to the FAC. Defendants admit to the transfer of securities and cash transfers from the Revocable Trust Account to the Irrevocable Trust Account, but deny that the transfers were fraudulent in nature.

No. 37, Trustee filed a stipulation with Merrill Lynch to dismiss Merrill Lynch as defendant from this adversary. On June 1, 2020, as Dk. No. 51, the Court approved the stipulation, dismissing Merrill Lynch as a defendant. On May 8, 2020, Remares filed a complaint against the Trustee, Debtor, and Olga, seeking declaratory relief regarding the validity, priority, or extent of alleged lien(s) on certain funds deposited with the Court in this case, initiating adversary proceeding number 8:20-ap-01079- TA ("Declaratory Relief Adversary"). On July 20, 2020, Debtor filed a motion to compel trustee to abandon interest in several 529 college saving plans (later granted).

On August 27, 2020, Trustee served on Debtor, and Olga, individually and as Trustee of the 2012 Irrevocable Trust Agreement of Igor Shabanets u/a/d/ November 12, 2012, Plaintiff's First Set Requests for Admissions, Special Interrogatories, and Request for Production of Documents. Defendants failed to serve any responses on Trustee. In consequence pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 36 all matters contained in Plaintiff's Requests for Admissions are deemed admitted due to Defendants' failure to respond within 30 days of service of the Requests for Admissions. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(a)(3). An emergency motion filed by Defendant Shabanets on December 8, 2020 to shorten time for a hearing on withdrawal of the deemed admission was denied. Said Defendants' failure to file a timely response to the summary judgment motion was not addressed.

depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. FRCP 56(e) provides that supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein, and that sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit shall be attached thereto or served forthwith. FRCP 56(e) further provides that when a motion is made and supported as required, an adverse party may not rest upon mere allegations or denials but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. FRCP 56(f) provides that if the opposing party cannot present facts essential to justify its opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or continue the motion as is just.

A party seeking summary judgment bears the initial responsibility of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of material fact and establishing that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law as to those matters upon which it has the burden of proof. Celotex Corporation v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 2553 (1986); British Airways Board v. Boeing Co., 585 F.2d 946, 951 (9th Cir. 1978). The opposing party must make an affirmative showing on all matters placed in issue by the motion as to which it has the burden of proof at trial. Celotex 477 U.S. at 324. 3. The Transfers and Badges of Fraud

Trustee asserts that in claims for relief nos. 1-6, the Trustee may rely on state law to avoid, recover and preserve for the benefit of the Estate approximately $2.546 million in fraudulent transfers of securities and cash made by Debtor to hinder creditors. Trustee's powers to recover fraudulent transfers on behalf of the Estate arise from 11 U.S.C. §§ 541 and 544, in that fraudulent transfer claims are property of the Estate under the exclusive control of the Trustee, cf. 11 U.S.C. § 323, and Trustee may exercise the rights of a hypothetical lien creditor under §544 as of the petition date to recover any transfer pursuant to applicable state law.

Under California law, including the Uniform Voidable Transfer Act ("UVTA") which is codified in Civil Code §§ 3439 et seq., a creditor may avoid a transfer of an interest in property where the transferor transferred the property with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud one or more of his creditors or where the transferee failed to provide reasonably equivalent value to the debtor. Under relevant California state law:

"[f]raudulent transfers are subdivided into actually fraudulent transfers which are avoidable under California Civil Code § 3439.04(a)(1), or constructively fraudulent transfers applicable under California Civil Code §§ 3439.04(a)(2) or 3439.05." In re

Juarez, 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 4501, at *7 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 2008) (citing In re Cohen, 199 B.R. 709, 716 (9th Cir. BAP 1996)).

The trustee bears the burden of proof on each element of an alleged fraudulent transfer. Raleigh v. Illinois Dept. of Revenue, 530 U.S. 15, 20-21 (2000).

Here, Trustee asserts that the validity of the asserted causes of action is established by Defendants' failure to respond to Plaintiff's requests for admissions (discussed above), which Trustee correctly argues deems those requests for admissions as admitted and conclusively established pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 36(b). Deemed admissions, and nothing more, are enough for entry of summary judgment in favor of the moving party. See, e.g., Wright v. Paul Revere Life Insurance Co., 291 F.Supp.2d 1104, 1111-12 (C.D. Cal. 2003). But further, the Shabanets Defendants did not respond to the motion either and under LBR 7056-1(f), those facts are deemed admitted.

As to the First and Second causes of action under Cal. Civ. Code § 3934, Trustee asserts that sufficient undisputed facts exist to establish Defendants' liability. The California legislature has codified certain indicia of intent to defraud in §3439.04(b) as follows:

- (1) Whether the transfer or obligation was to an insider.
- (2) Whether the debtor retained possession or control of the property transferred after the transfer.
- (3) Whether the transfer or obligation was disclosed or concealed.
- (4) Whether before the transfer was made or obligation was incurred, the debtor had been sued or threatened with suit.

(5) Whether the transfer was of substantially all the debtor's assets.

(6) Whether the debtor absconded.

(7) Whether the debtor removed or concealed assets.

(8) Whether the value of the consideration received by the debtor was reasonably equivalent to the value of the asset transferred or the amount of the obligation incurred.

(9) Whether the debtor was insolvent or became insolvent shortly after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred.

(10) Whether the transfer occurred shortly before or shortly after a substantial debt was incurred.

(11) Whether the debtor transferred the essential assets of the business to a lienor that transferred the assets to an insider of the debtor.

Virtually all of the above indicia of fraudulent intent are present in the undisputed facts. Trustee asserts that Debtor's transfer of funds and securities to the Irrevocable Trust Account was a transfer to an insider. Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.04(b)(1). The settlor of the Irrevocable Trust was the Debtor himself, the trustee of the Irrevocable Trust was Debtor's wife, and the beneficiaries of the Irrevocable Trust are Debtor's children, all of whom, Trustee correctly argues, qualify as statutory insiders of the Debtor pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 101(31). The answer to the Complaint denied that Olga is and was at all relevant times Debtor's wife, but Trustee argues that Debtor's own sworn schedules and statements do not identify Olga as Debtor's ex-wife. More specifically, Trustee asserts, paragraph 1 of Debtor's "Addendum to Statement of Financial Affairs" refers to Olga as Debtor's "wife." The court is aware, through other motions, that at some point, Olga left Debtor due to, at least in part, an instance or instances of domestic violence, and settled elsewhere. However, the court is not clear whether at all relevant times Olga was Debtor's wife or ex-wife. As noted above, there is apparently some conflicting evidence. But it may not matter as Trustee's motion illustrates several more badges of fraud and the appropriate time to consider insider status is when the transfers were made, which the court understands occurred all while Igor and Olga lived together.

For example, Trustee asserts that the transfers of securities and cash from the Revocable Trust Account to the Irrevocable Trust Account allowed Debtor to maintain control of those funds, as he could continue to direct Olga to withdraw or transfer funds. Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.04(b) (2). Notwithstanding the absence of Debtor's name from the Irrevocable Trust Account, Trustee argues, Defendants' deemed admissions establish Debtor's continued control over the funds in the Irrevocable Trust Account.

Next, Trustee argues that before the transfers of securities and cash were made on August 28, 2018 and August 29, 2018, Debtor was engaged in at least one lawsuit– the Debtor transferred the securities and cash from the Revocable Trust Account to the Irrevocable Trust Account within one month of being named Defendant in the Florida Action, in which a judgment in excess of $10 million was ultimately entered. Additionally, Trustee asserts, Debtor was apparently being sued by Global as well, and a judgment was ultimately entered against him in the amount of around $4.5 million in the lawsuit by Global. Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.04(b)(4). Finally, Trustee asserts, Debtor was also being sued by Vibe Micro, Inc., and a significant judgment was entered against Debtor in favor of Vibe Micro in late 2019.

Trustee also asserts that the transfers of the securities and cash themselves were transfers of substantially all of Debtor's assets. The transfers at issue include over $3 million in straight cash and securities assets. Trustee asserts that Debtor's other assets were real property holdings which may be substantially encumbered, and the equity in those properties does not exceed $3 million. Trustee also asserts that two months after being named Defendant in the Florida Action, Debtor transferred by grant deed a parcel of vacant land in Beverly Hills worth between $1.2 million to $2.5 million for no consideration to a company owned by Debtor's Irrevocable Trust. Also, one month after an abstract of judgment for $4.5 million was entered against Debtor in favor of another creditor, and two months prior filing for relief, Debtor transferred a second piece of real property, his residence in Dana Point, for no consideration to a company owned by the Irrevocable Trust.

Trustee argues that Debtor received no reasonably equivalent consideration for the transfers of the Funds from the Revocable Trust Account to his family's Irrevocable Trust Account. Reasonably equivalent value under the UVTA is measured objectively, from the perspective of the transferor's creditors. See Decker v. Tramiel (In re JTS Corp.), 617 F.3d 1102, 1109 (9th Cir. 2010); Maddox v. Robertson (In re Prejean), 994 F.2d 706, 708 (9th Cir. 1993). Here, from a creditor's objective perspective, Trustee argues, based on the surrounding circumstances, Debtor initiated the transfers while under threat of lawsuits to make the securities and cash inaccessible to creditors filing lawsuits against him.

Next, Trustee argues that Debtor transferred the securities and cash to keep them out of reach of his creditors, including and especially Remares. In California, Trustee asserts, all assets in a self-settled revocable trust are property of the settlor and may be levied upon by creditors. Cal. Prob. Code §18200. On the other hand, assets in an irrevocable trust for which the judgment debtor is not a beneficiary cannot be levied by judgment creditors. See Laycock v. Hammer, 141 Cal.App.4th 25, 31 (2006) (explaining the express terms of a trust determine whether it is irrevocable and trust property is subject to creditors of settlor only where settlor retains power to revoke as provided under Cal. Prob. Code §18200). Thus, Trustee concludes, Debtor's transfers to the Irrevocable Trust Account were clearly intended to keep those funds out of the reach of creditors and unavailable for levy. Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.05(b)(7).

Moreover, these transfers were made when Debtor was insolvent or caused him to become insolvent. In support of this argument, Trustee points to the numerous lawsuits against Debtor by creditors for defaults on loan guarantees filed within 1-2 years of the Petition Date and which contributed to his $98 million debt, while Debtor's remaining assets totaling a mere $2,700 reported on his schedules as of the Petition Date.

Finally, Trustee points out that within one year after Debtor made the transfers at issue, he had multimillion-dollar judgments entered against him by both Remares and Global. Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.05(b)(10). In total, as Trustee demonstrates, almost all of the eleven badges of fraud are satisfied in this case, in order to establish Debtor's actually fraudulent intent in making the transfers of cash and securities to the Irrevocable Trust Account. Thus, aided by the "badges of fraud" the court agrees that an intent to hinder, delay and defraud creditors is proven.

4. Constructively Fraudulent Transfer

As to the Third through Sixth causes action brought pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code. §3439(a)(2)(B) and §3439.05, Trustee asserts that uncontroverted facts establish Defendants' liability.

"A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is voidable as to a creditor... if the debtor made the transfer... [w]ithout receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor... [i]ntended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed that the debtor would incur, debts beyond the debtor's ability to pay as they became due." Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.04(a)(2)(B). "For a transfer to be avoided under §3439.04(a)(2)... a trustee must show that the 'debtor made the transfer ... without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer.'" AFI Holding, Inc. v. Mackenzie, 525 F.3d 700, 707 (9th Cir. 2008).

Also, "[a] transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is voidable as to a creditor... if the debtor made the transfer... [w]ithout receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation and the debtor was insolvent at that time or the debtor became insolvent as a result of the transfer or obligation." Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.05(a). "A debtor that is generally not paying the debtor's debts as they become due other than as a result of a bona fide dispute is presumed to be insolvent." Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.02(b). "For a successful claim under Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.05, the Trustee must prove essentially the same elements as those in section 548(a)(1)(B)." Greenspan v. Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP (In re Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison LLP), 408 B.R. 318, 347 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2009).

Here, Trustee argues that from August 28, 2018 through April 23, 2019, Debtor transferred millions of dollars' worth of securities and cash from the Revocable Trust Account to the Irrevocable Trust Account without receiving any value in exchange for the Transfers, let alone any reasonably equivalent value. Trustee asserts that no Defendant has ever identified any exchange of consideration for the transfers from the Revocable Trust Account to the Irrevocable Trust Account.

Based on the above, summary judgment on Claims 3-6 is also appropriate because there is no triable issue of fact as to whether the transfers of securities and cash were fraudulent, made without receipt of reasonably equivalent value (or any value) and at a time when Debtor believed or should have reasonably believed that he would incur debts beyond his ability to pay as they became due, pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code §§ 3439.04(a)(2)(B) and 3439.05, which have substantially the same elements and requirements of proof.

5. Defendants' Possible Defenses

Although Defendants have not opposed the motion, the court examine sthe affirmative defenses raised in Defendants' answer to the FAC. Those affirmative defenses were:

- Failure to Mitigate Damages
- Unclean Hands
- Estoppel
- Failure to State a Cause of Action
- Lack of Legal Notice
- Not a Party to Agreement

Chapter 7

- Statute of Limitations
- Good Faith

As Trustee points out, none of these defenses were presented with any significant level of analysis and Defendants have never sought dismissal or mitigation based on any potentially dispositive legal or equitable theory. Other defenses such as lack of legal notice are not convincing because, as Trustee points out, Defendants filed an answer responsive to the complaint. The closest Defendants have come to interposing a defense is their attempt on December 8, 2020 only one working day before the motion, to file an emergency motion for withdrawal of the deemed admissions which was unsupported by any sufficient showing, and in any event never went to the issue of why the motion itself which was also unopposed. Thus, for the reasons discussed above, Trustee is entitled to summary adjudication as to causes of action 1 through 6 of the FAC.

6. Remares' Opposition: Void vs. Voidable

Remares makes clear that its opposition is limited to the wording of an order granting summary judgment and does not dispute that the transfers in question were, in fact fraudulent. Specifically, in Remares' view, unless the transfers are considered void, the court cannot grant this motion because the Trustee has not included Remares' counterclaims, which seek declaratory relief as to whether the Transfers are "void" as opposed to "voidable", and whether the Court should impose a resulting trust on the Transfers because of Remares' liens (the "Counterclaims").

In support of its argument that the transfers are void as a matter of law, as opposed to voidable, Remares cites California Supreme Court cases reaching as far back as 1863. For example, in Swinford v. Rogers, 23 Cal. 233, 235-236 (1863), the court observed, "a conveyance made with intent to defraud creditors is void, though there may have been a full and valuable consideration paid therefor. The fraud taints and vitiates it." The California Supreme Court again expressed this opinion in the 1937 case Everts v. Sunset Farms, Inc., 9 Cal. 2d 691, 698 (1937) where the court observed that transfers defrauding creditors are "void and not merely voidable." In more recent times, the California Supreme Court has reiterated this position as cited by Remares in Yvanova v. New Century Mortg. Corp., 62 Cal.4th 919, 929 (2016) ("As we said of a fraudulent real property transfer in First Nat. Bank of L.A. v. Maxwell (1899) 123 Cal. 360, 371 [55 P. 980], [a] void thing is as no thing." (internal quotations omitted) Remares asserts that even though new statutory schemes such as the California Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act and later the Uniform Voidable Transfer Act were adopted, they did not overrule or supplant common law remedies. Rather, as the court in Daff v. Wallace (In re Cass), 476 B.R. 602, 617-18 (2012) explained, "in addressing the question of whether a fraudulent transfer is void or voidable under the CUFTA, the court observes that there is no indication in the CUFTA's language or in its legislative history that the California legislature intended to change the common law and establish fraudulent transfers in general as voidable instead of void. Following CUFTA's enactment in 1987, courts and other authorities continue to recognize that a creditor has cumulative remedies with respect to a fraudulent transfer as discussed herein." Again, this doctrine was seemingly reaffirmed as recently as last year in Berger v. Varum, 35 Cal.App.5th 1013, 1019 (2019), where the court observed that the remedies in UVTA are cumulative and not the exclusive remedy for fraudulent conveyances and does not supersede the common law of fraudulent transfer. Thus, it can likely be safely assumed that the doctrine that fraudulent conveyances are void remains the law. But the court still has questions.

Why does this "void" vs. "voidable" question matter? Remares wants to argue that since the fraudulent conveyances were "void" it is as though they never happened, which would allow its judgment and ORAP liens to attach prepetition when the properties entered the bankruptcy. Remares wants treatment as a lien creditor as opposed to a general unsecured creditor.

As alternate grounds (or perhaps the same theory re-stated) for finding the transfer void, Remares argues that the transfers are "sham transfers" because the Debtor never intended the Irrevocable Trust to obtain true ownership in the Transfers and never intended the money to go to the Trust's beneficiaries. When a settlor transfers assets to a trust to shield them from creditors, while still maintaining control over the assets, the trust is a sham from the outset and the transfers are void, or so this argument goes.

Finally, as a last basis for finding the transfers void, Remares argues that the Trusts were only Debtor's nominees, holding only nominal legal title to the transfers, but not actual legal title, which in turn, makes the transfers void. See Born v. Koop, 200 Cal.App.2d 519, 527-528 (1962) ("The word 'nominee' in its commonly accepted meaning connotes the delegation of authority to the nominee in a representative or nominal capacity only, and does not connote the transfer or assignment of the nominee of any property in ownership of the rights of the person nominating him.") Remares argues that an analysis of factors identified as indicators of nominee status heavily favors a finding of nominee status. Those factors are:

(1) Whether inadequate or no consideration was paid by the nominees;

Chapter 7

(2) Whether the properties were placed in the nominee's names in anticipation of a lawsuit or other liability while the transferor remains in control of the property;

(3) Whether there is a close relationship between the nominees and the transferor;

(4) Failure to record conveyances;

(5) Whether the transferor retained possession; and

(6) Whether the transferor continues to enjoy the benefits of the transferred property. Leeds LP v. United States, 807 F. Supp. 2d 946, 966 (2011).

Here, Remares asserts that every factor except the fourth factor is easily demonstrated on this record, and thus supports a finding that the transfers should be considered void.

But there are major holes in Remares' analysis. First, the authorities cited above, even Remares' authorities, acknowledge that the aggrieved party has a variety of remedies it can pursue to unwind a fraudulent conveyance; the remedies are cumulative not exclusive, and actions under the UVTA are supplemental to common law theories of relief. See Berger v. Varum, 35 Cal. App. 5th at 1019 citing Macedo v. Bosio, 86 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1051(2001) and Wisden v. Superior Court, 124 Cal. App. 4th 750, 758 (2004). Indeed, the very Act of which Civil Code §§3439.04 and 3439.07 are a part is now helpfully called the "Uniform Voidable Transactions Act" formerly known as the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (emphasis added). Section 3437.07 specifically includes "avoidance" as a remedy. This helps explain why many of Remares' cases using the "void" language are mostly older cases decided either under common law or earlier versions of the uniform law. The older law also seems to have been adopted by reference in §3439.12. But an issue the Trustee must contend with is found in Daff v. Wallace (In re Cass), 476 B.R. 602, 617-18 (2012) where Judge Kwan held that a creditor's lien could attach post fraudulent transfer because under some California law (as observed above) the transfer is deemed void, or at least that it was an issue for trial, finding that "avoidable" was only intended to deal with contexts involving a good faith transferee. Id. at 617 But this court is not convinced that Cass is good law for another reason. It does not square with 11 U.S.C. §551, which provides that a transfer avoided under a variety of sections including 544 is automatically "preserved for benefit of the estate." If a transfer is preserved for benefit of the estate, it is antithetical to at the same time hold that subsequent liens diminishing the estate's interest can attach. As the Trustee argues, this court believes the better approach is a flexible one that discourages a race to the courthouse by creditors attempting to lien the conveyed property in diminution of a ratable distribution. See e.g. In re Thu Thi Dao, 616 B.R. 103, 116 (Bankr. E.D. Cal 2020) discussing Rinard v. Positive Investments, Inc. (In re Rinard), 451 B.R. 12, 19 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2011); See also Dye v. Rivera (In re Marino), 193 B.R. 907, 915 (9th Cir. BAP 1996).

But perhaps the best decision is to delay the question until another day, as did Judge Kwan in Cass. The matter of Remares' counter-claims can and should be left for another day and possibly another adversary proceeding, to satisfy Remares due process arguments.

As Trustee notes, Remares has been aggressive and tenacious in pursuing its rights before and throughout the pendency of this bankruptcy case. In June of this year, Remares succeeded on a motion to intervene in this adversary proceeding so that it could make sure it had a hand in fashioning any remedy. The court does not see what is inherently inequitable about Remares aggressively pursuing and protecting its interests. Given the amount of money at stake, especially for Remares, its determination is understandable. The court also notes that this appears to be purely a legal dispute, not a factual dispute. As far as the court can tell, despite this sharp disagreement, the underlying facts remain undisputed. The fraudulent nature of the conveyance seems in little doubt so the remaining issue might simply devolve to one of whether Remares should enjoy some enhanced recovery on account of its purported liens, either as a matter of law or settlement.

7. Conclusion

The court finds that the transfers in question are fraudulent conveyances pursuant to Civil Code §3439 and summary adjudication should be granted as to all six causes of action. The transfers are avoided under §550 and preserved for the estate under §551. The court will hold another hearing specifically on the narrow issue of void ab initio vs. voidable, and/or whether the liens should follow the properties, after Remares and the Trustee are allowed more extensive briefing.

#4.00 Motion For Relief From The Automatic Stay REAL PROPERTY

1st UNITED SERVICES CREDIT UNION Vs.
DEBTOR

Docket 129

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/15/20:

The opposition posits that a settlement is expected in near future. The court hopes that succeeds. But that does not change that there is no equity and the property is not necessary to a reorganization under §362(d)(2). There is a limit to how much the court can/should accommodate extra statutory continuing injunctions favoring debtors, at least absent creditor consent. If an arrangement is reached consensually, wonderful. But that is for the parties to decide. Meanwhile, there is no basis for continuing a bankruptcy stay.

Grant.

Docket 2

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/16/20:

The plan cannot be confirmed as filed for basic reasons. First, no treatment at all is described for the Cook secured claim, and treatment of all secured claims is a basic for plan confirmation. The fact that counsel has received some payments is not very persuasive. If there is to be an avoidance of the Cook claim, some reference to this must be made and described in the plan, but nothing appears. If allowance is made of the claim feasibility questions arise which also need to be addressed. Moreover, this is not a new case, so debtor should explain why dismissal is not indicated.

Deny. Appearance: required

Tentative for 10/21/20:

The Equity 1 secured claim must be dealt with formally before a plan can be confirmed. The life estate reportedly owned by debtor must also be valued for "best interest" analysis as well. Appearance is required.

Chapter 13

#8.00 Confirmation Of Chapter 13 Plan
(cont'd from 11-18-20)

Docket 10

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/16/20:

Debtor must address Trustee's concerns. This case appears to be dragging and as warned last time, more continuances should not be expected.

Appearance: required

Tentative for 11/18/20:

The Trustee and MAMAD correctly observe that on the secured claim maturing before the term of the plan, merely curing arrearages is unavailable but rather the whole of the claim must be paid. This also raises big feasibility questions. Also, the plan does not provide for all creditors as observed by the Trustee.

Appearance required.

Tentative for 10/21/20:

The proper amount of arrearages on the MAMAD claim must be given in the plan. Other deficiencies as noted by the trustee must also be met.

Appearance is required.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the motion of Judgment Creditor, Placentia Development Company, LLC ("PDC") to dismiss Bridgemark Corporation, LLC's ("Debtor's") Chapter 11 case pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1112(b) and/or motion for relief from the automatic stay pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §362 (action in nonbankruptcy forum). The motion is opposed by Debtor. No other party has filed any responsive papers.

1. Basic Background Facts

Debtor filed its Petition on January 14, 2020. PDC is the primary creditor owed approximately $42.5 million on account of a state court judgment entered after years of litigation over Debtor's unauthorized use of PDC's land for purposes of extracting oil. Debtor's principal, Robert J. Hall, testified under oath that the company does not have the ability to pay the judgment debt because Debtor's business involves a finite resource of constantly diminishing value. Debtor's second largest non-insider creditor is owed less than $25,000, and all of Debtor's other debts combined add up, at most, to a few hundred thousand. PDC reports that it is offering to acquire all such legitimate, non-insider debts at par. In other words, the judgment owed to PDC accounts for approximately 99.8% of the estate's debt. There do not appear to be any other debts listed as disputed, contingent, or unliquidated. The authorizing resolution appended to Debtor's Petition admits that the purpose of this chapter 11 filing is to allow Debtor a stay pending appeal because the Debtor (and one presumes, its principals) cannot afford a supersedeas bond. During the punitive damages portion of the state court trial this testimony was elicited:

"We cannot pay the 27 million We have no ability to pay any of this. ... I don't care how you do it. There's just no way around that. We don't have the ability to pay it and operate a business. It's done."
Trial Tr. (Ex. B to Kibler Declaration) at 3125:9-13."

Mr. Hall also testified that at best, Bridgemark might theoretically be able to pay the $27 million in compensatory damages at $1 million per year, interest-free, over 27 years. See Id. at 3156:20-23 ["We can't pay it. ... If they would let us pay a million dollars a year for 27 years with no interest, we might be able to work it out."] But as Mr. Hall also testified, Bridgemark is built on "an asset that's declining in value every year.... It just goes down and down and down." Id. at 3113:8-12.

By prior motion the court was informed that Debtor will attempt post judgment motions to reduce the judgment and/or obtain a new trial. No information is provided as to the status of any of those.

The court is also informed that PDC has filed a state court lawsuit against members of the Hall family, who are 100% equity holders of Debtor, alleging, among other things, that the Halls used Debtor as a vehicle to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars to affiliated entities in the form of "management fees" or "consulting fees," which the affiliated entities then – through non-arms' length "loans" to the Halls – used to purchase multi-million-dollar homes, extravagant cars and furnishings, valuable pieces of art, and luxury yachts for personal use and benefit.

Chapter 11

2. Motion to Dismiss & Relief from Stay Standards

Section 1112(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides:

"[O]n request of a party in interest, and after notice and a hearing, the court shall convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 or dismiss a case under this chapter, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate, for cause unless the court determines that the appointment under section 1104(a) of a trustee or an examiner is in the best interests of creditors and the estate."

The statute includes a non-exhaustive list of certain types of "cause," including "substantial or continuing loss to or diminution of the estate and the absence of a reasonable likelihood of rehabilitation," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(A), and "gross mismanagement of the estate," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(B).

Similarly, section 362(d) provides that "[o]n request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, the court shall grant relief from the stay provided under subsection (a) of this section ... for cause," and also provides the non-exhaustive example of "lack of adequate protection."

Given the non-exhaustive nature of "cause" referenced in both sections of the Code, courts have read the term "cause" to include bankruptcy filings that are not appropriate invocations of federal bankruptcy jurisdiction – such as filings in which the avowed purpose of the bankruptcy petition is to avoid posting an appellate bond, or where the petition seeks merely to move what is essentially a two-party dispute from a state court to a federal bankruptcy court. As a matter of shorthand, the case law interpreting §§362(d)(1) and 1112(b) often refer to these types of cause as dismissals for "bad faith" or for lack of "good faith." See generally Marsch v. Marsch (In re Marsch), 36 F.3d 825, 828 (9th Cir. 1994) [employing this terminology, but cautioning that it is misleading: "While the case law refers to these dismissals as dismissals for 'bad faith' filing, it is probably more accurate in light of the precise language of section 1112(b) to call them dismissals 'for cause.']. Thus, the shorthand phrase "good faith" (which does not appear in the statute) does not turn on an inquiry into subjective motivations, thoughts, or feelings. Instead, the question is whether a particular bankruptcy filing transgresses "several, distinct equitable limitations that courts have placed on Chapter 11 filings" in order to "deter filings that seek to achieve objectives outside the legitimate scope of the bankruptcy laws." Id.

In this context, whether there is "cause" for dismissal or relief from stay "depends on an amalgam of factors and not upon a specific fact." In re Mense, 509 B.R. 269, 277 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2014). Four pertinent factors include whether the debtor has unsecured creditors, cash flow, or sources of income to sustain a feasible plan of reorganization, and whether the case is "essentially a two-party dispute capable of prompt adjudication in state court." In re St. Paul Self Storage Ltd. P'ship, 185 B.R. 580, 582–83 (9th Cir. BAP 1995). Courts are particularly suspicious of filings in which the express purpose of the chapter 11 petition is to stay execution of a judgment without an appellate bond. See e.g., In re Integrated Telecom Express, Inc., 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004) ("[I]f there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court."). In such cases, courts consider some or all of the following factors to determine whether bankruptcy jurisdiction is being properly invoked:

- "Whether the debtor had financial problems on the petition date, other than the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor has relatively few unsecured creditors, other than the holder of the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor intends to pursue an effective reorganization within a reasonable period of time, or whether the debtor is unwilling or unable to propose a meaningful plan until the conclusion of the

- "Whether assets of the estate are being diminished by the combined ongoing expenses of the debtor, the chapter 11 proceedings, and prosecution of the appeal." In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 280 (footnotes and citations omitted).

"The bankruptcy court is not required to find that each factor is satisfied or even to weigh each factor equally. Rather, the ... factors are simply tools that the bankruptcy court employs in considering the totality of the circumstances." In re Prometheus Health Imaging, Inc., 2015 WL 6719804, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Nov. 2, 2015) (citations, internal quotation marks, and brackets omitted). Indeed, "[a] bankruptcy court may find one factor dispositive or may find bad faith even if none of the factors are present." In re Greenberg, 2017 WL 3816042, at *5 (9th Cir. BAP Aug. 31, 2017) (citing Mahmood v. Khatib (In re Mahmood), 2017 WL 1032569, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Mar. 17, 2017)).

3. Was Debtor's Petition Filed for a Proper Purpose?

PDC argues that Debtor's petition is a textbook bad faith filing. In support PDC cites In re Integrated Telecom Express, 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004), where the court stated bluntly: "if there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay provision to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court." PDC also cites In re Casey, 198 B.R. 910, 917–18 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1996) for the proposition that the "use [of] bankruptcy to defeat the state law appeal bond requirement" is not a "legitimate bankruptcy purpose."

In response Debtor argues that at least some courts have held that a chapter 11 filing can properly substitute for posting an appeal bond. For example, Debtor cites Marshall v. Marshall (In re Marshall), 721 F.3d 1032,

1048 (9th Cir. 2013) where the court found:

Here, unlike in Marsch and Boynton, the record suggests that Howard and Ilene's liquid assets were probably insufficient to satisfy the judgment or cover the cost of a supersedeas bond. The bankruptcy court found that the Fraud Judgment amounted to over $12 million plus interest, that the "custom" in Texas was to set appeal bonds at 150% of the judgment, and that Howard did not have sufficient liquid assets to post a bond of that size. Although the record does not invariably indicate that the Debtors could not finance a supersedeas bond, we cannot say that the bankruptcy court's determination was clearly erroneous. Moreover, notwithstanding their ability to finance a bond, Howard and Ilene's inclusion of the Fraud Judgment in their initial Plan suggests that they filed their bankruptcy petition for the proper purpose of reorganization, not as a mere ploy to avoid posting the bond.

Debtor argues that the language quoted above, and others expressing similar sentiment, is applicable to our case. Debtor also points out that it is not attempting to avoid posting an appeal bond, it simply cannot do so, which Debtor argues is a critical distinction.

PDC argues that the cases cited by Defendant must be viewed according to their unique factual context, rather than relying solely on the ultimate result. For example, PDC points out that in Marshall, the judgment creditor who moved to dismiss the case as a bad faith filing had already missed the claims bar date (which was November 15, 2002) when he filed the motion to dismiss (on December 13, 2002). See In re Marshall, 298 B.R. 670, 674 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2003). At the time the motion to dismiss was filed, the debtors had already proposed a plan that would pay every other creditor with timely claims in full. Id. It was in this context that the Circuit court held that the bankruptcy court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to dismiss for bad faith. Indeed, the Marshall Circuit court stated, "we agree with the bankruptcy court that '[p]erhaps the most compelling grounds for denying

a motion to dismiss grounded on bad faith is the determination that a reorganization plan qualifies for confirmation." Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681)). PDC persuasively argues that it would be inappropriate to infer a broader rule from Marshall. PDC argues with some persuasion that the other cases cited by Debtor were ones in which the courts based their holdings on the unique circumstances before them and did not articulate rules of general applicability.

Similarly, on the relief of stay question, Debtor's citation to In re Badax, LLC, 608 B.R. 730 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2019), also appears to be misplaced. Debtor takes a small section of the opinion where the court stated that the conclusion of bad faith was not based solely on the debtor's failure to obtain a bond, but rather based on a totality of the circumstances. Id. at 741. However, PDC points out that the Badax court specifically held that relief from stay was granted because the case had been filed in an attempt to delay execution on an adverse judgment and also because "there [was] no basis to conclude that a speedy, efficient and feasible reorganization [was] realistic." Id.

In contrast PDC argues that the instant case is more similar in substance to several other cases including Windscheffel v. Montebello Unified School District (In re Windscheffel), 2017 WL 1371294 (9th Cir. BAP Apr. 3, 2017). In Windscheffel, the debtor filed an appeal of an approximately $3 million state court judgment, but "claimed that he was unable to post the required supersedeas bond to stay enforcement of the judgment." Id. at *1. "He filed bankruptcy to avoid posting the bond and to stay [the judgment creditor's] collection efforts." Id. The debtor had, at most, four unsecured creditors (including the judgment creditor). The debtor filed a proposed chapter 11 plan that was "a thinly veiled attempt to avoid the state court's award of punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest because it proposed to pay 49.22 percent of [the judgment creditor's] claim, which was (not coincidentally) the approximate amount of the state court judgment without punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest." Id. The debtor later amended his plan to provide that if the judgment were upheld on appeal, he would liquidate his assets and give the proceeds to the judgment creditor. Id. The Ninth Circuit BAP affirmed the bankruptcy court's holding that the "totality of the circumstances" warranted dismissal of the case for cause. Id. at *4.

PDC argues that Debtor has admitted in the authorizing resolution attached to its Petition that this case was filed to circumvent the requirement to post a supersedeas bond: "Since the Company lacks the financial resources to post a bond, the only way to protect the interests of all stakeholders [i.e., the Hall family] is to commence a case under chapter 11" Docket No. 1 at PDF page 5 of 101. PDC also points to the First Day Declaration, and specifically the section entitled "Events Leading to the Bankruptcy" which only mentions the judgment debt, and really nothing else, as the major cause of the bankruptcy filing. Therefore, PDC argues with some persuasion that it is obvious that the only purpose served by filing the Chapter 11 petition was to attempt to avoid the posting of an appeal bond. After all, Debtor's entire business model as amplified in Mr. Hall's testimony is built upon extracting a finite and irreplaceable resource, which might be said to make a reorganization over time inherently less feasible than other businesses.

PDC next argues that because the dispute is solely between PDC and Debtor, for purposes of a finding of bad faith, this case is fundamentally a two-party dispute, which is continuing even now. PDC cites In re Murray, 543 B.R. 484, 494–95 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016), aff'd, 565 B.R. 527 (S.D.N.Y. 2017), aff'd, 900 F.3d 53 (2d Cir. 2018), for the proposition that, "Bankruptcy is a collective remedy, with the original purpose – which continues to this day – to address the needs and concerns of creditors with competing demands to debtors' limited assets" As such, PDC argues, "[a] chapter 11 reorganization case has been filed in bad faith when it is an apparent two-party dispute that can be resolved outside of the Bankruptcy Court's jurisdiction." Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC v. Sholes (In re Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC), 2011 WL 4502102, at *10 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. Aug. 26,

PDC argues that there is no need for the "collective remedy" of bankruptcy as articulated above because there are no other creditors with competing demands to Debtor's assets. All other claims against Debtor are de minimis relative to the Judgment, and also appear to be undisputed. Cf. In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 (dismissing chapter 11 case where debtors had "few unsecured creditors" other than judgment creditor); In re Windscheffel, 2017 WL 1371294, at *5 (affirming dismissal of case where claims of other unsecured creditors were "negligible" compared to judgment creditor's claim). In fact, if the judgment debt did not exist, it appears Debtor would have more than sufficient cash on hand to pay any other outstanding debts without difficulty. See First Day Decl. ¶¶ 22 (stating that Debtor has unrestricted cash of approximately $4.2 million) & 28–30 (describing secured car loans, royalty obligations, and accounts payable totaling less than $700,000). PDC reminds the court that it also offers to acquire all legitimate, non-insider claims at par value, leaving no reason that such creditors cannot be paid in full.

Finally, PDC argues, citing In re Chu, 253 B.R. 92, 95 (S.D. Cal. 2000) that for purposes of a finding of bad faith, Debtor's prepetition improper conduct provides additional support for dismissing the case outright or granting relief of stay. Thus, use of a debtor's assets to fund the expenses of its principals is one factor indicative of bad faith. See, e.g., In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 n.26. PDC argues that Debtor's alleged tortious prepetition conduct, which precipitated the underlying lawsuit that ultimately led to the judgment (which included punitive damages), should be considered by the court. The court should also consider the allegations contained in the litigation PDC has pending against the Hall family, which alleges that family members essentially used Debtor as a piggy bank to mask income from Debtor.

Though perhaps not always perfect analogues, it appears that PDC's characterization of Ninth Circuit jurisprudence is more in line with the current case than those cases cited by Debtor. To be clear, the court is less concerned with Debtor's heated rhetoric impugning PDC's motivation in pursuing this motion (and PDC's allegations of post-petition misconduct by the Debtor and the Hall family) than it is with PDC's arguments that a reorganization is likely not feasible due to the enormous judgment debt and Debtor's ever diminishing product source. The court is also not impressed with Debtor's assertion that allowing PDC to collect on its judgment would amount necessarily to a business fatality. First, it is far from clear that PDC wants to "kill" the Debtor as it would seem far more logical to continue operations, at least until the judgment is paid. Perhaps not so clear is why the Hall family should get to stay in authority. Debtor's principals, as the trial court found, are responsible for this misfortune as indicated by the addition of punitive damages to the judgment.

The court also disagrees with Debtor's premise that simply because Debtor is currently operating a viable business, a successful reorganization is realistic. Even Debtor's authorities suggesting a Chapter 11 to avoid an appeal bond may serve a legitimate purpose do so largely because a reorganization benefitting an array of creditors with divergent interests seemed possible or even likely. See e.g. Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048-49 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681), citing Marsch, 36 F. 3d at 828 and In re Boynton, 184 B.R. 580, 581, 583 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1995). But little or no effort is made here to show how this Debtor can possibly confirm a non-consensual plan under these circumstances, where 99+% of the debt is in hostile hands. This must particularly be so where PDC has offered to make all other creditors whole either by buying the claims or by filing a competing plan. How does Debtor get away with claiming an impaired consenting class in those circumstances, even if separate classification maneuvers could succeed? Adding to this problem is Mr. Hall's admission that the assets are a diminishing resource, thus calling into question the feasibility of a long-term payout. Debtor may cite to 11 U.S.C. §1129 (c) which requires the court, when two plans are confirmable, to consider the interests of equity. But this assumes that Debtor's plan could in any event be confirmable, a somewhat dubious proposition. A plan that proposes nothing more than delay while the appeals are resolved should be regarded as "dead on arrival."

But the court is willing to give the Debtor a short but reasonable extension to answer these questions about just how probable a reorganization is or can be despite these obstacles. In this the court is uninterested in platitudes; rather, a point by point, connect the dots proposal to reorganization that could be plausibly crammed down is what is needed. Further, PDC may also amplify the record with a more complete evidentiary showing which might support a charge of prepetition fraud or mismanagement as discussed at §§1104(a)(1) (or implicated in 1112) thereby strengthening the argument that there is no legitimate reason for maintaining management. Debtor should not expect an extension of exclusivity, however, which will run out on or about May 14, 2020.

Continue hearing about 60 days to allow Debtor to explain how reorganization is feasible in these circumstances.
