Chapter 7

#8.00 Motion To Reopen Chapter 7 Case For Violation Of The Discharge (28 USC Section 1930)

Docket 23

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/7/20:

This is the Debtor's motion to reopen her Chapter 7 case pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §350(b). Debtor alleges that two creditors, Storage Center of Valencia (Valencia) and The Santa Paula Storage Place (Santa Paula), violated the automatic stay by selling or attempting to sell her storage units and/or items contained in storage units in or around September of 2019. As of this writing, only one of these creditors, Santa Paula, has filed an opposition.

Debtor asserts that Valencia has been attempting to collect on storage bills that were covered by the Debtor's discharge obtained in November of 2019. Debtor also asserts that Santa Paula sold items of Debtor's cherished personal property contained within a storage unit while the automatic stay was in effect (in or around September of 2019).

Reopening a chapter 7 case is governed by 11 U.S.C. §350(b), which provides: "A case may be reopened in the court in which such case was closed to administer assets, to accord relief to the debtor, or for other cause." But there are some problems with this motion as currently drafted. First, the motion itself is extremely thin, containing only a short, handwritten recounting of alleged events. Second, the motion is devoid of any evidentiary support. This is important because Santa Paula's main opposition to the motion is premised on the argument that Santa Paula never rented a storage unit to Debtor, and, therefore, never held anything that could be considered property of the estate or of the debtor. Santa Paula does note that it rented storage space to a Gloria Lewis (Lewis), a person with whom Debtor may have a relationship. However, the rental agreement between Santa Paula and Lewis makes explicit that Lewis was to use the rented storage unit to store only her personal property, not the property of any other person. The rental agreement also expressly prohibited assigning or subletting the storage unit to another. Santa Paula notes that Lewis became delinquent on her rental payments and eventually, after failed attempts to contact Lewis to arrange payments, Santa Paula auctioned off the contents of the storage unit on September 30, 2019. The court does not pre-judge whether there was or was not some property of the estate within the auctioned items protected by the stay as the recounted events all happened after the petition was filed July 31, 2019.

Santa Paula argues that, even if Debtor were able to show that some of the items auctioned actually belonged to her, Santa Paula had a perfected, pre-petition statutory lien on the contents of the storage unit pursuant to California Business and Professions Code §21700-21716. In short, Santa Paula argues that the case should not be reopened as to it because there is no "cause" to reopen a case where the result would be futile. See In re Killmer, 501 B.R. 208, 211 (Bankr. SD NY 2013); In re Pennington-Thurman, 499 B.R. 329, 332 (8th Cir. BAP 2013) (granting motion to reopen based on lender's violation of discharge injunction would be futile where lender was not attempting to hold debtor personally liable for discharged debt); see also Redmond v. Fifth Third Bank, 624 F.3d 793, 799 (7th Cir. 2010) (closed bankruptcy proceeding should not be reopened where doing so would be futile and a waste of judicial resources). Rather, Santa Paula believes this motion is being brought in bad faith in order to extract an unwarranted settlement from Santa Paula.

It is difficult to assess whether there exists cause to reopen this case without some evidentiary support in her motion. The situation is not helped by the fact that Debtor is proceeding in pro se. Debtor is encouraged to obtain counsel if she is serious about pursuing her claims against the two creditors, or at the very least, to resubmit this motion with any relevant documentation she may possess that substantiates the allegations made in this motion. interest would be any substantiation that it is the Debtor who is the customer of Valencia, for example, or, if Ms. Lewis is the customer of Santa Paula, as it alleges, how a stay would nevertheless have arisen regarding certain items within that storage unit and/or how Santa Paula should have known that. Also, the claim of statutory warehouseman's lien should also be addressed.

Valencia has not filed an opposition to this motion despite being (apparently) properly noticed and served. The reason for Valencia's failure to oppose is unknown. However, this failure does appear to give Debtor at least some ground to stand on, especially if she can come forward with evidentiary support for her claims against Valencia that would warrant reopening the case. Refinement of the motion as against Santa Paula as discussed above would also seem to be in order. Finally, as there is an alleged violation of the automatic stay, the U.S. Trustee's Office should probably be given notice of such a renewed motion as well.

Docket 247

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/7/20:

This is the Trustee's motion for approval of a sale, free and clear of liens, of certain intellectual property assets of the estate to the Unofficial Committee of Ultimate Brands Franchisees Cooperative Trust ("Buyer") under §363(f). The motion is supported by the Unofficial Committee of Franchisees, including the former potential purchaser, John-Michael Stern, and has received consent of the blanket lienholder, 660 BVD, LLC. The motion is again opposed by franchisees/creditors William and Monica Harter and Help the One, Inc. who are also apparently joined by Michael John Patterson and Wheatstrong Enterprises (collectively "Opponents"). The reader should also review the memorandum on calendar item #14 which discusses the settlement because many of the issues overlap.

Trustee seeks an order that provides that:

1. The Motion is granted;
2. The Trustee is authorized to sell the Purchased Assets listed in Schedule A to the APA attached to the Marshack Declaration as Exhibit "1" to the Buyer outside the ordinary course of business under 11 U.S.C. § 363(b);
3. The sale is free and clear of all liens, claims, and interests pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §363(f), after consideration of the objections (if any) to fund the $155,000 cash component of the proposed sale prior to the hearing on December 17, 2019 (hearing now Jan. 7). The Buyer duly funded the $155,000 cash component, which is being held in a segregated account by the Trustee. Paragraph 15 of the APA provides that the sole condition precedent to the effectiveness of the sale is "Bankruptcy Court approval of this Agreement and the Sale Motion... provided, however that, if the Court approves the Agreement without approving the compromise and settlement provided for in paragraphs 5-11, the Agreement shall take effect except with respect to those paragraphs."

1. Standards for Approving A Sale

Section 363(b) provides that after notice and a hearing, a trustee may sell property of the estate out of the ordinary course of business. Courts have held that in order to approve a sale, a court must find that the trustee demonstrates a valid business justification, and that the sale is in the best interest of the estate. In re 240 North Brand Partners, Ltd., 200 B.R. 653 (9th Cir. BAP 1996); In re Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. 830, 841-42 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991). A sale is in the best interest of the estate when it is fair and reasonable, it has been given adequate marketing, it has been advertised and negotiated in good faith, the purchaser is proceeding in good faith, and it is an arm's length transaction. In re Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. at 841. The Wilde Horse court goes on to explain that good faith encompasses fair value and further speaks to the integrity of the transaction. Bad faith would include collusion between the seller and buyer or any attempt to take unfair advantage of any potential purchasers. Id. at 842.

2. The Sale Should Be Approved

Trustee argues that if this sale is not consummated, he will have no choice but to issue a "no-asset report." This court has already remarked that this is a melting ice cube and has opined that in situations such as this, a sale, which garners at least something for creditors, is probably better than the alternative. Since the last hearing on December 17, 2019, a few of the noted deficiencies have apparently been remedied. The identity of the Buyer has become clear. The blanket lienholder, 660 BVD, LLC has given its conditional consent to the sale pursuant to a stipulation with Trustee (See Dkt. 295). The marketing efforts have also become clearer since the last hearing. As the court understands, Trustee had a couple of potentially interested buyers, including John-Michael Stern. However, as noted in detail in the motion and supporting declarations, the potential buyers all had specific circumstances and requirements that would have needed to be in place before any serious negotiations would begin in earnest. These requirements proved infeasible for a multitude of reasons, which caused the interested buyers and Trustee to mutually abandon a potential sale of all Debtor's assets. Instead, Buyer made an offer to purchase only certain intellectual property assets for the sum of $155,000, outbidding Mr. Stern. It should be noted that Mr. Stern filed a declaration in support of the sale motion detailing why his initial soft bid of $750,000 proved to be unworkable. (See Dkt. 294)

Buyer seeks a §363(m) good faith determination, based on the details of the bidding and negotiations process outlined in the Graff and Stern declarations (See Dkt. 293 and 294 respectively), which Buyer asserts demonstrates the absence of collusion between Buyer and Trustee or any unfair advantage. Furthermore, Buyer asserts that the negotiations to purchase Debtor's assets began in earnest back in October and were not yet finalized when the initial hearing on the motion occurred, but Trustee and Buyer did not want to rush the negotiations. Both Buyer and Trustee were represented by independent counsel during the negotiations. Therefore, Trustee and Buyer have likely done enough to demonstrate both their mutual good faith and that the sale was negotiated at arms' length.

Trustee and Buyer also assert that the purchase price of $155,000 likely exceeds the fair market value of assets to be sold. In support of this assertion, Buyer points out that the Debtor's franchise model is fatally flawed and was the product of fraud from the outset. This is shown, according to Buyer, by the fact that even though Debtor charged unaffordable royalties while providing inadequate services to the franchisees, Debtor still could not sustain its franchise business. This fact alone, Buyer asserts, makes the IP nearly valueless to a non-franchisee third party. Therefore, the only parties that would have any interest in the assets would be those who are already invested in the franchise business. Therefore, it is not surprising that the only real interested came from Buyer and another Franchisee, Mr. Stern.

The Opponents believe that this motion should be denied due to fear that a sale may extinguish any potential claims or rights they may have, especially concerning a right to challenge the pre-petition assignment of UFI's Franchise Agreements to Debtor, which the Opponents believe was an avoidable fraudulent conveyance. The Opponents also take issue with the alleged low level of detail and evidentiary support provided by Trustee in the motion. Further, Opponents argue that the motion fails to demonstrate sufficient marketing efforts and/or evidence that proper measures were taken to market the assets. The objections are largely quite like those in the opposition to the compromise motion.

Trustee argues that, with respect to the Opponents' assertion that they have a viable fraudulent conveyance action, there is no Ninth Circuit case which holds that this is a sufficient interest in property to which an unliquidated, unsecured fraudulent conveyance action may attach and survive a bankruptcy sale or even implicate the provisions of §363(f). Trustee asserts that he is selling the equivalent of a quitclaim to the Buyer, and makes no representation, guarantee, or warranty as to the Debtor's right in the Purchased Assets. Trustee further argues that because he is essentially quitclaiming the Estate's interest in such assets to the Buyer, any opposition to the sale as to the Trustee compromising or selling third parties' rights is unwarranted and unmeritorious; the Trustee cannot and is not selling something that the Estate does not own.

Regarding the potential fraudulent transfer action, Trustee points out that under 11 U.S.C. §363(p)(2), any objecting creditor has the burden of proving the extent of their validity, priority, or extent of any claimed interest in the specific assets subject to the Trustee's proposed sale. Trustee also cites In re Kellogg-Taxe, 2014 Bankr. LEXIS 1033 at *22 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2014); accord, SEC v. Capital Cove Bancorp LLC, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 174856 at *15-16 (C.D. Cal. 2015) for the proposition that where a free and clear sale is proposed under 11 U.S.C. § 363(f)(4), "[t]he parties must provide some factual grounds to show some objective basis for the dispute." Further, Trustee cites In re QDOS, Inc., 591 B.R. 843, 848-50 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2018), (rev'd on procedural grounds by Hayden v. QDOS, Inc. (In re QDOS, Inc.), 607 B.R. 338 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2019)) for the proposition that "'a partially disputed claim is a disputed claim' is not only true, it is necessarily true." Trustee notes that the only asserted interest by the Opponents is the possibility that they might be able to prevail in a later fraudulent conveyance action against UFI and the Debtor (to the Trustee's and the court's knowledge, no such action is underway), and they seek to preserve their rights in the Purchased Assets or the Royalty Component. This being the case, Trustee concludes that these unliquidated, unsecured, contingent hypothetical judgment creditors have no interest in the Purchased Assets or the Royalty Component which survives the proposed sale. Opponents analysis could only make any sense if viewed as an attachment, which is not before the court.

Given the specific circumstances of this case and the case law cited above, it is inappropriate to hold up a sale, which seems increasingly necessary, because a minority of creditors might want to bring an action at a later time. Also, nothing in the Opponents' claims amounts to an interest in the assets to be sold which could or should hold up a sale.

3. Waiver of the 14-day Stay

Trustee and the Buyer both request that the court waive the 14-day stay imposed by FRBP 6004(h) to give a sense of reassurance and finality to these proceedings. Trustee cites Collier On Bankruptcy ¶ 6004.11 (16th ed. 2019) for the proposition that "if an objection [to the sale] has been filed and is overruled, the court should eliminate or reduce the 14-day stay period only upon a showing that there is a sufficient business need to close the transaction within the 14-day period and the interests of the objecting party, taking into account the likelihood of success on appeal, are sufficiently protected."

As noted, 660 BVD, LLC's objection seems to have been mollified through stipulation, and so long as the conditions outlined in that stipulation are observed, there is little likelihood that 660 BVD would lodge an appeal were this motion to be granted. As noted above, Opponents may very well attempt to appeal this motion if it is granted despite the relative weakness of their opposition, which makes the likelihood of success on that appeal uncertain at best. However, balancing the likelihood of a successful appeal against the melting ice cube problem immediately before the court, granting a waiver of the 14-day stay is likely appropriate. In sum, the Trustee has no alternative to this sale and the filing of a "no asset report" benefits no one.

Chapter 7

Tentative for 12/17/19:

This is the Trustee's motion for approval of a sale, free and clear of liens, of substantially all the assets of the estate under §363(f). As originally noticed in the November 26 motion, neither the proposed buyer nor the price was given. The buyer(s) were only identified as "two interested parties." The Trustee freely admitted that as of his motion no sale agreement had yet been reached. The motion was initially opposed by franchisees/creditors William and Monica Harter and Help the One, Inc. and then by Michael John Patterson and Wheatstrong Enterprises. Some of the uncertainty was clarified only in the trustee's "Reply" filed December 10. In the Reply it develops that the proposed price is $155,000 and, if a proposed Settlement and Asset Purchase Agreement is in fact approved after a Rule 9019 motion, a discounted payment to the estate of accrued royalties (approximately $95,444) and a rejection of the affected franchise agreements. The parties are still not clearly identified except as an "Unofficial Committee of Ultimate Brand Franchisees" and a "Cooperative Trust" comprised of unnamed members of the franchisee group (there is a "Schedule D" list following which one supposes are the members although this is never stated). Approval of the purchase and Settlement Agreement is made a precondition as to only the $155,000 portion of the price. The Trustee requests not only a Rule 6004 waiver but a finding of §363(m) good faith as well. The secured creditor 660 BVD, LLC filed an "objection" on December 12 and requests a continuance.

The Trustee argues that unless the Debtor's business operations are transferred to an interested party who is willing to pay fair value for such operations before December 20, 2019, the value of the estate is likely to be negatively impacted because the franchisees will no longer receive any support from the Trustee (upon the lapse of authorization to operate) and therefore will likely de-brand or shut down entirely.

Section 363(b) provides that after notice and a hearing, a trustee may sell property of the estate out of the ordinary course of business. Courts have held that in order to approve a sale, a court must find that the trustee demonstrates a valid business justification, and that the sale is in the best interest of the estate. In re 240 North Brand Partners, Ltd., 200 B.R. 653 (9th Cir. BAP 1996); In re Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. 830, 841-42 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991). A sale is in the best interest of the estate when it is fair and reasonable, it has been given adequate marketing, it has been advertised and negotiated in good faith, the purchaser is proceeding in good faith, and it is an arm's length transaction. Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. at 841. The Wilde Horse court goes on to explain that good faith encompasses fair value and further speaks to the integrity of the transaction. Bad faith would include collusion between the seller and buyer or any attempt to take unfair advantage of any potential purchasers. Id. at 842. Moreover, the Trustee seeks to sell free of liens under §363(f), arguing, apparently, that all of the liens are subject to bona fide dispute, presumably including 660 BVD's. The Trustee does not include a lien by lien analysis, so the argument is murky at best.

To say the least, this is an unusual motion. As the opposition strenuously argues, and Trustee, along with his joining parties, tacitly admit, the motion fails to comply with numerous provisions of the local rules governing the sale of assets (See LBR 6004-1(c)(3)). But, they argue, there is strong necessity that should justify cutting whatever corners need to be cut in order to get to some money. Alternatively, citing Morrissey Construction Co. v. Gantes (In re Gantes), 2016 Bankr. LEXIS 920 at *22 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2016), the Trustee argues that non-compliance with the rules does not affect any substantive right of the objectors and so the court can disregard non-compliance.

The opponents also raise concerns about what will happen to their claims, which allege that the transfer by assignment of Ultimate Franchise, Inc.'s (UFI's) assets to Debtor on the eve of bankruptcy was a fraudulent conveyance, making the assignment invalid. The opponents are concerned that the sale could potentially cutoff their ability to pursue the fraudulent transfer claim. In addition to the above procedural infirmities, objecting creditor, 660 BVD points out that the Trustee has only disclosed a potential buyer (Purchasing Franchisees) in his Reply. Further, the assets to be sold are not all of Debtor's assets, but rather certain intellectual property and accompanying rights of the company, that would, in effect, allow the purchasers to "poach" Debtor's franchise business without incurring any of the obligations of existing franchise agreements. The Reply also makes mention of a settlement agreement, which is an essential component of the proposed sale, but the settlement agreement has not been approved by this court pursuant to Rule 9019. 660 BVD also argues that there is reason to doubt that any purported auction would proceed in good faith and be truly open as there is evidence that a prior potential buyer, a Mr. Jean Michel Stern, attempted to purchase the Debtor's assets for $750,000 in or around August of 2019, but the Purchasing Franchisees reportedly used their leverage as both interested buyers, and as a contract counterparty to resist and chill a deal with Mr. Stern. The Purchasing Franchisees then reportedly entered a deal purchasing selected assets for a much lower price than the $750,000 offered by Mr. Stern (but which is apparently not the deal at bar?).

The opponents also argue that the sale does not appear to be supported by a valid business purpose aside from getting a sale finalized before the alleged doomsday of December 20, which is the deadline to assume or reject executory contracts. The opposition argues that, regarding the December 20 deadline that Trustee mentions in his business justification, it is absolutely clear that the January 31, 2020 date that the Trustee requested in the Operation Motion was shortened to December 20, 2019 only because of the purported "deal" between the Trustee and the Committee, and only at the insistence of counsel for the Trustee and the Committee. Rather than the court setting the purported December 20, 2019 deadline on its own and insisting that it remain in place at all costs, the court simply acquiesced to a request by the Trustee's counsel to move the January 31, 2020 date to December 20, 2019, or so the argument goes. The opposition is quick to point out that the purported "deal" never materialized. As such, and in the absence of that purported "deal," there is, apparently, no reason for the December 20, 2019 "deadline" to remain in place at this time.

Lastly, the opponents argue that the facts related above demonstrate that the sale is not proceeding in good faith pursuant to §363(m). As a remedy, the opposition seeks a continuance to allow the court to fully understand the scope of the sale, choose whether to approve the settlement agreement, and allow the Trustee to bring this motion in line with the various requirements of the LBRs and the Bankruptcy Code.

Regarding a good faith determination, Trustee acknowledges the concerns raised by the opposition and the policy behind §363(m), but argues, citing no authority, that failing to obtain a good faith determination prior to the sale is not cause to deny this motion. Instead, Trustee argues that, because the sale will be in the form of a public auction, a request for a good faith determination can be filed after the sale when the buyer is known. Trustee also argues that a waiver of the 14-day stay imposed by FRBP 6004(h) is warranted because the Committee, currently operating over two dozen 18|8 franchises, seeks certainty regarding the license and use of certain intellectual property assets in connection with their businesses. If the 14-day stay of FRBP 6004(h) is not waived in connection with this sale of all the estate's interest in certain assets, argues the Trustee, the 18|8 franchisees are likely to close their own franchises given the continuing uncertainty of who owns what asset.

Normally, the court is very deferential to the Trustee's business judgment, but not here. The Trustee can also be forgiven some of the apparent panic in trying to rush through what amounts to a sale of substantially all assets free of liens on effectively only 10 days' notice. He apparently believes that December 20 is an impenetrable barrier, after which there will be nothing left to sell. But such a panicked rush is not the only or even the preferred remedy. On a complicated, contentious, multi-part motion involving requests for an order under §363(f) free of liens, a finding of good faith and waiver of the Rule 6004 stay, the time pressure is real but vastly exaggerated, while the due process concerns are also profound and not adequately addressed. The court sees no reason not to extend both the sale, deadline to assume or reject and the operating authority until this matter can be heard on more regular notice in January. It's not as if this were a simple motion or the timetable were quite as dire as predicted. Rather, the better part of valor is to continue this sale to coincide with the Rule 9019 motion. The moving parts have been much better defined by now and that will afford more reasonable due process.

However, the objectors must also realize that this estate apparently lacks viable alternatives and so the court will have to be convinced why a less than ideal sale is not still better than nothing at that time.

#14.00 Motion To Approve Compromise With Unofficial Committee Of Ultimate Brands Franchisees Regarding Royalty Payments

Docket 277

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/7/20:

This is the Chapter 7 Trustee, Richard Marshack's ("Trustee's") motion to approve compromise agreement between the Estate and certain members of the unofficial committee of Ultimate Brands franchisees ("Settling Franchisees") pursuant to FRBP 9019. This memorandum addresses issues intimately related to the sale motion also on calendar (#13) and so should be read in conjunction with the memorandum on that motion. Trustee requests the following relief:

1. Approving the compromise set forth in paragraphs 5-11 of the Asset Purchase Agreement ("APA") attached as Exhibit 1 to the Marshack Declaration ("Agreement" or "Settlement Agreement");
2. Authorizing the Trustee to provide the releases specified in the Agreement;
3. Authorizing the Trustee to execute any other documents which may be necessary to consummate the Agreement.

The motion is opposed by creditors William Harter, Monica Harter, and Help the One, Inc. ("Creditors"). Creditors are joined by Michael John Patterson and Wheatstrong Enterprises. The essential terms of the compromise, as summarized by Trustee, are as follows:

"The Settling Franchisees waive any challenge that the prepetition assignment of their franchise agreements from Ultimate Franchises, Inc. ("UFI") was in any way invalid, and agree to settle and compromise their post-petition royalty obligations at a reduced rate of 3.5% in exchange for a waiver of any other defense or right to offset based on the Settling Franchisees' vigorous assertions of pre- and post-petition breaches of their franchise agreements by the Debtor. Under the terms of the proposed compromises, the Trustee expects to receive approximately $95,000 in otherwise disputed royalty payments, where the Settling Franchisees' defenses to payment would be prohibitively costly and time-consuming to litigate, and where the likelihood of success in such litigation is greatly uncertain." (Trustee's Motion, p. 2)

The 9th Circuit has recognized in Martin v. Kane (In re A&C Properties), 784 F.2d 1377 (9th Cir. 1986), cert denied, 479 U.S. 854 (1986), that bankruptcy courts have wide discretion in approving compromises. In approving the compromise, the court must find that the compromise is fair and equitable and that the negotiations were conducted in good faith. In doing so, the court must consider:

1. Probability of success in litigation;
2. Difficulties in collection;
3. Complexity and expense of litigation;
4. Best interest of creditors.

Each of the A&C Properties factors are met here for the reasons explained below:

1. Probability of Success

Trustee argues that if he attempted to collect any amount of post-petition royalties from the Settling Franchisees, the Settling Franchisees have advised that they would assert defenses to payment such as alleged pre-petition and post-petition defaults in the franchisor's obligations under the franchise agreements. Further, Trustee notes that a number of franchisees have previously sued the Debtor, UFI, and the individuals involved with the 18|8 business seeking rescission of their franchise agreements based on legal and equitable theories – essentially, that they were unlawfully induced to enter into franchise agreements and therefore the agreements should be cancelled. There are also issues related to a certain "Marketing Fee" in the franchise agreements that would likely be the subject of litigation. Trustee also notes that it is possible that the Settling Franchisees would assert defenses under the California Franchise Relations Act ("CFRA"), Cal. Bus. &

Profs. Code §§ 20000 et seq., which provides in pertinent part that bankruptcy by "the business to which the franchise relates" is an express statutory justification for termination without an opportunity to cure. See Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 20021(a). For these and other reasons, Trustee believes that any litigation between the Estate and the Settling Franchisees would be heavily fact-intensive and likely protracted, making the success of litigation uncertain at best. By contrast, Trustee argues that by settling, the Estate will avoid the costs and other difficulties likely to abound in the event of litigation.

Creditors argue that Trustee has not satisfactorily demonstrated that this prong weighs in favor of approving the Settlement Agreement. For example, Creditors point out that Trustee's assessment of the outcome of potential litigation is inadequately supported by evidence beyond his own declaration, making his prognosis speculative at best. Creditors also point out that the Settlement Agreement would still not resolve the issue of whether the "purported assignment" was valid.

Trustee, in reply, argues that Creditor's assertions make Trustee's arguments stronger. Trustee points out that by arguing that Trustee did not have a legal right to enter into the Agreement with the Settling Franchisees, Creditors are casting doubt on Trustee's ability to collect on the royalties owed under the franchise agreements, which makes success in the litigation that much less likely. In response to Creditors' concerns over insufficient detail provided in Trustee's assessment, Trustee persuasively cites Burton v. Ulrich (In re Schmitt), 215 B.R. 417, 425 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1997) where the Burton court stated:

A compromise should not be approved where key facts relevant to a cause of action are not revealed. An approval of a compromise, absent a sufficient factual foundation, inherently constitutes an abuse of discretion. On the other hand, in determining whether to propose a compromise, a trustee need not burden the estate with costs and expenses arising out of all manner of questions that may be presented for litigation. (Internal citations and quotation marks omitted)

Trustee argues, citing the above language, that he is not required to provide exhaustive detail or to mock up hypothetical arguments and litigate against himself in the context of a proposed settlement and compromise. This does appear to be what Creditors are arguing Trustee must do, but they do not provide any support for that argument. This factor weighs in favor of approving the compromise because Creditors have not raised sufficient factual or authoritative arguments that warrant overriding the Trustee's judgment.

2. Difficulties in Collection

Trustee argues that, in the event of successful litigation, collection efforts might well be hampered by the Settling Franchisees simply choosing to shutter their doors and cease operating, which would likely mean that the Estate would ultimately collect little or nothing on any judgments obtained. In fact, Trustee asserts that several Settling Franchisees are insolvent and nearly on the brink of filing their own bankruptcy petitions. This fact also calls into question the ability of the Estate to collect on any judgment obtained through litigation. Trustee also argues that since each Settling Franchisee owes at most approximately $20,000 to the Estate, the costs of collections are likely therefore to exceed the collectible amount, or at least nearly so. Creditors' again argue that Trustee's motion is inadequately supported by evidence. For example, Creditors argue that Trustee is simply asserting, without substantiation, that several of the Settling Franchisees are insolvent, or nearly so, without providing any admissible proof of those assertions. However, Trustee's assertions are supported by the Unofficial Committee of Franchisees and specifically by the Declaration of Austin Graff, a member of that committee. It is unrealistic to expect a forensic analysis of collectability before any compromise of litigation, particularly, as here, where the Estate has so few resources to work with. The court is satisfied that the Trustee has properly weighed this issue, which supports the compromise.

3. Complexity and Expense of Litigation

Trustee argues that the litigation, as noted above, could potentially be quite complex as it is likely to be highly fact intensive, requiring intense scrutiny of the franchise agreements. Also, as noted above, there is an open question of law as to whether the California Franchise Investment Law ("CFIL") applies to the operation of a franchise as opposed to a sale of a franchise to a franchisee by a franchisor. Trustee further points out that the objecting parties in this case have argued that the

Trustee could not operate the Debtor's business or operate as a franchisor under California's franchise statutes. Trustee notes that neither the Debtor nor the Trustee were registered with the California Department of Business Oversight to operate as a franchisor of 18|8 franchises, and the lack of registration poses another complex legal question as to whether the Debtor's operation was even subject to CFIL. All these questions regarding CFIL arise, Trustee asserts, because there was a contested prepetition assignment of all of the rights of UFI (which is a registered franchisor) to the Debtor (which is not), another issue which the Trustee would have to litigate as the fiduciary for the Debtor and not for UFI. Lastly, Trustee points out that the litigation is further complicated by the fact that the Settling Franchisees are in no fewer than 15 states, and, therefore, litigation may implicate diverse and possibly conflicting matters of state law governing the sale and operation of a franchise.

Creditors argue that the sale, which is the subject of the Settlement Agreement, may actually be illegal. Creditors argue that the Trustee does not have the legal right to enter into the Settlement Agreement with respect to the Franchise Agreements because the Franchise Agreements, and the claims and rights related thereto, are not assets of the Estate, and are therefore not subject to the Trustee's administration of the Estate. In response to Trustee's assertion that the multitude of state laws makes litigation more uncertain and complex, Creditors argue that this consideration also weighs against approving the Settlement Agreement. This is because, Creditors argue, the subject matter of the Agreement may not comply with the laws of one of more of those states.

But in reply, Trustee persuasively argues that the legal questions raised by Creditors actually make the case for approving the Settlement Agreement that much stronger because it demonstrates how hotly contested the litigation would likely be. It is not clear why Creditors opine that the sale is illegal and that the Franchise Agreements are not property of the Estate. If this is so, then the Trustee will likely have nothing to collect upon, which would mean litigation is nearly certain to end in failure from the Trustee's and Estate's point of view, making the "better than nothing" argument. If the probability of success in litigation is low or nil, does that not favor approving the Settlement Agreement to improve the chances that the Estate's creditors get something?

4. Best Interests of Creditors

Chapter 7

As Trustee argues, this settlement would avoid complex and potentially costly litigation, the outcome of which, even if Trustee were successful, would likely not benefit creditors of the Estate for the reasons discussed above. By contrast, the Settlement would guarantee at least some recovery for creditors of the Estate. Trustee believes that this is the best and probably the only good outcome for all parties involved.

Creditors strenuously disagree. Creditors believe the Trustee is leaving far too much money on the table by accepting only $95,000 when, Creditors argue, that the exhibits to the Settlement Agreement appear to evidence approximately $770,000 in outstanding pre and post-petition royalties owed by the Settling Franchisees. But this argument is misleading. Just because a gross recovery in a perfect world seems comparatively large, this does not relieve the necessity for analyzing the costs and probability of getting there.

In any case, the court is obliged to consider the best interests of all creditors, not simply those of a minority of dissenting creditors. If this settlement is as problematic as Creditors make it out to be, and if it really is not in the best interest of creditors of the Estate, the court wonders why more creditors have not joined the opposition to this motion. The court is mindful that, assuming Creditors' estimation of the royalties owed is accurate, it does appear that Trustee is leaving a good deal of money on the table. However, the court is not convinced that, were the Trustee to seek remedy via litigation, any of that money would ever make its way back to the creditors of the Estate. Rather, like fairy gold, the court is convinced by the arguments made by both sides that litigation costs would be substantial and might even eclipse the value of the royalties. Further, pursuing litigation would impose lengthy delays on creditors' ability to be paid. That is assuming a positive outcome, over which, as noted, both Trustee and Creditors seem to harbor serious doubts.

The court generally defers to the judgment of the Trustee when it comes to matters regarding benefit to the estate. In re Roger, 393 F.Supp.3d 940, 960 (C.D. Cal. 2019). Moreover, as a practical matter, the Estate lacks the resources to wage such a litigation campaign in any event. Therefore, the court must evaluate not only the potential upside of a complete recovery, but also how the potentially huge costs of getting to such a recovery will be paid. No lawyer has come forward suggesting that he or she is willing to invest such a potentially large amount in such a contingency exercise that might last years.

5. Other Arguments

Creditors' lengthy opposition spends surprisingly little time opposing the Trustee's analysis of the A&C Properties factors, instead electing to attack the Settlement Agreement mainly on grounds that too much money is left on the table and asserting that Trustee does not have the legal right to bargain away certain rights and claims. Creditors obviously perused the Agreement and have pointed to several purported evidentiary and legal deficiencies. Creditors are also greatly concerned that if the Agreement is approved, it would possibly have the effect of extinguishing their claims and rights related to the Franchise Agreements, and could also cap the value of their claims and rights related to the Franchise Agreements at the amount of the Settlement Agreement.

But Creditors' opposition is long on rhetoric but critically short on authority. Creditors want to substitute their own business judgment for that of the Trustee's, and not necessarily in the interest of the rank and file of creditors. Creditors offer no evidence that there is any current hope of reaching a more favorable settlement or obtaining more net favorable judgments through litigation. Trustee even credibly calls into question Creditors' standing to bring this opposition mainly on grounds that their purported injury is more speculative than concrete. However, giving Creditors the benefit of the doubt as to their standing, Creditors' arguments suffer from the very lack of evidence and authority upon which they base major portions of their opposition. In some cases, evidence that directly undercuts their position exists in the record. For example, Creditors again mention a past potential sale to John-Michael Stern, arguing that there was, at one time, a possibility of selling Debtor's assets for $750,000. However, as Mr. Stern himself, in his declaration in support of Trustee's sale motion, makes clear, the offer to purchase Debtor's assets was never formalized due to multiple factors including Mr. Stern's loss of confidence that Debtor's assets were worth anywhere near $750,000. (See dkt. #294, p. 2-4). To the extent Creditors are relying on the deal that never was with Mr. Stern, that reliance appears to be badly misplaced. To be fair, this declaration was filed a few days after Creditors filed their opposition. Although not clear, Creditors might be arguing based on authorities such as Moore v. Bay that any right they might have to fraudulent conveyance litigation against parties involved in the assignment from UFI is being compromised. But the court has previously indicated, and the Trustee reiterates, that no such compromise of third-party rights is intended here.

In sum, the Trustee sits atop a "melting ice cube" and has sufficiently shown that the Settlement Agreement is the best likely result for the Estate available under these circumstances.

Trustee asserts that Mr. Griffiths has been unwilling to comply with the court's order and now sees no alternative but coercive measures to secure Mr. Griffith's cooperation.

Under 11 U.S.C. §105(a), a bankruptcy court has the authority to "issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title." Mr. Griffiths does not dispute that he, in his capacity as Debtor's former president, is the representative for Debtor and, as such, assumes the duties of ensuring compliance in the bankruptcy process. Mr. Griffiths also does not dispute that he did not timely comply with the court's August 29 order. However, a few considerations warrant staying the sword, at least for now. First, Mr. Griffiths argues that he has not intentionally ignored any court order. Mr. Griffiths states that over the last couple of months he has been dealing with significant personal issues related to the terminal illness of a close friend. Mr. Griffiths maintains that while dealing with this personal issue, he always made himself available via cell phone while he was away from Orange County. Obviously, Mr. Griffiths has a duty to proactively cooperate and participate in the bankruptcy process rather than simply waiting for someone to contact him. However, the court is sympathetic to Mr. Griffith's explanation for his failure to comply with the order. A terminal illness can make something like a corporate bankruptcy proceeding dim in consequence by comparison. This is likely just enough to provide a fair ground for doubt as to the alleged wrongfulness of Mr. Griffith's conduct pursuant to Taggart.

Second, Mr. Griffiths has engaged his own bankruptcy counsel to help guide him through the process and ensure that he complies with both Trustee and this court's orders going forward.

Third, Mr. Griffiths states that on October 22, 2019, he attended the Debtor's continued section 341(a) hearing where he was questioned by Trustee and his counsel regarding his duties as Debtor's former president. On or about that same day, Mr. Griffiths reportedly provided the following financial and operational documents to Trustee:

- i) Franchise Transfer Agreement;

- ii) Trademark Assignment and Notice of Recordation of Trademark Assignment;
- iii) Various 2018 and 2019 payroll and sales tax documents;
- iv) Debtor's 2015, 2016, and 2017 Federal and State Tax Returns;
- v) Lien notices for facilities where Debtor's equipment and business records are stored.

Mr. Griffiths also reportedly furnished contact information for the Debtor's CPA, Vice-President of Operations, franchise counsel, and other information related to Debtor's operations. Mr. Griffith's declaration appears to evidence a genuine commitment to complying with the requirements of the bankruptcy process. Mr. Griffiths has also taken remedial measures to ensure that he furnishes the information necessary for Trustee to perform his duties. However, should any further credible allegations of noncompliance or misconduct on Mr. Griffith's part arise during the administration of this case, this court would not withhold the sword a second time, absent an extremely compelling explanation. Therefore, Mr. Griffiths will be given a brief grace period to furnish any and all documents not yet produced to come fully compliant with the court's order. The court will continue this hearing for an appropriate interval so that compliance can be evaluated.

No order will issue at this time pending a further hearing in approximately 60 days.

#2.00 Debtor's Disclosure Statement Describing Chapter 11 Plan Of Reorganization

Docket 64

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/8/20:

This is debtor's motion for approval of disclosure statement as required under §1125(a)(1) as containing "adequate information." An adequacy finding is opposed in oppositions filed by both the UST and Seacoast Commerce Bank. The oppositions are both well taken, and the points raised need not be restated at elaborate length here. The court is primarily concerned about the following fundamental deficiencies:

1. The plan clearly violates the absolute priority rule found at §1129(b)(2) (B)(ii). The plan proposes only 1% to unsecured creditors in installments yet the principals retain governance and stock ownership. Seacoast, which itself may be the largest unsecured creditor, plans to vote against. No new value is mentioned. So, unless something else is true this plan is patently unconfirmable, and distribution of a disclosure statement on such a plan is a waste of time and resources. While the court does not usually prejudge confirmation issues, this one is too fundamental to ignore, and so either amendment or at least explanation is required;
2. The proposed treatment of Seacoast's secured claim is also very problematic. Debtor proposes either to cramdown a payment over 30 years at 5% or a "consensual sale" of the underlying real estate collateral. But the timing and conditions of the proposed sale are unstated, not made subject to conditions and are, thus, illusory. Can the debtor sell whenever it feels like it? Whenever in future it thinks the market has appreciated enough, even if that takes years, or never? The alternative treatment is also a non-starter. An effective

100% loan to value claim is far riskier than a more conventional loan usually made as a percentage of value. Consequently, the increased risk element must be accommodated (paid for), and anything less is a legally impermissible imposition of the risk upon the lender. See In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Although this is usually a confirmation issue, 5% is far too low for a commercial loan under any reasonable economic analysis, i.e. prime rate is 4.75% and must be "built up" from there even under a Till analysis. North Valley Mall is not the only analysis relied upon by courts, but this court happens to believe it is the most appropriate in a business, real estate context. Therefore, the court will not approve dissemination of disclosure upon such a patently unconfirmable plan.

3. Feasibility is very questionable. Again, normally this is judged at confirmation, but the court does not ignore that the MORS show a generally declining cash position, and this is while there has been a 9-month moratorium in debt payments. Had even reduced payments been made the debtor would be by now out of money. What, if anything, is expected to change this outlook?

#3.00 Chapter 7 Trustee's Motion For Order Approving Settlement Agreement Pursuant To Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9019 (cont'd from 12-19-19)

Docket 302

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/9/20:
Same.

Tentative for 11/21/19:

This is the Trustee's motion for approval of a compromise under FRBP 9019 between the estate and Robert B. Grant and Betty L. Lockhart-Grant (collectively "Grant"). The motion is opposed by Pacific Western Bank ("PWB").

1. Background Facts

In or about June 2006, Debtor and her now deceased husband John A. Haretakis borrowed the original principal amount of $500,000.00 from PWB (the "Loan"). Ultimately, Debtor defaulted on the Loan in November 2010. Despite demand, Debtor failed to cure the defaults. Accordingly, on May 27, 2011, PWB filed its complaint against Haretakis for Breach of Promissory Note and Common Count (the "Complaint"). From June 2011 until September 2016, the Debtor and her now deceased husband were allegedly true owners of real property located at 36575 Calle Puerta Bonita, Temecula, California 92592 ("Temecula Property"), which was purchased by Grant, their longtime friend and business associate, who also acts as the accountant for the Debtor's family business. The Temecula Property was purchased by Grant in order to facilitate the financing of the purchase through a loan in the amount of $480,000. Debtor paid Grant $140,000 toward the purchase of the Temecula Property and reimbursed Grant, on a monthly basis, for mortgage, insurance and tax payments he made relating to the Temecula Property. In other words, it looks like the Grants facilitated the Haretakis in what could be characterized as a fraudulent conveyance designed to hinder, delay and defraud creditors, particularly PWB.

Based on the Complaint, on August 12, 2012, PWB obtained and holds a final, non-appealable judgment against Debtor in the original principal amount of $474,593.91. On October 5, 2012, PWB recorded its Abstract of Judgment in the Records of the County of Riverside. PWB then recorded an Amended Abstract of Judgment on December 4, 2012. PWB alleges that because the Temecula Property was titled in the Grants' name, however, PWB's abstracts did not reflect on official records with respect to Debtor's interest in the Temecula Property. As to why PWB did not attempt to record a notice of lis pendens under a fraudulent conveyance action does not appear in the record.

In May 2016, Grant transferred the Temecula Property to Matthew Haretakis ("Matthew"), Debtor's son. Debtor continued to live at the Temecula Property until it was sold in September of 2016. Of the proceeds of the sale (net $520,000), $211,500 went toward purchasing a new property located at 2665 Orange Vale Lane, Riverside, California ("Riverside Property"), which was purchased in Matthew's name. The sale proceeds were also used for various other purposes, including, allegedly, a new car for Debtor's daughter, and furniture and appliances for the Riverside Property. The remaining price balance of approximately $113,000 was paid by Matthew to the Debtor and deposited in the Debtor's DIP account shortly before the Petition Date. One day prior to the Petition Date, Matthew transferred the Riverside Property to Debtor, apparently so she could claim a homestead. The Debtor had resided in the Riverside Property since its purchase and as with the Temecula Property testified that she was always the true owner of the Riverside Property and had paid mortgage, insurance and tax payments relating to the Riverside Property.

Chapter 7

On or about March 5, 2018, PWB filed a verified complaint against Grant, among others, alleging fraudulent transfer claims pursuant to California Civil Code §§ 3439.04 and 3439.05, conspiracy to fraudulently transfer property, and conversion, with the Orange County Superior Court, Case No. 30-2018-00977446-CU-OR-CJC ("State Court Action"). In the State Court Action PWB alleges that Debtor was the true owner and resident of the Temecula Property that was allegedly transferred to Grant for the purpose of defrauding creditors. As a result of the bankruptcy filing, the claims asserted in the State Court Action are derivative and thus constitute property of the estate under authorities such as Moore v. Bay, 284 U.S. 4 (1931).

On May 30, 2019, the Trustee filed his Motion for Order Authorizing Abandonment of Property Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 554 ("Abandonment Motion") wherein the Trustee abandoned any potential claims against Matthew in connection with the Temecula Property or the Riverside Property as burdensome and of inconsequential value to the Estate. The Abandonment Motion was granted by order entered on July 16, 2019.

2. The Settlement Agreement

Trustee asserts that he and Grant have discussed the merits of any potential claims the estate might have against Grant. After analyzing the possible claim(s), Trustee decided that settling for a sum certain was in the best interests of the estate and the estate's creditors. The essential terms of the settlement are as follows:

- Grant will pay to the Trustee, for the benefit of the Estate, the sum of $12,000 ("Settlement Payment") in full and final settlement and disposition of the Potential Claims, subject to approval by the Bankruptcy Court and disposition of overbids pursuant to the terms to be approved by the Bankruptcy Court. The Trustee in his sole discretion will determine the parameters

 - o Be financially qualified, in the Trustee's exercise of his sound business judgment, to close the sale;
 - o Submit an offer without closing contingencies;
 - o Submit the offer by no later than 4:00 p.m. (PST) one business day before the hearing on the Motion (the "Overbid Deadline") which is currently set for November 12, 2019 at 11:00 a.m. In his absolute and sole discretion, the Trustee shall have the right to accept additional overbids submitted prior to the hearing but after the Overbid Deadline;
 - o If a qualifying overbid is received, the Trustee will conduct an auction at the hearing on the Motion;
 - o At the conclusion of the auction, the Trustee shall decide, subject to Court approval, which of the bids is the best bid, and such bid shall be deemed to be the "Successful Bid." The bidder who is accepted by the Trustee as the successful bidder (the "Successful Bidder") must pay all amounts reflected in the Successful Bid in cash at the closing of the sale.

The 9th Circuit in Martin v. Kane (In re A&C Properties), 784 F.2d 1377 (9th Cir. 1986), cert denied, 479 U.S. 854 (1986). recognized that bankruptcy courts have wide discretion in approving compromises. In approving the compromise, the court must find that the compromise is fair and equitable and that the negotiations was conducted in good faith. In doing so, the court must consider:

1. Probability of success in litigation;
2. Difficulties in collection;
3. Complexity and expense of litigation;
4. Best interest of creditors.

Although the court is to consider the range of results in litigation, "the court's assessment does not require resolution of issues, but only their identification, so that the reasonableness of the settlement may be evaluated." In re Hermitage Inn, Inc., 66 B.R. 71, 72 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1986). In ruling on a proposed compromise, a bankruptcy court should give substantial weight to the trustee's views as to the merits of the compromise and settlement and should not substitute its own judgment for that of the trustee. See In re Blair, 538 F.2d 849, 851 (9th Cir. 1976). Nor does the court need to conduct an extensive investigation into the merits of the claims that the parties seek to settle. See In re Walsh Const., Inc., 669 F.2d 1325, 1328 (9th Cir. 1982).

As an alternative, Trustee asserts that this motion should be granted pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §363(b), which empowers a trustee to "use, sell or lease . . . other than in the ordinary course of business, property of the estate." In considering a proposed transaction to use, sell, or lease, courts look at whether the transaction is in the best interests of the estate based on the facts and history of the case. In re American West Airlines, 166 B.R. 908, 912 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1994) (citing In re Lionel Corp., 722 F.2d 1063, 1071 (2d

In approving any sale outside the ordinary course of business, the court must not only articulate a sufficient business reason for the sale, it must further find it is in the best interest of the estate, i.e., it is fair and reasonable, that it has been given adequate marketing, that it has been negotiated and proposed in good faith, that the purchaser is proceeding in good faith and that it is an 'arms-length' transaction. In re Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. at 841. A bankruptcy court's power to authorize a sale under § 363(b) is reviewed for abuse of discretion. In re Walter, 83 B.R. 14, 19 (9th Cir. B.A.P. 1988).

4. PWB's Objections

PWB objects to the proposed settlement agreement mainly because, in its view, the Settlement Agreement is not fair or equitable to PWB, who was not included in the settlement negotiations. In PWB's view, Grant acted a straw purchaser for Debtor in order to hinder, delay, and defraud PWB in connection with PWB's legitimate debt recovery and judgment enforcement efforts. Specifically, PWB asserts that Debtor's ownership interests in real property subject to PWB's abstract of judgment lien were concealed by the Grants' taking title in their names, although Debtor was acknowledged as the true owner, and then transferring title to Matthew, debtor's son. The purpose of these transactions, PWB asserts, was so that the Debtor would have no interest of record for PWB (or other creditors) to pursue.

PWB suggests that its objection to the settlement agreement should be sustained and the motion denied because, as the estate's largest creditor, PWB should be allowed to prosecute the insider claims it believes it has against Grant because there would be no risk to the estate. PWB notes that the applicable statute of limitations is approaching on these potential claims. PWB also argues that judicial economy is served by allowing it to pursue the insider claims because PWB is already pursuing an objection to Debtor's claimed Homestead exemption and is also pursuing a discharge objection. Therefore, as those other two actions are based on the same core of operative facts, the additional time and expense involved in litigating the insider claims against Grant would be minimal.

5. The Factors Favor Approving The Compromise

For clarity, it should be noted that this compromise is to include claims only between the estate and Grant, although under the Moore v. Bay doctrine it may in effect extinguish the claim of PWB as well. Trustee asserts that after a diligent review of the possible claims the estate might have against Grant, which included analyzing nearly 1,000 pages of documents supplied by Grant relating the Temecula Property transaction, Trustee believes that moving forward with claims against Grant would likely be unsuccessful.

Trustee admits that a fraudulent transfer action of the sort presented by this case is not an especially complex undertaking. However, as noted above, it would still be a labor-intensive matter to adjudicate, which would drive up the administrative costs to the estate beyond any likely recovery in the event of a favorable outcome. Trustee also notes that Grant did not receive any remunerative benefit from the Temecula Property transaction, only the satisfaction of helping a friend and business partner. Furthermore, Trustee points out that Debtor and Grant appear to have engaged counsel to negotiate and document the transaction, which Trustee suggests, is not consistent with attempts to secretly defraud creditors.

But, as noted, based on the surrounding facts known to Trustee, Trustee believes an action against Grant would be unsuccessful. Therefore, Trustee persuasively argues that it is in the best interests of the estate and its creditors to take the $12,000 offered in the settlement without expending any more time or money pursuing these possible claims. Also, Trustee asserts that other than pending litigation between the Trustee and PWB, the approval of the Agreement would finalize the liquidation of the estate's assets.

PWB's objection seems to miss a couple of crucial considerations. First, PWB is essentially demanding that Trustee be forced to relinquish $12,000 in guaranteed money for estate creditors in favor of allowing PWB to pursue claims against Grant, which, in Trustee's opinion, are uncertain but likely to end in failure. Were that to occur, the Estate would end up with nothing when it could have had at least $12,000 to disburse among the Estate's creditors, modest though that sum may be. Therefore, it is not true that allowing PWB to pursue the insider claims against Grant comes at "zero" risk to the Estate. Trustee also points out that PWB would likely be seeking attorney's fees as an administrative claim which, if it happens that PWB is successful but recovers only incrementally modest damages, the attorney's fees incurred could possibly exceed the net. In any case, it is a risk Trustee believes is not worth taking.

Second, assuming PWB pursued the insider claims against Grant, PWB gives no indication of how much, approximately, those claims would yield if PWB succeeded. Obviously, PWB believes these claims are worth more than $12,000, but how much more is left uncertain. One can probably safely assume that PWB estimates that the claims are worth a great deal more than $12,000, but then one wonders why PWB chose not to simply purchase the claims pursuant to the overbid procedures? That way, the Estate would be guaranteed to receive whatever PWB's accepted overbid was (and possibly an override percentage as is usual), and PWB would be able to pursue what it believes are potentially lucrative claims. That would have struck the appropriate balance of equity and fairness. After all, Trustee's mandate is to, in his judgment, act in the best interests of all creditors, not just the largest. However, as the date to submit an overbid has passed (Nov. 12), and PWB apparently did not put in a bid, one can only reasonably conclude that PWB was uncertain as to the outcome and chose not to make even this minimal ($13k) investment, but rather to impose all of the risk upon the estate. Also, the court notes that the homestead exemption objection has not yet been determined, and depending on those results, the ultimate dividend may not be known at this point. Perhaps the Trustee has concluded that considering all avenues this is the most cost-efficient means to test the fraud theories discussed herein.

1. Undisputed Facts

It does not appear the following facts are in material dispute. The Debtor Skin Care Solutions, LLC ("Debtor"), incorporated under the laws of Nevada. On or about March 18, 2015, Histogen Aesthetics, LLC ("Histogen" or "Debtor's predecessor in interest") executed a promissory note in favor of Defendant in the principal sum of $150,000. Defendant was an insider of Histogen as she was the principal in a related entity, Histogen, Inc. The note memorialized the terms and conditions of what Defendant characterizes as a personal loan to Histogen, which gave Defendant a first priority security interest in certain of Histogen's property, including accounts receivable and Histogen's products. On March 31, 2016, Defendant perfected her security interest in the collateral by filing a UCC Financing Statement with the Secretary of State for the State of California. The Trustee questions whether this was truly a loan; instead, he characterizes this as an equity buyout in favor of Defendant as Histogen's principal. For reasons explained below, it is not necessary to resolve that question at this time.

On or about May 6, 2016, Histogen and Defendant entered into an "Amendment of Promissory Note," ("Amendment") which increased the principal to include the initial principal sum of $150,000 together with all interest accrued since execution of the original note until the execution of the amended note. The amended note further provided Defendant with first priority security interest on all future receivables including gross sales of Histogen or a successor company and a first priority security interest in all inventory of Histogen or a successor company. Defendant also secured her interest in the amended note by filing another UCC Financing Statement. Also, on May 6, 2016, Defendant resigned both as a member and manager of Histogen pursuant to a separate settlement agreement with Histogen. Debtor and Histogen merged on November 23, 2016, with Debtor being the surviving company.

On December 21, 2016, Defendant filed suit against Debtor and Histogen for Breach of Contract, Enforcement of Lien, Conversion, and injunction because Debtor failed to make payments under the terms of the Amendment. Defendant also sued Costco solely for the purpose of enjoining them from selling Defendant's collateral. On December 30, 2016 Defendant foreclosed on her security interest by purchasing the collateral at a noticed public sale pursuant to the California Uniform Commercial Code. Defendant then caused Debtor and Histogen to be served with the "Transfer Statement and Certification of Title."

On February 15, 2017, Defendant's Ex Parte Application for a TRO and OSC was heard and granted. Debtor and Defendant then entered into a stipulated agreement effectuating a permanent injunction, which directed: "DEFENDANTS HISTOGEN AESTHETICS, LLC AND SKIN CARE SOLUTIONS, LLC shall be and hereby are restrained and enjoined from receiving moneys from any such transfer, sale or disposal [of] that certain inventory[.]" This stipulation for injunction made up a Partial Settlement Agreement. The recitals to the Partial Settlement Agreement further directed:

C. The promissory note was secured by all receivables due Histogen through the preparation of a UCC Financing Statement that [was] filed with the Secretary of State of the State of California.

F. The Amendment also provided further collateral for the loan by the preparation and filing of another UCC Financing Statement. The additional collateral included a lien against all inventory owned by Histogen, among which was all GFP Power Serum XP and, in addition, to "all future receivables, including but not limited to gross sales of Maker (Defendants Histogen and Skin Care)" from the sale of same.

Pursuant to the stipulation of both Debtor and its predecessor in interest, Costco tendered the sale's proceeds of the inventory on which Defendant had previously foreclosed directly to her. To that end, Costco issued a check to Defendant's counsel for $95,884.28 on June 5, 2017 and a second check for $22,415.45 on or about July 11, 2017.

Debtor's Chapter 7 petition date was January 9, 2018.

2. Summary Judgment Standards

FRBP 7056 makes FRCP 56 applicable in bankruptcy proceedings. Rule 56(c) provides that judgment shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Rule 56(e) provides that supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein, and that sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit shall be attached thereto or served forthwith. FRCP 56(e) further provides that when a motion is made and supported as required, an adverse party may not rest upon mere allegations or denials but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. FRCP 56(f) provides that if the opposing party cannot present facts essential to justify its opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or continue the motion as is just.

A party seeking summary judgment bears the initial responsibility of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of material fact, and establishing that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law as to those matters upon which it has the burden of proof. Celotex Corporation v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 2553 (1986); British Airways Board v. Boeing Co., 585 F.2d 946, 951 (9th Cir. 1978). The opposing party must make an affirmative showing on all matters placed in issue by the motion as to which it has the burden of proof at trial. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324. The substantive law will identify which facts are material. Only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2510 (1986). A factual dispute is genuine where the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party. Id. The court must view the evidence presented on the motion in the light most favorable to the opposing party. Id. If reasonable minds could differ on the inferences to be drawn from those facts, summary judgment should be denied. Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 157, 90 S. Ct. 1598, 1608 (1970).

3. Preferential Transfers?

Trustee seeks to avoid the payment made by Costco to Defendant under the theory that they constitute avoidable preferential transfers pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §547(b), which statute provides in pertinent part:

"the trustee may, based on reasonable due diligence in the circumstances of the case and taking into account a party's known or reasonably knowable affirmative defenses under subsection (c), avoid any transfer of an interest of the debtor in property—

- (1) to or for the benefit of a creditor;
- (2) for or on account of an antecedent debt owed by the debtor before such transfer was made;
- (3) made while the debtor was insolvent;
- (4) made—
 - (A) on or within 90 days before the date of the filing of the petition; or
 - (B) between ninety days and one year before the date of the filing of the petition, if such creditor at the time of such transfer was an insider;

and

(5) that enables such creditor to receive more than such creditor would receive if—

(A) the case were a case under chapter 7 of this title;

(B) the transfer had not been made; and

(C) such creditor received payment of such debt to the extent provided by the provisions of this title."

Defendant persuasively argues that Trustee's theory of preferential transfer must fail as a matter of law for several reasons. First, it is necessary to identify which transfers are being attacked. The Trustee cannot attack the granting of the security interest or perfecting of same as preferences because those events all occurred in May of 2016, which is manifestly before the preference period, regardless of whether Defendant is an insider. There is no dispute that the transfers from Costco to Defendant occurred well outside the 90 days from the petition date (January 9, 2018) as they occurred in June and July of 2017. That leaves only the one-year lookback period for an insider under §547(b)(4)(B), which is what Trustee seems to argue applies here. Defendant disputes that she was ever an insider of Debtor, but for the sake of argument, Defendant argues that it would not matter if she had been. As the statute plainly states, the transferee must have been an insider at the time of the transfers. Defendant resigned her purported insider position in May of 2016, and the transfers did not take place until June and July of 2017, more than a year after Defendant ceased to be a purported insider of Debtor.

But even assuming arguendo there are disputed facts concerning those questions, Trustee still loses because he cannot fulfill element §547(b)(5), i.e. the transfer enables the transferee to do better than she would in a hypothetical Chapter 7 absent the transfer. If Defendant was a secured creditor, as she appears to have been, and was merely paid with proceeds of her own collateral, by reason of the Costco transfers, she does no better than she would have done as a secured creditor in Chapter 7. See Sloan v. Zions First Nat'l Bank, N.A. (in Re Castletons, Inc.), 154 B.R. 574, 579 (D. Utah 1992) ("Because all prior payments to Zions were from proceeds of its own collateral, and all proceeds from the hypothetical liquidation under a 547(b)(5) would go to Zions because of its perfected, pre-preference period liens, no payments to Zions diminished the bankruptcy estate."); See generally: Deel Rent-A-Car, Inc. v. Levine 721 F.2d 750, 756 (11th Cir. 1983) for discussion of "Diminution of Estate Doctrine."

Trustee argues that Defendant was likely a "non-statutory insider," well within 1 year of the transfers. Trustee argues that Defendant's loan for which the promissory note was issued, was actually a disguised equity investment, and not a loan. Therefore, Trustee argues that Defendant was an equity holder rather than simply a creditor. Further, Trustee asserts that Defendant was a member, and manager of Debtor and exercised a degree of control over Debtor such that she was able to require a buyout of her equity interests, and only after that was accomplished did she withdraw from Debtor. All of this might be true but for purposes of preference analysis, it does not matter if she was also a secured creditor as of the date of the transfer.

It is worth noting, as Defendant does, that Trustee offers very little in the way of actual evidence to support this cause of action, and particularly Defendant's status as both an actual and/or non-statutory insider. This is important for at least three reasons. First, lack of supporting evidence is something of a theme throughout Trustee's opposition to this motion, and one would expect Trustee to have considerable evidence to support his arguments given that nearly 18 months has passed since the filing of the initial complaint in this adversary proceeding. Second, this is a cause of action under which Trustee would have the burden of proof at trial, and under Celotex, he is required to support his arguments with evidence. But thirdly, and most importantly, if the security interest and perfection of same is invulnerable from a preference standpoint because those events predate the preference period (even the one year extended period) then nothing comprised of a transfer later of her own collateral can have worked a preference because of §547(b)(5).

4. Fraudulent Transfers?

Trustee argues, as an alternate theory, that the transfers from Costco to Defendant constitute avoidable fraudulent conveyances (constructive and intentional) under 11 U.S.C. §548 and Cal. Civ. Code §3439, which are similar in form and substance. "Both bankruptcy law and California law define a transfer that is constructively fraudulent, in essence, as one for which the debtor does not received reasonably equivalent value and which is made when the debtor is insolvent or which renders the debtor insolvent. 11 U.S.C. § 548(b); Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.05." Kendall v. Turner (In re Turner) 335 B.R. 140, 145 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2000).

Defendant argues that there can be no fraudulent conveyance of either the constructive or intentional sort because Trustee has again failed to produce evidence of Debtor's insolvency at the time of the transfers or that Debtor became insolvent due to the transfers. On this cause of action, Trustee points to Debtor's schedules where it shows that Debtor had $414,097.80 in assets and $397,560.61 in liabilities. At first glance, this would seem to show that Debtor was solvent on the petition date. However, Trustee argues that the assets listed in the schedules were actually worthless. In support of this assertion, Trustee cites to the Trustee's motion for order abandoning the estate's interest, if any, in personal property, filed a couple of months after the petition date. (See Dkt. #16 in main bk case). In that motion, Trustee sought to abandon, among other things, skin care products and kits valued at $0. These assets were listed in Debtor's Schedule A/B as being worth in excess of $400,000. The motion to abandon was granted by this court without opposition on April 18, 2018. (See Dkt. #19 in main bk case). Trustee argues that the only other major pre-petition assets truly were the Costco receivables. While all of this looks like disputed facts, upon closer analysis it ends up making little difference.

Again, Trustee ignores the statutory language. Insolvency is measured at the time of the transfers, which was June and July of 2017. The remaining inventory assets were deemed valueless by Trustee well after the transfers occurred. Trustee has not presented evidence that demonstrates that Debtor was insolvent at the time of the transfers or became insolvent due to the transfers. These elements are critical to the finding of a fraudulent conveyance and would certainly be Trustee's burden to prove at trial, and therefore under Celotex, this is an important factor supporting the motion.

But even if the Costco transfers left the debtor insolvent, that is only half of what must be proven by the Trustee. Trustee must also prove for a constructively fraudulent conveyance that less than reasonable consideration was received in exchange for the transfer. Defendant cites Carello v. Stern (In re Grail Semiconductor), 2017 Bankr. LEXIS 1182, *1, *21 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2017), where the court explained that in order to avoid a purportedly fraudulent transfer, the Trustee must demonstrate that the Debtor received less than reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer. The Carello court continued:

For purposes of the fraudulent transfer statutes, value includes satisfaction of a present or antecedent debt of the debtor . . . § 548(d) (2) (A); Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.03. Under this definition [§ 548(d) (2) (A)], payment of a preexisting debt is value, and if the payment is dollar-for-dollar, full value is given. Therefore, to the extent a transfer constitutes repayment of the debtor's antecedent or present debt, the transfer is not constructively fraudulent. Id. (internal citations and quotations omitted)

Defendant asserts that due to the merger with Histogen, and the Stipulation for Injunction, when Costco paid Defendant, it was actually paying down the pre-existing debt owed to Defendant by Debtor. Defendant argues that the payments from Costco to Defendant, if those are the transfers in question, represent dollar-for-dollar value since every dollar paid to Defendant reduced Debtor's obligation by the same amount. And as already mentioned above, at this point Defendant's status as a perfected secured creditor seems unassailable. So long as the payment was made to reduce a valid debt, consideration equivalent to the reduction is implicit. This conclusion under Celotex is made stronger by Trustee's comparative lack of evidence demonstrating that the transfers were constructively fraudulent on the question of exchange of value, which would undoubtedly be Trustee's burden at trial; and no presumption such as found at §547(f) assists. The court hesitates only because it sees one possible path to keeping the constructively fraudulent conveyance theory alive, but that would require a great deal more than appears here. Presumably, only payments on valid debts are exchanges of value. Trustee seems to argue that the debt is not really a valid debt as it is instead a disguised equity buy-out in return for nothing. But no evidence, only argument, is offered on this point.

Regarding Trustee's alternate fraudulent transfer theory (intentional), Defendant argues that Trustee has not provided any evidence tending to show that Defendant acted with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of Debtor. Trustee has not demonstrated the existence of any of the traditional badges of fraud. Again, this would be Trustee's burden to prove at trial. Trustee's opposition makes little to no effort to make the case for an intentionally fraudulent transfer. Generally, issues of intent are inappropriate subject matter on summary judgment. However, in the absence of any evidence on this point that could indicate a genuinely disputed issue of material fact, Defendant under Celotex is likely entitled to judgment in her favor as a matter of law.

5. Intentional Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage and Contractual Relations

Defendant argues that, aside from allegations in the amended complaint, Trustee has put forth no evidence that Defendant ever intentionally interfered with prospective economic advantage and/or contractual relations of Debtor. In fact, in the opposition, Trustee does not even attempt to argue for these causes of action or even mention them. It is not clear if Trustee intends to abandon these causes of action as he did with the Fraudulent Deceit and Fraud/Intentional Misrepresentation causes of action. Notwithstanding that issues of intent are inappropriate for summary judgment, Trustee would have the burden of proof on these causes of action, which would require the Trustee to put forth evidence that tends to prove these allegations. In the absence of any evidence and any argument beyond threadbare allegations in the amended complaint, the court concludes that Trustee is not attempting to seriously pursue these causes of action, so Defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law on these causes of action.

6. Avoidance of Unperfected Security Interest

Trustee's eleventh cause of action seeks avoidance of Defendant's purported unperfected security interest pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §544(a). Trustee argues that there are disputed issues of material fact surrounding whether Defendant's security interest remained perfected in light of California Uniform Commercial Code §9316(a)-(b) which provides:

(a) A security interest perfected pursuant to the law of the jurisdiction designated in subdivision (1) of Section 9301 or in subdivision (c) of Section 9305 remains perfected until the earliest of any of the following:

(1) The time perfection would have ceased under the law of that jurisdiction.

(2) The expiration of four months after a change of the debtor's location to another jurisdiction.

(3) The expiration of one year after a transfer of collateral to a person that thereby becomes a debtor and is located in another jurisdiction.

(b) If a security interest described in subdivision (a) becomes perfected under the law of the other jurisdiction before the earliest time or event described in that subdivision, it remains perfected thereafter. If the security interest does not become perfected under the law of the other jurisdiction before the earliest time or event, it becomes unperfected and is deemed never to have been perfected as against a purchaser of the collateral for value.

Trustee argues that a question of fact exists as to whether Defendant held a perfected security interest as of the date of the Costco transfers. According to Trustee, Defendant purported to have a perfected security interest through the filing of a UCC Financing Statement on May 11, 2016 with the California Secretary of State. However, on November 23, 2016, Debtor, by way of merger, became a Nevada entity and changed jurisdictions. Trustee argues, giving Defendant the benefit of the doubt over whether she ever held a perfected security interest in California, such an interest ceased to be perfected 4 months after the merger pursuant to Cal. Com. Code §9316(a) (2). Trustee argues that the transfers made in June and July of 2017 were therefore made while Defendant did not have a perfected security interest.

Defendant counters by arguing that Debtor never changed jurisdictions and was always a Nevada entity (although the inventory was always located in California?). Defendant then persuasively argues that in a merger situation, Cal. Com. Code §9316(a)(3) is the applicable statute, or so it would seem under Commercial Code Comment 2, Example 4, as cited by Defendant. Defendant argues that because she had a valid recorded lien against Histogen's inventory, when Histogen merged into Debtor, her perfected lien remained valid for 1 year after the merger, or until November 23, 2017. This appears to be the correct application on these facts. Contrary to Trustee's assertion, the dispute as to this cause of action is legal in nature, not factual, as none of the operative facts seem open to reasonable dispute.

Therefore, with no disputed issues of material fact at play, Defendant's application of the law appears to be correct, which entitles her to judgment as a matter of law on this cause of action as well.

7. Other Arguments

Attempting to create a triable issue of material fact, Trustee, for the first time at the summary judgment stage, makes the argument that Defendant did not make a loan to Histogen, she made a disguised equity investment. However, again, Trustee's assertion is not supported by any evidence in the record. Instead, Trustee argues that he believes this allegation will be borne out at trial. More importantly, §510(b) is not one of the alleged causes of action.

Defendant cites Rogan v. City of Boston, 267 F.3d 24, 26-27 (1st Cir. 2001) where the court stated:

"Summary judgment motions are decided on the record as it stands, not on the pleadings or on the nonmovant's vision of what facts might someday be unearthed by the litigation equivalent of an archeological dig. Consequently, a plaintiff who aspires to ward off a properly documented motion for summary judgment must produce enough proof to enable her case to get to a jury. This obligation cannot be satisfied by conclusory allegations, empty rhetoric, unsupported speculation, or evidence which, in the aggregate, is less than significantly probative."

This description fits Trustee's tactic. Trustee does not cite to any specific evidence in the record and Defendant argues that Trustee's allegation is purely speculation. Defendant argues that even if the court were to entertain the argument, Trustee could still not prevail because, insofar as Trustee is arguing that the transfers were simply an equity buyback and a preferential transfer, Trustee still cannot establish that Defendant was an insider at the time of the transfers, which is a critical element Trustee must demonstrate to satisfy the temporal aspect. Therefore, without more from Trustee, the court should find that this attempt to create a triable issue of material fact is wholly insufficient. But, as noted, there might be some utility in arguing that payment of a subordinated debt cannot have been equivalent consideration for fraudulent conveyance analysis.

Trustee also argues that Defendant's claim should be subordinated pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §510(b). This is a new theory of relief being brought up for the first time on summary judgment. It does not appear in the original or amended complaint. As such, Defendant's motion did not address this argument. Defendant argues, and the court should agree, that it would be inappropriate for the court to address this new argument without having given Defendant adequate notice and time to prepare a defense. So, at most this argument might be for another day, assuming the Trustee can still seek to amend his complaint, an issue the court does not address here.

Defendant also notes that Trustee's sixth cause of action for disallowance of claim pursuant to 11 U.S.C. 502(d) and (j) is not addressed in this motion as it pertains to Defendant's proof of claim. This cause of action is also not addressed by Trustee. Therefore, this cause of action will remain as unchallenged.

8. Conclusion

Defendant has persuasively argued that she is entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 9th 10th, and 11th causes of action. The 4th and 5th causes of action were dependent on the 1st – 3rd causes of action. The 7th and 8th claims were abandoned by Trustee, and as noted, the 6th cause of action will apparently be addressed in another proceeding.

Defendant has done enough to demonstrate that, not only does the law support her positions, Trustee has not demonstrated the existence of any evidence that supports his various theories. Trustee has also introduced new arguments for the first time at the summary judgment stage, also unsupported by evidence, and without adequate notice to Defendant to pursue relevant and responsive information in discovery. As discussed, there might be still life in the fraudulent conveyance theory if the Trustee could also prevail under his §510(b) subordination theory. But that will depend on both evidence and claims for relief not before the court at this time. Whether the Trustee could amend his complaint to assert those theories at this late date, and whether such a late amendment could be allowed successfully under Rule 15(c) to relate back, are also unclear, but are not decided at this time.

Grant.

All applications for additional fees and costs shall be submitted to the chapter 13 trustee for comment before filing with the court[.]

#51.00 First Interim Fee Application Period: 5/31/2019 to 11/23/2019:

RICK AUGUSTINI, SPECIAL COUNSEL FOR DEBTOR

Fee:	$16,254.31
Expenses:	$126.31

Docket 91

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/15/20:

Creditor Michael Kaplan ("Creditor") objects to the fee application of Rick Augustini ("Applicant") on grounds that the application evidences the practice of block billing, redacting, and billing for work that was unlikely to benefit the estate. Creditor also requests that court should assess a penalty against Applicant for Mr. Augustini's alleged personal conduct described as uncooperative, belligerent, and unprofessional. In sum, Creditor argues that the fee request of $16,128.00 in fees and $126.31 in costs for a total of $16,254.31 should be reduced by no less than $7670.50. Applicant has replied. The court feels some adjustment may be in order, but not nearly to the level requested, as discussed below:

1. Block Billing

Creditor argues that block billing is disfavored because it does not allow the court to assess the reasonableness of the fees being requested in the time entry. Creditor points to several instances where Applicant appears to have block billed. However, most of the block billed items are of relatively short duration (1 hour or less). It is difficult to assess whether each task described in the entries constitutes a reasonable amount of time for that task, but the time spent on those several tasks could not have been very long. There are some time entries that are considerably longer in duration (3 hours or more) that seem to be more the type of entry that courts disfavor. But even still, given the tasks in the description, the amount of time spent on these tasks does not seem, on its face, to be unreasonable, despite the lumping together of several tasks. While it is somewhat difficult to assess the reasonableness of the block billed entries (almost by definition), at the same time these entries identified by Creditor do not seem to be obviously unreasonable. Therefore, cause to cut the time of these allegedly block-billed entries is weak, and the cost of redoing the application may not be worth the effort. Therefore, Applicant is given the option of accepting an arbitrary nominal reduction of 5%, or, the application may be resubmitted with suitable breakout of the block entries.

2. Redactions

Creditor pulls out several billing entries that contain redactions. Creditor argues that these entries should be disallowed because, again, the information redacted from the entry makes assessing the reasonableness of the fee difficult. Case law cited by Creditor suggests that this billing practice is highly disfavored for this reason. Creditor also notes that several of these redacted entries could also be block billed entries. However, like the block billed section above, nearly all of the identified redacted entries are relatively short in duration, i.e. .5 hours each or less. Therefore, another arbitrary nominal 5% reduction in fees is warranted as an alternative to redoing the application with unredacted entries.

3. Unnecessary Services

Creditor argues that Applicant continued to bill for services that were either wholly unnecessary and/or moot after the dismissal of plaintiffs' state court action on October 21, 2019. For example, Creditor asserts that these services included drafting unnecessary discovery motions after the underlying case was dismissed. Again, like the other grounds for objections, the time entries spent on these unnecessary tasks is relatively small, amounting to only 2.7 hours, with most entries being .4 hours or less in duration.

Applicant argues that because he was served with notice of the dismissal of Plaintiff's case by mail, notice did not reach him immediately. Once he had notice of the dismissal, he ceased working and billing on the matter substantively. Applicant concedes that perhaps 1.7 hours of work was performed unnecessarily. The rest of the time, Applicant asserts, is still justified because it involved attempts to recover fees and costs incurred in connection with the motion to compel that Creditor let Applicant file despite knowing he intended to dismiss the underlying claim. This is an unfortunate state of events, but the estate should not be billed for unnecessary work. As the same time, it is minimal; fees should likely be reduced by 1.7 hours to account for the time bill that turned out to be unnecessary.

4. Applicant's Behavior

Creditor argues that Applicant's personal demeanor was unprofessional to say the least. Creditor asserts that Applicant engaged in scorched earth tactics, including being excessively uncooperative and uncollaborative. Creditor also argues that Applicant used threats and personal insults freely, which is conduct that should not go unpunished. Unsurprisingly, Applicant disputes this characterization. Applicant states that he did not engage in the conduct described but could just as easily accuse Creditor and his counsel of similar misconduct.

The case was obviously hotly contested and appears to have created or exacerbated a toxic relationship between the parties. It is impossible to know with certainty what transpired between the parties. The court laments the lack of civility which occurs all too often and wonders why attorneys insist upon making their already difficult tasks that much less bearable. Nevertheless, no evidence is presented that compels court intervention here. Therefore, no reduction in fees should be given for alleged misconduct.

5. Chapter 13 Trustee's Comments

The Chapter 13 Trustee takes no position. However, Trustee notes that Applicant or Debtor's counsel was required per the last claim objection hearings (orders at docket #'s 68 and 69) to submit filings to the Court at the equivalent level of a status report regarding the state court proceedings and the status of the creditor's claim. That has not been done. This fee application cannot serve as a substitute for such a report. Trustee further notes that if the court grants this Motion, Trustee requests that the court include in the Order that no more than half of available funds per month be paid towards this claim as there is a concurrent fee request by Debtor's other counsel. Finally, Trustee notes there is no Code requirement or local rule that prioritizes different party's fee claims.

6. Conclusion

Creditor has pointed out a few instances of poor billing practices that warrant a reduction in his fees. The $7600 requested in reductions, however, does seem steep given that very few if any of the time entries were patently unreasonable. Therefore, an arbitrary reduction of roughly 5% on the allegedly block billed and redacted entries is appropriate. The fees that turned out to be unnecessary, though perhaps not the fault of Applicant, should be discounted. The alleged block billed entries total $4898. 5% of this number is $244.90. The entries with allegedly unwarranted redaction total $1785. 5% of this number is $89.25. The unnecessary billing came out to 1.7 hours. The billing was done by Applicant at .3 hours (billing rate $425), and by Tracy Anielski at 1.4 hours (billing rate $325). Total reductions are $582.5. This is a grand total of reductions at $916.65. Therefore, the new total of fees that should be granted is $15,211.35. If Applicant does not accept this reduction, it may resubmit its application breaking out the block billed portions and removing the redactions, but the $582.50 reduction for unneeded services will remain. If Applicant chooses to resubmit its application, no time will be allowed for additional time spent in that effort.

Allow fees in the amount of $15,211.35 and costs of $126.31, or the Applicant may resubmit its application on block billed and redacted portions. The Trustee may apportion payments of allowed fees as he suggests.

Tentative Ruling:

Debtor, Diane Weinsheimer ("Debtor") disputes a $415,142.08 prepetition arrearage – which includes escrow deficiency for funds advanced of $67,598.15 and projected escrow shortage of $5,787.37. However, because Shellpoint's claim is prima facie valid, the burden shifts to the objector to produce evidence that would negate at least one of the elements essential to the claim's legal sufficiency. In re Consol. Pioneer Mortgage, 178 B.R. 222, 226 (9th Cir. BAP 1995); In re Pugh, 157 B.R. 898, 901 (9th Cir. BAP 1993). Debtor does not reach this threshold. Debtor allegedly misinterprets a Statement regarding alleged surplus, but does not offer evidence to refute an essential claim made by Shellpoint – that Debtor has not been making payments required by the Note and Deed of Trust which is the foundation for that number. The court cannot tell on this record which set of assertions is correct, but because the prima facie validity in consequence is not overcome, the motion as a summary proceeding can only be denied. The court will hear argument whether a further evidentiary hearing in contested proceeding is required.

#2.00 Motion To Dismiss Complaint To Determine Dischargeability Of Debt [11 USC § 523(a)(2)(A) and (a)(4)]

Docket 10

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant's Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss these three adversary proceedings. Although there are five dismissal motions on calendar in various Griffithe-related adversary proceedings, these three will be addressed in a single memorandum inasmuch as the issues are identical and, unlike the other two, turn on a question of jurisdiction.

Debtor argues for the first time in his Reply that the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 and several cases addressing the intersection of cannabis and bankruptcy, stand for the general proposition that bankruptcy courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims relating to cannabis. Subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, but this does not obviate the overarching concern for due process and the court notes that the Plaintiffs have had no effective opportunity to address this fundamental issue. Moreover, the court would value their input on the question as none of the cases cited by Defendant deal directly with the issue before the court and the court is not persuaded that the cited authorities can be read quite so broadly as Defendant argues. The issue here can be framed as whether the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction in an adversary proceeding where the Plaintiffs seek to have Defendant/Debtor's debts, incurred through alleged malfeasance, adjudicated as nondischargeable despite the underlying cannabis business venture being simultaneously legal under state law and illegal under federal law.

Even though cannabis sale has now been legal in several states for several years (while the federal law remains against) the only case cited by Defendant that comes close to addressing this precise issue is Northbay Wellness Group v. Beyries, 789 F.3d 956 (9th Cir. 2015). There, an attorney stole money from his client, a legal medical marijuana dispensary, and subsequently filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Id. at 958 The dispensary instituted an adversary proceeding seeking to except its claim from discharge, but the bankruptcy court dismissed the adversary complaint under the "unclean hands" doctrine. Id. at 959 The Ninth Circuit reversed and remanded, explaining that the bankruptcy court failed to balance the parties' respective wrongdoings as required under that doctrine:

"The Supreme Court has emphasized, however, that the doctrine of unclean hands 'does not mean that courts must always permit a defendant wrongdoer to retain the profits of his wrongdoing merely because the plaintiff himself is possibly guilty of transgressing the law.' [Johnson v. Yellow Cab [Transit Co.], 321 U.S. [383, 387, 64 S. Ct. 622, 88 L. Ed. 814 (1944)]. Rather, determining whether the doctrine of unclean hands precludes relief requires balancing the alleged wrongdoing of the plaintiff against that of the defendant, and 'weigh[ing] the substance of the right asserted by [the] plaintiff against the transgression which, it is contended, serves to foreclose that right.' Republic Molding Corp. v. B.W. Photo Utils., 319 F.2d 347, 350 (9th Cir. 1963). In addition, the 'clean hands doctrine should not be strictly enforced when to do so would frustrate a substantial public interest.' EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753 (9th Cir. 1991)." Id. at 960.

The Ninth Circuit in Northbay did not analyze the issue of whether the bankruptcy court had subject matter jurisdiction over the exception to discharge action. Neither the cases cited in the briefs nor any that the court has been able to find analyze and/or expressly settle the jurisdiction issue.

The closest possible exception that the court has found occurred near the end of the bankruptcy court's original opinion in Northbay where the court borrowed the reasoning in a dissenting opinion written by Judge Noonan in another case. The bankruptcy court stated in pertinent part:

"It is very unseemly for the court to be asked to grant relief to a plaintiff which claims it lost its cash from illegal drug sales by shoving it into envelopes and then delivering it to its attorney, uncounted and undocumented. This is hardly the behavior of a legitimate business. While the conduct of the parties may have been legal under state law, in the eyes of a federal court they were conspiring to sell contraband. They were in pari delicto, and the funds plaintiffs gave to Beyries were the actual proceeds of illegal drug sales. This is not the sort of case which is supposed to darken the doors of a federal court. See Adler v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 219 F.3d 869, 882 (9th Cir. 2000) (Noonan, Circuit Judge, dissenting)." In Re Beyries, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4710, *1, *5 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. Nov. 28, 2011)

In another case, Olson v. Van Meter (In re Olson), 2018 WL 989263 *1 (9th Cir. BAP Feb. 5, 2018), the debtor's estate included commercial property that was partially being rented out to a cannabis dispensary. The issue before the court was whether such an estate could confirm a plan under chapter 13. The bankruptcy court dismissed the entire case sua sponte on grounds that the debtor had been accepting post-petition rent payments from a cannabis dispensary, and therefore, the debtor was involved in ongoing criminal activity that precluded her from seeking bankruptcy relief. On appeal, the BAP vacated the dismissal on grounds that the bankruptcy court had not made specific findings in connection with the dismissal, and remanded the case for such findings. In a concurring opinion, Judge Tighe stated, "[a]lthough debtors connected to marijuana distribution cannot expect to violate federal law in their bankruptcy case, the presence of marijuana near the case should not cause mandatory dismissal." Id. at *7.

The court takes the above language to imply that in the canvassing of available case law, and contrary to Debtor's suggestion, the Olson court could find no blanket rule that categorically obliterates the bankruptcy court's subject matter jurisdiction simply because cannabis may be involved on some level.

The authorities cited above raise several concerns. The court is uncertain about whether it has subject matter jurisdiction and requires further briefing from the parties; this should be the case in any event given the late raising of the issue. The court is also concerned that if, as Debtor argues, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the dischargeability issue, then Debtor is effectively able to hide behind the bankruptcy process and frustrate the creditors he may have defrauded. Worse still, it is at least conceivable that Debtor could even get his debts discharged despite his own purported wrongful conduct creating those debts. On its face, this result seems to offend the fundamental notions of equity that the bankruptcy court is charged with upholding. Stated differently, perhaps the more applicable maxims of equity here are not only unclean hands but: 'one that seeks equity must do equity', or 'equity will not allow a statute to be used as a cloak for fraud.'

Plaintiffs argue that the relief afforded by bankruptcy law is intended to give a fresh start to the honest but unfortunate Debtor. Plaintiffs argue, therefore, that it would be contrary to bankruptcy policy to allow Debtor to discharge his debts to the extent they were incurred by fraud, misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty, or some other unsavory means. The court may well agree. Thus, the doctrine of in pari delicto seems inapposite in this specific context. In the court's view, gross inequity would result if Debtor could defeat Plaintiffs' complaints based on this court's purported lack of subject matter jurisdiction caused by the underlying illicit activity of both Plaintiffs and Debtor, but still avail himself of the protections and benefits of the Bankruptcy Code.

Perhaps the better questions are, should only part of the court's jurisdiction be jeopardized and if so, what part? Consistent with the above, maybe the proper role of equity is to deny discharge entirely on grounds of unclean hands allowing neither side of the illegal transactions to benefit? The problem here is that no adequate briefing has been received on this central question for which authority is apparently sparse.

#3.00 Motion To Dismiss Complaint To Determine Dischargeability Of Debt [11 USC § 523(a)(2)(A) and (2)(4)]

Docket 8

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant/Debtor, Guy Griffithe's ("Defendant's") motion to dismiss the complaint of Plaintiff/Creditor, Joseph Samec. Plaintiff's complaint is styled such that he is essentially requesting a determination that Defendant's conduct, if proven, would constitute non-a dischargeable debt pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(2)(A) [actual fraud] and (a)(4) [defalcation while acting in fiduciary capacity, embezzlement or larceny]. It is not clear whether Plaintiff intends to have the case tried in this court or in state court, and there is a question of abstention but not before the court at this moment.

1. FRCP 12(b)(6) Standards

When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). "While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556 (2007) A complaint must contain enough factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id.

2. Alleged Facts

Plaintiff in his complaint alleges that, in exchange for a 90-day loan from Plaintiff in the amount of $100,000, Defendant signed a promissory note on March 30, 2017 on behalf of Bridgegate Picture Corp. ("Bridgegate") and signed also as a personal guarantor. The promissory note was delivered by Plaintiff's then financial advisor, Maartin Rossouw ("Rossouw"). Plaintiff claims that Rossouw acted as a dual agent for both Plaintiff and Defendant. When debt on the promissory note became due, Plaintiff attempted to collect through Rossouw, but to no avail. This went on for several months. To date, Plaintiff has received only $25,000, but apparently received other checks returned for insufficient funds. It is noteworthy what the complaint does not contain. There are few if any alleged representations attributed to the Defendant, or even to Rossouw. In short, very little is given that would separate this case from a simple breach of contract case. It should come as no surprise that all bankruptcies are filled with breach of contract claims, and it is only those few where the debt was procured through one or more of the "bad acts" described in §523(a) that discharge is correctly challenged.

3. Plaintiff's Claim Under §523(a)(2)(A)

Plaintiff claims that Defendant's alleged misconduct requires a finding that the debt he has incurred with respect to the unpaid loan is not dischargeable pursuant to §523(a)(2)(A). To establish a claim under §523(a)(2)(A), a plaintiff must establish: (1) a representation of fact by the debtor; (2) that was material; (3) that the debtor knew at the time to be false; (4) that the debtor made with the intention of deceiving the creditor; (5) upon which the creditor relied; (6) and that the creditor's reliance was reasonable; (7) that damage proximately resulted from the misrepresentation. See Rubin v. West (In re Rubin), 875 F.2d 755, 759 (9th Cir. 1989); see also, Britton v. Price (In re Britton), 950 F.2d 602, 604 (9th Cir. 1991). A claim under this "fraud" exception requires that the claim satisfy the heightened pleading requirements for fraud pursuant to F.R.C.P. 9(b). See In re Jacobs, 403 B.R. 565, 574 (Bankr. N. D. Ill. 2009) (citations omitted).

F.R.C.P. 9(b) and F.R.B.P. 7009 provide: "In alleging fraud, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally." While intent or knowledge may be averred generally, however, the plaintiff must still plead the events claimed to give rise to an inference of intent or knowledge Devaney v. Chester, 813 F.2d 566, 568 (2d Cir. 1987), which may be accomplished by pleading facts consistent with certain well established "badges of fraud." In re Sharp Int'l Corp., 403 F.3d 43, 56 (2d Cir. 2004).

Here, Plaintiff in his complaint alleges that at the time of the loan, Defendant knew that Bridgegate was severely undercapitalized and did not have the resources to fulfill the terms of the promissory note or Defendant's personal guarantee. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has entered into similar agreements with other investors, and that those promissory notes too are in default. Plaintiff alleges that he detrimentally relied on Defendant's personal guarantee of the loan in making his decision and that had he known Bridgegate's true financial condition, he would never have invested. As a result of Defendant's default, which Plaintiff argues was intentional, Plaintiff has been damaged in an amount not less than the remaining balance of the loan.

But, are the facts alleged in Plaintiff's complaint, taken as true, even close to meeting the minimal pleading standards set forth above? No allegation is made that Defendant represented anything to Plaintiff, whether about his own financial position, that of Bridgegate, or otherwise. There is no specific allegation that Rossouw made representations either. As Iqbal and Twombly make clear, there must be enough factual detail to support a claim under §523(a)(2)(A), especially given the heightened pleading standards under Rule 9(b). Merely reciting the elements of fraud is insufficient; there must be corresponding facts alleged supporting each of the elements. What was said, by whom, when, etc. Was it oral or in writing?

Surely, not every promissory note supported by a personal guarantee amounts to fraud, false pretenses, or intentional misrepresentation when the promisor and guarantor cannot fulfill those obligations. Even considering the other notes allegedly made to other investors on similar terms, the court remains unpersuaded that fraudulent conduct has been pled with enough specificity for Rule 9. Even shaky borrowers are entitled to borrow money, and eventual default does not necessarily mean this was a foregone conclusion. In opposition to this motion, Plaintiff argues that Defendant has had over 20 lawsuits filed against him for nonpayment of debt going back over a decade. Unfortunately, this was not raised in the actual complaint. Moreover, we cannot rely on mere inference. While widespread and prolonged giving of bad promissory notes might suggest that the issuer was making them intentionally without the ability or inclination to repay, all the specifics need to be provided and Plaintiff must be able to allege specifically that these were an intentional device to obtain funds under false pretenses. The Complaint as it stands is very short of this standard.

4. Plaintiff's Claim Under §523(a)(4)

11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4) provides an exception to discharge "for fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny[.]"

Here, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant, as President of Bridgegate, owed fiduciary duties to his investors, including Plaintiff. Plaintiff then alleges that Defendant breached those duties by:

- (1) failing to honor the personal guarantee;
- (2) failing to pay the note by the dates set forth in the note;
- (3) failing to pay court costs;
- (4) failing to pay late fees;
- (5) misrepresenting the financial status of the company;
- (6) Engaging in criminal activity, which put the company in peril;
- (7) Gross mismanagement;
- (8) Theft and conversion of company assets;
- (9) failure to disclose money to Plaintiff, which he was entitled to receive;
- (10) Diverting assets so as to put them beyond the reach of Plaintiff;

(11) Paying himself excessive and/or non-disclosed salaries.

This is quite a list. But unfortunately, like the first claim for relief, this one suffers from the same lack of detailed factual allegations enough to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements under Rule 9(b). The above listed allegations appear to be nothing more than legal conclusions that are either insufficiently supported or not supported at all by the facts as alleged. For example, it is not at all clear how or why Plaintiff regards himself as an "investor" rather than merely a lender. A factual example for each of the 11 subparts would also add some substance to the complaint and possibly supply some support for the necessary allegation that Defendant was as to Plaintiff a fiduciary. Merely being a lender does not alone create a fiduciary relationship. It is also not clear whether Plaintiff is alleging embezzlement and/or larceny in the Complaint. In short, this cause of action is not supported by enough facts to state a claim that is plausible on its face.

The court notes that Plaintiff is proceeding in pro se and encourages Plaintiff to retain counsel. The Complaint involves issues that can be quite subtle and more complex than they may seem to a lay person. This is especially true when the opponent is represented by counsel. The court also notes that Plaintiff is a plaintiff, along with his wife, in another adversary proceeding involving some of the same issues. Retaining counsel could be of significant benefit to Plaintiff. Thus, since the Ninth Circuit has routinely held that leave to amend should be liberally granted, so it will be in this case. Morongo Band of Mission Indians v. Rose, 893 F.2d 1074, 1079 (9th Cir. 1990).

5. Jurisdiction Issue

The Reply also curiously argues that the court does not have jurisdiction over this adversary proceeding because the debt at issue was incurred in connection with a cannabis business. The court needs clarification on whether Bridgegate Picture Corp. is a cannabis concern or, as its name would suggest, a motion picture company, or the like. Docket 8

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant's Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss these three adversary proceedings. Although there are five dismissal motions on calendar in various Griffithe-related adversary proceedings, these three will be addressed in a single memorandum inasmuch as the issues are identical and, unlike the other two, turn on a question of jurisdiction.

Debtor argues for the first time in his Reply that the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 and several cases addressing the intersection of cannabis and bankruptcy, stand for the general proposition that bankruptcy courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims relating to cannabis. Subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, but this does not obviate the overarching concern for due process and the court notes that the Plaintiffs have had no effective opportunity to address this fundamental issue. Moreover, the court would value their input on the question as none of the cases cited by Defendant deal directly with the issue before the court and the court is not persuaded that the cited authorities can be read quite so broadly as Defendant argues. The issue here can be framed as whether the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction in an adversary proceeding where the Plaintiffs seek to have Defendant/Debtor's debts, incurred through alleged malfeasance, adjudicated as nondischargeable despite the underlying cannabis business venture being simultaneously legal under state law and illegal under federal law.

Even though cannabis sale has now been legal in several states for several years (while the federal law remains against) the only case cited by Defendant that comes close to addressing this precise issue is Northbay Wellness Group v. Beyries, 789 F.3d 956 (9th Cir. 2015). There, an attorney stole money from his client, a legal medical marijuana dispensary, and subsequently filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Id. at 958 The dispensary instituted an adversary proceeding seeking to except its claim from discharge, but the bankruptcy court dismissed the adversary complaint under the "unclean hands" doctrine. Id. at 959 The Ninth Circuit reversed and remanded, explaining that the bankruptcy court failed to balance the parties' respective wrongdoings as required under that doctrine:

"The Supreme Court has emphasized, however, that the doctrine of unclean hands 'does not mean that courts must always permit a defendant wrongdoer to retain the profits of his wrongdoing merely because the plaintiff himself is possibly guilty of transgressing the law.' [Johnson v. Yellow Cab [Transit Co.], 321 U.S. [383, 387, 64 S. Ct. 622, 88 L. Ed. 814 (1944)]. Rather, determining whether the doctrine of unclean hands precludes relief requires balancing the alleged wrongdoing of the plaintiff against that of the defendant, and 'weigh[ing] the substance of the right asserted by [the] plaintiff against the transgression which, it is contended, serves to foreclose that right.' Republic Molding Corp. v. B.W. Photo Utils., 319 F.2d 347, 350 (9th Cir. 1963). In addition, the 'clean hands doctrine should not be strictly enforced when to do so would frustrate a substantial public interest.' EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753 (9th Cir. 1991)." Id. at 960.

The Ninth Circuit in Northbay did not analyze the issue of whether the bankruptcy court had subject matter jurisdiction over the exception to discharge action. Neither the cases cited in the briefs nor any that the court has been able to find analyze and/or expressly settle the jurisdiction issue.

The closest possible exception that the court has found occurred near the end of the bankruptcy court's original opinion in Northbay where the court borrowed the reasoning in a dissenting opinion written by Judge Noonan in another case. The bankruptcy court stated in pertinent part:

The bankruptcy court dismissed the entire case sua sponte on grounds that the debtor had been accepting post-petition rent payments from a cannabis dispensary, and therefore, the debtor was involved in ongoing criminal activity that precluded her from seeking bankruptcy relief. On appeal, the BAP vacated the dismissal on grounds that the bankruptcy court had not made specific findings in connection with the dismissal, and remanded the case for such findings. In a concurring opinion, Judge Tighe stated, "[a]lthough debtors connected to marijuana distribution cannot expect to violate federal law in their bankruptcy case, the presence of marijuana near the case should not cause mandatory dismissal." Id. at *7.

#6.00 Motion To Dismiss Complaint To Determine Dischargeability Of Debt [11 USC § 523(a)(2)(A) and (2)(4)]

Docket 6

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant's Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss these three adversary proceedings. Although there are five dismissal motions on calendar in various Griffithe-related adversary proceedings, these three will be addressed in a single memorandum inasmuch as the issues are identical and, unlike the other two, turn on a question of jurisdiction.

Debtor argues for the first time in his Reply that the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 and several cases addressing the intersection of cannabis and bankruptcy, stand for the general proposition that bankruptcy courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims relating to cannabis. Subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, but this does not obviate the overarching concern for due process and the court notes that the Plaintiffs have had no effective opportunity to address this fundamental issue. Moreover, the court would value their input on the question as none of the cases cited by Defendant deal directly with the issue before the court and the court is not persuaded that the cited authorities can be read quite so broadly as Defendant argues. The issue here can be framed as whether the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction in an adversary proceeding where the Plaintiffs seek to have Defendant/Debtor's debts, incurred through alleged malfeasance, adjudicated as nondischargeable despite the underlying cannabis business venture being simultaneously legal under state law and illegal under federal law.

Even though cannabis sale has now been legal in several states for several years (while the federal law remains against) the only case cited by Defendant that comes close to addressing this precise issue is Northbay Wellness Group v. Beyries, 789 F.3d 956 (9th Cir. 2015). There, an attorney stole money from his client, a legal medical marijuana dispensary, and subsequently filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Id. at 958 The dispensary instituted an adversary proceeding seeking to except its claim from discharge, but the bankruptcy court dismissed the adversary complaint under the "unclean hands" doctrine. Id. at 959 The Ninth Circuit reversed and remanded, explaining that the bankruptcy court failed to balance the parties' respective wrongdoings as required under that doctrine:

"The Supreme Court has emphasized, however, that the doctrine of unclean hands 'does not mean that courts must always permit a defendant wrongdoer to retain the profits of his wrongdoing merely because the plaintiff himself is possibly guilty of transgressing the law.' [Johnson v. Yellow Cab [Transit Co.], 321 U.S. [383, 387, 64 S. Ct. 622, 88 L. Ed. 814 (1944)]. Rather, determining whether the doctrine of unclean hands precludes relief requires balancing the alleged wrongdoing of the plaintiff against that of the defendant, and 'weigh[ing] the substance of the right asserted by [the] plaintiff against the transgression which, it is contended, serves to foreclose that right.' Republic Molding Corp. v. B.W. Photo Utils., 319 F.2d 347, 350 (9th Cir. 1963). In addition, the 'clean hands doctrine should not be strictly enforced when to do so would frustrate a substantial public interest.' EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753 (9th Cir. 1991)." Id. at 960.

The Ninth Circuit in Northbay did not analyze the issue of whether the bankruptcy court had subject matter jurisdiction over the exception to discharge action. Neither the cases cited in the briefs nor any that the court has been able to find analyze and/or expressly settle the jurisdiction issue.

The closest possible exception that the court has found occurred near the end of the bankruptcy court's original opinion in Northbay where the court borrowed the reasoning in a dissenting opinion written by Judge Noonan in another case. The bankruptcy court stated in pertinent part:

"It is very unseemly for the court to be asked to grant relief to a plaintiff which claims it lost its cash from illegal drug sales by shoving it into envelopes and then delivering it to its attorney, uncounted and undocumented. This is hardly the behavior of a legitimate business. While the conduct of the parties may have been legal under state law, in the eyes of a federal court they were conspiring to sell contraband. They were in pari delicto, and the funds plaintiffs gave to Beyries were the actual proceeds of illegal drug sales. This is not the sort of case which is supposed to darken the doors of a federal court. See Adler v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 219 F.3d 869, 882 (9th Cir. 2000) (Noonan, Circuit Judge, dissenting)." In Re Beyries, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4710, *1, *5 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. Nov. 28, 2011)

In another case, Olson v. Van Meter (In re Olson), 2018 WL 989263 *1 (9th Cir. BAP Feb. 5, 2018), the debtor's estate included commercial property that was partially being rented out to a cannabis dispensary. The issue before the court was whether such an estate could confirm a plan under chapter 13. The bankruptcy court dismissed the entire case sua sponte on grounds that the debtor had been accepting post-petition rent payments from a cannabis dispensary, and therefore, the debtor was involved in ongoing criminal activity that precluded her from seeking bankruptcy relief. On appeal, the BAP vacated the dismissal on grounds that the bankruptcy court had not made specific findings in connection with the dismissal, and remanded the case for such findings. In a concurring opinion, Judge Tighe stated, "[a]lthough debtors connected to marijuana distribution cannot expect to violate federal law in their bankruptcy case, the presence of marijuana near the case should not cause mandatory dismissal." Id. at *7.

The court takes the above language to imply that in the canvassing of available case law, and contrary to Debtor's suggestion, the Olson court could find no blanket rule that categorically obliterates the bankruptcy court's subject matter jurisdiction simply because cannabis may be involved on some level.

The authorities cited above raise several concerns. The court is uncertain about whether it has subject matter jurisdiction and requires further briefing from the parties; this should be the case in any event given the late raising of the issue. The court is also concerned that if, as Debtor argues, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the dischargeability issue, then Debtor is effectively able to hide behind the bankruptcy process and frustrate the creditors he may have defrauded. Worse still, it is at least conceivable that Debtor could even get his debts discharged despite his own purported wrongful conduct creating those debts. On its face, this result seems to offend the fundamental notions of equity that the bankruptcy court is charged with upholding. Stated differently, perhaps the more applicable maxims of equity here are not only unclean hands but: 'one that seeks equity must do equity', or 'equity will not allow a statute to be used as a cloak for fraud.'

Plaintiffs argue that the relief afforded by bankruptcy law is intended to give a fresh start to the honest but unfortunate Debtor. Plaintiffs argue, therefore, that it would be contrary to bankruptcy policy to allow Debtor to discharge his debts to the extent they were incurred by fraud, misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty, or some other unsavory means. The court may well agree. Thus, the doctrine of in pari delicto seems inapposite in this specific context. In the court's view, gross inequity would result if Debtor could defeat Plaintiffs' complaints based on this court's purported lack of subject matter jurisdiction caused by the underlying illicit activity of both Plaintiffs and Debtor, but still avail himself of the protections and benefits of the Bankruptcy Code.

Perhaps the better questions are, should only part of the court's jurisdiction be jeopardized and if so, what part? Consistent with the above, maybe the proper role of equity is to deny discharge entirely on grounds of unclean hands allowing neither side of the illegal transactions to benefit? The problem here is that no adequate briefing has been received on this central question for which authority is apparently sparse.

Continue about 45 days to allow further briefing.

#7.00 Motion To Dismiss Complaint To Determine Dischargeability Of Debt [11 USC § 523(a)(2)(A) and (2)(4)]

Docket 3

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant/Debtor, Guy Griffithe's ("Defendant's") motion to dismiss the complaint of Plaintiff/Creditor, Gregory Wick (Plaintiff). This tentative ruling was originally written for the Samec v Griffithe matter (19-01195) but the Wick complaint shares many of the same infirmities. Thus, a separate tentative ruling is unnecessary.

Plaintiff's complaint is styled such that he is essentially requesting a determination that Defendant's conduct, if proven, would constitute non-a dischargeable debt pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(2)(A) [actual fraud] and (a) (4) [defalcation while acting in fiduciary capacity, embezzlement or larceny]. It is not clear whether Plaintiff intends to have the case tried in this court or in state court, and there is a question of abstention but not before the court at this moment.

1. FRCP 12(b)(6) Standards

When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). "While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556 (2007) A complaint must contain enough factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id.

2. Alleged Facts

Plaintiff in his complaint alleges that, in exchange for a 90-day loan from Plaintiff in the amount of $100,000, Defendant signed a promissory note on March 30, 2017 on behalf of Bridgegate Picture Corp. ("Bridgegate") and signed also as a personal guarantor. The promissory note was delivered by Plaintiff's then financial advisor, Maartin Rossouw ("Rossouw"). Plaintiff claims that Rossouw acted as a dual agent for both Plaintiff and Defendant. When debt on the promissory note became due, Plaintiff attempted to collect through Rossouw, but to no avail. This went on for several months. To date, Plaintiff has received only $25,000, but apparently received other checks returned for insufficient funds. It is noteworthy what the complaint does not contain. There are few if any alleged representations attributed to the Defendant, or even to Rossouw. In short, very little is given that would separate this case from a simple breach of contract case. It should come as no surprise that all bankruptcies are filled with breach of contract claims, and it is only those few where the debt was procured through one or more of the "bad acts" described in §523(a) that discharge is correctly challenged.

3. Plaintiff's Claim Under §523(a)(2)(A)

Plaintiff claims that Defendant's alleged misconduct requires a finding that the debt he has incurred with respect to the unpaid loan is not dischargeable pursuant to §523(a)(2)(A). To establish a claim under §523(a)(2)(A), a plaintiff must establish: (1) a representation of fact by the debtor; (2) that was material; (3) that the debtor knew at the time to be false; (4) that the debtor made with the intention of deceiving the creditor; (5) upon which the creditor relied; (6) and that the creditor's reliance was reasonable; (7) that damage proximately resulted from the misrepresentation. See Rubin v. West (In re Rubin), 875 F.2d 755, 759 (9th Cir. 1989); see also, Britton v. Price (In re Britton), 950 F.2d 602, 604 (9th Cir. 1991). A claim under this "fraud" exception requires that the claim satisfy the heightened pleading requirements for fraud pursuant to F.R.C.P. 9(b). See In re Jacobs, 403 B.R. 565, 574 (Bankr. N. D. Ill. 2009) (citations omitted).

F.R.C.P. 9(b) and F.R.B.P. 7009 provide: "In alleging fraud, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally." While intent or knowledge may be averred generally, however, the plaintiff must still plead the events claimed to give rise to an inference of intent or knowledge Devaney v. Chester, 813 F.2d 566, 568 (2d Cir. 1987), which may be accomplished by pleading facts consistent with certain well established "badges of fraud." In re Sharp Int'l Corp., 403 F.3d 43, 56 (2d Cir. 2004).

Here, Plaintiff in his complaint alleges that at the time of the loan, Defendant knew that Bridgegate was severely undercapitalized and did not have the resources to fulfill the terms of the promissory note or Defendant's personal guarantee. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has entered into similar agreements with other investors, and that those promissory notes too are in default. Plaintiff alleges that he detrimentally relied on Defendant's personal guarantee of the loan in making his decision and that had he known Bridgegate's true financial condition, he would never have invested. As a result of Defendant's default, which Plaintiff argues was intentional, Plaintiff has been damaged in an amount not less than the remaining balance of the loan.

But, are the facts alleged in Plaintiff's complaint, taken as true, even close to meeting the minimal pleading standards set forth above? No allegation is made that Defendant represented anything to Plaintiff, whether about his own financial position, that of Bridgegate, or otherwise. There is no specific allegation that Rossouw made representations either. As Iqbal and Twombly make clear, there must be enough factual detail to support a claim under §523(a)(2)(A), especially given the heightened pleading standards under Rule 9(b). Merely reciting the elements of fraud is insufficient; there must be corresponding facts alleged supporting each of the elements. What was said, by whom, when, etc. Was it oral or in writing?

Surely, not every promissory note supported by a personal guarantee amounts to fraud, false pretenses, or intentional misrepresentation when the promisor and guarantor cannot fulfill those obligations. Even considering the other notes allegedly made to other investors on similar terms, the court remains unpersuaded that fraudulent conduct has been pled with enough specificity for Rule 9. Even shaky borrowers are entitled to borrow money, and eventual default does not necessarily mean this was a foregone conclusion. In opposition to this motion, Plaintiff argues that Defendant has had over 20 lawsuits filed against him for nonpayment of debt going back over a decade. Unfortunately, this was not raised in the actual complaint. Moreover, we cannot rely on mere inference. While widespread and prolonged giving of bad promissory notes might suggest that the issuer was making them intentionally without the ability or inclination to repay, all the specifics need to be provided and Plaintiff must be able to allege specifically that these were an intentional device to obtain funds under false pretenses. The Complaint as it stands is very short of this standard.

4. Plaintiff's Claim Under §523(a)(4)

11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4) provides an exception to discharge "for fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny[.]"

Here, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant, as President of Bridgegate, owed fiduciary duties to his investors, including Plaintiff. Plaintiff then alleges that Defendant breached those duties by:

- (1) failing to honor the personal guarantee;
- (2) failing to pay the note by the dates set forth in the note;
- (3) failing to pay court costs;
- (4) failing to pay late fees;
- (5) misrepresenting the financial status of the company;
- (6) Engaging in criminal activity, which put the company in peril;
- (7) Gross mismanagement;
- (8) Theft and conversion of company assets;

(9) failure to disclose money to Plaintiff, which he was entitled to receive;

(10) Diverting assets so as to put them beyond the reach of Plaintiff;

(11) Paying himself excessive and/or non-disclosed salaries.

This is quite a list. But unfortunately, like the first claim for relief, this one suffers from the same lack of detailed factual allegations enough to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements under Rule 9(b). The above listed allegations appear to be nothing more than legal conclusions that are either insufficiently supported or not supported at all by the facts as alleged. For example, it is not at all clear how or why Plaintiff regards himself as an "investor" rather than merely a lender. A factual example for each of the 11 subparts would also add some substance to the complaint and possibly supply some support for the necessary allegation that Defendant was as to Plaintiff a fiduciary. Merely being a lender does not alone create a fiduciary relationship. It is also not clear whether Plaintiff is alleging embezzlement and/or larceny in the Complaint. In short, this cause of action is not supported by enough facts to state a claim that is plausible on its face.

The court notes that Plaintiff is proceeding in pro se and encourages Plaintiff to retain counsel. The Complaint involves issues that can be quite subtle and more complex than they may seem to a lay person. This is especially true when the opponent is represented by counsel. The court also notes that Plaintiff is a plaintiff, along with his wife, in another adversary proceeding involving some of the same issues. Retaining counsel could be of significant benefit to Plaintiff. Thus, since the Ninth Circuit has routinely held that leave to amend should be liberally granted, so it will be in this case. Morongo Band of Mission Indians v. Rose, 893 F.2d 1074, 1079 (9th Cir. 1990).

5. Jurisdiction Issue

The Reply also curiously argues that the court does not have jurisdiction over this adversary proceeding because the debt at issue was incurred in connection with a cannabis business. The court needs clarification on whether Bridgegate Picture Corp. is a cannabis concern or, as its name would suggest, a motion picture company, or the like. The court is aware that the other adversary proceedings do relate to loans made primarily for investment in a cannabis business, including one adversary proceeding where Mr. Samec is also a Plaintiff (along with his wife), which adds a layer of confusion that requires clarification.

Docket 62

Tentative Ruling:

This is the Trustee's motion for disallowance of, or surcharge upon Debtor's amended homestead exemption under a theory of equitable estoppel. The motion is opposed by Debtor, Susan D. Aronson (Debtor).

1. Facts

The following does not appear to be disputed. Debtor is in her mid-60s and has been without a source of significant income for at least the past 4 years. Her primary income is currently is from food stamps. Before the current bankruptcy case, Debtor had filed 3 prior Chapter 13 bankruptcies, all of which were dismissed. The three prior bankruptcies were apparently filed to stop foreclosure on her property. The current case was filed approximately two months after the third bankruptcy case was dismissed.

In the current case the Debtor took a different tack. First, she filed under Chapter 7, a liquidation, rather than a reorganization. Second, she listed the property commonly known as 27382 Capricho, Mission Viejo, CA ("property").and claimed a $75,000 homestead exemption under Cal. Civ. Pro. Code § 704.730 (as she had in the two prior filings in which schedules were filed) but filed a Statement of Intention indicating her intent to surrender the Property. On paper, the Debtor's struggle to retain the property appeared at an end. The good news was that there appeared to be decent amount of equity in the property.

Trustee broadcast her intent to sell the property. However, Trustee's attempts to sell the property were routinely frustrated by Debtor herself who argued that a sale of her home would render her effectively homeless, putting her very life in jeopardy.

Chapter 7

To allay these concerns, Trustee and her real estate agent made arrangements to assist Debtor with the transition out of her home into a new living situation. Debtor again stubbornly refused to cooperate despite accepting the money the real estate agent advanced her against her homestead exemption. When the trustee and real estate agent finally prevailed upon her to vacate her home, through use of the Marshal service, the home was in complete disarray. There was no water service and there was evidence that the home had a major rodent infestation. In short, the home was not in marketable condition without significant work, which the trustee sanctioned in order to sell the property.

After all of that was done, on September 2, 2019, the Debtor filed an Amended Schedule C in which she increased her homestead exemption under Cal. Civ. Pro. Code § 704.730 to $175,000. The only ground for a $175,000 exemption that could apply here is § 704.730(a)(3)(C), since she is "[a] person 55 years of age or older with a gross annual income of not more than twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000)..." The applicability of this statute does not appear to be contested.

The property has since been sold. Trustee asserts that with all applicable deductions considered, Trustee has a net of $108,310.58 from the sale. However, if Debtor's increase in her homestead exemption stands, then the Estate will be left with a mere $8,310.58. This will leave unpaid administrative expenses in the amount of approximately $78,000, much of which is owed to Trustee and to her counsel. There is a relatively small creditor body here, with only two claims remaining of about $50,561.71 in aggregate.

2. Estoppel Or Disallowance/ Surcharge of Exemption

Two well-established axioms in bankruptcy are that exemptions are construed liberally in favor of debtors, and debtors may freely amend their claims of exemption. See FRBP 1009(a).

The United States Supreme Court in Law v. Siegel, 571 U.S. 415, 134 S. Ct. 1188 (2014) reset the boundaries. Earlier case law had relied on 11 U.S.C. § 105(a) and/or on the bankruptcy court's "inherent power" to curb abuse and to find grounds to "surcharge" and/or disallow exemptions based upon debtor misconduct and/or trustee reliance. See e.g. Latman v. Burdette, 366 F.3d 774, 785 (9th Cir. 2004) ["The surcharge remedy simply ensured that Latmans retained the full value, but no more than the full value, of their permitted exemptions."]; In re Onubah, 375 B.R. 549, 556 (9th Cir. BAP 2007) ["While we agree that the purpose of a surcharge cannot be the punishment of a debtor, the surcharge in this case was not meted out to punish Onubah. Consistent with Latman, the surcharge was calculated to compensate the estate for the actual damage inflicted by Onubah's misconduct."]

In Law v. Siegel, the Chapter 7 trustee incurred attorney's fees of over $500,000 to establish that a trust deed recorded against the property by the debtor was a sham, to give the appearance of a lack of equity. The trustee then sought to "surcharge" the debtor's $75,000 homestead exemption to offset those expenses. The bankruptcy court, Bankruptcy Appellate Panel, and Ninth Circuit all ruled in the trustee's favor. But the Supreme Court reversed. The Court invoked 11 U.S.C. § 522(k), which states that debtors' exemptions are "not liable for payment of any administrative expense." The Supreme Court saw no textual basis to exclude misconduct-related administrative expense from § 522(k), noting that § 105(a) cannot be used to override explicit statutory provisions, and cannot confer authority to take actions that the Code prohibits.

Although the exemption was not at the heart of Law v. Siegel, the Supreme Court considered case law involving requests for the disallowance of amended exemption claims in its analysis on the basis that they presented the same issue as a "surcharge" request. Id., 571 U.S. at 425, 134 S. Ct. at 1196 ["Siegel points out that a handful of courts have claimed authority to disallow an exemption (or to bar a debtor from amending his schedules to claim an exemption, which is much the same thing) based on the debtor's fraudulent concealment of the asset alleged to be exempt."] See also In re Gray, 523 B.R. 170, 175 (9th Cir. BAP 2014) ("Thus, Law v. Siegel mandates the conclusion that the bankruptcy court is without federal authority to disallow the Amended Exemption or to deny leave to amend exemptions based on Debtors' bad faith."); In re Elliott, 523 B.R. 188, 189 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2014) ("We conclude that Law v. Siegel, — U.S. —, 134 S. Ct. 1188, 188 L.Ed.2d 146 (2014), has abrogated Ninth Circuit law such that unless statutory power exists to do so, a bankruptcy court may not deny a debtor's exemption claim or bar a debtor's exemption claim amendment on the basis of bad faith or of prejudice to creditors.")]

But the question remains: is there a statutory basis for doing so, such as California's definition of equitable estoppel? In In re Lua, 692 Fed. Appx. 851 (9th Cir. 2017), the debtor amended to claim a homestead exemption under Cal. Civ. Pro. Code § 704.730(a)(1) (after amending to remove the exemption which had been claimed on her original schedules) after the trustee had prosecuted an extended adversary proceeding to establish the estate's interest in the property, and had moved forward with the sale of the property. The Ninth Circuit reversed the District Court's disallowance of the exemption. The reasoning of the District court, though it was overruled, might still be of use in this case.

The Lua District Court analyzed the applicability of equitable estoppel to limit the California exemption, stating: "[t]o invoke equitable estoppel under California law, a party must show: '(a) a representation or concealment of material facts; (b) made with knowledge, actual or virtual, of the facts; (c) to a party ignorant, actually and permissibly, of the truth; (d) with the intention, actual or virtual, that the ignorant party act on it; and (e) that party was induced to act on it.' Simmons v. Ghaderi, 44 Cal.4th 570, 584, (2008)." In re Lua, 551 B.R. 448, 453 (C.D. Cal. 2015). Each element was resolved in favor of the trustee. The District Court stated in summary: "[i]t cannot be disputed that the Debtor did not deal fairly with the Trustee. She remained silent for three years despite knowing that the Trustee was pursuing the Property in an attempt to compensate creditors, then amended her schedules at the last minute to nullify the Trustee's significant efforts and reap a windfall for herself and the marital community." Id. at 455.

The Ninth Circuit in Lua did not dispute the applicability of equitable estoppel to the limitation of exemptions under California law, and did not dispute the elements, as recited by the District Court. But the Circuit Court took exception with the District Court's application of the elements on the facts of the case. First, the court stated that the amended schedules eliminating the exemption "cannot form the basis of an estoppel because they set forth all of the existing facts known to Lua." 692 Fed. Appx. at 852. Second, the trustee "should have known, that in the event circumstances changed, Lua could amend her exemptions". Id.

In a dissenting opinion, which sounds a lot like our case, Judge Callahan stated:

"While it is true that Lua did not know her exact interest in the home at the time she filed her first amended schedules and that Lua never affirmatively stated she would not change her amended exemption election at a later time, Lua stood idly by as the Trustee toiled away, failing to give the Trustee even so much as an indication that she was contemplating claiming the homestead exemption. In light of these particular facts, I cannot say that the bankruptcy court abused its discretion in finding that this case's equities favored not allowing Lua to amend her first amended schedules." Id. at 853.

3. Equitable Estoppel in This Case

So, Lua stands for the proposition that equitable estoppel, on certain facts, can limit a debtor's power to amend exemptions at the expense of the estate. Trustee argues that in this case, all the required elements of equitable estoppel are present:

- Representation of Material Facts – Trustee asserts that this element is satisfied because Debtor claimed the same exemption ($75,000 under Cal. Civ. Pro. Code § 704.730(a)(1)) in three separate bankruptcy cases. She reiterated the amount of the exemption numerous times in several contexts, including her own motion seeking the imposition of the automatic stay, and her opposition to Trustee's Turnover Motion. Thus, Trustee concludes that Debtor had been concealing her intent to increase her exemption by the amendment.

- Made with knowledge, actual or virtual, of the facts – Trustee argues that this element is satisfied because Debtor was certainly aware of her age and her income status. Trustee also asserts that the amendment was not in response to any specific changed circumstance of the case. Rather, claiming the lower exemption was a strategy to convey the illusion that gainful employment was in prospect.
- To a party ignorant, actually and permissibly, of the truth – Trustee argues that since the higher homestead exemption had never been claimed in any of Debtor’s three prior filings, this is evidence that there had always been a strategic reason for the Debtor not to claim the higher exemption: she has maintained throughout all three cases that she is on the verge of receiving income, necessary in the prior Chapter 13 cases to support a Plan, and necessary in this case to justify her continuing hope that she could purchase the equity in the Property. Trustee argues that she had no reason to believe Debtor would, suddenly, adjust her homestead exemption so drastically after eviction and after Trustee and her real estate agent had gone out of their way to ease Debtor’s transition to a new living situation.
- With the intention, actual or virtual, that the ignorant party act on it – Trustee asserts that Debtor intended for Trustee to rely on the original $75,000 homestead exemption. In support of this argument, Trustee asserts that Debtor’s argument in resisting turnover of the Property to Trustee was that there was significant equity in the Property, such that any delay impacted only her surplus, not any creditor of the Estate. However, this was only true if Debtor maintained her original homestead exemption. That ceased to be the case once she increased the exemption. The original homestead exemption also was a key factor in Trustee’s real estate agent’s decision to advance her the money to facilitate her move-out.

- That party was induced to act on it – Trustee asserts that she relied on the original exemption claim and, in that reliance moved forward with administering the estate. Trustee argues that had she known earlier in the case that Debtor intended to increase her exemption, Trustee would likely not have voluntarily incurred out-of-pocket expenses and attorney’s fees in her disputes with Debtor. In fact, Trustee would not have administered the property at all.

Trustee argues that the foregoing gives the court cause to invoke the doctrine of equitable estoppel, or at least to surcharge the exemption with the costs of administration resulting from Trustee’s unfortunate reliance on Debtor’s representations. Trustee asserts that Debtor’s conduct amounted to a ‘bait and switch.’ Trustee does not have any issue with Debtor still claiming her original $75,000 homestead exemption. Debtor further argues that Lua actually strengthens Debtor’s position. Primarily, Debtor argues that, like in Lua, the Trustee must have been aware that Debtor could properly amend her schedules at any time, including increasing her asserted homestead exemption. Debtor also notes that Trustee does not challenge Debtor’s right to do this.

Debtor points out that she did not make any affirmative representation that the $75,000 homestead exemption was set in stone. Debtor points out that Trustee could have asked Debtor to stipulate to that amount but chose not to do so. In any case, Debtor argues that Trustee has not shown how the amended exemption materially affects the case. Trustee was still able to liquidate the property. As to the advancing of funds against her exemption, Debtor argues that the money very likely would have been advanced to Debtor even if the homestead exemption had been larger at the time. The reason is that Debtor needed the money at that moment to facilitate her move-out and transition. The amount of her exemption would not have changed that. The real estate agent will still be reimbursed for advancing the funds, so he is no worse off. Debtor next argues that there is no evidence that the increased homestead exemption has impaired the administration of the estate or harmed any creditors. Debtor notes there are still judgment liens attached to the property that could be avoided to the extent that they impair her exemption. However, Debtor argues that this is something of a moving target that requires resolution of the equitable estoppel theory.

Debtor argues there is nothing in Law v. Siegel that allows a common law authority to abrogate Title 11. While Trustee's use of equitable estoppel is derived from a California statute, Evidence Code § 623, i.e. "Whenever a party has, by his own statement or conduct, intentionally and deliberately led another to believe a particular thing true and to act upon such belief, he is not, in any litigation arising out of such statement or conduct, permitted to contradict it", this is merely codification of common law, and not the sort of statutory provision mentioned as a possible except in Law v. Siegel. Although Law v. Siegel no longer allows the bankruptcy court to deny a debtor's claimed exemption based on bad faith conduct or prejudice to creditors under vague equitable principles as found under §105, the Supreme Court has held that a "valid statutory basis" is sufficient grounds to deny a debtor's homestead exempt." Elliot v. Weil 523 B.R. 188, 189 (9th Cir. BAP 2014). From this, Debtor argues that the use of equitable estoppel, a common law principle from the California Rules of Evidence, should not trump what by statute Congress has expressly provided, i.e. that the Debtor has a right to amend the petition at any time before the case is closed. F.R.B.P. 1009(a). Finally, in response to Trustee's assertion that Debtor's conduct is tantamount to making a mockery of the bankruptcy process and that her stubborn unwillingness to cooperate throughout the process should not be rewarded, Debtor notes that she is destitute, living off of food stamps, and suffered a traumatic brain injury as a result from a car accident some years ago.

4. Amended Homestead Exemption Should Stand

Trustee's exasperation is understandable. The job of a trustee is often marked by difficulties and disappointment. The Debtor's behavior in this case is questionable, put charitably. There's an adage about "biting the hand that feeds you..." that comes to mind "or is it the Al Wilson song about the tender-hearted woman and the snake?

Or is it "no good deed goes unpunished"? This court may even have reservations about the wisdom of Law v. Siegel in the first place. But this court has little choice but to implement what the Code provides as interpreted by the highest court in the land. Debtor does have the right to amend her schedules when she sees fit, and Trustee does not dispute this point. Trustee also does not dispute that Debtor qualifies for the higher homestead exemption.

While the court is not persuaded that the doctrine of equitable estoppel is categorically inapplicable to bankruptcy cases, the court is also not persuaded that there is sufficient evidence in this record that would amount to an affirmative representation that Debtor would not amend her schedules and take the higher exemption. In Lua, the court noted that a 'change in circumstances' is what likely led Debtor permissibly to amend her schedules. However, the definition of "change in circumstances" is somewhat vague and its application here even more so. Courts that have applied the doctrine of equitable estoppel seem to have relied on concrete evidence of affirmative statements by debtors that they would not seek to change their exemptions, creating estoppel in the trustee's favor. See In re Gonzalez, 2019 Bankr. LEXIS 962 *1, *75-77 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. Mar. 27, 2019) ("Debtor testified under oath at the continued meeting of creditors... that his statements on his original and amended bankruptcy schedules were true and correct, including his claim of the personal property exemptions under C.C.P. § 703.140(b), even though Trustee advised Debtor that he could use either the personal property exemptions under the bankruptcy-like exemptions of C.C.P. § 703.140(b) or the alternative exemptions, including a homestead exemption, under regular California non-bankruptcy exemptions of C.C.P. § 704, but not both.")

Here, Trustee argues, there was no such change in circumstances for Debtor. However, as Debtor seems to argue, her realization that she would not be able to continue earning a living to support herself could also possibly be interpreted as a change of circumstances from earlier in the case and from her prior petitions. As noted, Debtor suffers from a brain injury, and as such, a 'change in circumstances' might be cast in a different light. Also, considering Debtor's prior bankruptcies, which were apparently filed to ward off foreclosure proceedings, the reality and finality of losing her house might be interpreted as a 'change in circumstances.' In short, that Debtor made an affirmative representation to Trustee regarding her homestead exemption that would support a finding of estoppel appears here to be too speculative. Trustee appears to have done diligent work in administering this case, and she and her real estate agent showed admirable compassion for Debtor. However, the hard facts after Law v. Siegel are that Debtor can amend her schedules essentially at any time prior to the closing of the case, and that Trustee must have understood that was a possibility from the outset undercutting estoppel, as in Lua. Further, Trustee's arguments that Debtor made material misrepresentations as to her intent to only claim the $75,000 exemption is far too vague and amorphous to be convincing, especially given Debtor's many personal difficulties. The takeaway from the perspective of trustees is there is no substitute for a written waiver agreement, or similar, that will provide a clear foundation for estoppel or other basis for enforcement if breached.

Tentative for 1/22/20:
Grant conversion. See #6.

Tentative for 12/11/19:

This conversion or dismissal motion of the UST was originally scheduled for October 30, 2019. At that time the court expressed a need for a bit more time to assess whether a reorganization might be still be feasible despite a record of the last 6 (now 8) months of mostly losses. The MORS show a distressing accumulation of operational losses which raises the court's skepticism. The Debtor does not really explain the path out except to hold the vague optimism that a sale can somehow be achieved soon. But no offer of purchase is reported, and the most recent MOR shows an ending negative balance. The court cannot permit ongoing operations if the result is to incur yet more administrative costs that cannot be paid. 11 U.S.C. §1112(b)(4) lists ongoing losses as its first definition of "cause" for conversion or dismissal. That seems to be the case here.

The court will hear argument as to whether conversion or dismissal is the better remedy.

2020. The court is inclined to continue the hearing to coincide.

Tentative for 10/30/19:

So long as UST confirms Debtor is current on quarterly payments and MORs the motion will be denied. Of course, there is ground for skepticism given the enormous tax claims. But perhaps a few months of additional opportunity is appropriate.

#5.00 Disclosure Statement Describing Debtor's Chapter 11 Plan Of Reorganization
Dated October 15, 2019
(cont'd from 12-11-19)

Docket 138

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/22/20:

See #6. Debtor is attempting to sell substantially all assets, which makes this version of a plan a non-sequitur.

Continue or take off calendar as seems appropriate.

Tentative for 12/11/19:

The court has been generous in allowing extensions to Debtor in order to assess the viability of a reorganization. However, as asserted by Trustee, based on Debtor's own disclosures and the deteriorating financial condition, a successful reorganization doesnot look to be a likely prospect. At the very least, projections with an explanation of how the money-losing trends of last 6 months can be expected to be reversed.

No tentative.

Docket 150

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/22/20:

This is the motion of debtor under §363(f) to sell substantially all assets of the estate free of liens to Grand Theater, Inc., an entity owned and controlled by Musa Madain, the principal of the debtor. The assets to be sold consist primarily of the leasehold (about 25 years left), with personal property therein, commonly known as 2232 S. Harbor Blvd., Anaheim, CA. The property is operated as an events center. The proposed price is $1 million cash plus assumption by the buyer or waiver of six enumerated creditors of an aggregate of about another $1 million, but of which $631,590 is held by Mr. Madain. Debtor admits that valuation of the noncash portion of the bid will take further analysis, but in other places Debtor alleges the total value is $2 million. From the cash portion of the price about $420,000 is proposed to be paid to secured claims, although the accurate amount of aggregate secured claims may be much higher as, for example, the County of Orange's claim alone is $395,040. The price is made subject to overbids in the proposed initial minimum amount of $100,000 (initial bid $1,100,000) to be followed by subsequent overbids of at least $10,000, but to qualify as an overbidder $200,000 must first be paid care of Debtor's counsel.

The proposed sale is opposed by Fariborz Wosoughkia, a creditor for about $95,000 and a 30% shareholder and by the California Department of Tax and Fee Administration owed around $418,130. The arguments are primarily to the effect that the sale to an insider merits closer scrutiny and that the price is too low, or at least the marketing efforts over the holidays were inadequate. Mr. Wosoughkia adds to the effect that Mr. Madain is a fraud, and this is just another in a long parade of such frauds.

The U.S. Trustee has not formally opposed the sale but has his own motion to dismiss or convert already on calendar as #4 which has been continued twice since October 30, 2019. That motion is based primarily on a continuing list of monthly operating losses as reported in the MORs.

Debtor is correct that a sale to an insider is not per se improper. See Mission Prod. Holdings v. Old Cold, LLC (In re Old Cold LLC), 558 B.R. 500, 516 (1st Cir. BAP 2016). But it is also true that sales to insiders are always subject to a heightened level of scrutiny since the opportunity for malfeasance is higher. See e.g. In re Roussos, 541 B.R. 721, 730 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2015). In this respect the court's primary disappointment is in the level of marketing. The Debtor argues that it corresponded with all "persons known to have a potential interest in Debtor and Debtor's property." Goe Declaration ¶. But "known to whom"? While somewhat unclear, this group of self-selected recipients seems primarily to be the existing shareholders. Other potential buyers, Gotham Assets and a Delaware bankruptcy attorney for one Daniel Dokhanian, are also mentioned. Perhaps not surprisingly, nothing came of these inquiries as most seemed only interested in acquiring the fee interest, not a lease. But conspicuously lacking is any systematic sales effort. No mention is made either of advertisement or of any broker being hired. So, we really don't know whether an earnest marketing effort was made. As the Roussos court observes, this is fatal where the winning buyer ends up being the principal of the debtor because the insider frequently has counter incentives to those of the creditor body, i.e. a lower price, not a higher one, and less marketing not more. Id. at 730. On this record the court cannot make a finding that optimal value was obtained, and it is little comfort to know that this sale is made subject to overbids when one has no means for knowing how wide an audience was sought.

Debtor argues that loss of a sale for $1 million would be a tragedy, and that might be so. But the court may have a remedy at hand. The United States Trustee's motion to convert is also on calendar. If granted this would have the effect of placing a fiduciary in charge immediately. That fiduciary can quickly evaluate whether a more vigorous sales effort is warranted, and/or whether the existing offer from Mr. Madain deserves a further look. If an operating order to preserve value is needed while such a systematic sales effort is made, it should be available for the asking.

Tentative for 11/30/17:

Continue to February 25, 2018 at 10:00 a.m.

Tentative for 10/1/15:

This is a hearing on that portion of the Trustee's summary judgment motion going to the question of damages for the fraudulent transfer to defendant Fusionbridge Wyoming and for defendant Aarsvold's breach of fiduciary duty. The court has already indicated in its lengthy tentative decision published for the hearing August 6, 2015 (see Exhibit "1" to moving papers) that liability has been established. The court set this matter for further hearing and briefing because it did not believe that the amount of damages had been adequately established in the earlier motion. The court still does not believe that the amount has been established as a matter of law nor as one without material question of fact, as is required in a Rule 56 context.

The Trustee's argument boils down to the dubious assertion that all amounts shown on defendant Fusion Bridge Wyoming's 2012 tax return taken as a business deduction for expenditures to consultants or subcontractors ($594,587 or $516,523.90 in defendants' version) is either a fraudulent deduction or in fact represents payment (in the main) to Mr. Aarsvold. From this premise the Trustee further argues that perforce such sums must be "damages" caused by the fraudulent conveyance. There are problems with this premise even before we get to the bulk of the argument about excluding evidence, as addressed below. The first problem is that the court cannot accept the premise that even if most of the said sum went to Aarsvold this necessarily translates dollar for dollar as damages. Presumably, Aarsvold did some work allegedly to earn these payments. This is the assumption although neither side produces much addressing this issue. Presumably, the revenue enjoyed would not have been received by Fusionbridge Wyoming absent someone doing some work, at a cost. The Trustee's task would seem to be in establishing that there a margin or delta of some kind between the cost of producing the product and the amounts received, representing the value of the transferred assets. If the contention is that fraudulent transferors like Aarsvold don't get anything for their labors, or that they work for free, and therefore their efforts are simply added to the value of the transferred assets, that contention will have to be supported by some authority. But the court sees none.

The bulk of the Trustee's argument seems to be that the burden is on the defendants to prove the validity of deductions, and that defendant should be foreclosed from proving or even questioning any of this because some of the substantiating documentation of amounts paid other consultants than Aarsvold was not timely produced, or was not timely identified by Aarsvold in his deposition. Turning to FRCP 37(c)(1), the Trustee argues that any such evidence offered now should be stripped from the record as a sanction. But there are problems with this argument too. First, as discussed above, the court is not convinced that this is the defendants' burden or that the court can accept the Trustee's dubious premise (that the revenue can be produced or counted dollar for dollar without someone spending time as a deductible cost). But even if it were the defendants' burden, Rule 37(c)(1) is not by its terms absolute. Other alternative sanctions are enumerated in the Rule and the sanction is qualified if there is a showing that the omission was "substantially justified" or "harmless." While the court is not prepared to say that any of these omissions were justified, Mr. Negrete's prolonged and unexplained absence and the question raised in the papers whether the documents were given to him (but inexplicably not forwarded in discovery) make a strict application of the sanction unlikely, at least absent more explanation.

In sum, the court is not convinced on this record that the amount of damages can be determined without consideration of disputed fact. Nor is the court persuaded of the Trustee's premise on damages in the first place.

Chapter 7

1. Introduction

This is Trustee's Motion for Summary Judgment to (1) avoid and recover fraudulent transfer, (2) for judgment that Defendant breached fiduciary duty, and (3) that Defendant is the alter ego of Debtor. The key issue in the fraudulent transfer claims is whether Defendant had the requisite intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors. The undisputed facts indicate that he did. Prior to bankruptcy, Mr. Matthew Aarsvold ("Aarsvold") transferred substantially all of Debtor's assets to Fusionbridge Wyoming. He did this while litigation against Debtor was pending. There was no consideration given for the exchange. Although Aarsvold asserts that this transfer was intended to protect Debtor, he offers no documentary evidence or specific details to support his argument.

2. Statement of Facts

There is an extended history involving transfers of assets between Aarsvold's corporations and entities, in each case after creditors began to apply pressure. Back in 2005, Aarsvold owned Strategix, Ltd. ("Strategix") and ePassage, Inc. ("ePassage"). A lawsuit was filed in Orange County Superior Court and claims were asserted by Infocrossing West, Inc. and Infocrossing Services, Inc. (collectively, "Infocrossing") against Strategix, ePassage, and Aarsvold ("State Court Action"). See State Court Action's docket attached as Exhibit "10" to Wood Decl. Infocrossing obtained a preliminary injunction against Strategix, ePassage, and Aarsvold. Id. On August of 2005, Aarsvold filed paperwork to incorporate Debtor. See Wood Decl., Ex. "18." Debtor performed substantially the same services as Strategix and ePassage. See Wood Decl., Ex. 8, pg. 405:26-406:3. In June of 2009, a judgment was entered against Aarsvold, Strategix, and ePassage amounting to approximately $1.3 million in damages. Wood Decl., Ex. 9 and Ex. 10, pg. 428. Mr. and Mrs. Aarsvold filed a Chapter 7 petition that same month. See copy of docket for Aarsvold Bankruptcy attached as Ex. "19" to Wood Decl.

October of 2011, Aarsvold executed the APA as CEO of both Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming. Wood Decl., Ex. 2, pg. 49. Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming entered into an Asset Purchase Agreement ("APA") on October 29, 2011. Exhibit "2." Pursuant to the APA, substantially all of Debtor's assets were sold to Fusionbridge Wyoming. In exchange for these assets, Fusionbridge Wyoming agreed to pay approximately $100,000 in Debtor's credit card debt. All of the assumed credit card debt had been personally guaranteed by Aarsvold. Why only these selected obligations were assumed is never explained in the opposition. The contracts that Fusionbridge Wyoming agreed to assume were customer contracts and the consulting agreements of Debtor's contractors that were performing the work required by the assumed customer contracts. Wood Decl., Ex. 2, pg. 40, § 1.4. Aarsvold signed the APA as "Chief Executive Officer" for both Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming. Id., pg. 49.

On November 28, 2012 ("Petition Date"), Fusionbridge, Ltd. ("Fusionbridge California" or "Debtor") filed a Chapter 7 petition. Karen S. Naylor is the appointed Chapter 7 Trustee ("Trustee"). On January 2, 2013, Debtor filed its schedules and statement of financial affairs ("Schedules"). Pursuant to the Schedules, Debtor had assets valued at $6.17 and liabilities totaling $4,762,895.60 as of the Petition Date. See Wood Decl., Ex. 1, pg. 6-25. In Debtor's Statement of Financial Affairs ("SOFA"), Debtor disclosed a transfer of assets to Fusionbridge Wyoming. The SOFA states that Debtor received no value in connection with the transfer and that it had no relationship with the transferee, Fusionbridge Wyoming. Id., at pg. 32. The Schedules were signed by Aarsvold as Debtor's "CEO." Id. at pg. 28 & 36.

In November of 2013, Trustee filed this adversary proceeding against Fusionbridge Wyoming and Aarsvold seeking recovery on the following claims for relief: (1) For avoidance and recovery of fraudulent transfer pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 544, 548(a)(1)(A), 550, 551; Cal. Civ. Code §§ 3439, et seq., against both Fusion Wyoming and Aarsvold; (2) For avoidance and recovery of fraudulent transfer pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 544, 548(a)(1)(B), 550, 551; Cal. Civ. Code §§ 3439.05, et seq., against both Fusion Wyoming and Aarsvold; (3) Breach of fiduciary duty against Aarsvold; and (4) Conversion against both Fusion Wyoming and Aarsvold. On November 1, 2013, Trustee filed the Complaint, asserting claims against Fusionbridge Wyoming and Aarsvold. Wood Decl., Ex. "3."

A similar pattern continued even after this bankruptcy was filed. On January 10, 2014, Aarsvold's wife, Ms. Laurel Aarsvold, incorporated Glomad Services, Ltd. ("Glomad Services"). Wood Decl., Ex. "16." Sometime between January 10, 2014 and August 15, 2014, Aarsvold begins "shutting down" Fusionbridge Wyoming and starts working at 77 North Baker Inc. ("North Baker"), a company owned by Mrs. Aarsvold. Wood Decl., Ex "6" and "4." Between August 15, 2014 and December 12, 2014, North Baker begins shutting down. Mr. Aarsvold begins to work at Glomad Services where he performs the same services as he performed while working for Debtor. Wood Decl., Ex. 7, pg. 317:5-22.

3. Summary Judgment Standard

Trustee moves for summary judgment on the following claims. First, Trustee seeks a judgment on a matter of law that Defendants committed a fraudulent transfer (both actual and constructive fraud) pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 544, 548(a)(1)(A), (a)(1)(B), 550, 551, and Cal. Civ. Code §§ 3439, et seq. Second, Trustee seeks a judgment that Aarsvold breached his fiduciary duties to Debtor. Third, Trustee seeks summary judgment that Aarsvold is the alter ego of both Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming. Fourth, Trustee seeks summary judgment dismissing all of Defendants' asserted affirmative defenses in Defendants' Answer to Complaint.

Rule 56 of the FRCP, which applies in adversary proceedings pursuant to Rule 7056 of the FRBP, provides that a party seeking to recover upon a claim may move for summary judgment in the party's favor upon all or any part thereof. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. Summary judgment is appropriate on a claim when there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. See Aronsen v. Zellerback, 662 F. 2d 584, 591, (9th Cir. 1981). In addition to declaration testimony, it is also appropriate for the court to consider previous matters of record (such as orders, pleadings and the like) by way of a request for judicial notice when considering a motion for summary judgment. See Insurance Co. of North America v. Hilton Hotels USA, Inc., et al., 908 F. Supp. 809 (D. Nev. 1995).

The party seeking summary judgment bears the initial burden of establishing the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-23 (1986). However once the moving party has carried its burden under Rule 56, its opponent must do more than show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts . . . the non-moving party must come forward with "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Matsushita Electric Industrial Co Ltd v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574 (1986). In fact, if the factual context makes the nonmoving party's claim implausible, that party must come forward with more persuasive evidence than would otherwise be necessary to show that there is a genuine issue of material fact. Calhoun v. Liberty Northwest Ins. Corp., 789 F. Supp. 1540, 1545 (W.D. Wash. 1992) (citing Matsushita Electric, supra, at 538). A party cannot "rest upon the mere allegations or denials of his pleading" in opposing summary judgment. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 247-48 (1986).

A self-serving declaration without evidence is not enough to show that there is a genuine issue of material fact. The Ninth Circuit has held that a "conclusory, self-serving affidavit, lacking detailed facts and any supporting evidence, is insufficient to create a genuine issue of material fact." F.T.C. v. Publ'g Clearing House, Inc., 104 F. 3d 1168, 1171 (9th Cir. 1997). A declaration which contradicts earlier deposition testimony will also fail to create an issue of material fact. See Andreini & Co., Inc. v. Lindner, 931 F. 2d 896 (9th Cir. 1991) (citing Radobenko v. Automated Equipment Corp., 520 F. 2d 540 (9th Cir. 1975)).

4. First Claim for Relief—Avoidance and Recovery of an Intentionally Fraudulent Transfer

Under 11 U.S.C. § 548, a trustee may avoid a debtor's fraudulent transfer of property made with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 544, 548(a)(1)(A). To prevail in a 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A) action, the trustee must show: (1) the debtor transferred an interest in property or a debt; (2) within two years before the petition filing date; and (3) with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud present or future creditors.

In this case, Defendants do not dispute the claim that a transfer occurred two years before the Petition Date. The key issue here centers on the third element: whether Defendants had the actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors. Whether a transfer has been made with actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor is a question of fact. United States v. Tabor Court Realty Corp., F. 2d 1288, 1304 (3rd Cir. 1986). Courts generally infer fraudulent intent from the circumstances surrounding the transaction. In re Acequia, Inc., 34 F. 3d 800, 805-806 (9th Cir. 1994). Courts look for "badges of fraud" that indicate fraudulent intent. Id. at 806. The traditional "badges of fraud" include:

- (1) The transfer of an obligation to an insider or other person with a special relationship with the debtor;
- (2) The debtor retained possession or control over the property after the transfer;
- (3) The transfer was not disclosed;
- (4) Actual or threatened litigation against the debtor at the time of the transfer;
- (5) The transfer included all or substantially all of the debtor's assets;
- (6) The debtor absconded;
- (7) The debtor removed or concealed assets;
- (8) The value of the consideration received by the debtor was not reasonably equivalent to the value of the asset transfer;
- (9) Insolvency or other unmanageable indebtedness on the part of the

(10) The transfer occurred shortly after a substantial debt was incurred; and

(11) Whether the debtor transferred the essential assets of the business to a lienholder who transferred the assets to an insider of the debtor.

In re Acequia, Inc., 34 F. 3d at 806; see also Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.04(b)(1)-(11).
Fraudulent intent is inferred "when an insolvent debtor makes a transfer and gets nothing or very little in return." Kupetz v. Wolf, 845 F. 2d 842, 846 (9th Cir. 1988).

Here, the evidence in the record shows that at least six (6) "badges of fraud" are present. Each applicable to this case is discussed below:

(a) Actual or threatened litigation against the debtor at the time of the transfer.

The Debtor was involved in pending litigation at the time of the transfer. At the time of the APA transfer, Aarsvold and his previous companies (Strategix and ePassage) had been in litigation with Infocrossing since June of 2005. Aarsvold and his companies kept losing legal battles and per Aarsvold's own testimony, the APA was entered into because "it was unlikely that [Debtor] could get an additional line of credit for operating funds. . ." Tellingly, the Petition Date was only days after the state court granted Infocrossing's motion compelling Aarsvold to appear to furnish information to aid in enforcement of money judgment and Infocrossing's motion for attorney's fees. Wood Decl., Ex. 10, pg. 443. The facts are undisputed that Debtor was involved in litigation at the time of the transfer. Thus this "badge of fraud" (of litigation against the Debtor at the time of the transfer) is present here.

(b) The transfer included substantially all of Debtor's assets.

The court finds that the transferred assets pursuant to the APA were substantially all of Debtor's assets. This "badge of fraud" is present for the following reasons. First, a review of Debtor's bankruptcy documents strongly indicates that substantially all of Debtor's assets were transferred. Debtor disclosed only $6.17 of personal property on its Schedule B. However in its Statement of Financial Affairs, Debtor admitted to receiving $1,331,772.00 in gross income in 2010, and $996,015.00 in gross income for 2011. The only logical explanation is that substantially all of Debtor's assets were transferred to Fusionbridge Wyoming. Defendants do not offer any documentary evidence showing that Debtor retained assets that were not transferred to Fusionbridge Wyoming.

Second, the plain language of the APA provides that there was a transfer of all or substantially all of Debtor's property. Specifically, section 1.1 of the APA provides that the Debtor was selling to Fusionbridge Wyoming all its "right, title, and interest in and to the assets of the Business.

Third, Fusionbridge Wyoming assumed all, save one, of Debtor's contracts to perform services. The only customer that Debtor did not transfer had a contract that ended before the APA sale closed on January 1, 2012. Based on the above evidence, this "badge of fraud" is present here.

(c) Debtor was rendered insolvent by the transaction.

It is uncontroverted and self-evident that Debtor was insolvent or became insolvent when the sale contemplated in the APA was concluded. Debtor no longer had assets to conduct business but retained virtually all of its liabilities. Wood Decl., Ex. 1, pg. 8-25. Aarsvold himself testified that the sale was necessary because of Debtor's "debt load" and "it was unlikely that [Debtor] could get an additional line of credit for operating funds . . ." Wood Decl., Ex. 6, pg. 265:10-12. Defendants do not offer any evidence indicating Debtor was not insolvent when the APA was executed. Thus this "badge of fraud" is also present.

(d) A special relationship existed between Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming.

It is undisputed that Aarsvold was acting as the CEO for both Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming at the time the APA was negotiated and executed. Wood Decl., Ex.2, pg. 49. Aarsvold himself recalled being the only person involved in deciding to enter into the APA. Wood Decl., Ex. 6, pg. 237:2-8. The evidence is clear--there existed a special relationship between Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming.

(e) Debtor did not receive reasonably equivalent value.

Debtor did not receive reasonably equivalent value in the APA transfer. Although Fusionbridge Wyoming received substantially all of Debtor's assets, the only consideration it "paid" to Debtor was the assumption of certain debts that had been personally guaranteed by Aarsvold. Even then, Fusionbridge Wyoming has not paid those debts. Yet the contracts Fusionbridge Wyoming received generated significant earnings. According to its 2012 tax return, Fusionbridge Wyoming earned approximately $771,000 during 2012. Moreover, Aarsvold admitted he did not go through a process of trying to value the assets held by Fusionbridge California before transferring those assets to Fusionbridge Wyoming.

Defendants argue that somehow valid consideration was passed as equivalent value in their Opposition. Defendants' argument fails. First, Defendants' Opposition cites case law that elaborates on the definition of "reasonably equivalent value." See Opposition, pg. 6. What is sorely lacking in Defendants' Opposition, however, is any kind of evidence or specific facts pertaining to the APA transfer that support any kind of legal argument that Debtor did receive a reasonably equivalent value. From the standpoint of creditors (particularly those left behind and not assumed), nothing of any consequence was received in return for transfer of all of the Debtor's assets.

(f) The transfer was concealed.

The circumstances and evidence strongly indicate the transfer was concealed. Fusionbridge Wyoming used the same corporate name as Debtor. Fusionbridge Wyoming used Debtor's mailing address, telephone number, and email addresses. Fusionbridge Wyoming used the same consultants as Debtor. Fusionbridge Wyoming even generated invoices that appeared identical to Debtor's invoices. All of these practices suggest that Aarsvold desired to keep the APA transfer secret.

Defendants do not even address this "badge of fraud" in their Opposition. They do not assert that they disclosed the transfer to anyone, nor do they offer any evidence to rebut Trustee's claims. Without any argument or evidence to the contrary, the evidence on the record strongly indicates that the APA transfer was concealed and this "badge of fraud" is present.

(g) Conclusion of First Claim.

In conclusion, the Court should grant the Trustee's motion for summary judgment as to the first claim. Defendants concede that there was a transfer within 2 years of the petition date. The only remaining element in question is whether Defendants had the requisite intent. To infer intent, courts rely on the presence of "badges of fraud." Here, the record shows that at least six badges of fraud are present. These "badges of fraud" strongly indicate that Defendants had the intent to delay, defraud or hinder creditors. Defendants do not offer any documentary evidence or specifics to rebut Trustee's claims regarding these "badges of fraud." Defendants's only evidence is Aarsvold's self-serving declaration that he was actually attempting to assist the Debtor by transferring what he claims were mostly unprofitable accounts. But this is inherently incredible; the court does not see how denuding a corporation of all of its assets and leaving it with only debt can somehow be regarded as indicative of benign intent. And although every transferred contract or relationship might not have been a winner, the continued income enjoyed by Fusionbridge Wyoming immediately starting from zero, belies this claim.

5. Second Claim for Relief—Avoidance and Recovery of a Constructively Fraudulent Transfer

Under federal law, Trustee can avoid a "constructively" fraudulent transfer even in the absence of actual fraudulent intent. A "constructively" fraudulent transfer is one that was made in exchange for less than "reasonably equivalent value" at a time when debtor was insolvent. 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(B). To prevail on a claim for constructive fraudulent transfer under § 548(a)(1)(B), a trustee must establish (1) debtor transferred an interest in property, (2) debtor was insolvent at time of transfer or was rendered insolvent as a result of transfer, was engaged in business or was about to engage in business for which debtor's remaining property constituted unreasonably small capital, or intended to incur or believed that it would incur debts beyond its ability to pay as they matured, and (3) debtor received less than reasonably equivalent value in exchange for transfer. In re Saba Enterprises, Inc., 421 B.R. 626, 645 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2009); In re Pajaro Dunes Rental Agency, Inc., 174 B.R. 557 (N.D. Cal. 1994).

Under California law, a transfer is constructively fraudulent: (1) as to a creditor whose claim arose before the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred; (2) if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (3) the debtor was insolvent at the time or the debtor became insolvent as a result of the transfer or obligation. Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.05.

As discussed below, Trustee meets all elements of a constructively fraudulent transfer under both Federal and state law. There is no genuine issue of material fact as to this claim.

(a) The transfer contemplated in the APA was a constructively fraudulent transfer under Federal law.

Trustee establishes all the following elements for a constructively fraudulent transfer claim under Federal law:

i. Transfer of interest in property

It is uncontested that Debtor executed the APA and a transfer occurred. According to the APA, Debtor sold, assigned and delivered to Fusion Wyoming all of Debtor's ". . . equipment, furniture, fixtures, supplies and other similar property used in the Business; all material records related to the performance of the Assumed Contracts prior to the Closing Date; All Business Intellectual Property; All customer lists, price lists, advertising and promotional materials, sales and marketing materials, e-mail addresses used in the Business; [and] the goodwill and other intangible assets of the Business." Wood Decl., Ex. 2, pg. 39 & 51. Defendants concede that a transfer occurred.

ii. Debtor was insolvent

It is also uncontested that Debtor was insolvent or became insolvent when the transfer contemplated in the APA was concluded. At the time of the transaction, Debtor had over one million dollars in debt but had virtually no assets with which such obligations could be paid. See Wood Decl., Ex. 28. Defendants also do not offer any argument or evidence to show that Debtor was not insolvent at the time the APA transfer was executed.

iii. Debtor received less than reasonably equivalent value

The Debtor did not receive "reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation." Aarsvold admitted that "[n]o cash was exchanged" from Fusionbridge Wyoming to Debtor. Wood Decl. Ex. 5, pg. 166, at 79:20-21. Any revenue generated from the contracts was paid to Fusionbridge Wyoming. These customer contracts provided Fusionbridge Wyoming with approximately $771,000 in revenue in 2012. Additionally, Fusionbridge Wyoming received Debtor's accounts receivables, which exceeded $2.5 million.

In return, Debtor received nothing. Debtor was supposed to receive payment of selected credit card debt, but even that did not occur.

Defendants assert that Aarsvold was transferring "risky" contracts in order to save Debtor from further liability. This assertion fails because Defendants offer no documentary evidence in support of this assertion. There is no evidence these contracts were costly or risky. A self-serving declaration that the contracts were liabilities will not suffice. It is clear from the record that Debtor received less than reasonably equivalent value (in fact, nothing) in exchange for the transfer.

Chapter 7

(b) The transfer contemplated in the APA was a constructively fraudulent transfer under California state law.

Trustee succeeds in establishing all the following requisite elements of a constructive fraudulent transfer under California state law.

i. There was a creditor in existence at the time the transfer was made

It is undisputed that there was at least one creditor in existence at the time the transfer was made. Pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code § 3439.05, Trustee must establish that there was a creditor in existence at the time of the transfer whose claim remained unpaid on the Petition Date. Here, there are at least two creditors.

On October 28, 2013, Superior Financial Group ("Superior"), filed proof of claim 4-1 indicating that Superior loaned Debtor $10,000 pursuant to a "loan agreement/promissory note" executed by Aarsvold in December of 2008. As of the Petition Date, the account balance was $12,847.92. Additionally, on November 4, 2013, Global Systems Integration, Inc. ("Global,") filed proof of claim 5-1 asserting a claim for $18,662.50 ("Global POC"). According to the Global POC, Debtor incurred the $18,662.50 liability between 2007 and 2008. The obligations to both Superior and Global arose before the transfer, and still existed as of the Petition Date.

ii. Debtor did not receive reasonably equivalent value

Both state and federal law defining constructively fraudulent transfers share this element. As discussed above, Debtor did not receive reasonably equivalent value for the transfer. Despite Defendants' assertion that Aarsvold was trying to transfer liabilities to Fusionbridge Wyoming or that valid consideration was passed as equivalent value, Defendants offer no evidence in support of this argument. Rather, the evidence on the record shows that Debtor received nothing in return for giving up its assets to Fusionbridge Wyoming.

Chapter 7

iii. Debtor was insolvent at the time of the transfer

Both state and federal law defining constructive fraudulent transfers share this element as well. As discussed above, Debtor was insolvent at the time of the APA transfer. This element is also undisputed. The record shows that Debtor had over one million in debt and virtually no assets to pay its obligations. Defendants do not argue this point and so this element is easily established.

(c) Conclusion of Second Claim.

Defendants offer no evidence to support an argument that Debtor received an equivalent value in the transfer. The other elements are uncontroverted. Thus there are no genuine issues of material facts as to any of the elements of this claim and the Court should grant summary judgment.

6. Third Claim for Relief—Breach of Fiduciary Duty

The elements of a claim for breach of fiduciary duty are "(1) the existence of a fiduciary relationship; (2) the breach of relationship; and (3) damages proximately caused by the breach." In re Intelligent Direct Marketing, 518 B.R. 579, 589 (E.D. Cal. 2014). While a director may be protected by the business judgment rule, an exception to the rule exists "in 'circumstances which inherently raise an inference of conflict of interest' and the rule 'does not shield actions taken without reasonable inquiry, with improper motives, or as a result of a conflict of interest.'" Id., (citing Berg & Berg Enterprises LLC v. Boyle, 178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1045 (2009)).

a. Aarsvold owed a fiduciary duty to Debtor.

There is no genuine issue of material fact as to whether Aarsvold owed a fiduciary duty to Debtor. The Supreme Court has held that a director is a fiduciary, and so is a dominant or controlling stockholder or group of stockholders. Pepper v. Litton, 308 U.S. 295, 306 (1939). In the instant case, it is uncontested that Aarsvold was not only the CEO of Debtor, but that he was also the sole shareholder of Debtor. Mr. Aarsvold admitted these material facts himself. Admissions, No. 2-3, 5. Therefore there is no genuine issue of material fact under the first element that establishes Mr. Aarsvold owed a fiduciary duty to Debtor.

b. Aarsvold breached his fiduciary duty to Debtor.

Aarsvold breached his fiduciary duty to Debtor, and that the business judgment rule does not protect the actions taken by Aarsvold. A director breaches their fiduciary duty when approving and carrying out transactions "in 'circumstances which inherently raise an inference of conflict of interest' and the business judgment rule 'does not shield actions taken without reasonable inquiry, with improper motives, or as a result of a conflict of interest.'" In re Intelligent Direct Mktg., supra, at 589.

Aarsvold breached his fiduciary duty by carrying out transactions in circumstances which were such as to inherently raise a conflict of interest. A "conflict of interest" is a "real or seeming incompatibility between one's private interests and one's public or fiduciary duties." Metro. Life Ins. Co. v. Glenn, 554 U.S. 105, 112 (2008) (quoting Black's Law Dictionary 319 (8th ed. 2004)). The Trustee alleges that the circumstances surrounding Aarsvold, the CEO of the Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming, gave rise to the inference of a conflict of interest for a few reasons. First, a conflict of interest is inherent in Aarsvold's transfer of substantially all of the Debtor's assets to Fusionbridge Wyoming without reasonably equivalent value. Wood Decl., Ex. 2, Pg. 70, 81; Ex. 6, Pg. 252:6-14. Second, a conflict of interest is present when the debt transferred from the Debtor to Fusionbridge Wyoming only consisted of debt that Aarsvold had personally guaranteed. Id., Ex. 2, Pg. 83. In his Opposition, Aarsvold fails to allege facts or provide any evidence that there was no "conflict of interest" so as to create a genuine issue of material fact.

The business judgment rule does not protect Aarsvold. The business judgement rule "does not shield actions taken without reasonable inquiry, with improper motives, or as a result of a conflict of interest." In re Intelligent Direct Mktg, supra, at 589. By Aarsvold's own admissions, he failed to value the assets of Debtor before transfer. There was no "reasonable inquiry" that Aarsvold took in preparation for the APA transfer.

Chapter 7

Alternatively, the Trustee makes the argument that the business judgement rule does not apply. Aarsvold's actions were taken with improper motives. The Trustee alleges that Aarsvold made the transfer in order to shield Debtor's assets from Infocrossing. Wood Decl., Ex. 2; Wood Decl., Ex. 6, Pg. 211-213. Infocrossing appeared ready to execute a judgment against Debtor when Aarsvold initiated the transfer of Debtor's assets to Fusionbridge Wyoming. Aarsvold does not deny such allegations made by the Trustee.

Aarsvold argues that he executed the transfer of assets from Debtor in order to prevent its contracts from becoming worthless and to prevent Debtor from "slipping into a position of bankruptcy." See Opposition, Pg. 8. Once again, Aarsvold fails to provide evidence. A party cannot manufacture a genuine issue of material fact merely by making assertions in its legal memoranda. Hardwick v. Complete Skycap Services, Inc., 247 Fed. Appx. 42, 43-44 (9th Cir. 2007) (unpublished). Thus Aarsvold has failed to create a genuine issue of material fact about his true intentions as he has not presented evidence in support of his alleged intentions.

c. Mr. Aarsvold's breach of fiduciary duty damaged Debtor.

Aarsvold's breach of fiduciary duty was the proximate cause of Debtor's damages. Whether proximate cause exists as a result of Defendants' breach of a duty are questions of fact generally resolved by a trier of fact. Quechan Indian Tribe v. U.S., 535 F. Supp. 2d 1072, 1120 (S.D. Cal. 2008) (citing Armstrong v. United States, 756 F.2d 1407, 1409 (9th Cir.1985)). But when the facts are undisputed, and only one conclusion can be reasonably drawn, the question of causation is one of law. Quechan Indian Tribe v. U.S., 535 F. Supp. 2d at 1120 (citing Lutz v. United States, 685 F.2d 1178, 1185 (9th Cir.1982)).

The Trustee alleges that Debtor sustained monetary damages after Aarsvold made the transfer of Debtor's assets. The Trustee presents evidence that prior to Aarsvold transferring Debtor's assets, in the years 2010 and 2011, the Debtor admitted to receiving $1,331,772.00 and $996,015.00 in gross income respectively. Wood Decl., Ex. 1, Pg. 59. But after Aarsvold executed the transfer in 2012, Debtor only totaled a gross income of $15,681.39. Id. In contrast, Fusionbridge Wyoming had a gross income of approximately $771,000.00 in 2012. Wood Decl., Ex. 14; Wood Decl., Ex. 25.

The only defense Defendants offer in their Opposition is that Aarsvold's decision to execute the APA was a "valid business judgment." See Opp., pg. 8:20. Aarsvold transferred contracts that "required the use and deployment of specific contractors with specific skills." Id., pg. 8:20-22. Defendants argue that "if these contractors left, they would be worthless, as is the nature of the business."

This argument fails for the following reasons. First, Defendants attach no documentary evidence showing the specifics of the contracts and how by transferring them, they were protecting the Debtor. Second, is it unclear why it matters that the transferred contracts required specific contractors. Did the contractors in fact leave? On the contrary, it appears the contractors continued working for Fusionbridge Wyoming after the APA transfer was executed.

In conclusion, the Trustee has satisfied all three elements for a claim of a breach of fiduciary duty by Aarsvold. There has been no genuine issue of material fact established for the three elements of (1) the existence of a fiduciary relationship; (2) the breach of relationship; and (3) damages proximately caused by the breach.

7. Alter Ego Claim

Trustee seeks an order determining that Aarsvold, Debtor, and Fusionbridge Wyoming are alter egos of each other. Under California law, alter ego is present when "(1) there is such a unity of interest and ownership between the corporation and the individual or organization controlling it that their separate personalities no longer exist; and (2) failure to disregard the corporate entity would sanction a fraud or promote an injustice. In re Intelligent Direct Marketing, supra, at 588 (citing Community Party v. 522 Valencia, Inc., 35 Cal. App. 4th 980, 993 (1995)). To determine whether alter ego is present, courts consider numerous factors including commingling of funds and other assets, unauthorized diversion of corporate funds to other than corporate uses, the treatment by an individual of the assets of the corporation as his own, among others. Twenty-eight of these factors that indicate "alter ego" are listed in Associated Vendors v. Oakland Meat Co., 210 Cal. App. 2d 838-840 (1962).

Here, many of the Associated Vendors factors are present.

First, Aarsvold uses multiple corporate entities for a single venture. When Aarsvold's previous companies (ePassage and Strategix) encountered legal problems, Aarsvold transferred their assets to Debtor. When Debtor was facing a judgment, Aarsvold transferred its assets to Fusionbridge Wyoming. Now that Trustee as asserted claims, Aarsvold ceased operating Fusionbridge Wyoming to work for "Glomad Services." Glomad Services was incorporated by Mrs. Aarsvold and Glomad lists the same principal office and mailing address as Fusionbridge Wyoming. Wood Decl., Ex. 16.

Further, a review of Aarsvold's company's financial statements provide evidentiary support for this factor. Aarsvold testifies that North Baker is owned by his wife and provided both Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming with IT and administrative work. The following list of exchanges from Trustee's review of financial statements provided by North Baker reveals the interconnectivity of Mr. and Mrs. Aarsvold's multiple corporate entities, to wit:

- As of December 31, 2011, ePassage owed Debtor $2,031,089.11 for legal fees that Debtor paid on behalf of ePassage and Strategix in connection with Infocrossing litigation.
- The receivable owed to Debtor by ePassage (in the amount of over two million dollars) was transferred to Fusionbridge Wyoming.
- As of December 31, 2011, North Baker owed Debtor $496,201.79.

Chapter 7

- The receivable owed to Debtor by North Baker was transferred to Fusionbridge Wyoming. As of December 31, 2012, North Baker owed Fusionbridge Wyoming $489,562.41.

Second, Aarsvold diverted corporate assets. North Baker's financial statements show that Mr. Aarsvold diverted Debtor's assets to pay the obligations of his other entities. A review of North Baker's 2012 "Balance Sheet" indicates that North Baker had outstanding loan and note receivables from Aarsvold, Aarsvold's son—Andy Aarsvold, and accounts receivable owed from ePassage and Strategix. Wood Decl., 21, pg. 593. Moreover, North Baker lists as liabilities certain credit card obligations of Andy Aarsvold, Andy Asarsvold's student loans, and outstanding obligations owed to Debtor and/or Fusionbridge Wyoming.

Third, there is no dispute that Aarsvold owns and dominates Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming. By his own admission, Aarsvold owned and controlled ePassage, Strategix, Debtor, and Fusionbridge Wyoming. Wood Decl., Ex. 5, pg. 147, at 8:7-9; Ex. 6, pg. 203:2-4, pg. 222:10-11. Aarsvold executed the APA on behalf of Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming while serving as the CEO of both companies. Id.

Fourth, Mr. Aarsvold, Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming use the same address. See Wood Decl., Ex. 1; Ex. 6, pg. 183:14-15; 187:1-4; 227:6-16. Additionally, Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming shared the same telephone numbers and email.

Fifth, Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming use the same employees and consultants. Mr. and Mrs. Aarsvold are employees/owners of Debtor, Fusionbridge Wyoming, and North Baker. The APA also indicates that Fusionbridge Wyoming and Debtor used the same consultants. Wood Decl., Ex. "2," pg. 82.

Sixth, Aarsvold, Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming do not deal at arm's length with each other. For example, Debtor paid the legal fees and other obligations of ePassage and Strategix. Wood Decl., Ex. 7, pg. 281:22-282:13. Then, pursuant to the APA, Aarsvold assigned the ePassage receivable held by Debtor to Fusionbridge Wyoming. Debtor had also loaned money to North Baker (Mrs. Aarsvold's company). Pursuant to the APA, that receivable was assigned to Fusionbridge Wyoming. These actions strongly indicate that Aarsvold improperly uses the corporate entity as a shield against personal and corporate liability.

Seventh, Aarsvold intentionally had Fusionbridge Wyoming operate as if it were Debtor. Fusionbridge Wyoming and Debtor shared the same mailing address and telephone number. Their logos are the same and their invoices also appear identical. Wood Decl., Ex. 22 & 23. Mr. Aarsvold's electronic signature on email is also identical from Debtor and Fusionbridge Wyoming. These actions strongly indicate Aarsvold's intent to present one single entity to customers.

In sum, multiple Associated Vendors factors are present to indicate that Aarsvold, Debtor, and Fusionbridge Wyoming are the alter egos of each other. Defendants do not even attempt to argue against this claim in their Opposition. Because of the undisputed evidence in the record, the Court determines that Aarsvold, Debtor, and Fusionbridge Wyoming are the alter egos of each other.

8. Affirmative Defenses

Trustee seeks summary judgment on each of Defendants' affirmative defenses. In their Answer to the Complaint, Defendants assert the following seventeen (17) affirmative defenses:

- (1) Trustee fails to state a claim for relief;
- (2) The Complaint fails to establish the elements necessary to establish the purported claims for relief;
- (3) Plaintiff seeks relief not available to her;
- (4) Complaint has been filed in bad faith;
- (5) Plaintiff failed to mitigate damages;

- (6) Plaintiff is barred from recovering damages because of unclean hands;
- (7) Plaintiff is stopped from recovery damages;
- (8) Plaintiff has waived any right to recover damages;
- (9) Plaintiff waited an unreasonable period of time to complain of the alleged wrongdoing;
- (10) Damages alleged in the Complaint were caused by other unnamed Defendants;
- (11) Allegations in the Complaint is barred by statutes of limitation;
- (12) Allegations in the Complaint are barred because the Defendants' actions were justified;
- (13) Plaintiff has not set forth a sufficient factual or legal basis for the recovery of attorneys' fees from Defendants;
- (14) Any award in Plaintiff's favor would constitute unjust enrichment;
- (15) Allegations in Complaint are barred because Plaintiff has not suffered injury or damages alleged;
- (16) Defendants have substantially complied with all requirements of law; and
- (17) Plaintiff lacks standing to sue.

There is simply no legal or factual support for any of the above affirmative defenses. In light of the extensive discovery conducted, Defendants still cannot apparently offer facts or legal theories to support any of these affirmative defenses, and these are Defendants' burden to prove. Thus, there is no genuine issue of material fact as to any of these affirmative defenses and the Court should grant summary

9. Conclusion

Defendants have not offered any meaningful evidence to indicate a genuine issue of material fact as to any of Trustee's claims. Trustee's evidence in contrast is clear and persuasive. There does not appear to be any genuine issue of law. It would appear that this is a proper case for judgment by motion.

Tentative Ruling:

Plaintiff has already filed an amended complaint, which essentially moots the motion to dismiss. The clerk has issued a new summons and notice of status conference for March 26, 2020.

In this somewhat unusual circumstance, it is likely best to grant the motion to dismiss with leave to amend as such relief is to be liberally granted in the Ninth Circuit. Morongo Band of Mission Indians v. Rose, 893 F.2d 1074, 1079 (9th Cir. 1990). Defendant has not filed a reply.

#9.00 Motion For Sanctions

Docket 55

Tentative Ruling:

This is Plaintiff's Motion for terminating sanctions and an award of attorney's fees, based on FRBP 7037. This Motion arises from PayPal documents due from the initial document production but allegedly withheld. Defendant in opposition claims he acted in good faith throughout the discovery process and delays were not attributable to his misconduct.

A. Terminating Sanctions

Where a party fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, the court may issue an order that renders a default judgment against the disobedient party. Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 37(b)(2)(A)(vi). But Plaintiff does not demonstrate how Defendant failed to comply with a court order. On February 11, 2019, this court issued an order requiring the Defendant to "serve responses and produce documents, without objection, in response to plaintiff's first set of demands no later than March 1, 2019." Defendant arguably has complied with the Order and produced all documents requested by Plaintiff in supplemental production requests. When Plaintiff notified Defendant that documents were missing, Defendant obtained the documents and e-mailed them to Plaintiff. Reid Decl. at ¶¶ 7-8, 10, 12; Opp'n. at Ex. 4-5, 8. Plaintiff later requested missing pages from a Buyout Agreement and Business Loan Agreement, as well as documents from Defendant's PayPal account. Reid Decl. at ¶ 17; Opp'n. at Ex. 11. Once again, Defendant complied with Plaintiff's request and e-mailed an explanation of the missing pages from the Buyout Agreement and Business Loan Agreement. Opp'n. at Ex. 16. Defendant arguably also complied with Plaintiff's request to produce the PayPal documents. Defendant attempted to download the documents from PayPal's website. Reid Decl. at ¶ 19; Opp'n at Ex. 13. After ten failed attempts, using different download parameters as requested by Plaintiff, Defendant contacted a PayPal representative through the "Message Us" chat function. Reid Decl. at ¶ 20; Opp'n. at Ex. 14. The PayPal representative stated that the requested documents would be produced within 72 hours. Opp'n at Ex. 14.

Unsurprisingly, the documents did not arrive within 72 hours. Defendant informed Plaintiff and offered to draft a subpoena. Opp'n. at Ex. 16. Plaintiff and Defendant collaborated on the subpoena and Defendant served the subpoena on PayPal. Opp'n at Ex. 17-18. The subpoena required PayPal to produce the responsive documents by August 26, 2019. Id.

On August 26, 2019, Plaintiff e-mailed Defendant inquiring about the PayPal subpoena and requested Defendant prepare a stipulation to extend discovery deadlines. Reid Decl. at ¶ 21. Defendant's counsel was unable to confirm whether the responses were received or prepare a stipulation because he was on a camping trip. Reid Decl. at ¶ 25. Nevertheless, PayPal did not produce the documents in response to the subpoena until September 17, 2019. Opp'n. at Ex. 24.

Plaintiff's counsel claims that she "had to file a unilateral stipulation to support [Plaintiff's] motion for compliance and sanctions because of defendant's bad-faith withholding of records." Plaintiff's Stip. in Supp. of Mot. to Compel. at Ex. 1, p. 5. Plaintiff and Defendant exchanged several e-mails asking one another to prepare a stipulation extending the discovery deadlines but could not come to an agreement. Id. at Ex. 1; Opp'n. at Ex. 20-21. This exchange does not necessarily evidence Defendant's bad faith but might just show a breakdown in communication between adversaries and (as is too often the case) a dismaying inability to cooperate.

On September 26, 2019, this Court granted Plaintiff's Motion to Compel the Production of Documents and for Sanctions in part ("Compel Order"). Order Granting Pl.'s Mot. to Compel the Prod. of Docs. and for Sanctions, ECF No. 47. The Compel Order required the Defendant to do the following:

1. The defendant is ordered to provide plaintiff online access to all PayPal accounts maintained by him or his business—Hans-Drake International Corporation or Musclevorks Inc.—by 5:00 p.m. on Monday, September 30, 2019. The purpose is for plaintiff or her counsel to run and download detailed reports of all activity in such account(s) for the past seven years.
2. The defendant may comply with this order by providing the plaintiff with his log-in credentials—including any usernames, email addresses, mobile numbers, passwords, or other credentials necessary to access the account(s).
3. Alternatively, the defendant may comply with this order by arranging to log in to the account(s) in the presence of plaintiff's counsel and allowing her counsel to run and download detailed reports of all activity in such account(s) for the past seven years.

This court continued the hearing to evaluate whether sanctions or further orders are warranted.

Defendant chose the third option. On September 30, 2019, Defendant went to Plaintiff's counsel's office with the purpose of allowing Plaintiff's counsel to download detailed reports of all transactions in any PayPal accounts maintained by him or his businesses for the past seven years. Manee Decl. at ¶ 2. Defendant logged into his account in the presence of Plaintiff's counsel and downloaded the PayPal reports. Id. at ¶ 3. Thus, there is no evidence to support that Defendant failed to comply with the Compel Order.

A court should only terminate an action in the face of willfulness, bad faith, or fault. Computer Task Group v. Brotby, 364 F.3d 1112, 1115-17 (9th Cir. 2004). All that is required for willfulness, bad faith, or fault is "disobedient conduct not shown to be outside the control of the litigant." Henry v. Gill Indus., 983 F.2d 943, 948 (9th Cir. 1993). To decide whether a sanction of default is appropriate, the court should weigh five factors: "(1) the public's interest in expeditious resolution of litigation, (2) the court's need to manage its docket, (3) the risk of prejudice to the opposing party, (4) the public policy favoring disposition of cases on their merits, and (5) the availability of less drastic sanctions." Computer Task Group v. Brotby, 364 F.3d 1112, 1115 (9th Cir. 2004). "Where a court order is violated the first and second factors will favor sanctions and the fourth will cut against them." Id. These factors are a way for the court to think about the issue, not a set of conditions precedent to its decision or a script rendering it. Valley Eng'rs Inc. v. Elec. Eng'g Co., 158 F.3d 1051, 1057 (9th Cir. 1998).

Defendant has not violated a court order and has not offended the first two factors. The third and fourth factors weigh against the imposition of terminating sanctions. Defendant has illustrated a strenuous (if somewhat belated) battle to acquire the PayPal documents. Some of that may have been outside of his control. Defendant would be prejudiced if he is not allowed to defend this litigation. Whether Plaintiff suffers prejudice now that she has apparently obtained much if not most of the requested PayPal documents, is somewhat unclear, and public policy favors the disposition of cases on their merits.

The court must also consider less drastic sanctions by: (1) explicitly discussing the alternative of lesser sanctions and explain why it would be inappropriate, (2) implement lesser sanctions before ordering the terminating sanctions, and (3) warn the offending party of the possibility of dismissal. Computer Task Group, 364 F.3d at 1116. Here, the court has not yet found that Defendant failed to comply with a court order, imposed lesser sanctions, or explained why lesser sanctions would be inappropriate.

Defendant's evidence details a somewhat strenuous goose chase to retrieve the PayPal documents. This is not necessarily willfulness, bad faith, or fault, at least absent a better explanation how the Defendant could have overcome these obstacles earlier or easier. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant fraudulently produced documents and "fought tooth and nail to avoid shedding light on them" and used a PayPal account to divert money from his business, but "completely wiped any trace of that from his corporate books for the most critical time period in this case" Mot. at p.6 lns.19-23. Plaintiff's only supporting evidence of this incendiary allegation are spreadsheets that are described as "true and correct excerpts from the general ledgers that defendant produced for his business." Dabiri Decl. at ¶ 4. But Plaintiff fails to attach the corporate books to his Motion "due to their volume." Id. at ¶ 3. The absence of the original corporate ledgers makes it difficult for this court to determine whether the PayPal documents were even missing from the first initial production, and it remains unclear how deliberate the omission might have been.

When Plaintiff reviewed the PayPal records, she discovered thousands of transactions that were missing from the Initial Production. Jafarinejad Decl. at ¶ 3-5. But she provides no evidence to support the Defendant's intent to conceal the PayPal documents. This leaves open the possibility of simple inadvertence.

Plaintiff further alleges that Defendant had a duty to correct his fraudulent production and failed at both the moment he made it and in response to the court's oral and written orders. Mot. at p.6, lns.23-25. But this is exactly what the Defendant has apparently done or tried to do in his search to acquire and produce the responsive PayPal documents for Plaintiff.

Furthermore, Plaintiff relies on case law that is largely distinguishable. In Computer Task Group v. Broby, 364 F.3d 1112 (9th Cir. 2004), the defendant engaged in egregious discovery practices by giving contradictory answers, making frivolous objections, filing baseless motions, and never disclosing all the information sought by the plaintiff. 364 F.3d at 1114. Two monetary sanctions, five orders compelling him to cooperate, and repeated oral warnings were insufficient to obtain the defendant's cooperation and thus resulted in terminating sanctions. Id. at 1117. In Hester v. Vision Airlines, Inc., 687 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2012), the defendant intentionally delayed the production of documents, misrepresented its current and past production to the court, and engaged in bad faith conduct. 687 F.3d at 1169. The court in Hester granted the plaintiff's motion to compel the unredacted documents, but when the defendant failed to comply and produced a document that had not been previously produced, the court struck the defendant's answer and entered default judgment. Id.

Chapter 7

But the Defendant's conduct here is just not comparable to that in Computer Task Group or Hester. Defendant has produced all requested documents, without objection or redaction, and went through what seems extraordinary lengths to obtain the PayPal documents. But this is not to say the Defendants behavior is entirely blameless; clearly, a more strenuous effort would have been in order earlier, and reportedly we also have the problem that the earliest tranches of documents may now be lost because of PayPal's expungement of older records.

But Plaintiff fails to show Defendant's willfulness, bad faith, or fault enough to justify the imposition of terminating sanctions. Thus, with respect to terminating sanctions, the motion should be denied. But the court must still wrestle with the question of whether a lesser sanction is in order, particularly if we have now lost properly requested documents through the extraordinary delays in this case from what was ordered produced back in early 2019.

B. Attorney's Fees

Plaintiff requests $38,550 of attorney's fees and costs against Defendant. See Dabiri Decl. at ¶¶ 5-6; Mot. at Ex. 2. Under FRCP Rule 37(d), the court may award sanctions if "a party, after being properly served with . . . a request for inspection under Rule 34, fails to serve its answers, objections, or written response." Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 37(d)(1)(A)(ii). While Defendant did not fail entirely to serve its answers, objections, or written responses, there is insufficient justification or explanation for why this process took a year to complete. Also, there is insufficient explanation as to how much if not all the content eventually found in the PayPal materials was not included or even mentioned in the earlier responses. An award of attorney's fees may be based on affidavits of counsel, so long as the affidavit is sufficiently detailed to support it. Henry v. Gill Indus., 983 F.2d 943, 946 (9th Cir. 1993). Plaintiff's counsel, Mr. Dabiri, provides a log of the hours of work spent addressing the deficiencies in Defendant's document production, preparing Plaintiff's motion to compel, and preparing for the series of hearings regarding compliance and sanctions. Mot. at Ex. 2.

Chapter 7

The brief declaration from Mr. Dabiri sufficiently details his work regarding the discovery of the PayPal documents. The question is not whether the costs have been documented but rather whether in justice all of them are appropriately attributable to Defendant's misconduct. Additionally, a motion for sanctions for failing to answer or respond must include a certification that the movant has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with the party failing to act to obtain the answer or response without court action." Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 37(d)(2); LBR 7026-1(c). This Motion does not formally certify (at least not this time) that Plaintiff attempted to meet and confer with Defendant or Defendant's counsel prior to filing this Motion. But the court does remember that this matter has been heard at least twice before and so the parties were certainly aware months and months ago what the issues were and what had to be done to comply, and so at least the spirit if not the letter of that rule and the LBRs can be said to have been met here. Plaintiff makes a good point that a reasonable degree of proactivity is expected when documents are requested under the requested party's possession or control. What appears on this record is, instead, a prolonged, difficult and agonizingly delayed effort to obtain records which Defendant must have known existed, and over which he had control, at least to some extent. Also missing is any adequate explanation from Defendant as to why this large volume of missing records was not even acknowledged earlier. The failure to produce timely records earlier, and the extraordinary lengths Plaintiff was put to here to obtain only a portion of what may have existed, cannot be ignored. But the offense is mitigated because of the apparent difficulty presented in dealing with PayPal and its computerized records and the lack of clarity as to whether there was a deliberate effort on Defendant's part to falsify or conceal what had been properly requested months earlier. Consequently, a lesser sanction of $5000 in attorney's fees is awarded.

Award sanction of $5000

ORDER AND NOTICE OF DISMISSAL ARISING FROM CHAPTER 13 CONFIRMATION HEARING ENTERED 1-17-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 12/17/19:

This is the motion of Metro California, LLC an assignee of American Bankers Mortgage, which held a note in the original principal of $300,000 purportedly secured by a trust deed recorded against the property commonly known as 2745 De Soto Avenue, Costa Mesa, CA ("the property"). The borrower under that note was one Angelo Ales who reportedly held ostensible title to the property when the loan was made. The problem arises over how Ales obtained title and under what circumstances. Debtor claims the deed from him to Ales is a fraudulent conveyance or is otherwise infirm and so the trust deed secured by the movant's trust deed did not attach to the property. No information is given as to the disposition of the loan proceeds. There is a judgment by default from the Superior Court entered July 21, 2019 in the matter of Sacor Financial, Inc. v. Zubko, 30-2018-01001267-CU-OR-CJC. This judgment recites that certain transfers of the property are declared null and void, including the deed recorded 11/07/2017 from debtor to Angelo Ales. The judgment does not purport to address the encumbrance of movant. No explanation or findings are offered that could illuminate.

There is clearly mischief of some kind going on here, but the record is insufficient for the court to determine what it is, much less how to deal with it. In the context of this motion, the movant requests that it be continued for purposes of obtaining the notary's book concerning the Ales transaction. That seems the most reasonable option under the circumstances. Also, this will give the parties the opportunity to consider re-opening the Superior Court matter for purposes of additional findings. At some point this court (or some court) will need enough evidence to determine whether the fraud her touches the debtor, who it is alleged has tried some kind of maneuver to obtain title to the property free of liens with the assistance of confederates (possibly including Ales). It may make more sense for this court to abstain on those issues in favor of the Superior Court Action, which seemed to already have touched upon the question of invalid transfers.

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION ENTERED

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/31/19:

It would appear that yet more events limiting this case are under discussion as Foothill reports that discussions with the trustee are ongoing. If not everything can be resolved through discussions, what would there be left to try? When, approximately?

This is Plaintiff Foothill Financial, L.P.'s (Plaintiff's) motion for a preliminary injunction. The motion seeks to stay proceedings in a state court action brought by Defendant/Debtor Richard P. Herman and his non-debtor spouse, Sabina C. Herman (collectively, Defendants) against Plaintiff and its individual partners. The motion seeks to stay the state court proceeding until such time as this court makes a determination as to whether: (a) the claims in the pending state court action are property of the debtor's estate; (b) the post-conversion, duly appointed and acting Chapter 7 trustee is the real party in interest with standing to prosecute or otherwise dispose of those claims; and (c) the claims in the pending state court action have been released pursuant to a settlement agreement previously approved by this court. Plaintiff is joined by the Chapter 7 trustee in requesting this preliminary injunction.

For his part, Defendant does not directly contest that Plaintiff can meet its burden of establishing the need for a preliminary injunction. Defendant does not believe his state court claims are property of the bankruptcy estate and believes that this motion is nothing more than a disguised motion to dismiss his state court claims. Defendant suggests that this court abstain from this current action because the state court action is far along. Defendant characterizes Plaintiff as a "predatory lender" and claims that Plaintiff procured the release in the Settlement Agreement by fraud.

I. Preliminary Injunction Standards

"A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish that [1] he is likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4] that an injunction is in the public interest." Winter v. NRDC, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). The Ninth Circuit has held, "a 'likelihood' of success per se is not an absolute requirement." Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1085 (9th Cir. 2014) Instead, "'serious questions going to the merits' and a hardship balance that tips sharply toward the plaintiff can support issuance of an injunction, assuming the other two elements of the Winter test are also met." Id.

A. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

Plaintiff believes that it can show that Debtor and Sabina lack standing to prosecute the state court claims because they are property of the estate and, therefore, belong to the trustee of the estate. Further, even if Debtor and Sabina did have proper standing, Plaintiff asserts that the release clause in the Settlement Agreement, which was approved by this court, would defeat their causes of action.

1. Lack of Standing

Both federal and California law require actions to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 367 ("[e]very action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest"). "Because the bankruptcy trustee controls the bankruptcy estate, [he or she] is the real party in interest in the suits that belong to the estate." Griffin v. Allstate Ins. Co., 920 F. Supp.

Chapter 7

127, 130 (C.D. Cal. 1996). "After appointment of a trustee, a Chapter 7 debtor no longer has standing to pursue a cause of action which existed at the time the Chapter 7 petition was filed. Only the trustee, as representative of the estate, has the authority to prosecute and/or settle such causes of action." Harris v. St. Louis University, 114 B.R. 647, 648 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1990) (internal quotations and alternations omitted). Further, a Chapter 7 debtor may not prosecute on his or her own a cause of action belonging to the estate unless the claim has been abandoned by the trustee. Bostanian v. Liberty Savings Bank, 52 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1081 (1997) ("absent abandonment of the claim by the trustee, a debtor out of possession has no standing to prosecute a cause of action which has passed to the bankruptcy estate").

Plaintiff persuasively argues that the six causes of action making up the pending state court action, assuming Defendants retained or acquired any rights after signing the Settlement Agreement, are property of the bankruptcy estate, and thus, passed to the trustee when the case was converted from Chapter 11 to Chapter 7. Further, Plaintiffs also persuasively argue that the causes of action in the state court action relating to damaged personal property such as plants, antique furniture, artwork, etc., are also property of the bankruptcy estate. To the extent that it is argued by Defendants that these items of personal property were the non-debtor spouse's separate property, no evidence supporting this argument is proffered that would rebut the community property presumption. In short, Plaintiff has persuasively argued that it has at least a fair likelihood of prevailing on the argument that the claims set forth in Defendants' Second Amended Complaint in state court are property of the bankruptcy estate, which belong to the Chapter 7 trustee.

2. The Release Clause in the Settlement Agreement

Plaintiff persuasively argues that, even if the Defendants had proper standing to pursue their claims in state court, the claims would still likely be defeated by the general release and covenant not to sue contained in the Settlement Agreement approved by this court. Indeed, the language in the Settlement Agreement cited by Plaintiff does appear to waive any potential claims Defendants may have had or might still have against Plaintiff.

Chapter 7

Plaintiff cites Gregory v. Hamilton, 77 Cal. App. 3d 213, (1978) for the proposition that under California law, specific performance is an appropriate remedy for enforcing a release. There, the court noted, "[i]t is indisputable that money damages could not provide the relief which respondent seeks, i.e., release from liability. Therefore, the breach complained of must be remedied in equity by compelling performance." Id. at 219. However, there is also Cal. Civ. Code §526(a) (6), which states:

"(a) An injunction may be granted in the following cases:

(6) Where the restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings."

Plaintiff also persuasively argues that the Settlement Agreement, signed by Debtor post-petition in his capacity as debtor-in-possession, is binding on the Chapter 7 trustee. "[I]t is axiomatic that the Trustee is bound by the acts of the debtor-in-possession[.]" Armstrong v. Norwest Bank, Minneapolis, N.A., 964 F.2d 797, 801 (8th Cir. 1992). Thus, it appears likely that a court would find the unambiguous language in the Settlement Agreement both binding and enforceable.

Defendants do not challenge the language of the Settlement Agreement. However, Defendants do argue that the Settlement Agreement is invalid because Plaintiff allegedly procured the Settlement through fraud. In support of this contention, Defendants cite Cal. Civ. Code §1668, which states:

"All contracts which have for their object, directly or indirectly, to exempt any one from responsibility for his own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law."

The problem with Defendants' contention is that it is critically lacking in evidentiary support and assumes a finding of fraud as the precondition. Further, Defendants' argument does not address the standing issue raised by Plaintiff. Thus, Plaintiff has shown a sufficient likelihood of success on the merits of its arguments regarding both Defendants' lack of standing and the enforceability of the Settlement Agreement.

Chapter 7

B. Irreparable Harm

Plaintiff argues that if the injunctive relief does not issue, Plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury. For example, Plaintiff argues that if the state action can proceed, there is a significant risk of inconsistent rulings based on multiple actions in different courts. Plaintiff persuasively argues that this is particularly problematic in this case because Debtor is taking inconsistent positions in the state court action and before this court. For example, in the state court action, Debtor and his wife are claiming that valuable personal property such as antiques, and artwork were damaged by Plaintiff as a result of their eviction of Debtor and his wife. However, Plaintiff points out that none of these valuables were listed in Debtor's schedules in the bankruptcy case.

Further, Plaintiff argues that Defendants are attempting to gain a favorable judgment in their fraud/misrepresentation claims regarding the Settlement Agreement in order to chill Plaintiff's participation in the bankruptcy case. Plaintiff argues that the bankruptcy court is the only forum in which it can pursue claims against the Defendants, making the inequity plain.

Finally, if Defendants are permitted to continue prosecuting the state court action, the estate will continue to be depleted of resources, thereby injuring the interests of Plaintiff and other creditors. Plaintiff will also have to continue expending resources to defend against Defendants' claims. Plaintiff argues that it has no adequate remedy at law because neither the Defendants nor the Estate have enough resources to compensate Plaintiff for the continuing harm it would suffer if the state court action proceeds. In support of this argument, Plaintiff cites Philip Morris USA Inc., v. Scott, 561 U.S. 1301, 1304 (2010) for the proposition that "[i]f expenditures cannot be recouped, the resulting loss may be irreparable."

Of the arguments put forth by Plaintiffs regarding irreparable harm, the danger of inconsistent rulings leading to the necessity of disentangling those rulings, which would almost certainly further deplete the finite resources of the bankruptcy estate, is the most compelling and persuasive argument. This element is not addressed by Defendants. Therefore, there is a risk of irreparable injury to Plaintiff if the state court action is allowed to proceed.

C. Balance of Hardships

Plaintiff again persuasively argues that this factor weighs in favor of granting the injunction because: (1) the state court action should not have been filed in the first place without permission of this court; (2) Defendants claims in the state court action are baseless because the provisions the Settlement Agreement is valid and enforceable; (3) Plaintiffs are being forced to spend substantial sums of money mounting a defense to the state court action, which is especially harmful to Plaintiffs given that Defendants' standing to pursue those claims is suspect at best; (4) there is a risk of inconsistent judgments across courts in different jurisdictions; (5) the prosecution of the state court actions will further deplete the bankruptcy estate's limited resources.

Defendants do not address this point. However, there is not an obvious legitimate hardship to Defendants if the state court action is temporarily stayed. Therefore, this consideration weighs in Plaintiff's favor as well.

D. The Public Interest

Plaintiff argues that issuing the injunction is supported by public policy principles that are fundamental to the bankruptcy system. For example, Plaintiff cites In re Richmond Paramedical Servs., Inc., 94 B.R. 881, 885 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1988) for the general proposition that a paramount public interest is "protecting the estate of debtors for the benefit of creditors." This includes a public interest in maintaining the status quo by not dissipating potential assets of the debtor's estate. In re OGA Charters, LLC, 554 B.R. 415, 432 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) In addition, as noted in In re Chiron Equities, 552 B.R. 674, 701, (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) "[i]t is in the public interest for bankruptcy courts to enforce their own orders and to ensure that the integrity of the bankruptcy system is upheld." Plaintiff argues, and the court agrees, that issuing a preliminary injunction to stay the state court proceedings until the ambiguities identified by Plaintiff are resolved, serves these public interests. Thus, this factor also weighs in favor of granting a preliminary injunction.

II. Abstention

Defendants argue that this court should exercise its discretion to abstain from deciding in this matter. Defendants appears to be arguing that since the state court action is nearly to the jury trial stage (i.e., much further along than the proceedings in this court?), this court should abstain, pending resolution in the state court action. However, considering the issues discussed above, abstention does not seem appropriate. Both Plaintiff and the Chapter 7 trustee are requesting that this court issue a preliminary injunction so as to allow a determination on these threshold issues. Moreover, considering the dubious way the state court matter was initiated (by a DIP without leave of court) there are transcendent questions that must be sorted out by the bankruptcy court before the lawsuit can or should continue.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/30/20:

This motion for summary judgment is effectively unopposed, although the debtor did file "Declaration of Attorney Sara Tidd as Supplement to Joint Status Report" on November 12, 2019. In the Supplemental Report attorney Tidd does relay a disturbing lack of cooperation in the court-ordered mediation. It sounds like the Defendants deliberately strung out the process until time had almost elapsed, and then at the last possible moment filed instead this motion. Normally, this tactic would result in a denial or at least a postponement, to not reward sharp tactics. But on the other hand, this motion is so obvious that the court is at something of a loss to decide which message is the more important one, i.e.: (1) don't mess around with the mediation process and sharp tactics are not to be rewarded, vs. (2) "Really? Do you think the court could enforce such a draconian provision in favor of someone already in default...? oh, and don't put any more such provisions into your plans."

After some reflection the court opts for door number 2 as the more important message, partly because this precise issue has already been decided once before in this case and has thus become "law of the case." See D'Souza v. Bochner, 8:19-ap-01111TA.

1. Brief Factual Background

Defendants loaned $613,805.41 to Debtor, which was secured by the property commonly known as 167 Avenida Florencia, San Clemente, California 92672. Debtor filed a voluntary Chapter 11 petition on November 1, 2017. Defendants filed their proof of claim on February 8, 2018 in the amount of $613,805.41. Debtor's plan of reorganization was filed on May 1, 2018. The original treatment under the plan provided that Defendants would be repaid over a thirty-year period, which made little sense as Defendants are in their mid-80s.

On or about July 26, 2018, the Debtor and the Defendants entered into a Stipulation for Plan Treatment (the "Stipulation"). In accordance with the Stipulation, the Debtor was to remit payments to the Defendants in the amount of $3,680.07 for a period of 72 months with a balloon payment of $561,876.27 due on the 72nd month after the Effective Date of the Plan. The Stipulation dictates that it shall replace the treatment of Defendants' Claim set forth in the Plan. It is somewhat unclear whether that was meant to supersede all other Plan provisions that might affect payment of the claim, such as the one discussed below purporting to cancel claims if payments are not promptly negotiated. By order dated July 30, 2018, the court approved the Stipulation. Debtor's plan was confirmed on September 14, 2018. The effective date of the plan was 15 days from the confirmation date.

Debtor's first payment was due on or before October 1, 2018. By January 7, 2019, the Debtor had missed two payments to the Defendants. On January 7, 2019, the Defendants caused to be sent a Notice of Default to the Debtor as described in the Stipulation. Subsequently, the Debtor claims, that she made the following payments (i) $3,680.07 on or about January 29, 2019 ("January Payment") and (ii) $3,680.07 on or about March 1, 2019 ("March Payment"). The Debtor admits that she stopped payment on both the January Payment and the March Payment on April 1, 2019. The Debtor's purported explanation for stopping payment is that Defendants allegedly did not timely negotiate the January Payment (reportedly one day late).

The Debtor relies on the Plan provision that states:

"III.D. Termination of Obligations in the event of Unprocessed Payments

[A]ny payment which is not negotiated within 60 days of the date of such check shall be paid over to Reorganized Debtor and Reorganized Debtor shall have no obligations to such creditor. If the obligation of the creditor is secured against collateral and terminated under this provisions, the lien securing the obligation shall also be void and terminated." (hereinafter "forfeiture/cancellation provision")

2. Excuse of Counter Performance and Unclean Hands

Debtor's conduct is particularly suspect because the Debtor issued a stop payment just one day after the purported 60-day period expired. Debtor then suggests that she was not obligated to make any additional Plan payments, in effect achieving a $561,000+ windfall under the forfeiture/cancellation provision. Debtor has it backward. Debtor's default under the Plan precludes her from enforcing any of its provisions as against the Defendants. Again, even with the alleged January Payment and March Payment, the Debtor still would have been in default. Debtor's default is not in dispute. In the Complaint, the Debtor admits that (i) she made it impossible for the Defendants to negotiate the January Payment and the April Payment and (ii) has failed to make the required payments under the Plan. Therefore, by the Debtor's own apparent admissions, in accordance with the Stipulation, the Debtor is in default. The Stipulation provides as follows:

"If Debtors fail to cure the default upon the passage of thirty-one (31) days after written notice is mailed, then the Lender shall be entitled to file and serve a declaration under penalty of perjury setting forth in detail the Debtors' failures to perform hereunder, together with a proposed order terminating the stay as to Antoun Trust, which the Court may enter without further notice or hearing."

The Defendants complied with this notice provision by sending the Debtor the First Notice of Default. In addition, once the Defendants realized that the Debtor had stopped payment on the checks, on May 3, 2019 the Defendants sent another Notice of Default to the Debtor ("Second Notice of Default"). In other words, Defendants followed the procedures set forth in the plan of reorganization as modified in the Stipulation. Then, just three days after receiving the Second Notice of Default, Debtor filed the complaint commencing this adversary proceeding. The entire basis of the complaint hinges on the Debtor's claim that the Defendants have forfeited their secured claim in accordance the forfeiture/cancellation provision detailed above. The complaint does not contain any other basis for relief.

Defendants argue the court should grant summary judgment in Defendant's favor because none of the above facts will be or could be disputed. As Debtor apparently subscribes to the conclusion that a confirmed plan is essentially a new contract, would not ordinary and basic rules of contract also apply? A fundamental principle of contract law is that a material breach by one party excuses counter performance by the non-breaching party. See In re Crystal Cathedral Ministries, 2018 WL 5815866 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2018). So, whether as a function of the ancient precept that material breach excuses counter performance, or by the specific provisions of the Plan as modified in the Stipulation, Debtor was in no contractual position to trigger the forfeiture provision upon which she now relies.

As an additional basis for relief, Defendants argue that Debtor should be precluded from any recovery on her complaint by the doctrine of unclean hands. "The application of the 'clean hands' doctrine rests in the sound discretion of the trial court." First Ascent Ventures Inc. v. DLC Dermacare LLC, 312 F. App'x 60, 61 (9th Cir. 2009). The doctrine of unclean hands "bars relief to a plaintiff who has violated conscience, good faith or other equitable principles in his prior conduct, as well as to a plaintiff who has dirtied his hands in acquiring the right presently asserted." Dollar Sys., Inc. v. Avcar Leasing Sys., Inc., 890 F.2d 165, 173 (9th Cir. 1989) (citations omitted). Here, Defendants argue that Debtor comes to this court with unclean hands because the Debtor engineered a set of facts designed to trigger the forfeiture/cancellation provision in the Plan, all while she was in default under the Plan and Stipulation, and knew she was in default. This type of conduct should not be countenanced by the court, and certainly not rewarded with a favorable judgment. This undercuts any equitable basis for the Complaint as well.

3. Conclusion

The court is left with a situation where both parties likely breached the terms of Debtor's Chapter 11 Plan (Debtor for sure, and Defendant arguably). But in addition to the question of whether the forfeiture/cancellation provision was superseded by the Stipulation, both under the doctrine that breach excuses counter performance and under equitable considerations, granting Defendant's motion for summary judgment is appropriate because Debtor should simply not be able avoid a valid lien or disallow Defendant's legitimate claim with a huge windfall for such a relatively trivial offense of delay in cashing a check, at least not on these undisputed facts. Had the court focused on this draconian forfeiture/cancellation provision (no one highlighted it at the time) it would likely not have confirmed the Plan as written, as it is an offense against equity. But a good argument is made that the Stipulation superseded it in any event. And even if that were not true under both contractual and equitable principles the court could not reach the result Debtor requests here. It is very likely that had an opposition been filed and this summary judgment motion carried through in the usual fashion, the court's analysis would have been precisely the same as the analysis quoted above from the Bochner case, which is law of the case. But the court takes time to write rather than proceed by default only because it wants the parties to understand that there are still some guardrails in place in these proceedings. The court's only regret is that it prefers that all matters be settled on amicable terms whenever possible, and the court takes a very dim view of parties that thwart the mediation process, even if they think they hold the upper hand. But in these circumstances that may be the lesser evil.

Tentative for 1/24/17:

This is the oft-continued hearing for status conferences concerning Kenneth Gharib's ("contemnor"), ongoing contempt, as well as a hearing on his motion late-filed on January 12 as #17 on calendar, styled as: "Notice of Motion and Motion to Dismiss the Sanction Order; Defense of Impossibility to Comply as of January 2017." The court repeats verbatim below the tentative decision from its September 14, 2017 hearings because, regrettably, nothing or almost nothing has changed. For those earlier hearings and conferences the court wrote:

"This is the continued status conference regarding Mr. Gharib's ongoing contempt, purging the contempt and/or regarding the defense of impossibility. At the last status conference June 16, 2016 the court continued the matter until August 24, 2016. In the meantime the Trustee filed a motion for continuance until September 14 and, in turn, Mr. Gharib on August 15 filed a "Motion to Dismiss Sanction Order Due to Impossibility to Comply..." which was not set for separate hearing, but is construed as part of the ongoing issue of the impossibility defense. Mr. Gharib has been in custody under this court's order since May of 2015.

It is clear that the contemnor has the burden of proving impossibility. But Mr. Gharib has cited Falstaff Brewing Corp. v. Miller Brewing Co., 702 F. 2d 770 (9th Cir. 1983) for the proposition that impossibility is a complete defense, even if self-induced. Id. at 779-82 n. 7 quoting United States v. Rylander, 656 F. 2d 1313, 1318 n. 4 (9th Cir. 1981). As the Trustee has argued, this authority is somewhat dubious since the discussion in Falstaff is in dicta and one of the authorities relied upon by the Falstaff court, United States v. Rylander, was later overturned in United States v. Rylander, 460 U.S. 752, 103 S. Ct. 1548 (1983). Further, on the very question before us, i.e. the question of self-induced impossibility, the Ninth Circuit has ruled subsequently to Falstaff in Federal Trade Commission v. Affordable Media, LLC, 179 F. 3d 1228 (9th Cir 1999) that self-induced impossibility, particularly in the asset protection trust context, is not a defense to civil contempt or at least that the contemnor's burden of proof on the point is very high. Id. at 1239-41. Instead, the contemnor must still prove "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to comply. Id. at 1241 citing Rylander, 460 U.S. at 757, 103 S. Ct. 1548. Moreover, on that point and in that context the court is justified in maintaining a healthy skepticism, as did the Affordable Media court. Id. at 1242. See also In re Marciano, 2013 WL 180057*5 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 17, 2013); In re Lawrence, 251 B.R. 630, 651-52 (S.D. Fla. 2000); United States v. Bright, 2009 WL 529153*4-5 (Feb. 27, 2009).

Here, with even a mild degree of skepticism it is sufficient to find that Mr. Gharib has not met his burden of proving "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to purge the contempt. While this is not exactly an asset protection trust context as in Affordable Media, we have a near cousin of this phenomenon, i.e. multiple transfers to apparent sham corporations. As near as the court can understand it, Mr. Gharib argues that he has had no access or control over any funds since losing all of the $11.9 million+ he claimed under penalty of perjury to own in November 2012 in filings made with this court. In previous briefs some of the subject proceeds from the Hillsborough sale were traced by the Trustee into two previously unidentified corporations, Office Corp and D Coffee Shop. In response to this evidence and in Mr. Gharib's own words:

"In March of 2015, foreigner [sic] investors decided to terminate their contract and business with Gharib. Foreigner investors demanded and instructed Gharib to close all bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp and Hayward Corporation in Bank of America and transfer the remaining balance to Office Corp. Gharib followed foreigner investors demand and instruction and he closed both bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp in Bank of America. The remaining balance of approximately six hundred thousand dollars was transferred to Office Corp per foreigner investors' demand and instruction. Gharib never was the owner of funds or shareholder of Office Corporation. Gharib has no knowledge who owned stocks of Office Corp and foreigner investors never revealed to Gharib either. Shortly after, Gharib was detained in May 2015. While Gharib was in custody, trustee subpoenaed Office Corp bank account in Bank of America (see exhibit "26 and 27"). Office Corp's bank statements show the authorized signer was Mrs. Firouzabadi. Approximately three hundred thousand dollars of funds in that account was spent in a variety of items and the remaining funds were transferred to D Coffee Shop Corp (see exhibit "26"). Trustee also subpoenaed D Coffee Shop Corporation bank account in Bank of America (See exhibit "28" and "29"). D Coffee Shop Corp's bank statements show Mr. Rushtabadi was authorized signer and the remaining balance in D Coffee Shop Corp's account was spent in variety of items, and nothing left over in that account as of December 2015, 8 months ago. Gharib has no information why and for what purpose the funds were spent in both Office Corp and D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was incarcerated during that period (May to December 2015). Gharib has no information as to identity of stock holder of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was not part of any of the above Corporations in any way or shape... Gharib did not have any interest or ownership in any of the above corporations at all. It is undisputable that that all funds (whether proceed of sales of Hillsborough or Foreigner investors' money) in both corporations were spent and gone (definitely not by Gharib)...."

Gharib's "Motion to Dismiss..." filed August 15, 2016 at pp. 4-5

Since the last hearing the Trustee has been unable to find or subpoena Mr. Rushtabadi, Gharib's brother. That a brother would be apparently so indifferent to Mr. Gharib's ongoing incarceration so as to offer his assistance or at least testimony is by itself rather noteworthy, particularly since Mr. Rushtabadi does know of the incarceration and makes telephone calls at Gharib's behest. But the Trustee was able to depose Ms. Firouzabadi August 26, 2016 [See Trustee's Exhibit "4"]. From her testimony it develops that she had a romantic relationship with Gharib allegedly ending in about 2014 and that, believing he was a successful businessman, she trusted him and allowed him to use her signature on various items and documents on things she apparently does not understand. [Transcript p. 57, line 16-19]. But, importantly, she testified she had absolutely no knowledge of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop corporations or of any transfers therefrom [Transcript p. 75, line 6-7] and identified that her purported signature on several of said corporations' papers offered as exhibits by the Trustee were forgeries. [Transcript at p. 56, line 1-17] Interestingly, she also testified that Mr. Rushtabadi, the brother, requested by telephone just before the deposition that she leave the country. [Transcript pp. 22-23] Why she should leave her home on such short notice at Mr. Rushtabadi's request was not clarified but the implication is pretty clear, to avoid service just as Mr. Rushtabadi has reportedly done (at least so far).

In sum, the court is even less persuaded than before that Mr. Gharib does not have continuing access to funds and the ability to control funds, suing various skills, to purge the contempt either in part or in whole. His stories about what happened to the Hillsborough proceeds, about phantom investments in Iranian real estate, unnamed "foreigner investors" and the like, have absolutely no substance or corroboration and defy all credibility. The few details offered have proven to be either outright lies or very suspect, at best. In sum, Mr. Gharib's burden of proving impossibility has not been carried."

The only developments that could be construed as "new" do not help the contemnor's case. The Trustee now reports that his investigation reveals that the contemnor's brother, Steven Rushtabadi, has depleted all of the remaining money from the account maintained by D Coffee Shop Corporation's (a subsequent transferee from Office Corporation, itself a transferee from the debtor) at Bank of America in a series of over-the-counter withdrawals, presumably in cash. For a few weeks between January 11 through February 26, 2016 (See, Exhibits "2" and "3" to Trustee's Declaration) these withdrawals are supported by video evidence of Mr. Rushtabadi receiving the cash. But it appears that the incremental depletion of the account has actually gone on for months earlier in cash withdrawal amounts alternating between $4500 and $3500. Exhibit "1." But the court notes that all withdrawals appear to be below the regulatory threshold of $10,000. The contemnor argues that it is impossible now to comply with the court's order because he is indigent and has no control over either his brother's or Ms. Firouzabadi's activities (or funds). The contemnor correctly points out that many of these transfers occurred after he was confined. But the court is not so naïve as to believe that transfers to corporations ostensibly controlled by a one-time girlfriend and a brother necessarily means that the contemnor has no ongoing control. At the very least it is the contemnor's burden to prove this to be the case and that burden is manifestly not carried here. The simple fact that Mr. Rustabadi refuses to cooperate by giving testimony, either in response to the Trustee's subpoenas or, conspicuously, even in support of his own brother's testimony which might relieve contemnor's incarceration, renders this whole line of excuse very dubious. Equally dubious is the argument that because the contemnor has allegedly not formally communicated with either the girlfriend or the brother in several months according to the contemnor's declaration and the records of the Metropolitan Detention Center, this must mean he has no ongoing control. But the court declines to take such an inference. Even less persuasive is the argument that the District Court has approved an in forma pauperis waiver of fees; all this means is that someone at the District Court believes what contemnor has said in an application, not that it is necessarily true. Rather, absent some more compelling and direct evidence to the contrary (such as declarations from Mr. Rustabadi or Ms. Firouzabadi), the court is more inclined to believe the more plausible scenario; i.e. the transfers from debtor to Office Corporation and then to corporations controlled by such close relatives or friends, were not mere coincidences, but were designed to camouflage the contemnor's ongoing control. Also disturbing is the Trustee's point made in page 5 of his Opposition: i.e. that several properties which contemnor claims were foreclosed upon as evidence of his indigence were actually transferred to a corporation, Las Vegas Investment, Inc., ostensibly controlled by the brother, Mr. Rushtabadi, using the name Steven Rush. If true this is yet further evidence that contemnor continues to control his investments using his brother as a shell. In sum, the court sees even less reason to find that impossibility has been proven.

Deny motion and confine for further status conference regarding ongoing contempt and/or defense of impossibility

Tentative for 9/14/16:

This is the continued status conference regarding Mr. Gharib's ongoing contempt, purging the contempt and/or regarding the defense of impossibility. At the last status conference June 16, 2016 the court continued the matter until August 24, 2016. In the meantime the Trustee filed a motion for continuance until September 14 and, in turn, Mr. Gharib on August 15 filed a "Motion to Dismiss Sanction Order Due to Impossibility to Comply..." which was not set for separate hearing, but is construed as part of the ongoing issue of the impossibility defense. Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/4/20:

Deny. The amended notice does not provide sufficient notice as required by the LBRs (21 days). It also appears that there was no service on Debtor's counsel.

But even overlooking that issue, the court does not see any prohibition about a 50% member filing a petition. Fiduciary treatment in the interest of creditors is evidently needed in any case given the counter charges of gross malfeasance.

Chapter 7

Tentative for 1/24/17:

This is the oft-continued hearing for status conferences concerning Kenneth Gharib's ("contemnor"), ongoing contempt, as well as a hearing on his motion late-filed on January 12 as #17 on calendar, styled as: "Notice of Motion and Motion to Dismiss the Sanction Order; Defense of Impossibility to Comply as of January 2017." The court repeats verbatim below the tentative decision from its September 14, 2017 hearings because, regrettably, nothing or almost nothing has changed. For those earlier hearings and conferences the court wrote:

"This is the continued status conference regarding Mr. Gharib's ongoing contempt, purging the contempt and/or regarding the defense of impossibility. At the last status conference June 16, 2016 the court continued the matter until August 24, 2016. In the meantime the Trustee filed a motion for continuance until September 14 and, in turn, Mr. Gharib on August 15 filed a "Motion to Dismiss Sanction Order Due to Impossibility to Comply..." which was not set for separate hearing, but is construed as part of the ongoing issue of the impossibility defense. Mr. Gharib has been in custody under this court's order since May of 2015.

It is clear that the contemnor has the burden of proving impossibility. But Mr. Gharib has cited Falstaff Brewing Corp. v. Miller Brewing Co., 702 F. 2d 770 (9th Cir. 1983) for the proposition that impossibility is a complete defense, even if self-induced. Id. at 779-82 n. 7 quoting United States v. Rylander, 656 F. 2d 1313, 1318 n. 4 (9th Cir. 1981). As the Trustee has argued, this authority is somewhat dubious since the discussion in Falstaff is in dicta and one of the authorities relied upon by the Falstaff court, United States v. Rylander, was later overturned in United States v. Rylander, 460 U.S. 752, 103 S. Ct. 1548 (1983). Further, on the very question before us, i.e. the question of self-induced impossibility, the Ninth Circuit has ruled subsequently to Falstaff in Federal Trade Commission v. Affordable Media, LLC, 179 F. 3d 1228 (9th Cir 1999) that self-induced impossibility, particularly in the asset protection trust context, is not a defense to civil contempt or at least that the contemnor's burden of proof on the point is very high. Id. at 1239-41. Instead, the contemnor must still prove "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to comply. Id. at 1241 citing Rylander, 460 U.S. at 757, 103 S. Ct. 1548. Moreover, on that point and in that context the court is justified in maintaining a healthy skepticism, as did the Affordable Media court. Id. at 1242. See also In re Marciano, 2013 WL 180057*5 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 17, 2013); In re Lawrence, 251 B.R. 630, 651-52 (S.D. Fla. 2000); United States v. Bright, 2009 WL 529153*4-5 (Feb. 27, 2009).

Here, with even a mild degree of skepticism it is sufficient to find that Mr. Gharib has not met his burden of proving "categorically and in detail" why he is unable to purge the contempt. While this is not exactly an asset protection trust context as in Affordable Media, we have a near cousin of this phenomenon, i.e. multiple transfers to apparent sham corporations. As near as the court can understand it, Mr. Gharib argues that he has had no access or control over any funds since losing all of the $11.9 million+ he claimed under penalty of perjury to own in November 2012 in filings made with this court. In previous briefs some of the subject proceeds from the Hillsborough sale were traced by the Trustee into two previously unidentified corporations, Office Corp and D Coffee Shop. In response to this evidence and in Mr. Gharib's own words:

"In March of 2015, foreigner [sic] investors decided to terminate their contract and business with Gharib. Foreigner investors demanded and instructed Gharib to close all bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp and Hayward Corporation in Bank of America and transfer the remaining balance to Office Corp. demand and instruction and he closed both bank accounts of Best Entertainment Corp in Bank of America. The remaining balance of approximately six hundred thousand dollars was transferred to Office Corp per foreigner investors' demand and instruction. Gharib never was the owner of funds or shareholder of Office Corporation. Gharib has no knowledge who owned stocks of Office Corp and foreigner investors never revealed to Gharib either. Shortly after, Gharib was detained in May 2015. While Gharib was in custody, trustee subpoenaed Office Corp bank account in Bank of America (see exhibit "26 and 27"). Office Corp's bank statements show the authorized signer was Mrs. Firouzabadi. Approximately three hundred thousand dollars of funds in that account was spent in a variety of items and the remaining funds were transferred to D Coffee Shop Corp (see exhibit "26"). Trustee also subpoenaed D Coffee Shop Corporation bank account in Bank of America (See exhibit "28" and "29"). D Coffee Shop Corp's bank statements show Mr. Rushtabadi was authorized signer and the remaining balance in D Coffee Shop Corp's account was spent in variety of items, and nothing left over in that account as of December 2015, 8 months ago. Gharib has no information why and for what purpose the funds were spent in both Office Corp and D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was incarcerated during that period (May to December 2015). Gharib has no information as to identity of stock holder of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was not part of any of the above Corporations in any way or shape... Gharib did not have any interest or ownership in any of the above corporations at all. It is undisputable that that all funds (whether proceed of sales of Hillsborough or Foreigner investors' money) in both corporations were spent and gone (definitely not by Gharib)...."

Gharib's "Motion to Dismiss..." filed August 15, 2016 at pp. 4-5

Since the last hearing the Trustee has been unable to find or subpoena Mr. Rushtabadi, Gharib's brother. That a brother would be apparently so indifferent to Mr. Gharib's ongoing incarceration so as to offer his assistance or at least testimony is by itself rather noteworthy, particularly since Mr. Rushtabadi does know of the incarceration and makes telephone calls at Gharib's behest. But the Trustee was able to depose Ms. Firouzabadi August 26, 2016 [See Trustee's Exhibit "4"]. From her testimony it develops that she had a romantic relationship with Gharib allegedly ending in about 2014 and that, believing he was a successful businessman, she trusted him and allowed him to use her signature on various items and documents on things she apparently does not understand. [Transcript p. 57, line 16-19]. But, importantly, she testified she had absolutely no knowledge of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop corporations or of any transfers therefrom [Transcript p. 75, line 6-7] and identified that her purported signature on several of said corporations' papers offered as exhibits by the Trustee were forgeries. [Transcript at p. 56, line 1-17] Interestingly, she also testified that Mr. Rushtabadi, the brother, requested by telephone just before the deposition that she leave the country. [Transcript pp. 22-23] Why she should leave her home on such short notice at Mr. Rushtabadi's request was not clarified but the implication is pretty clear, to avoid service just as Mr. Rushtabadi has reportedly done (at least so far).

In sum, the court is even less persuaded than before that Mr. Gharib does not have continuing access to funds and the ability to control funds, suing various shills, to purge the contempt either in part or in whole. His stories about what happened to the Hillsborough proceeds, about phantom investments in Iranian real estate, unnamed "foreigner investors" and the like, have absolutely no substance or corroboration and defy all credibility. The few details offered have proven to be either outright lies or very suspect, at best. In sum, Mr. Gharib's burden of proving impossibility has not been carried."

that the contemnor's brother, Steven Rushtabadi, has depleted all of the remaining money from the account maintained by D Coffee Shop Corporation's (a subsequent transferee from Office Corporation, itself a transferee from the debtor) at Bank of America in a series of over-the-counter withdrawals, presumably in cash. For a few weeks between January 11 through February 26, 2016 (See, Exhibits "2" and "3" to Trustee's Declaration) these withdrawals are supported by video evidence of Mr. Rushtabadi receiving the cash. But it appears that the incremental depletion of the account has actually gone on for months earlier in cash withdrawal amounts alternating between $4500 and $3500. Exhibit "1." But the court notes that all withdrawals appear to be below the regulatory threshold of $10,000. The contemnor argues that it is impossible now to comply with the court's order because he is indigent and has no control over either his brother's or Ms. Firouzabadi's activities (or funds). The contemnor correctly points out that many of these transfers occurred after he was confined. But the court is not so naïve as to believe that transfers to corporations ostensibly controlled by a one-time girlfriend and a brother necessarily means that the contemnor has no ongoing control. At the very least it is the contemnor's burden to prove this to be the case and that burden is manifestly not carried here. The simple fact that Mr. Rustabadi refuses to cooperate by giving testimony, either in response to the Trustee's subpoenas or, conspicuously, even in support of his own brother's testimony which might relieve contemnor's incarceration, renders this whole line of excuse very dubious. Equally dubious is the argument that because the contemnor has allegedly not formally communicated with either the girlfriend or the brother in several months according to the contemnor's declaration and the records of the Metropolitan Detention Center, this must mean he has no ongoing control. But the court declines to take such an inference. Even less persuasive is the argument that the District Court has approved an in forma pauperis waiver of fees; all this means is that someone at the District Court believes what contemnor has said in an application, not that it is necessarily true. Rather, absent some more compelling and direct evidence to the contrary (such as declarations from Mr. Rustabadi or Ms. Firouzabadi), the court is more inclined to believe the more plausible scenario; i.e. the transfers from debtor to Office Corporation and then to corporations controlled by such close relatives or friends, were not mere coincidences, but were designed to camouflage the contemnor's ongoing control. Also disturbing is the Trustee's point made in page 5 of his Opposition: i.e. that several properties which contemnor claims were foreclosed upon as evidence of his indigence were actually transferred to a corporation, Las Vegas Investment, Inc., ostensibly controlled by the brother, Mr. Rushtabadi, using the name Steven Rush. If true this is yet further evidence that contemnor continues to control his investments using his brother as a shell. In sum, the court sees even less reason to find that impossibility has been proven.

Deny motion and confine for further status conference regarding ongoing contempt and/or defense of impossibility

Tentative for 9/14/16:

This is the continued status conference regarding Mr. Gharib's ongoing contempt, purging the contempt and/or regarding the defense of impossibility. At the last status conference June 16, 2016 the court continued the matter until August 24, 2016. In the meantime the Trustee filed a motion for continuance until September 14 and, in turn, Mr. Gharib on August 15 filed a "Motion to Dismiss Sanction Order Due to Impossibility to Comply..." which was not set for separate hearing, but is construed as part of the ongoing issue of the impossibility defense. Trustee also subpoenaed D Coffee Shop Corporation bank account in Bank of America (See exhibit "28" and "29"). D Coffee Shop Corp's bank statements show Mr. Rushtabadi was authorized signer and the remaining balance in D Coffee Shop Corp's account was spent in variety of items, and nothing left over in that account as of December 2015, 8 months ago. Gharib has no information why and for what purpose the funds were spent in both Office Corp and D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was incarcerated during that period (May to December 2015). Gharib has no information as to identity of stock holder of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop Corp. Gharib was not part of any of the above Corporations in any way or shape... Gharib did not have any interest or ownership in any of the above corporations at all. It is undisputable that that all funds (whether proceed of sales of Hillsborough or Foreigner investors' money) in both corporations were spent and gone (definitely not by Gharib)...."

Since the last hearing the Trustee has been unable to find or subpoena Mr. Rushtabadi, Gharib's brother. That a brother would be apparently so indifferent to Mr. Gharib's ongoing incarceration so as to not offer his assistance or at least testimony is by itself rather noteworthy, particularly since Mr. Rushtabadi does know of the incarceration and makes telephone calls at Gharib's behest. But the Trustee was able to depose Ms. Firouzabadi August 26, 2016 [See Trustee's Exhibit "4"]. From her testimony it develops that she had a romantic relationship with Gharib allegedly ending in about 2014 and that, believing he was a successful businessman, she trusted him and allowed him to use her signature on various items and documents on things she apparently does not understand. [Transcript p. 57, line 16-19]. But, importantly, she testified she had absolutely no knowledge of either Office Corp or D Coffee Shop corporations or of any transfers therefrom [Transcript p. 75, line 6-7] and identified that her purported signature on several of said corporations' papers offered as exhibits by the Trustee were forgeries. [Transcript at p. 56, line 1-17] Interestingly, she also testified that Mr. Rushtabadi, the brother, requested by telephone just before the deposition that she leave the country. [Transcript pp. 22-23] Why she should leave her home on such short notice at Mr. Rushtabadi's request was not clarified but the implication is pretty clear, to avoid service just as Mr. Rushtabadi has reportedly done (at least so far).

In sum, the court is even less persuaded than before that Mr. Gharib does not have continuing access to funds and the ability to control funds, using various skills, to purge the contempt either in part or in whole. His stories about what happened to the Hillsborough proceeds, about phantom investments in Iranian real estate, unnamed "foreigner investors" and the like, have absolutely no substance or corroboration and defy all credibility. The few details offered have proven to be either outright lies or very suspect, at best. In sum, Mr. Gharib's burden of proving impossibility has not been carried.

Deny motion to dismiss. Continue for further evaluation conference.

Docket 774

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/6/20:

This is Contemnor Gharib's, motion for release from custody and to lift the order of continuing civil contempt ("Motion"). This is also approximately the fourteenth status conference where the court has evaluated propriety of continued custody since Gharib was taken into custody May 12, 2015. The court notes that very little if anything has changed since the last hearing, except, of course, for the passage of another 6 months.

1. Background

A restatement of the background facts appears in order. On October 24, 2011, Kenny G Enterprises ("Debtor") filed a voluntary Chapter 11 petition. The debtor confirmed a plan January 9, 2013 which dealt with payment of rental income from a property in Hillsborough, CA. The plan notably did not call for a sale of the property. Nevertheless, Gharib engineered a sale of the Hillsborough property in spring 2013. On July 25, 2013, Creditor Mosta Karimabadi ("Creditor") filed an objection to Debtor's discharge on the grounds that "Debtor sold estate property without court approval in violation of 11 U.S.C § 362." [Mosta Obj. to Final Decree, ECF No. 116]. On August 14, 2013, the court converted the Debtor's case to Chapter 7. The court also issued its TRO restraining and enjoining Debtor, as well as Gharib and Freedom Investment, Inc. ("Freedom"), "from making any distributions to anyone . . . other than the appointed trustee, Thomas Casey, from the funds derived from the sale of the [Hillsborough property] . . . now being held by Freedom." [Order Denying Debtor's Mot. for Final Decree, ECF No. 125]. Debtor was also ordered to transfer all funds from the sale of the Hillsborough property to the Trustee. Later that day, at about the time the order was entered, instead of transferring the funds to the Trustee, Gharib went to his bank and requested a cashier's check of $1,420,043.70. Motion for Contempt, ECF No. 272. Gharib thereupon transferred the funds through a series of shell corporations solely controlled by him.

On March 23, 2015, this Court entered an order holding Gharib and Freedom in contempt and imposed sanctions of $1,420,043.70 plus $1,000 per day after March 23, 2015. [Order of Contempt and Imposing Sanctions, ECF No. 362]. Gharib did not pay the sanctions. On May 12, 2015 the court found Gharib in continuing contempt and ordered that the U.S. Marshal Service take him into custody and detain him until he purged the contempt by paying sanctions. [Order of Civil Contempt and Body Detention, ECF No. 408]. After more than four years, Gharib has still refused to purge the contempt and remains in custody. The court has held periodic status conferences in the ensuing years (on average 4-6 months between each) in order that the continuing contempt, efficacy of the continued confinement and Gharib's impossibility defense might be evaluated. For the reasons explained below, nothing has changed:

A. Divested Jurisdiction due to Pending Appeal in District Court

Trustee argues that this court has been divested of jurisdiction over the issue of Gharib's release from custody. The timely filing of a notice of appeal to either a district court or bankruptcy appellate panel will typically divest a bankruptcy court of jurisdiction "over those aspects of the case involved in the appeal." Sherman v. SEC (In re Sherman), 491 F.3d 948, 967 (2007) (quoting Neary v. Padilla (In re Padilla), 222 F.3d 1184, 1190 (9th Cir. 2000)). This rule is "designed to avoid the confusion and waste of time that might flow from putting the same issues before two courts at the same time." Padilla, 222 F.3d at 1190. The bankruptcy court retains jurisdiction over all other matters that it must undertake "to implement or enforce the judgment or order," although it "may not alter or expand upon the judgment." Sherman, 491 F.3d at 967.

On February 12, 2019, this Court denied Gharib's motion for release from custody. [Corrected Order Denying Contemnor's Mot. for Release from Custody, ECF No. 729]. Gharib then filed an appeal to the District Court of this Court's order denying his release from custody ("Appeal"). [Notice of Appeal, ECF No. 730]. The matter was fully briefed on August 28, 2019 and the case is presently before Judge Wu. As of this writing the District Court had not issued a judgment or order regarding Mr. Gharib's appeal.

Although this Motion and the Appeal both involve the issue of Gharib's release from custody, they are procedurally distinct. The issue in the Appeal is whether this court abused its discretion by denying Gharib's release on February 12, 2019. This Motion concerns his present request to be released from custody and does not involve the Appeal. There would be no confusion or wasted time by deciding this Motion. Thus, this court has not been divested of jurisdiction to rule on this Motion. See In re Castaic Partners II, LLC, 823 F.3d 966, 969 n.3 (9th Cir. 2016). Further, this court is under an ongoing duty to periodically evaluate the contemnor's incarceration at reasonable intervals. See United States v. Lippitt, 180 F.3d 873, 879 (7th Cir. 1999).

complainant. Gompers v. Bucks Stove & Range Co., 221 U.S. 418, 441 (1911). Many civil contempt proceedings have resulted not only in the imposition of a fine, payable to the complainant, but also in committing the defendant to prison. Id. at 441-42. Imprisonment in such cases is not inflicted as a punishment, but it is intended to be remedial by coercing the defendant to do what he had refused to do. Id. at 442; see also Int'l Union v. Bagwell, 512 U.S. 821, 827 (1994) (reasoning that civil contempt sanctions are coercive and avoidable through obedience). There is no specific period after which a contempt sanction transforms from coercive to punitive, but a court has a continuing duty to determine whether its contempt order still has a "reasonable chance" to coerce compliance. Lippitt, 180 F.3d at 879. A contemnor may be held indefinitely until he complies or until he establishes that compliance is not possible. Armstrong v. Guccione, 470 F.3d 89, 111 (2d Cir. 2006).

A civil contempt sanction may transform into a punitive sanction in two circumstances. First, if there is no substantial likelihood of the contemnor's compliance, then commitment loses its coercive power. Lambert v. Montana, 545 F.2d 87, 90 (9th Cir. 1976). Second, if it is impossible for the contemnor to purge his contempt then neither the moving party nor the court has any reason to proceed with the civil contempt action. U.S. v. Rylander, 460 U.S. 752, 757 (1983). Each of these is evaluated below:

1. Substantial Likelihood of Compliance

Commitment or incarceration loses its coercive power when there is no substantial likelihood that continued commitment would accomplish the purpose of the order on which the commitment was based. Lambert, 545 F.2d at 90. But a contemnor's insistence that he will never talk, or confinement for a length of time, does not automatically satisfy a showing of "no substantial likelihood." Id. Each case must be decided on an independent evaluation of all the facts. Age, state of health, and length of confinement are factors to be weighed, but the critical question for the court is whether confinement will serve any further coercive purpose. Id.

Gharib primarily argues that the length of his incarceration warrants his release. But length of confinement is only one of the factors that this court must weigh. This Motion states "all of the other factors listed above only weigh more heavily in Mr. Gharib's favor after the passage of another six months in jail" but does not provide any evidence. [Mot. at p.5, Ins.6-7]. It is true that Gharib is "now older than he was six months ago" but the Motion fails to indicate how that justifies his release. Id. at Ins.12-13. Gharib contends that his incarceration for nearly five years for $1.4 million stands in "stark contrast" to other examples when courts have found civil confinement was no longer coercive. [Mot. at p.4, Ins.13-15]. But Gharib's argument regarding the length of his incarceration is flawed in several respects. First, the majority of Gharib's cited cases are from outside of the Ninth Circuit. See generally Northeast Women's Ctr. v. McMonagle, 939 F.2d 57 (3d Cir. 1991); Schwarz v. ThinkStrategy Capital Mgmt. LLC 2017 WL 5558682 (S.D.N.Y. May 9, 2017); Commodity Future Trading Comm'n v. Wellington Precious Metals, Inc. 950 F.2d 1525 (11th Cir. 1992); In re Grand Jury Subpoena 87-A (MIA) Served upon Constant, 691 F. Supp. 1400 (S.D. Fla. 1988); Armstrong v. Guccione, 470 F.3d 89 (2d Cir. 2006); In re Lawrence, No. 05-20485-CIV, 2006 WL 8436247 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 13, 2006).

Second, although cases from other jurisdictions give this court insight into whether further confinement serves a coercive purpose, these cases are factually distinguishable from this case and do not persuade this court of the need for Gharib's release. See generally McMonagle, 93 F.2d at 59-61 (reasoning that the issue of incarceration is moot since the contemnor, a leader of a group of anti-abortion protestors engaged in "non-peaceful activity," had been properly held in contempt and unconditionally released); Wellington, 950 F.2d at 1528 (affirming the district court's order of civil contempt for a contemnor who refused to disgorge $2.8 million); Armstrong, 470 F.3d at 111 (reasoning that contemnor was motivated by greed and willing to suffer time in jail in the hope of possessing the money, but remanding so that a different district court judge could look at the confinement with "a fresh look by a different pair of eyes"). Gharib parenthetically states the length of the confinement for each case, without providing insight on the respective court's justification for the contemnor's release. But mere assertion of the length of time and amount of money involved does not strengthen his argument. This court must make a factually-based, independent evaluation of the continued coercive effect (if any) of Gharib's confinement that goes beyond a mere time stamp.

Furthermore, Gharib relies on Schwarz and Constant, where the contemnors were released. See Schwarz, 2017 WL 5558682 at *2; see also Constant, 691 F. Supp. at 1402. But these contemnors' behavior differs greatly from Gharib's. In Schwarz, the contemnor was released because he produced evidence of his repeated efforts to contact his brother and obtain access to a Swiss bank account. 2017 WL 5558682 at *2. The court found that future incarceration would not be coercive because of the brother's unresponsiveness. Id. Here, although Gharib's brother, Mr. Rush-Tabadi ("brother"), has reportedly proven difficult to contact, Gharib provides no evidence of his attempts to contact his brother. He merely argues that his brother's letter, stating that the money was spent and that he will not return to the United States, is alone sufficient evidence to justify lack of future compliance. [Mot. at p.5, Ins.16-20]. In Constant, the contemnor was incarcerated for three months after refusing to testify as a witness, but the court released him after finding that he had a genuine fear that his testimony would endanger his family. 691 F. Supp. at 1402. Gharib's circumstances are very different. Gharib is not a witness refusing to testify. He is a debtor who owes $1.4 million to his bankruptcy estate, maintains control over the money, but has repeatedly refused this court's order to turn over the money. Moreover, as reported by the Trustee, Gharib has steadfastly refused to provide any information on where the money went, or how the brother might Gharib contends that this court should take into consideration the length of his civil confinement compared to the statutory maximum for criminal contempt. Gharib relies on Lambert and Lawrence to support his claim. The Lambert court acknowledged that the contemnor's incarceration raised constitutional concern. Lambert, 545 F.2d at 91. But the court also emphasized that if the confinement is no longer coercive, then the contemnor "should be released, since, to be constitutional, his confinement must bear some reasonable relationship to the purpose for which he was committed." Id. (emphasis added). This court agrees. Gharib's confinement bears a reasonable relationship to this court's order for Gharib to return the $1.4 million to his bankruptcy estate and continues to serve a coercive purpose. Gharib further relies on Lawrence, where the court mentioned that the contemnor's six-year incarceration was longer than most of imprisonment for serious federal crimes. Lawrence, 2006 WL 8436247 at *2. But this court has already discussed the inapplicability of Lawrence. This court has previously stated that, "Lawrence defines the standard of whether there is a 'realistic possibility' that continued incarceration will yield a positive result." [In re Kenny G. Enterprises, LLC, No. 8:11-BK-24750-TA, 2019 WL 508774, at *4 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. Feb. 7, 2019)]. This court found that there was a reasonable possibility that Gharib will "recalculate that the continued utility of evasion and denial is no longer a paying proposition." Id. Gharib has failed to produce any additional evidence since this court's previous opinion to indicate otherwise.

Gharib merely argues that his continued refusal to comply with this court's order means that there is no substantial likelihood of his compliance, ever. But Gharib's lack of evidence, paired with the mere assertion of the length of his incarceration, is insufficient to justify his release. Thus, nothing indicates that the civil contempt sanction is no longer coercive. What this question amounts to is a contest of wills, whether this court will tire of the effort and release Gharib without his producing anything new except to argue that the mere passage of time has vindicated his position. Gharib would have strengthened this argument considerably by cooperating with the Trustee and explaining what happened to the money and why it is now out of his reach and/or why he has no contact with his brother, or no means of contacting that he will share with the Trustee, such that continued confinement is unlikely to be helpful. [see Impossibility argument below]. But, to simply argue, as appears the case here, that Gharib remains defiant and will never cooperate does not provide any justification for release.

2. Defense of Impossibility

In a civil contempt proceeding, if a court finds that a contemnor could at some point in the past have complied with a court order, then the court should assume a present ability to comply. See Rylander, 460 U.S. at 757; see also Maggio v. Zeitz, 333 U.S. 56, 75 (1948). Where compliance is impossible, neither the moving party nor the court has any reason to proceed with the civil contempt action. Rylander, 460 U.S. at 757. Gharib briefly argues in this Motion that his inability to comply with this court's order supports a defense of impossibility. Generally, a party's inability to comply with a judicial order constitutes a defense of impossibility to the charge of civil contempt. FTC v. Affordable Media, LLC, 179 F.3d 1228, 1239 (9th Cir. 1999). In raising this defense of impossibility, however, the contemnor bears the burden of producing evidence to establish his present inability. Rylander, 460 U.S. at 757. In fact, the contemnor must show "categorically and in detail why he is unable to comply." Affordable Media, 179 F.3d at 1241 (quoting NLRB v. Trans Ocean Exp. Packing, Inc., 473 F.2d 612 (9th Cir. 1973)).

Gharib has not met his burden. Instead of producing evidence to support his present inability, Gharib narrowly construes the language of Maggio in his favor and merely states that a "denial of possession is given credit after demonstration that a period in prison does not produce the goods." Maggio 333 U.S. at 76. But mere denial is not enough. The "fact that he has been under the shadow of prison gates may be enough, coupled with his denial and evidence [of present conditions or intervening events which corroborate him], to convince the court that his is not a willful disobedience which will yield to coercion." Id. (emphasis added). This court is not convinced that Gharib's refusal is unyielding, however.

The only evidence to support Gharib's claim of inability is a letter by his brother stating that the money was spent on "a series of short movie which was not completed due to the lack of funds and [his] severe illness." [Order Placing Rush-Tabadi Correspondence on Docket, ECF No. 750]. The brother does not provide any details to support his claims. If this is true, and the money is gone, then this is a major factor. But to grant this Motion would require this court to believe the brother without any corroborating evidence whatsoever. As this court has previously stated, we do not know if the brother is lying and/or if Gharib is merely using his brother's statement as "evidence" that the money is out of reach. Gharib dug himself this self-induced hole of inability. But he did not get here alone. Gharib transferred the $1.4 million to accounts where his brother was an authorized signer. It is not implausible that the brother has direct knowledge of the location of the $1.4 million. At a bare minimum, Gharib can attempt to contact him. If the money is truly spent, and Gharib cannot access it, then this court must reevaluate whether there is a coercive purpose in his incarceration. But this Court requires him to provide evidence to corroborate his alleged inability. Anything would be helpful in this regard: receipts, cancelled checks, ledgers, naming of others involved in production of the alleged movies, at least something.

Yet Gharib refuses. And he refuses, reportedly, to explain how his brother got the money in the first place or whether this story is in lieu of, or supplemental to, the story about investing in Iranian land. As this court has previously stated, "Gharib could clarify, if he wanted to, but he doesn't want to. That makes [the court] very suspicious as to why he doesn't want to." [Transcript Regarding 08/01/19 Hearing, ECF No. 758]. Maybe it is because Gharib truly has control over the $1.4 million and does not want to forfeit the money to his bankruptcy estate. Maybe it is because Gharib has yet to value his liberty more than $1.4 million. Maybe it is because Gharib maintains hope that Judge Wu, or any judge that hears a future appeal, will reverse the ruling of this court. It is ultimately unclear why Gharib continuously refuses to comply, but his blanket statement of inability cannot suffice.

Obviously, Gharib cannot do what cannot be done. But for this court to believe his claim of impossibility, he must demonstrate some effort and provide evidence of his attempt. Thus, Gharib fails to meet his burden to provide evidence of impossibility and this Motion should be denied.

C. Nazarzai v. Orange County

In Gharib's reply brief, he argues that his release is mandated by the decision in a recent case called Nazarzai v. Orange County, 2019 WL 7372952 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 30, 2019). In Nazarzai (a non-bankruptcy case), the issue before Judge Guilford was whether a civil contemnor's six-year confinement for failure to pay $360,000 was a violation of his federal due process rights. Judge Guilford ruled that contemnor should have been released at least two years prior when "it bec[ame] unclear whether there [was] an ability to pay." Id. at *4.

Superficially, this case might seem to be somewhat factually similar. However, a closer examination on the most critical facts (amount of money and time spent incarcerated) reveals significant differences. As noted, in Nazarzai, the amount sought for turnover was approximately $360,000, whereas here, the amount is more than four times greater. Also, in Nazarzai, the contemnor had been incarcerated for six years, whereas here, Gharib is not quite at five years. Although Judge Guilford found that Nazarzai should have been released after four years, when it became unclear whether Nazarzai had the ability to comply, such a decision was only reached after considering the unique circumstances of that case (including Nazarzai's attempted suicide).

Obviously, the amount of money Gharib is believed to be hiding, and the amount of time he has served are extremely relevant factors and are different from those facts in Nazarzai. Gharib argues that considering the amount of money owed in determining whether to keep Gharib incarcerated would amount to a debtor's prison. Indeed, Judge Guilford warned of that possibility. However, the amount of money in question is not irrelevant because it is part of the calculation Gharib must be making in determining whether to divulge the whereabouts of the money. Gharib seems to argue that Nazarzai can be broadly read for the proposition that once it becomes unclear whether he can comply, he must be released. To that end, Gharib points out that his brother (allegedly) has already spent the money on a movie venture, which makes Gharib's ability to comply with the turnover order uncertain at best.

This argument fails because Gharib has not taken any affirmative steps to even try to comply with the turnover order. In the status report filed on February 3, 2020, Trustee reports that Gharib was offered the opportunity to present any relevant information, even off the record and in a confidential setting. Gharib refused the offer. If Gharib had taken Trustee up on his offer, then we might indeed require a closer examination of whether his ability to comply with the order has become sufficiently uncertain as to warrant his release. But implicit in this argument is that this court should simply accept the brother's unsworn statements at face value and absent any corroboration whatsoever. The court also notes that the brother conveniently imparts that he has left the USA and does not intend to return. To accept such a story at face value is inappropriate as analyzed above. In short, Nazarzai does not really move the needle in Gharib's favor; if anything, it works against him because it shows the continued incarceration indeed is having an effect since, if nothing else, it prompted the brother to write to the court with a brand new story about what became of the money.

Debtor was also ordered to:

"timely file all reports required by Rule 1019 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure including a reconciliation and accounting of all receipts and disbursements post-petition on a daily and per store basis and all post-petition expenses incurred and whether they have been paid." Id. at 3.

Trustee asserts that Mr. Griffiths has been unwilling to comply with the court's order and now sees no alternative but coercive measures to secure Mr. Griffith's cooperation.

Under 11 U.S.C. §105(a), a bankruptcy court has the authority to "issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title." This authority includes the power to impose sanctions for civil contempt. See In re Lehtinen, 332 B.R. 404, 412 (9th Cir. BAP 2005). A finding of civil contempt is appropriate where the moving party has demonstrated, "by clear and convincing evidence that the contemnors violated a specific and definite order of the court." In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1190-91 (9th Cir. 2003). But "civil contempt 'should not be resorted to where there is a fair ground of doubt as to the wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct.'" Taggart v. Lorenzen, 139 S. Ct. 1795, 1801-02 (2019) (quoting California Artificial Stone Paving Co. v. Molitor, 113 U.S. 609, 618 (1885)) (establishing the objective fair ground of doubt standard in the context of a discharge order).

Additionally, the bankruptcy court has "inherent power" to sanction "bad faith" or "willful misconduct." Lehtinen, 332 B.R. at 1058-59. But the bankruptcy court's inherent powers "must be exercised with restraint and discretion." Id. at 1059 (quoting Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 44 (1991)). To impose sanctions under its inherent authority, the bankruptcy court "must make an explicit finding of bad faith or willful misconduct." Id. at 1058. Civil sanctions "must either be compensatory or designed to coerce compliance." Id. at 1059 (quoting Knupfer v. Lindblade (In re Dyer), 322 F.3d 1178, 1192 (9th Cir. 2003)); Brace v. Speier (In re Brace), 2019 Bankr. LEXIS 80 at *21 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2019).

Mr. Griffiths does not dispute that he, in his capacity as Debtor's former president, is the representative for Debtor and, as such, assumes the duties of ensuring compliance in the bankruptcy process. Mr. Griffiths also does not dispute that he did not timely comply with the court's August 29 order. However, a few considerations warrant staying the sword, at least for now. First, Mr. Griffiths argues that he has not intentionally ignored any court order. Mr. Griffiths states that over the last couple of months he has been dealing with significant personal issues related to the terminal illness of a close friend. Mr. Griffiths maintains that while dealing with this personal issue, he always made himself available via cell phone while he was away from Orange County. Obviously, Mr. Griffiths has a duty to proactively cooperate and participate in the bankruptcy process rather than simply waiting for someone to contact him. However, the court is sympathetic to Mr. Griffith's explanation for his failure to comply with the order. A terminal illness can make something like a corporate bankruptcy proceeding dim in consequence by comparison. This is likely just enough to provide a fair ground for doubt as to the alleged wrongfulness of Mr. Griffith's conduct pursuant to Taggart.

Second, Mr. Griffiths has engaged his own bankruptcy counsel to help guide him through the process and ensure that he complies with both Trustee and this court's orders going forward.

Third, Mr. Griffiths states that on October 22, 2019, he attended the Debtor's continued section 341(a) hearing where he was questioned by Trustee and his counsel regarding his duties as Debtor's former president. On or about that same day, Mr. Griffiths reportedly provided the following financial and operational documents to Trustee:

- i) Franchise Transfer Agreement;
- ii) Trademark Assignment and Notice of Recordation of Trademark Assignment;
- iii) Various 2018 and 2019 payroll and sales tax documents;
- iv) Debtor's 2015, 2016, and 2017 Federal and State Tax Returns;
- v) Lien notices for facilities where Debtor's equipment and business records are stored.

Mr. Griffiths also reportedly furnished contact information for the Debtor's CPA, Vice-President of Operations, franchise counsel, and other information related to Debtor's operations. Mr. Griffith's declaration appears to evidence a genuine commitment to complying with the requirements of the bankruptcy process. Mr. Griffiths has also taken remedial measures to ensure that he furnishes the information necessary for Trustee to perform his duties.

However, should any further credible allegations of noncompliance or misconduct on Mr. Griffith's part arise during the administration of this case, this court would not withhold the sword a second time, absent an extremely compelling explanation. Therefore, Mr. Griffiths will be given a brief grace period to furnish any and all documents not yet produced to come fully compliant with the court's order. The court will continue this hearing for an appropriate interval so that compliance can be evaluated.

GOE & FORSYTHE, LLP, CHAPTER 7 TRUSTEE'S ATTORNEY

FEE:	$59,366.50
EXPENSES:	$1,090.01

Docket 104

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/11/20:

The application states: "By this Application, the Firm is requesting that the Court approve the sum of $6,146.00 for professional services rendered as general counsel to Trustee and $250.05 in costs for a total of $6,396.05. The Firm also requests approval of the amounts awarded pursuant to the Fee Order for a total award of fees of $59,366.50 and expenses of $1,090.01. As noted above, pursuant to agreement with Trustee, the Firm will reduce the requested additional payment to $8,700.92 in fees and $232.50 in expenses." (Application, p. 8)

There is some difficulty getting the figures in the fee application to add up. According to this application, this court approved fees in the amount of $59,366.50 and $857.51 in expenses in the first interim fee application on July 10, 2019 (Dkt. # 87). However, a look at the order reveals that this court approved fees of $53,476.50 and $857.51 in expenses. The expenses are consistent, but the fees are significantly different.

The discrepancy is likely explainable as a typo in the application because the application goes on to say that since the first interim application, the firm has incurred an additional $6,146 in fees and costs of $250.05. Adding the $53,476.50 from the order on the first interim fee application with the additional $6,146 in subsequently incurred fees, the result is $59,622.50,

The attached time records show that the balance of prior invoices was $13,369.12. With the added balance of $6,146.00, the new total comes out to $19,515.12. The application states that there was an agreement to provide for an $11,000 discount. $19,511.12 with the $11,000 discount comes out to $8,511.12. However, the firm is requesting $8,700.92 in fees. The court is uncertain how this number was reached. Similarly, the additional expenses requested are $232.50 (reduced by agreement?). In the attached records, the expense figure is consistently given as $250.05.

In sum, the numbers are difficult to track and it is uncertain what the firm is requesting in this application. It seems like there are some relatively minor discrepancies in the calculations of the fees that could probably be easily explained through a supplemental declaration. However, at the end of it, the court is left uncertain what the firm would like the order awarding fees to say. This could be and should be clarified in a supplemental declaration. The fee application has not drawn any objections and appears complete aside from requiring an accompanying client declaration and biographical information of the professionals.

#15.00 Hearing To Determine An Appropriate Order Complying With The Ninth Circuit's Directive

Docket 1777

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/11/20:

In re Point Center Financial, Inc., #15 @ 11:00 a.m. Feb. 11, 2020

The court has newly-found sympathy with Lewis Carroll's character Alice in "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland."

On October 13, 2016, the Court entered its Order on Brewer Group's ("Brewer's") Claim of Lien as Pertains to Fee Award (the "Claim of Lien Order") [Dkt. #1457]. Richard M. Kipperman, as the post-judgment limited receiver in aid of execution for the "Brewer Group," appealed the Claim of Lien Order to the United States District Court for the Central District of California, which affirmed. Brewer appealed the District Court's order to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, which, on July 22, 2019, vacated the District Court's order and remanded it "with instructions to send the case back to the bankruptcy court for it to clearly explain why Brewer did or did not sustain the latter's burden of proof to show that the PCF-CalComm assignment occurred before Brewer's March 16, 2012 judgment lien." This is the hearing to determine an appropriate order complying with the Ninth Circuit's directive. This narrow issue is contested by Brewer and the Chapter 7 Trustee, Howard Grobstein ("Trustee").

1. Basic Facts

Brewer holds five separate liens against Debtor, Point Center Financial, Inc.'s ("PCF's") property. The first is the lien arising by Dynalectric, on March 16, 2012, serving an Order to Appear for Examination (the "ORAP"), ordering PCF to appear for a judgment debtor's examination. See CCP §708.110(d). Also, on March 16, 2012, Brady, Dynalectric, and Brewer (the entity, not group) each filed a Notice of Judgment Lien with the California Secretary of State creating a lien on certain categories of personal property. On April 18, 2012 Division 8 filed its Notice of Judgment Lien. The Management Assistance Agreements were drafted by Dale Martin, PCF's in-house attorney. Mr. Martin forwarded the draft agreements to Dan Harkey by an email on March 15, 2012. Through these Management Assistance Agreements, PCF assigned its right to management and servicing fees to CalComm Capital, Inc. ("CalComm") At all relevant times, Harkey was a principal of both PCF and CalComm. The question before the court is whether the rights to management fees were assigned before or after the above liens attached March 16, 2012.

2. When Did the Assignment from PCF to CalComm Occur?

It seems uncontested that Brewer has the burden of proof to demonstrate that the assignment from PCF to CalComm occurred after March 16, 2012 thereby allowing its liens to attach. Trustee argues Brewer must do so by something higher than just preponderance of the evidence. In support of this argument, Trustee cites Marinelarena v. Sessions, 869 F.3d 780, 789 (9th Cir. 2017) for the proposition that, "[i]t is well established that the party who bears the burden of proof loses if the record is inconclusive on the crucial point." However, the court does not read the quoted language to mean that Brewer must prove that the assignment occurred after March 16, 2012 by anything other than a mere preponderance of the evidence. Therefore, in the court's view, proof by preponderance of the evidence should remain the standard. But even on this lesser standard it is not at all clear that Brewer wins.

Brewer's main argument is that the email from Mr. Martin to Harkey is clear evidence that the assignment occurred after March 16, 2016. In support of this assertion, Brewer argues that the language of the email demonstrates that the Management Assistance Agreements were still in draft form and thus were not yet ready to be executed. Specifically, Brewer points to the language where Martin expresses some doubt about backdating the Management Assistance Agreements to August 2010. Brewer argues that, if assignment agreements were meant to be in final form, why would Martin be reconsidering the dates? Brewer does not rely solely on the language of the email: they also point out that Mr. Martin himself testified during a deposition that what he prepared and sent to Harkey in the email were drafts of the Management Assistance Agreements, and they were completed by Harkey and Jeffrey Benice at some point thereafter.

Q. You provided a draft to Mr. Harkey?

A. A draft, yes.

Q: And did you finalize it for him at his request?

A. No.

Q. Do you know who did?

A. Mr. Benice and Mr. Harkey finalized it, as far as I know, yeah.

Q. Do you have any recollection of when, during your employment, that would have taken place?

A. No, I don't. It may have taken place - - I don't recall.

Q. You left in September of 2013. Was it sometime during 2013?

A. Yes. Bear with me. It could have been late 2012, early 2013. I don't

Chapter 7

Q. Was it before or after Point Center filed a bankruptcy petition?

A. Before.

Q. You are clear about that?

A. Yes. At least what I did.

Q. You provided the draft before the petition was filed?

A. Yes. I believe so. When was the petition?

Q. I believe it was February or so of 2013.

A. February of 2013, yes, I believe it was. Yes.

Q. But Mr. Harkey asked you to draft that agreement; correct?

A. Yes.

Brewer then cites a later portion of the deposition transcript where the following exchange takes place (emphasis added):

Q. The documents, although they bear the date of August 1, 2010, were obviously signed at some point after March of 2012; correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you have a recollection of when that exactly took place, when Mr. Harkey signed the documents?

A. No, I do not. (Martin Transcript, 51:23 – 52:5)

Brewer also points out that Harkey himself testified in another case that these assignments were drafted in response to Brewer's allegedly wrongful attempts to collect on its judgment. Brewer argues that these 'collection attempts' occurred in the Spring and Summer of 2012, which, Brewer contends, further helps establish the timeline. But the problem here is that Harkey's words are very vague. Might the 'collection' attempts in Harkey's layman's terms have meant the entry of the judgment, or earlier? Since we also know from other evidence that Harkey contemplated assignment from at least December of 2011, it becomes very difficult to pinpoint anything.

Finally, Brewer argues that Harkey's actions are consistent with a finding that the assignment occurred after March 16, 2012. In support of this contention, Brewer notes that Mr. Harkey testified that on April 26 and 27, 2012 he caused a related entity, National Financial Lending (NFL) to transfer investor account funds into a new trust account standing in the name of CalComm. Until that date, he permitted the funds to remain in NFL accounts. In May 2012 PCF filed suit against the Brewer group for interference with contractual relationships. Brewer argues that If Mr. Harkey had transferred the right to receive payments from PCF to CalComm, he would have advised the persons receiving demand letters from the Brewer group that their payments were to no longer go to PCF but to CalComm, making the suit unnecessary, or he would have included CalComm as a plaintiff, but this did not occur. However, this is a rather large inference based on very little.

The Trustee argues that there is simply no credible evidence to show that the assignment occurred after March 16, 2012. Trustee argues that the transcript of Martin's deposition testimony shows that Martin was unsure of the timeline and, therefore, his testimony is, at best, speculative. To that end, Trustee argues that the excerpt of the transcript quoted above is incomplete insofar as it cuts off immediately prior to Martin expressing his uncertainty. When discussing when Harkey and Benice finalized the assignment documents, the following exchange took place:

Q: "Okay. Do you have any recollection of when, during your employment, that would have taken place?"

A: "No, I don't. It may have taken place – I don't recall." (Martin

Chapter 7

Later, Martin was questioned about another of the agreements, and the following exchange occurred, part of which is quoted above:

A: "No, I do not."

Q: "Do you recall whether Mr. Harkey provided signed copies of them to you after he had signed them?"

A: "I don't remember. He could have. I don't recall. I don't recall."
(Martin Transcript, 52:2-9).

Thus, Trustee argues that, although it may appear that Martin's testimony establishes a timeline beneficial to Brewer's position, the transcript, when read in proper context, reveals that Martin was far from certain about the dates discussed, and so his testimony is of limited, if any usefulness.

However, the main thrust of Trustee's argument appears to be that, under his interpretation of California law, the assignment was likely effective as early as December 2011. In support of this argument, Trustee argues that Harkey had already made up his mind (i.e. formed a manifest intent) to assign PCF's rights to CalComm well before March 16, 2012. Trustee submits that under the governing law of California, Cal. Civ. Code § 1052, "A transfer may be made without writing, in every case in which a writing is not expressly required by statute." Further, in Hearn Pac. Corp. v. Second Generation Roofing, Inc., 247 Cal. App. 4th 117, 149 (2016), the court stated "Hearn cites no authority holding the lack of a counterparty's signature is fatal to an assignment. In the absence of a statute or a contract provision to the contrary, there are no prescribed formalities that must be observed to make an effective assignment. It is enough if the assignor has, in some fashion, manifested an intention to make a present transfer of his rights to the assignee. Even oral assignments may be valid." (italics added; citations and quotations omitted) See also: Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court, 46 Cal. 4th 993, 1002 (2009) ("An assignment requires very little by way of formalities and is essentially free from substantive restrictions. In the absence of a statute or a contract provision to the contrary, there are no prescribed formalities that must be observed to make an effective assignment. It is sufficient if the assignor has, in some fashion, manifested an intention to make a present transfer of his rights to the assignee.") (internal citations, punctuation marks, and quotations omitted; italics added). The court notes that in both authorities there is still a requirement that the assignment be a present intention, not merely a future possibility. Of course, we are not assisted in that the language of the actual assignment document Harkey signed suggests a date August 1, 2010 which is almost certainly too early.

Trustee is arguing that under California law, an assignment is valid without a written instrument even when the assignment is between two entities owned and controlled by the same person. All that is required is a manifest intent to presently assign rights to another. Trustee argues that Mr. Martin's testimony is illuminating on this point. Martin was asked when Harkey first approached him about preparing the agreements. Martin testified that it was probably within a month prior to Martin's March 15, 2012 email. (Martin Transcript, 46:9-14) Trustee argues that this shows that Harkey must have made his decision to assign PCF's rights to CalComm at some point before approaching Martin. Trustee also argues that recently discovered evidence in the form of metadata taken from Word files shows that some management assistance agreements assigning PCF's right to fees from several LLCs to CalComm were created as early as December 2011. Thus, Trustee concludes, Martin's testimony and the newly discovered metadata evidence establishes that Harkey obviously formed an intent to assign PCF's right to CalComm at some point prior to March 16, 2012. Of course, whether this was a present intent to assign, or merely something preliminary to be effectuated

Questions of evidence and estoppel aside, the court has, in the past, expressed doubt about the legitimacy of the legal theory at the heart of Trustee's argument. The court notes that the cases cited by Trustee did not involve an individual assigning rights from one company he owns and controls to another company he owns and controls, as is the case here. Trustee appears to be arguing that the law would permit an individual to assert an effective date of an assignment by simply citing a conversation he had with himself on a given date. It might be doubted this was the type of action that the California legislature had in mind when it drafted Cal. Civ. Code §1052. It is also doubtful that courts that have interpreted the rules governing unwritten assignments intended their interpretations to be used in this manner. If there are cases where the court has found such a legal theory to be viable, Trustee has failed to cite them. However, Brewer has also failed to cite any authority where Trustee's interpretation was rejected.

The court is aware that such an interpretation could be abused by self-serving, self-dealing litigants. The court also notes that, at least as interpreted in Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court and Hearn Pac. Corp. v. Second Generation Roofing, Inc., the court used the word "presently" in discussing intent to assign. The court wonders if Harkey formed an intent to assign PCF's rights to CalComm in December of 2011, but waited several months to commit such intent to a written instrument, can Harkey be said to have had an actual present intent in December 2011, or was it still just a nascent notion? The problem is and always has been that the court has very little if any evidence to work with. But the possibility such a present intention could have been formed effective to make an assignment leaves us in a very murky situation. In short, the court is not convinced that § 1052 can be interpreted as broadly as Trustee argues it should be. But we are left in a dark pond of pure speculation because the court cannot preclude that possibility either.

Brewer cites Neptune Society Corp. v. Longanecker, 194 Cal. App. 3d 1233, 1242 (1987) for the proposition that with respect to assignments, "the evidence must not only be sufficient to establish the fact of assignment when the fact is in issue, but the measure of sufficiency requires that the evidence of assignment be clear and positive..." It is apparent on this record there exists "clear and positive" evidence of intent to assign, but frustratingly vague is, when? There is the metadata from the Word documents that helps establish that some of these assignments were being drafted as early as December of 2011. There is also the testimony from Martin that Harkey approached him about drafting the assignment agreements around February of 2012. Where does this evidence leave us in terms of "clear and positive" evidence of an assignment?

To sum up, on the one hand, we have testimony from Martin that appears to establish that the assignments were not finalized until after March 2012. On the other, it appears, based on that same testimony, that Martin was not certain about the critical dates. Brewer's arguments regarding Harkey's testimony and actions also necessarily involve an uncomfortable degree of speculation. Then there is Trustee's legal theory that, odd as it may be, has not been rejected by any authority cited by Brewer. There is also some evidence that Harkey approached Martin about drafting these agreements sometime in February of 2012 and that assignment agreements may have been drafted as early as December 2011.

So, what to do? The court is left with the overall impression that the assignment, or more correctly, an effective version of the assignment could plausibly have happened anytime between December 2011 and mid-2012. But has Brewer presented the "preponderance" of the evidence, as it must, that the assignment clearly happened after March 16 to fulfill its burden of proof? The answer is "no", and the court finds the evidence (such as it is) is in equipoise. It is not that each side has not produce something. It is more that each side's evidence is so vague and inconclusive as to barely move the needle, if at all. The definition of "preponderance of the evidence" found in

Black's Law Dictionary is instructive:

The greater weight of the evidence, not necessarily established by the greater number of witnesses testifying to a fact but by evidence that has the most convincing force; superior evidentiary weight that, though not sufficient to free the mind wholly from all reasonable doubt, is still sufficient to incline a fair and impartial mind to one side of the issue rather than the other. *This is the burden of proof in most civil trials, in which the jury is instructed to find for the party that, on the whole, has stronger evidence, however slight the edge may be. Black's Law Dictionary 1220 (8th ed. Preponderance of the evidence 2004).

As cited above, in the Ninth Circuit, "[i]t is well established that the party who bears the burden of proof loses if the record is inconclusive on the crucial point." Marinelarena, 869 F.3d at 789.

The court is left with the overarching impression that neither side's case is made, and the court is just unable to pinpoint the date in such a way that it could find either attachment or no attachment of the lien. But because Brewer has the burden, the result of this analysis is that Brewer loses.

Trustee is instructed to submit an order and findings in accord with the above.

#16.00 Amended Motion To Vacate Dismissal Of Case And Reinstate Case And Automatic Stay
(OST Signed 2-04-20 - Advancing this matter from 2-19-20 at 3:00 p.m.)

Docket 34

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/11/20:

Reinstating after a dismissal of the case on a Rule 60 motion seems appropriate. However, reinstating the stay after a foreclosure is quite another matter. More of a showing would be needed than is given here.

Indeed, it is unclear that the court, by motion, could erase a foreclosure conducted under state law without any stay being in effect, particularly in a summary motion as is attempted here.

Likely, an adversary proceeding on a fraud theory would be required.

Tentative for 11/20/19:

The objecting creditor holds a $280,000 secured claim ($397,000 total) that is 100% loan to value. 2% is manifestly too low to yield present value of the claim as required by section 1325(a)(5)(B)(II). Whether a Till prime plus formula is used, or a blended rate as discussed in In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010), the rate must be at least 4% plus.

Deny

Tentative for 10/23/19:

The objections are well-taken. Amendments are required.

#51.00 Objection to Claim of Homestead Exemption

Docket 69

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/19/20:

This is the Trustee's objection to the debtor's enhanced claim of homestead under CCP §704.730(a)(3)(B) against the property commonly known as 80 Gingerwood, Irvine, CA.

The Debtor filed a voluntary chapter 7 petition on January 17, 2019. On the filing date, Debtor indicated on his Schedule I that he was employed but temporarily disabled and that he was receiving State Disability Income (SDI) in the amount of $1,026.29 per month. He indicated that he did not expect an increase or a decrease in income within the year after filing. On this original filing, Debtor claimed a homestead exemption of $100,000.

According to Debtor's testimony, he returned to work in mid-May. In the beginning of October, he amended his Schedules I and J and disclosed that he was no longer receiving disability, that he was employed as a chain store merchandizer, and that he had a monthly net income of $835.21. On the same day he amended his Schedules, Debtor filed a motion to convert the case to chapter 13, which went uncontested. There is an underlying implication that the conversion was self-serving inasmuch as the Chapter 7 trustee reportedly showed some signs of interest in selling the Gingerwood property. But we have no real evidence of improper motive such as in Marrama v. Citizens Bank, 549 U.S. 365 (2007).

In early December, Debtor amended his Schedules I and J again. On his amended Schedule I, Debtor indicated that he was still employed but added that he was again temporarily disabled and recorded income only from state disability. On his amended Schedule J, he disclosed that he had a negative net monthly income of $292.80. A few weeks after amending his Schedules I and J, Peyton amended his Schedules A, B, and C. He indicated that the value of his property increased, and he changed his homestead exemption to $175,000. Debtor claimed this increased exemption under CCP § 704.730(a)(3)(B), which requires that a Debtor must be mentally or physically disabled and unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. The Trustee has filed a timely objection.

1. The Debtor Was Permitted to Amend His Schedules

First, we must determine if the Debtor was even able to amend his Schedules. A debtor may amend his petition, list, schedule or statement at any time before the case is closed. FRBP. 1009(a). This is liberally construed, and a debtor does not need court approval before amending his schedules. In re Michael, 163 F.3d 526, 529 (9th Cir. 1998). There does not seem to be any dispute whether Debtor was entitled to amend his Schedules, the conflict is whether he can claim this enhanced homestead exemption.

2. The Debtor Has the Burden of Proving He is Entitled to the Exemption

There is confusion in the papers over who has the burden of proof when a debtor claims an exemption. Debtor argues that the Trustee bears the burden of proving the homestead exemption was not properly claimed. This argument is consistent with FRBP 4003(c). The rule in the Ninth Circuit had been that a debtor's claimed exemption is presumptively valid and the party objecting to a debtor's exemption has the burden of proving that the claimed exemption is improper. In re Carter, 182 F.3d 1027 (9th Cir. 1999).

However, new authority has shifted this burden. The Supreme Court has held, after the ruling in Carter, that state law governs substance claims and burden of proof is substantive given its importance to the outcome of cases. Raleigh v. Ill. Dep't of Revenue, 530 U.S. 15 (2000). The Ninth Circuit, interpreting the ruling of Raleigh, found that the burden of proving state law exemptions should be governed by the appropriate state law. In re Diaz, 547 B.R. 329 (9th Cir. BAP 2016). The court in Diaz acknowledged the holding in Carter, that the burden of proof for claiming exemptions was dictated by federal rule 4003(c), but Raleigh was decided after Carter. The authority now appears to be that when a state law exemption statute specifically allocates the burden of proof to the debtor, Rule 4003(c) does not change that allocation. Id. See also In re Tallerico, 532 B.R. 774, 788 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2015); In re Pashenee, 531 B.R. 834, 837 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2015); In re Barnes, 275 B.R. 889, 898 n.2 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2002).

This court adopts the burden of proof outlined in Diaz and in accordance with California state law, which dictates the burden of proof is on the party claiming the exemption. Cal Code Civ Proc §703.580. Therefore, Debtor has the burden of proving that the homestead exemption he claimed under CCP §704.730(a)(3)(B) is valid. But is that burden carried?

3. The Preponderance of Evidence Suggests Debtor is Entitled to the Homestead Exemption.

To claim the exemption under CCP §704.730(a)(3)(B) a debtor must be: (1) physically or mentally disabled and (2) unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. A debtor's entitlement to this exemption is determined based on the facts that existed at the time the bankruptcy was filed. Debtor has provided enough evidence to establish that he does have a mental illness. First, at the time he filed his petition he was on temporary disability and was receiving temporary state disability income. Being on disability suggests that he indeed had some mental or physical illness.

Second, Debtor provided testimony from Dr. Boerlin who claims that Debtor suffered and continues to suffer from a psychiatric illness. Debtor has been a patient of Dr. Boerlin for several years and Dr. Boerlin's certification as a Diplomate in psychiatry by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology seems to qualify him to make this determination. Further, Debtor testified that in January 2019 he was discharged from Northbound, an addiction rehabilitation center, due to the severity of his mental health problems. The Trustee has not provided any evidence indicating that Debtor was not deserving of the state disability income or evidence that Dr. Boerlin's testimony is not credible. Therefore, Debtor has met his burden of proof that he did have a mental disability on the petition date.

The more difficult question is whether Debtor has met his burden of proving the second element, that when the bankruptcy was filed, he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. Gainful employment is substantial if it involves significant physical or mental activity and is gainful if it is done for pay or profit, whether or not a profit is realized. In re Rostler, 169 B.R. 408 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1994). The debtor must be physically, mentally, and emotionally able to work enough hours, at a high enough net wage, to contribute materially to his support. In re Neff, No. BAP CC-12-1664-KITAD, 2014 WL 448885 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2014).

The Trustee argues that by filing an amended Schedule I asserting employment income in conjunction with the motion to convert, the Debtor is judicially estopped from arguing that he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment (as of the petition date). These actions are suspicious, and it is possible that he is trying to take advantage of the court by claiming an ability to work at one point and an inability to work at another, whenever it is convenient for him. However, it is also possible that Debtor suffered from a mental illness at the time he filed his petition, attempted to return to work, but was ultimately unable to do so successfully because of his mental illness. The court's concern is to determine Debtor's condition at the time of filing. Returning to work and converting the case to chapter 13, several months after the petition date, is not determinative that Debtor was trying to take advantage of the court or that he was able to engage in substantial gainful employment at the time of filing. Subsequent recovery from a mental illness does not indicate that someone never suffered from a mental illness that prevented them from engaging in substantial gainful employment, particularly as here where relapse seems to have occurred.

It should be said that Debtor's arguments are not totally convincing. Debtor argues that because he was on disability at the time that he filed for bankruptcy he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. Being on disability may indicate that Debtor was not able to work at Southern Glazers Wine & Spirits however, it does not necessarily indicate that he was not able to engage in any type of substantial gainful employment. Receiving disability from one job is not determinative that he cannot have substantial gainful employment elsewhere.

But Debtor also presents Dr. Boerlin's testimony where he claims that Debtor was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment at the date of filing, which is convincing and is largely not rebutted. The timeline of Debtor's and Dr. Boerlin's relationship is concerning. The court is concerned over what Debtor's condition was on the petition date, and although he has been Dr. Boerlin's patient for several years, we are unsure of when Dr. Boerlin last saw Debtor to diagnose him. Dr. Boerlin testifies that since January 2019, Debtor has been suffering from a disability that prevents him from engaging in substantial gainful employment, but when did Dr. Boerlin make this determination? Debtor became Dr. Boerlin's patient most recently starting on February 20, 2019, which is a month after the petition. Considering Debtor was able to return to substantial gainful employment, albeit shorty, only five months after the petition was filed, it would have been helpful to know when Dr. Boerlin last saw Debtor to form his diagnosis.

Further, according to Debtor's testimony, he was a patient at Northbound rehabilitation center in January 2019, where he was supposedly discharged due to his mental illness. Why did Debtor not include any testimony from employees at the rehabilitation center to corroborate his claim?

Neither party's arguments give a clear indication of Debtor's condition on the date of filing, but the facts preponderate in the Debtor's favor. While being on disability does not prove definitively that Debtor was unable to engage in any substantial gainful employment, it does suggest mental illness prevented him from doing so. Further, while we do not have the exact timeline, Debtor was under Dr. Boerlin's psychiatric care intermittently for several years and met with him only a month after the filing. The court will defer to Dr. Boerlin's medical expertise as he indicates that Debtor was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment at the filing date because of his mental illness. The Trustee's only real argument is that Debtor is trying to take advantage of the court by claiming at one point he could work so he could get his case converted to chapter 13, but is now claiming that he was unable to work so he can claim this homestead exemption. While this inconsistency is noteworthy, it not enough to overcome Debtor's evidence. It is not inconceivable that he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment on the date of the petition, attempted to go back to work and converted his case to chapter 13, but ultimately had to go back on disability as his relapsed illness overtook him. Evidence of being on disability at the time of filing and the testimony from the seemingly qualified Dr. Boerlin persuades the court, on balance, that at the date of filing Debtor was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment, thus fulfilling the second element of the exemption.

Debtor, Diane Weinsheimer ("Debtor") disputes a $415,142.08 prepetition arrearage – which includes escrow deficiency for funds advanced of $67,598.15 and projected escrow shortage of $5,787.37. However, because Shellpoint's claim is prima facie valid, the burden shifts to the objector to produce evidence that would negate at least one of the elements essential to the claim's legal sufficiency. In re Consol. Pioneer Mortgage, 178 B.R. 222, 226 (9th Cir. BAP 1995); In re Pugh, 157 B.R. 898, 901 (9th Cir. BAP 1993). Debtor does not reach this threshold. Debtor allegedly misinterprets a Statement regarding alleged surplus, but does not offer evidence to refute an essential claim made by Shellpoint – that Debtor has not been making payments required by the Note and Deed of Trust which is the foundation for that number. The court cannot tell on this record which set of assertions is correct, but because the prima facie validity in consequence is not overcome, the motion as a summary proceeding can only be denied. The court will hear argument whether a further evidentiary hearing in contested proceeding is required.

I. Introduction

At the outset the court notes that these adversary proceedings are largely matters of accounting rather than avoidance. This being the case, trustee's theories of avoidance, except where noted, find little purchase. As will be further elaborated below, the trial that took place in the original adversary proceeding sought to adjudicate the character of the funds in certain disputed accounts. To that end, the court took pains to trace the funds in those accounts as best it could and then issued its rulings on each account. Thus, the parties should be clear as to what was deemed community property and what was held to be Defendant's separate property. The funds that were ultimately held to be community property must be turned over to the trustee. In some cases, amounts in certain accounts determined to have been estate property were diminished by post-petition payments. But this is not particularly meaningful if it is the original amounts (not the reduced amounts) determined to be community and thus estate property, which were to be turned over. Indeed, the court's July 30, 2018 Memorandum of Decision Following Trial ("Memorandum of Decision" or "MOD") followed by Judgment entered October 4, 2018, which at its page 3, lines 7-9 contains a turnover order pursuant to §542(a). Therefore, the court sees little reason now to take a deep dive into the various post-petition transfers that are the subjects of these adversary proceedings to the extent those transfers are subsumed within what has already been determined to be subject to turnover. Because the court has already issued rulings on the sources of the funds involved, in the court's view, an avoidance action over the same amounts under §549 would be relitigating to an unnecessary end at unnecessary expense.

II. Summary Judgment Standards

FRBP 7056 makes FRCP 56 applicable in bankruptcy proceedings. FRCP 56(c) provides that judgment shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. FRCP 56(e) provides that supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein, and that sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit shall be attached thereto or served forthwith. FRCP 56(e) further provides that when a motion is made and supported as required, an adverse party may not rest upon mere allegations or denials but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. FRCP 56(f) provides that if the opposing party cannot present facts essential to justify its opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or continue the motion as is just.

Chapter 11

A party seeking summary judgment bears the initial responsibility of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of material fact and establishing that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law as to those matters upon which it has the burden of proof. Celotex Corporation v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 2553 (1986); British Airways Board v. Boeing Co., 585 F.2d 946, 951 (9th Cir. 1978). The opposing party must make an affirmative showing on all matters placed in issue by the motion as to which it has the burden of proof at trial. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324. The substantive law will identify which facts are material. Only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2510 (1986). A factual dispute is genuine where the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party. Id. The court must view the evidence presented on the motion in the light most favorable to the opposing party. Id. If reasonable minds could differ on the inferences to be drawn from those facts, summary judgment should be denied. Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 157, 90 S. Ct. 1598, 1608 (1970).

III. Res Judicata Standards

To raise a successful res judicata defense, three elements must be satisfied: "(1) an identity of claims, (2) a final judgment on the merits, and (3) privity between parties." Tahoe-Sierra Pres. Council, Inc. v. Tahoe Reg'l Planning Agency, 322 F.3d 1064, 1077 (9th Cir. 2003). To evaluate these elements' application here, it might be useful to review the background facts common to all the adversary proceedings

On October 20, 2016, creditors of Dr. Liu's bankruptcy estate, William Hong and Harry Hong, by and through their guardian ad litem Yuanda Hong (collectively, the "Hong Creditors") filed an adversary complaint, 8:16-ap-01233 ("original adversary proceeding") against Dr. and Mrs. Liu, and later amended on December 12, 2016, alleging two causes of action for: (1) avoidance of fraudulent transfer pursuant to California Civil Code § 3439, et seq.; and (2) declaratory relief as to Mrs. Liu's claimed separate property assets. The Hong Creditors sought declaratory relief that as between Dr. Liu and Mrs. Liu, Mrs. Liu owned no separate property and that all such claimed separate assets were community property derived from marital income that should be administered as part of the bankruptcy estate. The fraudulent conveyance theory was abandoned as unnecessary, but the declaratory relief action went to trial.

On July 30, 2018, the court entered a Memorandum of Decision Following Trial ("Memorandum of Decision" or "MOD") in the original adversary proceeding, the contents of which are incorporated herein by reference, setting forth the court's findings of fact and conclusions of law with respect to all 24 disputed accounts/assets at issue. In particular, the court reviewed and analyzed all withdrawals, deposits, transfers, and payments issuing to and from the disputed accounts from their inception up until issuance of the MOD. On October 4, 2018, the court entered its Judgment pursuant to the Memorandum of Decision ("Judgment"). On February 14, 2019, after confirmation of the Hong Creditors' Plan, Plaintiff as litigation trustee initiated seven adversary proceedings with the intent of avoiding 28 allegedly unauthorized post-petition transactions totaling $607,108.43 under 11 U.S.C. §§ 549, 550, and 551. These transactions involved monies reportedly withdrawn by Defendant from financial accounts that were the subject of the trial in the summer of 2018. But in many cases, it turns out that those withdrawals were already acknowledged and factored into the Judgment.

1. Identity of the Claims

"The Ninth Circuit considers four factors in determining an 'identity of claim' for purposes of claim preclusion: '(1) whether rights or interests established in the prior judgment would be destroyed or impaired by prosecution of the second action; (2) whether substantially the same evidence is presented in the two actions; (3) whether the two suits involve infringement of the same right; and (4) whether the two suits arise out of the same transactional nucleus of facts.' Turtle Island Restoration Network v. U.S. Dep't of State, 673 F.3d 914, 917-18 (9th Cir. 2012) (quoting Costantini v. Trans World Airlines, 681 F.2d 1199, 1201-02 (9th Cir. 1982). 'The last of these criteria is the most important.' Id." Everett v. Whitney (In re Pac. Thomas Corp.), 2015 Bankr. LEXIS 500, *1, *4 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. Feb. 17, 2015).

Chapter 11

"The Ninth Circuit's analysis of whether two suits arise out of the same transactional nucleus of facts employs the 'transactional' approach, which is described in § 24 in the Restatement (Second) of Judgments. See W. Sys., Inc. v. Ulloa, 958 F.2d 864, 871 (9th Cir. 1992), as amended (June 23, 1992) (citing the Restatement in its application of the transactional approach). Section 24 states:

(1) When a valid and final judgment rendered in an action extinguishes the plaintiff's claim pursuant to the rules of merger or bar ... the claim extinguished includes all rights of the plaintiff to remedies against the defendant with respect to all or any part of the transaction, or series of connected transactions, out of which the action arose.

(2) What factual grouping constitutes a 'transaction,' and what groupings constitute a 'series' are to be determined pragmatically, giving weight to such considerations as whether the facts are related in time, space, origin, or motivation, whether they form a convenient trial unit, and whether their treatment as a unit conforms to the parties' expectations or business understanding or usage." Id. at *4-5

A later claim arises from a different transactional nucleus of facts where the later claim alleges new injuries caused by new acts of the defendant. Id. at *5 (internal quotations omitted) "The fact that res judicata depends on an 'identity of claims' does not mean that an imaginative attorney may avoid preclusion by attaching a different legal label to an issue that has, or could have, been litigated." Tahoe-Sierra, 322 F.3d at 1077-78.

For brevity, the court will present each adversary proceeding and the post-petition transactions implicated therein, then direct the reader to the specific page and line numbers in the MOD where the source of the funds is traced, reconciled and ruled upon. In most cases the same acronyms and "SPA" designations will be repeated to avoid confusion.

Chase savings account #1036 (Chase #1036 aka SPA 18) on April 13, 2017 in which $1,000 was paid on the balance of Mrs. Liu's Wells Fargo Visa credit card #2938 (Wells Fargo #2938), which had accrued from the payment of legal fees. This account may need further proceedings to determine its character. Thus, summary adjudication does not appear appropriate (See MOD p.19, Ins. 13-18; p. 20, Ins. 14-27; p.29 Ins 25-28 and p.30, Ins. 1-18) See discussion below in 19-01023 Paragraph (D).

(B) The second transaction was an electronic payment initiated from Chase checking account #8289 (Chase #8289) on November 15, 2017 in which $4,808.44 was paid on the balance of Wells Fargo #2938, which had accrued from the payment of legal fees. This transaction was traced back to funds transferred out of SPA 16, and later deemed to be Defendant's separate property. Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. Summary adjudication on this transaction is likely appropriate, assuming the other elements of res judicata can be met. (See MOD p. 20, Ins. 14-27; p. 29, Ins 25-28 and p. 30, Ins. 1-18)

ii. Adv. No. 19-01023 (Avery v. Shu-Shen Liu)

In this adversary proceeding, Plaintiff targets the following seven post-petition transfers:

(A) The first transaction is likely a typographical error. Plaintiff alleges a transaction of $50,000 with the check no. 009419085 on October 10, 2016. Defendant argues that this is a typo because the second transaction, on October 20, 2016 includes an identical check number and amount. Neither party included information regarding the accounts involved with the October 10, 2016 transaction.

(B) The second transaction is a withdrawal of $50,000 from the Pacific Life Insurance Company account #8556 (Pacific Life #8556 aka SPA 16) on October 20, 2016. Of the $50,000 withdrawn from SPA 16, $49,900 was used to open a Chase #8289 (SPA 17) the remaining $100 was deposited into a Chase #1036 (SPA 18). This transaction was deemed Defendant's separate property. (See MOD p. 20, Ins.3-27, p. 27, Ins. 21-28, p. 28, Ins. 1-4). Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. Summary adjudication on this transaction is likely appropriate, assuming the other elements of res judicata can be met.

(C) The third transaction is withdrawal of $30,000 from Pacific Life # 8856 (SPA 16) on November 9, 2016. This transaction was deemed Defendant's separate property. (See MOD p. 20, Ins. 3-27, p.27, Ins. 21-28, p. 28, Ins. 1-4). Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. Summary adjudication is likely appropriate, assuming the other elements of res judicata can be met.

(D) The fourth transaction is a withdrawal of $30,000 from American General Life Insurance Company #1989 (AGLIC #1989, aka SPA 11). Defendant argues that the Court made direct reference to this transaction in the MOD. (See MOD p. 19, Ins.13-18). But it is unclear whether the Court declared this a separate property asset. The direct reference follows a lengthy discussion regarding the formula for determining the community property assets and separate property assets in SPA 14. The court's intent was not to declare the $30,000 withdrawal from SPA 11 as a separate property asset but to explain why this transaction did not impact the formula for SPA 14. It is uncertain whether this court determined that this transaction was separate property or community property. Thus, the court cannot conclude that this transaction springs from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding, which makes summary adjudication inappropriate.

Should the January 23, 2017 $30,000 withdrawal from SPA 11 have been included in the formula discussed in SPA 14? Were there any other transfers that should have been included in the formula that were not (e.g. the June 7, 2018 transfer of $30,000)?

(E) The fifth transaction is a withdrawal of $91,701.75 from Pacific Life #8856 (SPA 16) on November 3, 2017. This transaction was deemed Defendant's separate property. (See MOD p. 20, Ins. 3-27, p. 27, Ins.21-28, p. 28, Ins. 1-4). Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. Summary adjudication is likely appropriate, assuming the other elements of res judicata can be met.

(F) The sixth transaction is a withdrawal of $44,903.67 from Nationwide Life Insurance Company account #6730 (Nationwide #6730 aka SPA 14) on November 20, 2017. This transaction was deemed Defendant's separate property. (See MOD p. 18, Ins.7-26, p. 19, Ins. 1-5). Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. Summary adjudication is likely appropriate, assuming the other elements of res judicata can be met.

(G) The seventh transaction is a withdrawal of $30,000 from AGLIC #1989 on June 7, 2018. Defendant argues that the court made an indirect reference to this transaction in the MOD. (See MOD p. 19, Ins. 13-18). But the court does not directly address the June 7, 2018 transaction. The court did not determine whether this transaction was separate property or community property. For similar reasons as (D), the court cannot conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. See the Court's questions regarding the characterization of this withdrawal following Paragraph (D) above.

iii. Adv. No. 19-01024 (Avery v. JP Morgan Chase Bank and Shu-Shen Liu)

In this adversary proceeding, Plaintiff targets the following three post-petition transfers:

(A) The first transaction occurred on November 8, 2016 and involved a transfer of $3,889.92 from Chase account #1036 (SPA 18) to pay off a balance on Chase Visa card #9100.

(B) The second transaction occurred on December 21, 2016 and involved a transfer of $1,000 from SPA 18 to pay off a balance on a Chase Visa card #6564.

(C) The third transaction occurred on November 17, 2017 and involved a transfer of $17,730 also from SPA 18 to pay off a balance on a Chase Visa card #6564. All the funds involved in these transactions originated from SPA 16 and were disbursed to other accounts in four major transfers, which totaled $221,701.75, and were deemed to be Defendant's separate property. Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. Summary judgment appears appropriate on this adversary proceeding, assuming the other elements of res judicata can be met. (See MOD pp. 26-28; 29, Ins. 25 -28 -30, Ins. 1-18)

iv. Adv. No. 19-01025 (Avery v. Barclays Bank Delaware and Shu-Shen Liu)

In this adversary, Plaintiff targets the following two transactions:

(A) The first transaction occurred on March 13, 2017 and involved the transfer of $2,398.73 from SPA 18 to pay off the balance on a Barclay Visa card (#7743). This transaction appears to be from the same source as in the first transaction in adv. 19-01022, which the court has not been able to verify as having been definitively adjudicated in the trial. (See adv.#19-01023, Paragraph (D)).

(B) The second transaction occurred on November 10, 2017 in the amount of $16,731.66 also from SPA 18 to pay off a Barclay Visa card (#7743?). This one is difficult to follow. Defendant argues that the $16,731.66 transaction was funded from $1,297.99, left over from the SPA 11 $30,000 deposit, plus $15,433.67 from the October 13, 2017 SPA 18 $50,000 deposit. The first portion of this transaction is what gives the court pause for the same reason as the transaction above. Thus, the court cannot conclude that these transactions arise from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding, which makes summary judgement inappropriate in this adversary proceeding.

v. Adv. No.19-01026 (Avery v. Citibank and Shu-Shen Liu)

The transaction in question in this adversary proceeding is a transfer on November 15, 2016 of $8,800 withdrawn from Chase account #8289 (SPA 17) and used to pay off a balance owing on a Citibank Bank Visa card (#1863). The source of this transaction appears to have been adjudicated as Defendant's separate property. (See adv. 19-01024) Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. vi. Adv. No. 19-01027 (Avery v. Bank of America Corporation, Charles C.H. Wu & Associates, APC, and Shu-Shen Liu)

This adversary proceeding involves nine post-petition transfers as follows:

(A) The first transaction occurred on September 6, 2016 and involved the transfer of $6,806.12 from an account at City National Bank # 3867 (SPA 22), to pay off the balance on Bank of America Visa card #5888. The funds implicated in this transaction were deemed to be Defendant's separate property. (See MOD p.15, Ins. 13-21; p. 16: 9-11; p.29, Ins. 3-8; p.32, Ins. 4-6) Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. Summary adjudication is appropriate, assuming the other elements of res judicata can be met.

(B) The next transactions are grouped as a set of three, which occurred on November 7, 2016 (to pay off a balance on Bank of America Visa card #5888 in the amount of $15,000), December 12, 2016 (to pay off Bank of America card #5888 in the amount of $10,809.17), and January 12, 2017 (to pay off Bank of America Visa card #4691 in the amount of $16,004.26). These transactions were deemed to originate from Defendant's separate property. (See 19-01024). Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. Summary adjudication is appropriate, assuming the other elements of res judicata can be met.

(C) The next set of transactions occurred on February 8, 2017 and March 6, 2017 in the amounts of $17,000 and $15,144.03 respectively. These two transactions went to pay off balances on the Bank of America Visa card #4691. The funds contained in these two transfers from February 8, 2017 and March 6, 2017, are harder to track. Defendant asserts that the funds for these transactions were sourced from the November 9, 2016 withdrawal of $30,000 from SPA 16 (which is part of the $221,701.75).

However, Defendant concedes that this source of funding was only partial. The March 6, 2017 transaction was sourced from both the November 9, 2016 transfer, and from the January 23, 2017 transfer from SPA 11, which as described above, so it is difficult to pin down in terms of character of the funds in that account. Thus, to the extent that these transactions can be traced to the November 9, 2016 transfer from SPA 16, and the court understands that the February 8, 2017 transfer is derived solely from that transfer, those funds have been adjudicated as Defendant's separate property. (See Adv. No. 19-01024).

Defendant asserts that $7,747.38 of the March 6, 2017 transaction is attributable to SPA 11 funds, and therefore, is open to some question. However, the very existence of this question works against Defendant in a summary judgment based on res judicata context. Thus, a summary adjudication should be denied as to this transaction because the court cannot conclude that the funds were already adjudicated. (See adv.#19-01023, Paragraph (D)).

(D) The next set of transactions occurred on April 3, 2017 and May 8, 2017 in the amounts of $9,122.18 and $8,699.58 respectively. The $9,122.18 went to pay off a balance on a Bank of America Visa card #2938, and the $8,699.58 went to pay off a balance on a Bank of America Visa card #4691. According to Defendant's tracing, these transactions are also sourced from the problematic SPA 11 and the January 23, 2017 transfer of $30,000 therefrom. Again, as the character of those funds is difficult to pin down in the MOD, the character of these funds is left open to some question. Thus, summary adjudication does not seem appropriate on these transactions. (See adv.#19-01023, Paragraph (D)).

(E) The final transaction occurred on November 16, 2017 in the amount of $17,000 to pay off a balance on Bank of America Visa card #4691. The funds in this transaction can be traced back to the transfers out of SPA 16 and are Defendant's separate property, which would make summary

vii. Adv. No. 19-01028 – (Avery v. Charles W.H. Wu & Associates, APC, and Shu-Shen Liu)

In this final adversary proceeding, Plaintiff takes aim at the following two post-petition transfers:

(A) A check drawn from Chase Checking Account #8289 (SPA 17) on November 7, 2017 in the amount of $71,146.62.

(B) A check drawn from Bank of America Account #4473 (SPA 24) on December 5, 2017 in the amount of $11,406.15.

Both transactions can be traced back to the transfers out of SPA 16 and are, therefore, Defendant's separate property. (See adv.#19-01024). Thus, it is appropriate to conclude that this transaction arises from the same transactional nucleus of operative facts as in the original adversary proceeding. Summary judgement in this adversary proceeding is appropriate, assuming the other elements of res judicata can be met.

IV. Analysis of The Other 3 Factors Constituting Identity of Claims Common to All Adversary Proceedings

1. Same Established Rights Destroyed or Impaired?

The next factor to analyze is whether rights or interests established in the prior judgment would be destroyed or impaired by prosecution of the second action. Defendant argues that her rights adjudicated in the original adversary proceeding could be jeopardized because Plaintiff has already begun liquidating the community property accounts. Allowing Plaintiff to prosecute these adversary proceedings under a new legal theory, Defendant argues, could expose Defendant to the risk of double-dipping by Plaintiff. Plaintiff does not directly address this element. Instead, Plaintiff argues that his claims, brought under §549, could not possibly have been adjudicated in the prior adversary proceeding because, at that time, he lacked standing to do so, as did the plaintiffs, the Hong Creditors. Plaintiff believes this is accurate because a claim under §549 can only be brought by a trustee, and a trustee had not been appointed during the original adversary proceeding.

But this is not directly responsive to the question of whether rights or interests established in the prior judgment would be destroyed or impaired by prosecution of a second action. After all, the original adversary proceeding involved adjudicating the character of money in various disputed accounts. At least some of the post-petition transfers were made from those accounts, which means that the money involved in those transfers is traceable back to those accounts. Thus, it appears that Plaintiff's rights or interests would likely remain unchanged because the court has already made the critical findings as to those accounts. However, for the post-petition transactions that the court could not definitively locate a ruling on the source of the funds, Plaintiff should be allowed to press forward with a §549 claim, unless Defendant can amend the summary judgment motions to draw a clearer map for those funds. This factor is neutral.

2. Same Evidence?

The next factor asks whether the evidence presented in both adversary proceedings is substantially the same, if not identical, and it appears to be for several of the post-petition transfers, except where noted. The evidence consists of testimonial evidence given by Defendant during the trial, and the accompanying bank statements that were used to trace the money contained in the disputed accounts. As the court has already adjudicated the character of the money in these accounts from which the post-petition transfers were made, it is difficult to see what evidence not adduced at trial would be important in this adversary proceeding. Plaintiff does not really explain how the evidence between the two adversary proceedings would differ in any meaningful way.

Plaintiff does argue that the evidence in the form of bank statements tracking the post-petition transactions in the various adversary proceedings is inadmissible hearsay as they have not been properly authenticated. Further, Plaintiff argues that the only declaration that is offered with these bank statements is the declaration of Charles Wu, who, Plaintiff argues, lacks the personal knowledge required to authenticate these documents. Plaintiff also notes that there have been no declarations from any bank regarding the authenticity of the banking records.

However, Defendant points out that in the Joint Pre-Trial Stipulation governing the original adversary proceeding, the parties agreed that all banking statements produced in the would be admissible. Defendant also argues that to the extent any evidence in the form of bank statements or the like was not produced at trial in the original case, such evidence is the result of former Plaintiff's post-trial subpoenas. These records, Defendant asserts, have been authenticated because they were accompanied by written and signed statements from bank representatives. Defendant also notes that these post-trial subpoenas were propounded by Plaintiff's former counsel. Further, Defendant herself can authenticate these banking records. Finally, this court, having served as trier of fact and law in the first adversary proceeding, may take judicial notice of the prior proceedings before it. United States v. Wilson, 631 F.2d 118, 119 (9th Cir. 1980) ("a court may take judicial notice of its own records in other cases").

For all the above reasons, Defendant persuasively argues that authentication of the records herein should not be an issue. For purposes of the identity of claims analysis, the post-petition transactions all spring from the same 24 disputed accounts, which were the subject of the original trial. Thus, it can be safely concluded that the evidence in the original adversary proceeding and the new adversary proceedings will be substantially based on the same evidence.

3. Infringement of The Same Right(s)?

The remaining factor in the identity of claims analysis asks whether the two suits involve infringement of the same right. Defendant persuasively argues that the original adversary proceeding and this adversary proceeding both have, at their hearts, the question of whether the estate has the right to claw back funds contained in certain disputed accounts and any post-petition transactions involved therein. Again, Plaintiff falls back on his argument that the legal theory and statutory authority for the actions is different. As discussed above, this argument is not particularly compelling to the degree that the court has already adjudicated the character of the funds in the disputed accounts and those funds are turned over.

Chapter 11

Therefore, based on the above factors, the court finds that there exists an identity of the claims involved in the original adversary proceeding and the current adversary proceedings, except where noted.

4. Final Judgment on The Merits

With just a couple of exceptions, noted throughout, the court issued a final judgment on the merits as to the disputed bank accounts and the character of the funds within those accounts. Again, Plaintiff would argue that there is room for disagreement because he proposes proceeding under §549. As noted elsewhere, this argument is not compelling, except on those few post-petition transactions where it could not be conclusively determined that the court issued a ruling on the character of that property allegedly transferred without authority. Therefore, with the few noted exceptions, this court has issued a final judgment on the merits on the character of the funds in the post-petition transactions implicated by these adversary proceedings.

5. Privity Between the Parties

Privity exists if there is sufficient commonality of interest between the plaintiffs in each action. The privity requirement is met when there is virtual representation of the party in the first action, including an identity of interests and adequate representation. Adams v. State Dep't of Health Servs., 487 F.3d 684, 691-92 (9th Cir. 2007). In Adams, the Ninth Circuit found that "where a party maintained a close relationship with a party in the first action, and had aligning interests, virtual representation of the second-filed parties was found, and the section action would be barred." Id. See also Tahoe-Sierra Pres. Council, 322 F.3d at 1081-82 (9th Cir. 2003).

The Hong Creditors were creditors of the bankruptcy estate, indeed far and away the major creditors. The end goal of the Plaintiff, as trustee and disbursing agent, is to collect and disburse the funds held in the estate to its creditors. The bankruptcy estate and Plaintiff were the beneficiary of the relief awarded and a party to the judgment in the original adversary proceeding. Thus, the estate's disbursing agent has a common interest with the Hong Creditors (whom were both represented by Marshack Hays LLP), which puts them in privity for purposes of res judicata.

In fact, as Defendant argues, Marshack Hays LLP filed Plaintiff's Motion for Order to Extend Time to File Actions under 11 U.S.C. §§ 108, 546(a), and 549(d) in the bankruptcy case. [8:16-bk-11588-TA, Docket No. 680] Plaintiff contends he needs additional time to obtain documents he subpoenaed to various financial institutions, for the benefit of creditors. Plaintiff apparently did not issue subpoenas. Rather, the subpoenas referenced, according to Defendant, were issued in late 2018 on behalf of the Hong Creditors by Marshack Hays LLP. See Ex. CC, DD. The two prior Motions for Orders to Extend Time to File Actions Under § 549 sought identical relief and were filed by the Marshack Hays law firm on behalf of the Hong Creditors.

In any event, even if the parties named in the original adversary proceeding and these adversary actions differ, the parties' interests are identically aligned with respect to the funds in the post-petition transactions designated as community property. Thus, privity of the parties exists within the meaning of the above authorities exists. The fact that the origins of some of the post-petition transactions remains hazy does not change the fact that the former Plaintiffs, the Hong Creditors, and the current Plaintiff have perfectly aligned interests as they both seek to maximize the amount of money in the estate eligible for disbursement to creditors.

6. Declaratory Judgment Exception to Res Judicata

Defendant argues that because the relief sought in the original adversary proceeding included requests for injunctive and coercive relief, this rendered any possible declaratory judgment exception to res judicata inapplicable. In support of this assertion, Defendant cites Criste v. City of Steamboat Springs, 122 F. Supp. 2d 1183, 1187 (D. Colo. 2000) where the court noted, "the great weight of authority holds that where a party seeks declaratory as well as coercive relief, the declaratory judgment exception to res judicata does not apply." See also 18 Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure: Jurisdiction § 4446, at 401 (1981) (Reciting as a "relatively secure starting point," that "so long as the request for declaratory relief is combined or followed with coercive relief, the claim preclusion rules that apply to actions for coercive relief apply with full force.").

Here, Defendant asserts that Plaintiff is seeking both coercive and injunctive relief that was already sought and litigated in the original adversary proceeding. Indeed, as noted earlier, the court, as part of its judgment, included a turnover order for all funds deemed to be community property. Thus, Defendant appears to be correct that in this situation, any applicable declaratory judgment exception to res judicata would not apply here.

V. Conclusion

Defendant succeeds (for the most part) in untangling the messy post-petition transactions and has convinced the court, with a few noted exceptions, that the character of the funds implicated in these post-petitions transactions was conclusively ruled upon by this court in the original adversary proceeding. Plaintiff does not directly dispute Defendant's narrative or tracing of the funds. Instead, Plaintiff argues instead that summary judgment should be denied on the basis that he wants to pursue a § 549 claim, which is a different theory than that which was at issue in the trial of the original adversary proceeding. But what does this add if the character as estate or non-estate has already been determined and that portion constituting property of the estate ordered turned over? The court is not convinced that such a legal theory would lead to a different outcome on a dollars and cents basis than was reached at trial of the original adversary proceeding, except where some of the findings could be made clearer. Plaintiff's attempts to argue that the evidence supporting these summary judgment motions should be ignored for want of authentication is unavailing for the reasons discussed above. Of course, this conclusion rests upon the reported cooperation of Defendants in already turning over the assets deemed property of the estate in the original adversary proceeding. Of course, any resistance or friction in that regard to complete turnover would change the analysis on remedy (i.e. contempt) but still would not raise the need for re-litigation over the character of the property or the duty to give it up to the Plaintiff. Where transfers identified and attacked have already been dealt with in the tracing and in reaching conclusions about net balances of accounts deemed to be estate property, nothing is gained by further litigation,

#11.00 Lexington National Insurance Corporation's Objection To And Motion To Disallow Proof Of Claim No. 32-2 Filed By HMC Assets, LLC, As Trustee Of Cam XV Truste
(cont'd from 12-17-19 per order approving stip. re: claim no. 32-2 entered 11-27-19)

Docket 245

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/25/20:

These nominally are characterized as claims objections. The main disputed issue common to Calendar #s 11, 25, and 28 (which are discussed in a single memorandum because they overlap) are the amounts of the allowable portions of the claims as it appears these claims include accrued interest (and perhaps fees) to which they may not be entitled. Lexington National Insurance Corporation ("Lexington"), one of several surety companies that provided Foreclosure Bonds for foreclosure sales conducted by Debtor in Maryland and Washington D.C. has filed numerous objections to claims against Debtor's estate. The curiosity arises from the fact that several of the claimants have agreed to continue the hearing scheduled for February 25, out to April 7, which explains why so many matters are vacated in this case. However, three creditors, HMC Assets, LLC, as Trustee of the CAM XV Trust (Claim# 32-2), Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc. (Claim #67), and Carrington Mortgage Services (Claim #70) have decided to press ahead in defending their claims, arguing that they are entitled to the entirety of their claims, even though Lexington has made a fairly compelling argument that they are only entitled to a portion of them, as will be discussed further below.

The BP Fisher Law Group, LLP ("Debtor") was a law firm that was primarily in the business of handling residential foreclosures in the Mid-Atlantic region. The Trust Fund Claims (as defined below) that are the subject of the Trust Fund (as defined below) and payment by the Chapter 7 Trustee pursuant to the Trust Fund Settlement (as defined below) arise out of foreclosures conducted by Debtor which allegedly resulted in Debtor receiving monies in trust that it allegedly failed to remit to the appropriate parties.

In connection with the foreclosure sales that were handled by Debtor, there are two types of parties who may possess claims arising out of the alleged misappropriation of foreclosure sale trust fund monies that were held by Debtor: (A) a Buyer who provided a Buyer Deposit to Debtor when the closing on the foreclosure sale did not actually take place for reasons not related to the Buyer's default (i.e., the Buyer Deposit was not returned to them); and (B) a lender in connection with foreclosures sales where a closing took place, an Auditor's Report was ratified, and Debtor did not disburse the net foreclosure sale trust fund monies as required by the ratified Auditor's Report.

Lexington's argues that the trust fund claims are limited to actual trust fund monies that were remitted to Debtor but not paid to rightful claimants. The Buyers are only entitled to a trust fund claim in the exact amount of the Buyer Deposit that was not returned and a lender is only entitled to a trust fund claim in the exact amount of trust fund monies that were not paid to it as set forth in the Foreclosure Court's order ratifying the Auditor's Report. Claimants are not entitled to trust fund claims for any other alleged damages or claims (i.e., no interest, attorney's fees, etc.) – their trust fund claims are limited to the exact amount of trust fund monies that were received by Debtor and later were supposed to be delivered to them. In other words, there is a difference between a genuine trust fund claim, which by its definition is limited to a certain fund misappropriation, and consequential damages claims against the Debtor.

On July 19, 2019, several months after Debtor filed its petition, the Chapter 7 Trustee (formerly Chapter 11 Trustee (the "Trustee") filed his Motion to Approve Compromise Under FRBP 9019 and attached memorandum (the "Trust Fund Motion") (Docket Entry # 146) seeking approval of a settlement (the "Settlement") with Debtor's principal and his related entity Plutos Sama Holdings, Inc. Pursuant to the Trust Fund Motion, $3,412,000 that was held in one of BP's bank accounts were characterized as trust fund monies arising out of various foreclosure sales. As part of the Settlement, BP's principal and related entity delivered $4,000,000 to the Trustee and ultimately the $3,412,000 of trust fund monies (the "Trust Fund") will be used to only pay trust fund claims, i.e., claims arising out of missing foreclosure sale proceeds that were delivered to BP in trust but never delivered to the beneficiary (i.e., a lender, Buyer, junior lienholder, or borrower, as appropriate) (the "Trust Fund Claims"). As the court reads it, this fund was never designed to be a comprehensive payment of all that victims qua creditors might be entitled to as consequential damages; it was designed purely to refund that which were never truly Debtor's monies. On August 14, 2019, the court entered the Order Granting Motion to Approve Compromise Under Rule 9019 (Docket Entry # 195) (the "Settlement Order") establishing the procedure for filing a trust fund proof of claim. Pursuant to the Settlement Order, the trust fund claim bar date was set as September 16, 2019.

Lexington persuasively argues that the Trust Fund Agreement put into place a claim process solely for Trust Fund Claims that permitted creditors whose money was being held in trust by the Debtor (but not remitted to such creditor) to file a Trust Fund Claim in the amount of the trust fund money that the Debtor held, but failed to remit to such creditor. In effect, Lexington asserts, Trust Fund Creditors are being treated differently than general unsecured creditors by way of the Trust Fund Settlement vis a vis the Trust Fund because trust fund money is not property of the bankruptcy estate. See In re Lopez Roman, 599 B.R. 87, 94 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2019) ("funds that are deposited into an escrow account by a debtor, for the benefit of others cannot be characterized as property of the estate"). Therefore, Trust Fund Claimants have a senior interest in trust fund money, but only in the actual amount of trust fund money that the Debtor was holding for Trust Fund Claimants. As such, Lexington argues, Creditors are free to assert that they have suffered additional damages as a result of the failure of the Debtor to timely remit trust fund money, but these additional damages will be nothing more than general unsecured claims against property of the estate.

As the docket for February 25, 2020 shows, there were many hearings on objections to claims scheduled. However, Lexington asserts that it has been successful in resolving many of its objections and will be filing stipulations confirming the actual claim amounts, the three creditors mentioned above being the exceptions.

As to the claims of these three creditors, Lexington argues that they are attempting to include general unsecured damage claims (e.g. interest) as part of their Trust Fund Claims in violation of the Trust Fund Settlement. Further, Lexington argues that some of these creditors are attempting to assert Trust Fund Claims for monies that do not belong to them, and that these creditors do not even know how much of their trust fund monies Debtor received and allegedly failed to remit to them. Select Portfolio (Claim #67) and Carrington (Claim #70) have not been able to confirm the exact amounts or provide adequate documentation to support their claims, which is highly problematic. Lexington has propounded discovery to fill in this missing information.

Obviously, there is a great deal more going on here than can readily be resolved in a summary proceeding like a claims objection. Lexington requests that these hearings be treated as status conferences pursuant to LBR 3007-1(b)(5), which gives the court discretion to "treat the initial hearing as a status conference." This will allow the parties to hash out any additional discovery and evidentiary issues that should be addressed prior to an evidentiary hearing scheduled for April 7, 2020. This does seem to be an appropriate suggestion, as in a case like this, more clarity and more information is preferable. All parties involved would likely benefit from treating these hearings as status conferences in contested proceedings. If the parties are unable to agree, at the continued status conference deadlines for discovery and law and motion will be set, possible referral to mediation discussed and a pretrial conference scheduled.

Continue as status conference.

#2.00 Debtor's Disclosure Statement Describing Chapter 11 Plan Of Reorganization
(con't from 1-08-20)

Docket 64

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the debtor's motion to approve as adequate its revised Disclosure Statement to accompany its First Amended Plan. The Disclosure Statement is still not adequate for at least the following reasons:

1. Sale of the real property in San Juan Capistrano, the premises for debtor's business, is promised no later than February 28, 2020. But just how this is to be accomplished without a §363(f) order is not explained and it is obvious that a plan providing for same is not yet possible. This needs better explanation and/or a more realistic timetable.
2. The plan still needs a better discussion as to how the equity interests are being treated. Presumably this belongs in Class 4 and there should be there a discussion about the absolute priority rule and the contribution of $20,000 in new value. Further, some discussion as to how/why that is the proper number is necessary given the requirements of "market testing" found in Bank of America NT & SA v. 203 N. La Salle Street Partnership 526 U.S. 434 (1999) would be in order.
3. The description about discharge at 21:1-3 should be corrected in view of §1141(d)(3) as suggested by the United States Trustee.
4. As indicated in the opposition of Seacoast Commerce Bank a better job could be done explaining how this plan is feasible if, as Seacoast argues, only about $13,000 is available on a net basis for monthly debt service after costs of operation. Normally, feasibility is a confirmation issue, but this would be the opportunity to explain in simple terms how this works.

5. Some discussion about the alleged $150,000 loan to an insider needs to be discussed and if it is not to be pursued, why.
6. A consistent explanation as to whether Northeast Bank is truly a fully secured creditor at $93,118 including post-petition assets is necessary, in order to evaluate the best interest of creditors test, as Seacoast argues.
7. Some discussion about the pending litigation against Seacoast is also necessary. Is this to be pursued post confirmation? If so, how is the litigation to be funded and what goal is sought? If a judgment were achieved what becomes of the proceeds?

Deny

Tentative for 1/8/20:

This is debtor's motion for approval of disclosure statement as required under §1125(a)(1) as containing "adequate information." An adequacy finding is opposed in oppositions filed by both the UST and Seacoast Commerce Bank. The oppositions are both well taken, and the points raised need not be restated at elaborate length here. The court is primarily concerned about the following fundamental deficiencies:

1. The plan clearly violates the absolute priority rule found at §1129(b)(2) (B)(ii). The plan proposes only 1% to unsecured creditors in installments yet the principals retain governance and stock ownership. Seacoast, which itself may be the largest unsecured creditor, plans to vote against. No new value is mentioned. So, unless something else is true this plan is patently unconfirmable, and distribution of a disclosure statement on such a plan is a waste of time and resources. While the court does not usually prejudge confirmation issues, this one is too fundamental to ignore, and so either amendment or at least explanation is required;

2. The proposed treatment of Seacoast 's secured claim is also very problematic. Debtor proposes either to cramdown a payment over 30 years at 5% or a "consensual sale" of the underlying real estate collateral. But the timing and conditions of the proposed sale are unstated, not made subject to conditions and are, thus, illusory. Can the debtor sell whenever it feels like it? Whenever in future it thinks the market has appreciated enough, even if that takes years, or never? The alternative treatment is also a non-starter. An effective 100% loan to value claim is far riskier than a more conventional loan usually made as a percentage of value. Consequently, the increased risk element must be accommodated (paid for), and anything less is a legally impermissible imposition of the risk upon the lender. See In re North Valley Mall ,432 B.R, 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Although this is usually a confirmation issue, 5% is far too low for a commercial loan under any reasonable economic analysis, i.e. prime rate is 4.75% and must be "built up" from there even under a Till analysis. North Valley Mall is not the only analysis relied upon by courts, but this court happens to believe it is the most appropriate in a business, real estate context. Therefore, the court will not approve dissemination of disclosure upon such a patently unconfirmable plan.
3. Feasibility is very questionable. Again, normally this is judged at confirmation, but the court does not ignore that the MORS show a generally declining cash position, and this is while there has been a 9-month moratorium in debt payments. Had even reduced payments been made the debtor would be by now out of money. What, if Debtor should also provide a narrative with some background information about the properties; how and when the Yorba Linda property is to be sold including listing prices, how price reductions will be decided, etc.; what the various disputes with Debtor's family members are and how they are to be resolved; and the adversary proceedings that are pending. Some discussion is required about what happens if the debtor does not prevail in these proceedings. Passing reference is not sufficient. It is very possible that Debtor will be able to liquidate sufficient funds to pay everyone, but that is not clear from this DS. The treatment of the various claims is also not clear and the objector is correct, interest must be paid "at the legal rate" under sections 726(a)(5) and 1129(a)(7). #14.00 Motion To Dismiss Chapter 11 Case Pursuant To 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b)

Docket 54

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the motion of Judgment Creditor, Placentia Development Company, LLC ("PDC") to dismiss Bridgemark Corporation, LLC's ("Debtor's") Chapter 11 case pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1112(b) and/or motion for relief from the automatic stay pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §362 (action in nonbankruptcy forum). The motion is opposed by Debtor. No other party has filed any responsive papers.

1. Basic Background Facts

Debtor filed its Petition on January 14, 2020. PDC is the primary creditor owed approximately $42.5 million on account of a state court judgment entered after years of litigation over Debtor's unauthorized use of PDC's land for purposes of extracting oil. Debtor's principal, Robert J. Hall, testified under oath that the company does not have the ability to pay the judgment debt because Debtor's business involves a finite resource of constantly diminishing value. Debtor's second largest non-insider creditor is owed less than $25,000, and all of Debtor's other debts combined add up, at most, to a few hundred thousand. PDC reports that it is offering to acquire all such legitimate, non-insider debts at par. In other words, the judgment owed to PDC accounts for approximately 99.8% of the estate's debt. There do not appear to be any other debts listed as disputed, contingent, or unliquidated. The authorizing resolution appended to Debtor's Petition admits that the purpose of this chapter 11 filing is to allow Debtor a stay pending appeal because the Debtor (and one presumes, its principals) cannot afford a supersedeas bond. During the punitive damages portion of the state court trial this testimony was elicited:

"We cannot pay the 27 million We have no ability to pay any of this. ... I don't care how you do it. There's just no way around that. We don't have the ability to pay it and operate a business. It's done." Trial Tr. (Ex. B to Kibler Declaration) at 3125:9-13."

Mr. Hall also testified that at best, Bridgemark might theoretically be able to pay the $27 million in compensatory damages at $1 million per year, interest-free, over 27 years. See Id. at 3156:20-23 ["We can't pay it. ... If they would let us pay a million dollars a year for 27 years with no interest, we might be able to work it out."] But as Mr. Hall also testified, Bridgemark is built on "an asset that's declining in value every year.... It just goes down and down and down." Id. at 3113:8-12.

By prior motion the court was informed that Debtor will attempt post judgment motions to reduce the judgment and/or obtain a new trial. No information is provided as to the status of any of those.

The court is also informed that PDC has filed a state court lawsuit against members of the Hall family, who are 100% equity holders of Debtor, alleging, among other things, that the Halls used Debtor as a vehicle to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars to affiliated entities in the form of "management fees" or "consulting fees," which the affiliated entities then – through non-arms' length "loans" to the Halls – used to purchase multi-million-dollar homes, extravagant cars and furnishings, valuable pieces of art, and luxury yachts for personal use and benefit.

2. Motion to Dismiss & Relief from Stay Standards

Section 1112(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides:

"[O]n request of a party in interest, and after notice and a hearing, the court shall convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 or dismiss a case under this chapter, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate, for cause unless the court determines that the appointment under section 1104(a) of a trustee or an examiner is in the best interests of creditors and the estate."

The statute includes a non-exhaustive list of certain types of "cause," including "substantial or continuing loss to or diminution of the estate and the absence of a reasonable likelihood of rehabilitation," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(A), and "gross mismanagement of the estate," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(B).

Similarly, section 362(d) provides that "[o]n request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, the court shall grant relief from the stay provided under subsection (a) of this section ... for cause," and also provides the non-exhaustive example of "lack of adequate protection."

Given the non-exhaustive nature of "cause" referenced in both sections of the Code, courts have read the term "cause" to include bankruptcy filings that are not appropriate invocations of federal bankruptcy jurisdiction – such as filings in which the avowed purpose of the bankruptcy petition is to avoid posting an appellate bond, or where the petition seeks merely to move what is essentially a two-party dispute from a state court to a federal bankruptcy court. As a matter of shorthand, the case law interpreting §§362(d)(1) and 1112(b) often refer to these types of cause as dismissals for "bad faith" or for lack of "good faith." See generally Marsch v. Marsch (In re Marsch), 36 F.3d 825, 828 (9th Cir. 1994) [employing this terminology, but cautioning that it is misleading: "While the case law refers to these dismissals as dismissals for 'bad faith' filing, it is probably more accurate in light of the precise language of section 1112(b) to call them dismissals 'for cause.'"]. Thus, the shorthand phrase "good faith" (which does not appear in the statute) does not turn on an inquiry into subjective motivations, thoughts, or feelings. Instead, the question is whether a particular bankruptcy filing transgresses "several, distinct equitable limitations that courts have placed on Chapter 11 filings" in order to "deter filings that seek to achieve objectives outside the legitimate scope of the bankruptcy laws." Id.

In this context, whether there is "cause" for dismissal or relief from stay "depends on an amalgam of factors and not upon a specific fact." In re Mense, 509 B.R. 269, 277 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2014). Four pertinent factors include whether the debtor has unsecured creditors, cash flow, or sources of income to sustain a feasible plan of reorganization, and whether the case is "essentially a two-party dispute capable of prompt adjudication in state court." In re St. Paul Self Storage Ltd. P'ship, 185 B.R. 580, 582–83 (9th Cir. BAP 1995). Courts are particularly suspicious of filings in which the express purpose of the chapter 11 petition is to stay execution of a judgment without an appellate bond. See e.g., In re Integrated Telecom Express, Inc., 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004) ("[I]f there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court."). In such cases, courts consider some or all of the following factors to determine whether bankruptcy jurisdiction is being properly invoked:

- "Whether the debtor had financial problems on the petition date, other than the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor has relatively few unsecured creditors, other than the holder of the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor intends to pursue an effective reorganization within a reasonable period of time, or whether the debtor is unwilling or unable to propose a meaningful plan until the conclusion of the litigation"; and
- "Whether assets of the estate are being diminished by the combined ongoing expenses of the debtor, the chapter 11 proceedings, and prosecution of the appeal." In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 280 (footnotes

"The bankruptcy court is not required to find that each factor is satisfied or even to weigh each factor equally. Rather, the ... factors are simply tools that the bankruptcy court employs in considering the totality of the circumstances." In re Prometheus Health Imaging, Inc., 2015 WL 6719804, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Nov. 2, 2015) (citations, internal quotation marks, and brackets omitted). Indeed, "[a] bankruptcy court may find one factor dispositive or may find bad faith even if none of the factors are present." In re Greenberg, 2017 WL 3816042, at *5 (9th Cir. BAP Aug. 31, 2017) (citing Mahmood v. Khatib (In re Mahmood), 2017 WL 1032569, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Mar. 17, 2017)).

3. Was Debtor's Petition Filed for a Proper Purpose?

PDC argues that Debtor's petition is a textbook bad faith filing. In support PDC cites In re Integrated Telecom Express, 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004), where the court stated bluntly: "if there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay provision to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court." PDC also cites In re Casey, 198 B.R. 910, 917-18 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1996) for the proposition that the "use [of] bankruptcy to defeat the state law appeal bond requirement" is not a "legitimate bankruptcy purpose."

In response Debtor argues that at least some courts have held that a chapter 11 filing can properly substitute for posting an appeal bond. For example, Debtor cites Marshall v. Marshall (In re Marshall), 721 F.3d 1032, 1048 (9th Cir. 2013) where the court found:

Here, unlike in Marsch and Boynton, the record suggests that Howard and Ilene's liquid assets were probably insufficient to satisfy the judgment or cover the cost of a supersedeas bond. The bankruptcy court found that the Fraud Judgment amounted to over $12 million plus interest, that the "custom" in Texas was to set appeal bonds at 150% of the judgment, and that Howard did not have sufficient liquid assets to post a bond of that size. Although the record does not invariably indicate that the Debtors could not finance a supersedeas bond, we cannot say that the bankruptcy court's determination was clearly erroneous. Moreover, notwithstanding their ability to finance a bond, Howard and Ilene's inclusion of the Fraud Judgment in their initial Plan suggests that they filed their bankruptcy petition for the proper purpose of reorganization, not as a mere ploy to avoid posting the bond.

Debtor argues that the language quoted above, and others expressing similar sentiment, is applicable to our case. Debtor also points out that it is not attempting to avoid posting an appeal bond, it simply cannot do so, which Debtor argues is a critical distinction.

PDC argues that the cases cited by Defendant must be viewed according to their unique factual context, rather than relying solely on the ultimate result. For example, PDC points out that in Marshall, the judgment creditor who moved to dismiss the case as a bad faith filing had already missed the claims bar date (which was November 15, 2002) when he filed the motion to dismiss (on December 13, 2002). See In re Marshall, 298 B.R. 670, 674 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2003). At the time the motion to dismiss was filed, the debtors had already proposed a plan that would pay every other creditor with timely claims in full. Id. It was in this context that the Circuit court held that the bankruptcy court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to dismiss for bad faith. Indeed, the Marshall Circuit court stated, "we agree with the bankruptcy court that '[p]erhaps the most compelling grounds for denying a motion to dismiss grounded on bad faith is the determination that a reorganization plan qualifies for confirmation.'" Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681)). PDC persuasively argues that it would be inappropriate to infer a broader rule from Marshall. PDC argues with some persuasion that the other cases cited by Debtor were ones in which the courts based their holdings on the unique circumstances before them and did not articulate rules of general applicability.

Similarly, on the relief of stay question, Debtor's citation to In re Badax, LLC, 608 B.R. 730 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2019), also appears to be misplaced. Debtor takes a small section of the opinion where the court stated that the conclusion of bad faith was not based solely on the debtor's failure to obtain a bond, but rather based on a totality of the circumstances. Id. at 741. However, PDC points out that the Badax court specifically held that relief from stay was granted because the case had been filed in an attempt to delay execution on an adverse judgment and also because "there [was] no basis to conclude that a speedy, efficient and feasible reorganization [was] realistic." Id.

In contrast PDC argues that the instant case is more similar in substance to several other cases including Windscheffel v. Montebello Unified School District (In re Windscheffel), 2017 WL 1371294 (9th Cir. BAP Apr. 3, 2017). In Windscheffel, the debtor filed an appeal of an approximately $3 million state court judgment, but "claimed that he was unable to post the required supersedeas bond to stay enforcement of the judgment." Id. at *1. "He filed bankruptcy to avoid posting the bond and to stay [the judgment creditor's] collection efforts." Id. The debtor had, at most, four unsecured creditors (including the judgment creditor). The debtor filed a proposed chapter 11 plan that was "a thinly veiled attempt to avoid the state court's award of punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest because it proposed to pay 49.22 percent of [the judgment creditor's] claim, which was (not coincidentally) the approximate amount of the state court judgment without punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest." Id. The debtor later amended his plan to provide that if the judgment were upheld on appeal, he would liquidate his assets and give the proceeds to the judgment creditor. Id. The Ninth Circuit BAP affirmed the bankruptcy court's holding that the "totality of the circumstances" warranted dismissal of the case for cause. Id. at *4.

PDC argues that Debtor has admitted in the authorizing resolution attached to its Petition that this case was filed to circumvent the requirement to post a supersedeas bond: "Since the Company lacks the financial resources to post a bond, the only way to protect the interests of all stakeholders [i.e., the Hall family] is to commence a case under chapter 11" Docket No. 1 at PDF page 5 of 101. PDC also points to the First Day Declaration, and specifically the section entitled "Events Leading to the Bankruptcy" which only mentions the judgment debt, and really nothing else, as the major cause of the bankruptcy filing. Therefore, PDC argues with some persuasion that it is obvious that the only purpose served by filing the Chapter 11 petition was to attempt to avoid the posting of an appeal bond. After all, Debtor's entire business model as amplified in Mr. Hall's testimony is built upon extracting a finite and irreplaceable resource, which might be said to make a reorganization over time inherently less feasible than other businesses.

PDC next argues that because the dispute is solely between PDC and Debtor, for purposes of a finding of bad faith, this case is fundamentally a two-party dispute, which is continuing even now. PDC cites In re Murray, 543 B.R. 484, 494–95 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016), aff'd, 565 B.R. 527 (S.D.N.Y. 2017), aff'd, 900 F.3d 53 (2d Cir. 2018), for the proposition that, "Bankruptcy is a collective remedy, with the original purpose – which continues to this day – to address the needs and concerns of creditors with competing demands to debtors' limited assets" As such, PDC argues, "[a] chapter 11 reorganization case has been filed in bad faith when it is an apparent two-party dispute that can be resolved outside of the Bankruptcy Court's jurisdiction." Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC v. Sholes (In re Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC), 2011 WL 4502102, at *10 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. Aug. 26, 2011).

PDC argues that there is no need for the "collective remedy" of bankruptcy as articulated above because there are no other creditors with competing demands to Debtor's assets. All other claims against Debtor are de minimis relative to the Judgment, and also appear to be undisputed. Cf. In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 (dismissing chapter 11 case where debtors had "few unsecured creditors" other than judgment creditor); In re Windscheffel, 2017 WL 1371294, at *5 (affirming dismissal of case where claims of other unsecured creditors were "negligible" compared to judgment creditor's claim). In fact, if the judgment debt did not exist, it appears Debtor would have more than sufficient cash on hand to pay any other outstanding debts without difficulty. See First Day Decl. ¶¶ 22 (stating that Debtor has unrestricted cash of approximately $4.2 million) & 28–30 (describing secured car loans, royalty obligations, and accounts payable totaling less than $700,000). PDC reminds the court that it also offers to acquire all legitimate, non-insider claims at par value, leaving no reason that such creditors cannot be paid in full.

Finally, PDC argues, citing In re Chu, 253 B.R. 92, 95 (S.D. Cal. 2000) that for purposes of a finding of bad faith, Debtor's prepetition improper conduct provides additional support for dismissing the case outright or granting relief of stay. Thus, use of a debtor's assets to fund the expenses of its principals is one factor indicative of bad faith. See, e.g., In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 n.26. PDC argues that Debtor's alleged tortious prepetition conduct, which precipitated the underlying lawsuit that ultimately led to the judgment (which included punitive damages), should be considered by the court. The court should also consider the allegations contained in the litigation PDC has pending against the Hall family, which alleges that family members essentially used Debtor as a piggy bank to mask income from Debtor.

Though perhaps not always perfect analogues, it appears that PDC's characterization of Ninth Circuit jurisprudence is more in line with the current case than those cases cited by Debtor. To be clear, the court is less concerned with Debtor's heated rhetoric impugning PDC's motivation in pursuing this motion (and PDC's allegations of post-petition misconduct by the Debtor and the Hall family) than it is with PDC's arguments that a reorganization is likely not feasible due to the enormous judgment debt and Debtor's ever diminishing product source. The court is also not impressed with Debtor's assertion that allowing PDC to collect on its judgment would amount necessarily to a business fatality. First, it is far from clear that PDC wants to "kill" the Debtor as it would seem far more logical to continue operations, at least until the judgment is paid. Perhaps not so clear is why the Hall family should get to stay in authority. Debtor's principals, as the trial court found, are responsible for this misfortune as indicated by the addition of punitive damages to the judgment.

The court also disagrees with Debtor's premise that simply because Debtor is currently operating a viable business, a successful reorganization is realistic. Even Debtor's authorities suggesting a Chapter 11 to avoid an appeal bond may serve a legitimate purpose do so largely because a reorganization benefitting an array of creditors with divergent interests seemed possible or even likely. See e.g. Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048-49 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681), citing Marsch, 36 F. 3d at 828 and In re Boynton, 184 B.R. 580, 581, 583 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1995). But little or no effort is made here to show how this Debtor can possibly confirm a non-consensual plan under these circumstances, where 99+% of the debt is in hostile hands. This must particularly be so where PDC has offered to make all other creditors whole either by buying the claims or by filing a competing plan. How does Debtor get away with claiming an impaired consenting class in those circumstances, even if separate classification maneuvers could succeed? Adding to this problem is Mr. Hall's admission that the assets are a diminishing resource, thus calling into question the feasibility of a long-term payout. Debtor may cite to 11 U.S.C. §1129 (c) which requires the court, when two plans are confirmable, to consider the interests of equity. But this assumes that Debtor's plan could in any event be confirmable, a somewhat dubious proposition. A plan that proposes nothing more than delay while the appeals are resolved should be regarded as "dead on arrival."

But the court is willing to give the Debtor a short but reasonable extension to answer these questions about just how probable a reorganization is or can be despite these obstacles. In this the court is uninterested in platitudes; rather, a point by point, connect the dots proposal to reorganization that could be plausibly crammed down is what is needed. Further, PDC may also amplify the record with a more complete evidentiary showing which might support a charge of prepetition fraud or mismanagement as discussed at §§1104(a)(1) (or implicated in 1112) thereby strengthening the argument that there is no legitimate reason for maintaining management. Debtor should not expect an extension of exclusivity, however, which will run out on or about May 14, 2020.

Continue hearing about 60 days to allow Debtor to explain how reorganization is feasible in these circumstances.

(set at s/c held 8-15-19)
(cont'd from 2-6-20 per order granting ex parte application to continue defendants' mtn to dsm and the pre-trial conference entered 2-05-20)

Docket 1

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/27/20:

This is supposed to be a pre-trial conference. Sadly, it is not that and this is hardly the first time in this series of cases where the court has been sorely frustrated.

As required by the LBRs, the parties were to have met and conferred in good faith to narrow the issues so that trial time could be focused on those items truly in dispute. Local Rule 7016-1 sets forth a very specific timeline and list of duties incumbent on each side. At LBR 7016-1(b)(1)(C) Plaintiff was to have initiated a meet and confer at least 28 days before the date set for the pre-trial conference. According to Defendant's papers, this did not occur 28 days before the originally scheduled pretrial conference of Feb. 6, or indeed at all until February 13 when Plaintiff reportedly filed his "Pretrial Stipulation" in which he claims it was Defendants who "refused to participate in the pretrial stipulation process" necessitating what is actually a unilateral stipulation. Defendant on the next day, February 14, filed his Unilateral Pretrial Stipulation. Defendant does acknowledge at his page 2, line 1-2 that Plaintiff sent something over to Defendant on January 28, but it was reportedly "not complete in any respect." As to the original date of the Pretrial Conference of February 6, that was very late. Whether that document was anything close to what was later filed unilaterally on Feb. 13 is not clarified. But what is very clear is that these two unilateral "stipulations" are largely worthless in the main goal of narrowing issues inasmuch as the parties seem to be discussing two entirely different complaints. Defendant focuses on what the former trustee (now deceased) may have known about the existence of a loan undisclosed on the schedules made by Frank to WeCosign, Inc., which loan was reportedly worthless in any case, and about how that knowledge should be imputed to Plaintiff Marshack. But why the trustee's knowledge, imputed or otherwise, should justify an alleged misstatement or omission to list assets under oath, is never quite explained. One presumes Defendant will argue materiality. Plaintiff focuses on the alleged use of another corporation, Tara Pacific, as the repository of funds taken from WeCosign as an alleged fraudulent conveyance and then used by Frank and Tara as a piggy bank between 2010 and 2012 and upon alleged misstatements in the schedules about Tara's and Frank's actual average income. While this sounds like a fraudulent conveyance theory the gist seems to be that Tara and Frank were using ill-gotten gains to live on while denying in respective schedules that they had any income (or assets) thus comprising a false oath. There probably are connections between these different stories, but that is not made at all clear (and it must be made clear). Plaintiff's overlong "stipulation" is written more like a 'cut and paste' brief containing long tables with over 59 footnotes inserted. One presumes this represents a good faith compilation of bank records, but even that is left unclear. But the language used reads purely as advocacy, not an attempt to narrow the disputed facts in a way the other side can sign.

Buried in the Defendant's recitations (at page 4, ¶ 13) is the argument that the case should be dismissed as outside the statute of limitation (or statute of repose in Defendant's terms) described at §727(e)(1). Why this was not raised 50+ months ago when the action was filed by Rule 12(b) motion or otherwise is not explained. What the Defendant expects the court to do with this point now is also not explained.

In sum, this case is still a disorganized mess. This is not the first time the court has voiced its utter frustration with this series of cases. Rather than being ready for trial, we are very much still at the drawing board. The court is not happy about it as this is hardly a young case.

What is the remedy? The court could order sanctions against either side, or maybe both sides, and that would be richly deserved. The court could decide that Plaintiff as the party with the initial duty under the LBRs should suffer the brunt of just consequences by a dismissal, as the ultimate sanction. But however tedious and frustrating this has become the court would rather see these cases decided on their merits (if any) if that is possible. But what the court will not do is to further indulge these parties in disobeying the LBRs and generally continuing to shamle along, never getting anywhere.

Therefore, it is ordered:

1. The parties will immediately meet and confer about reducing the two unilateral 'stipulations' into an intelligible, single, useful list of items not in dispute and therefore requiring no further litigation;
2. The resulting stipulation will be concise, user-friendly and focused on the actual legal issues to be tried;
3. The stipulation will contain a concise list of exhibits to be offered at trial identified by number for Plaintiff and letter for Defendant;
4. The parties will attempt in good faith to resolve any evidentiary objections to admission of the exhibits, and if agreement cannot be reached, state concisely the reasons for or against admissibility;
5. The stipulation will contain a list of witnesses to be called by each side, with a very brief synopsis of the expected testimony;
6. All factual matters relevant and truly in dispute will be listed, by short paragraph;

7. All legal issues to be decided will be separately listed, by paragraph;
8. Any threshold issues such as Defendants argument about statute of repose will be separately listed along with a suggested means of resolving the issue; and
9. Both sides will estimate expected length of trial, mindful that the court requires all direct testimony by declaration with the witnesses available at trial for live cross and re-direct.

In sum the parties are to do their jobs. If the court's order is not followed in enthusiastic good faith, and completely with the goal of narrowing the issues, and if the resulting product is not a concise, user-friendly joint pretrial stipulation, the offending party or parties will be subject to severe sanctions which may include monetary awards and/or the striking or either the complaint or answer.

defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to FRCP 12(b)(6) entered 2-05-20)

Docket 183

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/27/20:

This is the motion of Frank and Tara Jakubaitis ("Frank", "Tara" or collectively "Defendants") to dismiss Frank from this adversary proceeding for lack of subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to Fed R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1). Defendants assert that because this adversary proceeding, which seeks revocation of discharge under 11 U.S.C. §727 and turnover of assets under 11 U.S.C. §542, is in Tara's bankruptcy case, Frank is a non-debtor, which, in turn, means that the Chapter 7 Trustee, Richard Marshack ("Trustee" or "Marshack") lacks standing to bring this adversary proceeding as to Frank. Therefore, Defendants argue Frank should be dismissed as a defendant in this adversary proceeding.

"The objection that a federal court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction... may be raised by a party, or by a court on its own initiative, at any stage in the litigation, even after trial and the entry of judgment." *Arbaugh v. Chapter 7

1. Revocation of Discharge Under §727

Defendants have always maintained that Trustee lacked standing to seek revocation of discharge against Frank because Frank is not the debtor in this case nor has Mr. Marshack been appointed trustee over Frank's separate bankruptcy case. This court has already ruled on this issue, albeit with the names reversed. In its August 15, 2019 tentative ruling on "Defendant's Motion For Reconsideration Of Order Striking Defendants Answers Entered On June 6, 2019," this court noted, "Defendants also correctly point out that revoking [Tara's] discharge makes no sense if brought in Frank's case." As persuasively argued by Defendants, the same logic should apply if the court simply reversed the names. In any case, Frank's discharge was revoked by order of this court on September 24, 2019 in the adversary proceeding in his own bankruptcy case (see 8:15-ap-01020, Dkt. #452), which moots the revocation of discharge issue as it concerns Frank in this adversary proceeding.

Trustee confusingly argues that a motion brought under FRCP 12(b)(6) would be untimely. While that may be true, as is clearly stated in the motion, this motion challenges the Plaintiff's standing and this court's subject matter jurisdiction under FRCP 12(b)(1). As it is appropriate to challenge subject matter jurisdiction at any time, it is incorrect to argue that this motion is untimely.

2. Turnover Under §542

On the issue of turnover, Defendants again assert that Trustee lacks standing to pursue this claim because Frank filed his petition before Tara filed her petition. Defendants argue, all of Frank's separate property and their community property became part of Frank's bankruptcy estate, which is under control of trustee, Jeffrey Golden ("Golden"), not Marshack. Defendants note that Golden filed an adversary proceeding against Defendants nine months before Marshack brought this adversary proceeding against Defendants and that the claims in the Golden adversary proceeding mirror those brought in the current adversary proceeding. Defendants also point out that Tara was dismissed (properly) from Frank's adversary proceeding. Defendants argue that Golden brought a default judgment proceeding against Frank seeking a monetary judgment for Frank's alleged failure to turnover assets of the estate, but the court denied the request for monetary judgment. Further, Defendants point out that on March 31, 2018, Mr. Golden filed his second no-asset report. In fact, Defendants argue that both trustees have filed no-asset reports and have not withdrawn them, which makes it clear, in Defendants' view, that there is simply nothing to turnover. Thus, Defendants argue, the court lacks jurisdiction over a claim for which no effective relief can be granted. In re Parks, 475 B.R. 703, 706 (9th Cir. BAP 2012).

In contrast, Marshack argues that enough evidence has already been produced that show that Frank and Tara have worked in tandem to hide assets, including some assets that were not disclosed in Frank's schedules. Specifically, Trustee argues that a loan made by Frank to WeCosign, Inc. in the amount of $250,000, which was then forgiven by Frank and Tara, was not properly scheduled. In essence, Trustee argues that this motion is just another attempt by Defendants to use the bankruptcy system to hide assets by the filing of multiple concurrent bankruptcy proceedings. However, perhaps notably, Trustee does not acknowledge or even address the no-asset reports issued by both trustees. Thus, this leaves significant uncertainty about what should be done with the turnover claim. Further, like the similar issue in Frank's case, the court is not clear that §542 "turnover" is an appropriate theory in any case. Apparently, the subject asset, an alleged $250,000 promissory note from WeCosign, Inc., was "forgiven" on the eve of the respective bankruptcies. But that is an intangible asset, nothing concrete that fits within the concept of "turnover." Damages might be appropriate under a fraudulent conveyance or conversion theory; turnover, not so much for turnover. But Trustee may be correct that as to this theory such a motion should have been brought as a Rule 56 motion, not Rule 12(b),

3. Conclusion

This case(s) remain something of a factual and procedural labyrinth, which makes nailing down details extremely difficult. However, it seems clear that it is appropriate for Frank to be dismissed from this adversary proceeding, at least as to the revocation of discharge claim. Both parties seem to agree on this point. What is left somewhat unclear is what should be done with the turnover claims. As far as the court is aware, there has been no joinder of Frank and Tara's adversary proceedings. If, as seems to be the case, Trustee is arguing that there is clear evidence that Frank and Tara have jointly concocted a scheme to hide assets through multiple, and more or less concurrent, bankruptcy filings, the court should order further briefing solely on this issue to get a clearer picture of where things stand and whether joinder is proper so that this issue can be adjudicated all in one consolidated proceeding. Amendment of the pleadings may be necessary to the extent that it is agreed that "turnover" is an inapplicable remedy for the harm alleged here. To the extent that "turnover" is an inappropriate remedy, pressing of that point should be raised under Rule 56 or perhaps a Rule 12 (c) motion for judgment on the pleadings.

Grant the motion dismissing the revocation of discharge claim against Frank in this adversary proceeding. Order further briefing on the turnover issue and set deadlines for amendment and/or other dispositive motion.

Tentative for 3/3/20:

The question presented is straightforward and not even a close call. The parties expend several pages and copious volumes of ink over competing calculations of what equity might be realized from the trustee's sale of the property. All of that is beside the point. Section 542 is not conditioned. It is absolute. The debtor "shall deliver" to the trustee. It is not the debtor's place to quibble over fair market value or the relative utility of staying in residence. Those are the trustee's calls alone to make. She decides the relative benefits and burdens, and if she determines debtor's continued residence is a detriment, that ends the inquiry, irrespective of rental value or price.

Grant. Trustee may phrase the order as a directive to the U.S. Marshal to enforce after 10 days of entry of the order.

#15.00 Motion To Reopen Chapter 7 Case Due To Violation Of Stay And Request For Fee Waiver.

Docket 29

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/3/20:

This is Debtor, Dianne Dobson-Sojka's ("Debtor's") new motion to reopen her chapter 7 case to remedy what she perceives as unlawful auctions of her cherished personal property formerly contained in a storage unit owned by Defendant, Santa Paula Storage Place ("Santa Paula").

On January 14, 2020, this Court denied the Debtor's First Motion to reopen this Case for several reasons including the Debtor's failure to provide evidentiary support for her claims and the Debtor's failure to address how Storage Place's statutory warehouseman's lien affects Debtor's purported claims against Storage Place.

On January 28, 2020, this Court entered an Order Setting Hearing ("Scheduling Order") on Debtor's New Motion. In its Scheduling Order, the Court specifically stated that "Debtor should address the issue of a warehouseman's lien prior to the hearing." (Docket No. 34) Instead of doing as the Court required, on February 18, 2020, Debtor filed a document entitled "Debtors [sic] Further Brief Exhibits" ("Debtor's Brief") which brief contains irrelevant information and assertions that lack any evidentiary support whatsoever with respect to claims Debtor is asserting against Storage Place and others. (Docket No. 37)

Unfortunately, as Santa Paula argues, Debtor's motion does not really get her anywhere. The main issue identified by the court, the warehouse lien, is not addressed at all and the evidence provided is not responsive to any of the court's concerns.

Deny without prejudice.

MOTION ENTERED ON 2/21/2020

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/22/20:

This is the motion of debtor under §363(f) to sell substantially all assets of the estate free of liens to Grand Theater, Inc., an entity owned and controlled by Musa Madain, the principal of the debtor. The assets to be sold consist primarily of the leasehold (about 25 years left), with personal property therein, commonly known as 2232 S. Harbor Blvd., Anaheim, CA. The property is operated as an events center. The proposed price is $1 million cash plus assumption by the buyer or waiver of six enumerated creditors of an aggregate of about another $1 million, but of which $631,590 is held by Mr. Madain. Debtor admits that valuation of the noncash portion of the bid will take further analysis, but in other places Debtor alleges the total value is $2 million. From the cash portion of the price about $420,000 is proposed to be paid to secured claims, although the accurate amount of aggregate secured claims may be much higher as, for example, the County of Orange's claim alone is $395,040. The price is made subject to overbids in the proposed initial minimum amount of $100,000 (initial bid $1,100,000) to be followed by subsequent overbids of at least $10,000, but to qualify as an overbidder $200,000 must first be paid care of Debtor's counsel.

Chapter 11

The proposed sale is opposed by Fariborz Wosoughkia, a creditor for about $95,000 and a 30% shareholder and by the California Department of Tax and Fee Administration owed around $418,130. The arguments are primarily to the effect that the sale to an insider merits closer scrutiny and that the price is too low, or at least the marketing efforts over the holidays were inadequate. Mr. Wosoughkia adds to the effect that Mr. Madain is a fraud, and this is just another in a long parade of such frauds.

The U.S. Trustee has not formally opposed the sale but has his own motion to dismiss or convert already on calendar as #4 which has been continued twice since October 30, 2019. That motion is based primarily on a continuing list of monthly operating losses as reported in the MORs.

Debtor is correct that a sale to an insider is not per se improper. See Mission Prod. Holdings v. Old Cold, LLC (In re Old Cold LLC), 558 B.R. 500, 516 (1st Cir. BAP 2016). But it is also true that sales to insiders are always subject to a heightened level of scrutiny since the opportunity for malfeasance is higher. See e.g. In re Roussos, 541 B.R. 721 ,730 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2015). In this respect the court's primary disappointment is in the level of marketing. The Debtor argues that it corresponded with all "persons known to have a potential interest in Debtor and Debtor's property." Goe Declaration ¶¶. But "known to whom"? While somewhat unclear, this group of self-selected recipients seems primarily to be the existing shareholders. Other potential buyers, Gotham Assets and a Delaware bankruptcy attorney for one Daniel Dokhanian, are also mentioned. Perhaps not surprisingly, nothing came of these inquiries as most seemed only interested in acquiring the fee interest, not a lease. But conspicuously lacking is any systematic sales effort. No mention is made either of advertisement or of any broker being hired. So, we really don't know whether an earnest marketing effort was made. As the Roussos court observes, this is fatal where the winning buyer ends up being the principal of the debtor because the insider frequently has counter incentives to those of the creditor body, i.e. a lower price, not a higher one, and less marketing not more. Id. at 730. On this record the court cannot make a finding that optimal value was obtained, and it is little comfort to know that this sale is made subject to overbids when one has no means for knowing how wide an audience was sought.

Debtor argues that loss of a sale for $1 million would be a tragedy, and that might be so. But the court may have a remedy at hand. The United States Trustee's motion to convert is also on calendar. If granted this would have the effect of placing a fiduciary in charge immediately. That fiduciary can quickly evaluate whether a more vigorous sales effort is warranted, and/or whether the existing offer from Mr. Madain deserves a further look. If an operating order to preserve value is needed while such a systematic sales effort is made, it should be available for the asking.

Continue motion for evaluation by appointed Chapter 7 trustee.

Chapter 11

This is 2045 E. Highland, LLC's ("Debtor's") motion to approve sale of real property at 32201 Camino Capistrano, San Juan Capistrano, CA 92675 to Camino Good Year LLC ("Buyer") for $2,640,000.00 cash free and clear of liens, claims, and interests or, alternatively, to a successful overbidder; and (2) authorizing escrow to pay commission to the real estate broker; and approve payment of real estate broker's commissions. The motion has drawn limited oppositions from creditors Northeast Bank ("Northeast") and Seacoast Commerce Bank ("Seacoast"), and a more robust opposition from Mission Village/ The Village, LLC ("Village"),.

The terms of the sale as summarized by Debtor are:

The purchase price for the Property is $2,640,000.00, all cash. The property is being sold "as is" and "where is," with no warranty or recourse whatsoever. There are no contingencies. Debtor and Buyer, or any successful overbidder, shall be bound by the terms of the Lease Agreement which provides for a long-term lease of the Property to Debtor. Debtor shall have an initial 10-year lease with four (4) five-year options to renew at fixed rental increases.

Debtor intends to sell the Property to the Buyer free and clear of all liens and claims, with those liens removed from the Property and the allowed amounts of certain liens in favor of the County of Orange, Seacoast, and Henry Kumagai ("Kumagai") to be paid through escrow as follows:

1. Debtor proposes to pay through escrow, the allowable amount of the liens due to the County, which are estimated to be $117,565.59;
2. Debtor proposes to pay, through escrow, Kumagai the amount of $35,000.00;

3. Debtor proposed to pay, through escrow, Broker fees in the amount of 4% of the sales price, estimated to be $105,600.00;
4. Debtor proposes to pay, through escrow, all customary costs of sale;
5. Debtor proposed to pay, through escrow, all net proceeds to Seacoast plus an additional $35,000.00 directly from Debtor;
6. Debtor shall receive no proceeds from the sale.

Section 363(b) provides that after notice and a hearing, a trustee may sell property of the estate out of the ordinary course of business. Courts have held that in order to approve a sale, a court must find that the trustee demonstrates a valid business justification, and that the sale is in the best interest of the estate. In re 240 North Brand Partners, Ltd., 200 B.R. 653 (9th Cir. BAP 1996); In re Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. 830, 841-42 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991). A sale is in the best interest of the estate when it is fair and reasonable, it has been given adequate marketing, it has been advertised and negotiated in good faith, the purchaser is proceeding in good faith, and it is an arm's length transaction. In re Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. at 841. The court goes on to explain that good faith encompasses fair value and further speaks to the integrity of the transaction. Bad faith would include collusion between the seller and buyer or any attempt to take unfair advantage of any potential purchasers. Id. at 842.

Northeast is a holder of claim against Debtor in the amount of $93,118.43 ($47,100 is secured, as detailed below) as of the petition date. Northeast holds security interests in, among other things, all of Debtor's inventory, chattel paper, accounts, equipment, and general intangibles. Northeast has not determined whether any of its collateral constitutes a fixture and has not yet valued the Debtor's equipment and general intangibles but notes that the Debtor scheduled that it had $35,000 in cash, $1,800 in accounts receivable, $10,000 in other equipment, and $300 in office equipment. Northeast's limited opposition does not oppose the sale in its entirety, but rather only insofar as the Debtor seeks authority to sell any personal property that is subject to any interest Northeast has in any fixtures which may be presently attached to the real property. Northeast also opposes the motion to the extent that any of its cash collateral would be used, especially to pay another party, without court approval in accordance with § 362(c)(2). Northeast also requires adequate protection of its security interests in accordance with §362(e).

Seacoast also filed a limited opposition, which objects to the sale unless:

- 1) Seacoast is allowed to review the proposed final numbers of any sale or bid before consummating the sale;
- 2) Post-petition taxes to be paid by the buyer;
- 3) Seacoast participates in the bidding process by requiring their consent before a sale can commence;
- 4) Overbidder be allowed to submit a bid for only for a five-year lease.
- 5) Pending litigation between Debtor and the bank in Orange County Superior Court must be dismissed with prejudice.
- 6) There is no further deterioration of Bank's position (mainly through an increase in property taxes).

Village's opposition is more extensive. Citing §363(f) Village asserts that the DIP could sell the property free of liens only if any one of the following conditions are met:

- (1) applicable nonbankruptcy law permits sale of such property free and clear of such interest;

(2) such entity consents;

(3) such interest is a lien and the price at which such property is to be sold is greater than the aggregate value of all liens on such property;

(4) such interest is in bona fide dispute; or

(5) such entity could be compelled, in a legal or equitable proceeding, to accept a money satisfaction of such interest.

Village notes that neither Seacoast nor Kumagai have consented to this sale and argues, citing Pac. Capital Corp. N.A. v. East Airport Dev. LLC (In re E. Airport Dev., LLC), 443 B.R. 823, 831 (9th Cir. BAP 2011) that their consent should not be implied by a failure to object for purposes of §363(f)(2). Village argues that even if assent by silence was permissible in this situation, the motion would still be defective for insufficient notice to both Kumagai and County of Orange. Notice was served electronically on February 12, 2020, which is 21 days prior to the hearing on this motion, but both Kumagai and County of Orange only received notice through U.S. Mail. Village also argues that the motion should be denied because it discriminates unfairly against Class 3 Unsecured Creditors. The motion proposes to pay Kumagai $35,000 in full satisfaction of his claim. However, Debtor's disclosure statement has not yet been approved (it was continued to May 6, 2020). Village argues that the Kumagai claim contains issues that need to be resolved through the disclosure statement, not by this motion. To do so, Village argues, would be putting the proverbial cart before the horse. Village also argues that the Kumagai claim should be treated as unsecured and in Class 3 because of this court's February 14 order determining the value of the property. Village is also dubious that as an unsecured creditor, Kumagai is entitled to receive the sum of $35,000, which would be significantly more than other Class 3 members ($55% vs. 22% for other class members) by paying him more than other unsecured creditors. Debtor does state that Kumagai will release his civil claims against Debtor, but Village argues that there is simply not enough information about the civil claims provided to determine whether such consideration is sufficient. Village suggests that what essentially amounts to a settlement with Kumagai should first be approved by this court.

Finally, Village argues that the motion should be denied because it includes a restriction (subject to long-term lease) that may limit the value of the property in exchange for no value to the creditors. Village suggests that if the court is inclined to agree that some kind of lease could be required by the motion, such a lease term should not exceed five years. However, the motion requires any bidders to offer a 10 years lease with permissible extension for 4-5 years, adding up to a total of 30 years of occupancy. Village takes issue with this provision because it is not accompanied by evidence that would suggest how such an arrangement would benefit creditors. Village argues that the lack of evidence is concerning because the proposed plan pays unsecured creditors at 22%, which equates to roughly $3,000 per month, but Debtor's disclosure statement stated a monthly net income of between $15,000 and $18,000. Village suggests that Debtors could afford to pay $10,000 per month for 60 months, which would result in a return of approximately 73%. If the payment schedule were increased to 10 years, Village argues, 100% of the claims would likely be paid, which is why the lease requirement is so important to consider.

There are several unanswered questions here which present obstacles to the sale as proposed. All of them must be answered before the court could grant this motion: They are:

1. If the value is $2,640,000 subject to a long-term renewable lease, what is the value without this encumbrance? If the value were greater not subject to lease-back, are not creditors better served by a different, higher sale?
2. Under what theory does Kumagai get $35,000 directly from escrow? According to these papers, he is effectively out of the money, yet he is favored with a richer dividend than is promised under the plan (or as may ever be achieved by the other unsecured creditors whether in a plan or otherwise) and, better yet, his recovery is assured whereas everyone in similar position has to hope a plan can be confirmed. If this is supposed to be in recognition of release of other claims, the motion must be in the form of a Rule 9019 compromise with notice and opportunity for hearing. It might be possible that this $35,000 is to be as a carve-out from Seacoast's lien, but if so, that needs to be made far clearer;

3. There is considerable uncertainty whether Northeast's personal property collateral is to be sold, and if so, at what price. Some of this may be fixtures, some may be separate personal property, but if so, a delineation in the price on account needs to be clarified.
4. Unless Seacoast consents, the court does not see how the sale can be approved within the strictures of §363(f). But whether Seacoast consents is left unclear.

These issues may be worked out in a way satisfactory to the objecting parties and within the limits of §363(f), but we are not there yet.

(cont'd from 1-16-20)

Docket 6

Courtroom Deputy:

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/5/20:

This is the continued hearing on the Defendant's Rule 12(b) Motion to Dismiss. This analysis is divided into two sections. The first section deals with the subject matter jurisdiction issue. The second deals with whether claims for relief have been plausibly stated, sufficient to survive the motion.

I. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

At the hearing on January 16, 2020, because there was only sparse authority on the subject, the court requested supplemental briefing regarding whether this court had subject matter jurisdiction over this adversary proceeding in view of the parties' various connections to the cannabis industry (in violation of the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 ("CSA")). In its tentative ruling, the court summarized and excerpted portions of relevant case law and provided its own initial ideas on this narrow issue. That tentative ruling is incorporated herein by reference. Both sides have filed supplemental briefs on the narrow issue identified by the court.

Unfortunately, the supplemental briefing has not provided a definitive answer. Instead, Defendant has, again, cited the case of Northbay Wellness Group, Inc. v. Beyries, 2011 WL 5975445 (Bankr.N.D.Cal. 2011), where the bankruptcy court dismissed the debtor's case based on the equitable doctrine of in pari delicto. However, as this court noted in its earlier tentative ruling, the Ninth Circuit expressly overruled the bankruptcy court's application of the unclean hands doctrine on grounds that the bankruptcy court failed to properly balance the parties' respective wrongdoings.

In the interim, the court's own research has located case law within the Ninth Circuit that may be useful. In Mann v. Gullickson, 2016 WL 6473215 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 2, 2016), the court had to decide whether a contract related to the medical marijuana industry in California was enforceable. The court undertook a comprehensive analysis of the enforceability of contracts containing illegal subject matter. The court noted the specific prohibitions placed on marijuana by the CSA, but also noted that enforcement of contracts containing illegal subject matter resists hard and fast rules. Indeed, the Mann court observed that "[s]ometimes the forfeiture resulting from unenforceability is disproportionately harsh considering the nature of the illegality." Id. at *6. The court, citing the Ninth Circuit Case of Bassidji v. Goe, 413 F.3d 928 (9th Cir. 2005), devised a test of sorts for determining when contracts regarding illegal subject matter may nevertheless be enforceable:

"The Ninth Circuit analyzed federal case law and California precedents... to investigate '[n]uanced approaches to the illegal contract defense, taking into account such considerations as the avoidance of windfalls or forfeitures, deterrence of illegal conduct, and relative moral culpability,' and those considerations 'remain viable in federal court and represent no departure from [federal precedent] . . . [so] long as the relief ordered does not mandate illegal conduct.' Id. at 937-38." Mann, 2016 WL 6473215 at *7.

The Mann court also noted that "[t]he federal government's concern over the CSA's medical marijuana prohibition has waned in recent years, and the underlying policy purporting to support this prohibition has been undermined." Id. at *9. Noting that several states have legalized marijuana in one form or another, the Mann court held:

Given the federal government's wavering policy on medical marijuana in states that regulate this substance, and California's expressed policy interest in allowing qualified patients to obtain medical marijuana, the purported illegality here is not one the Court finds to mandate non-enforcement of the parties' contract. Id.

Here, the plaintiff is alleging breach of contract (among other related causes of action) against Defendant in connection with a marijuana concern. The court has already opined on the gross unfairness that would result if Defendant were allowed to use the bankruptcy system as a shield from his alleged misdeeds. The court also notes that, in the event Plaintiff prevails against Defendant in this adversary proceeding, this court would not be forcing either party to engage in illegal conduct. This was a major point raised in Mann, i.e. the issuance of a remedy would not necessarily entail a resort to unlawful conduct. Not only does this approach properly involve the balancing of relative wrongdoings as required by the Circuit in Northbay, it also harmonizes with the various cases where federal courts refused to become involved at all such as In re Arenas, 514 B.R. 887 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2012), because to do so would necessarily require someone to accommodate ongoing breach of the CSA, such as by selling contraband as assets of the estate.

Defendant argues that accepting jurisdiction would require the court to intervene proactively and thus improperly in what otherwise would have been Defendant's carte blanche ride to discharge. Implicit in this is the argument that the court should leave the wrongdoers where it finds them and only unusual action by the court offensive to the CSA would interrupt Defendant's ride to discharge. But this argument is unpersuasive because it could as easily be looked at another way, i.e. the court would be issuing a change in the status quo by granting the discharge, which is not a right but a privilege, and this action is to determine whether, balancing acts on both sides, that can or should be done consistent with justice. The court is thus persuaded that it does have subject matter jurisdiction, or at least that there is no compelling reason on these facts to decide otherwise.

II. Are Claims for Relief Adequately Stated?

Plaintiff's complaint alleges claims for relief under 11 U.S.C. §727(a) (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), (7) and (12), as well as under 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(2), (4), and (6) (10 causes of action in total). By this motion, Defendant seeks dismissal of all causes of action.

A. FRCP 12(b)(6) Standards

When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). "While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556 (2007) A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id.

B. Alleged Factual Background

Defendant-Debtor Guy S. Griffithe is an individual who, at all times pertinent hereto, owed a fiduciary duty to Plaintiff Steven Bagot, among others, who "invested" in his companies. Defendant-Debtor allegedly made fraudulent verbal and written statements to solicit "investments" into SMRB, LLC, a Washington State licensed marijuana producer/processor business, and was a signatory to allegedly fraudulent documents underlying the non-bankruptcy litigation in Skagit County Superior Court Case No. 18-2-00544-29 and King County Superior Court Case No. 19-2-00772-9 SEA. Plaintiff provided no less than $650,000.00 to the Defendant through his alter-ego entity (Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc. ("RTSI")) for the benefit of SMRB, LLC. When Plaintiff sued to recover his "investment" and damages for Defendant-Debtor's alleged wrongful conduct, the Defendant-Debtor filed the relevant bankruptcy action as well as this motion to dismiss.

On January 9, 2019, Mr. Bagot filed a complaint with the King County Superior Court Case No. 19-2-00772-9 SEA alleging causes of action against Defendant-Debtor for fraud, negligent misrepresentation, civil conspiracy, breach of contract, unjust enrichment, conversion, promissory estoppel, breach of the fiduciary duties, breach of the duties of good faith and fair dealing, violations of Washington's LLC disclosure requirements and violations of securities laws. The trial is set for April 6, 2020. The complaint is accompanied by Ex. "A", a report by the Washington State Liquor and Cannabis Board ("WSLCB report"), which provides details of Defendant's alleged misconduct and is heavily referenced in both the complaint and the opposition to this motion. Below the court analyzes how each of the alleged

B. §727(a)(2)(A)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor, with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor or an officer of the estate charged with custody of property under this title, has transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed, or has permitted to be transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed— property of the debtor, within one year before the date of the filing of the petition[.]" Plaintiff has sufficiently pled this cause of action in the complaint. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges, with the aid of Exhibit A, that Defendant intentionally transferred valuable property belonging to him which reduced the assets available to the creditors and which was made with fraudulent intent. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has transferred (to his alter ego entities, Robert Russell, entities owned by Russell, and other entities not known to Plaintiff), removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed his property, including the funds provided to him by Mr. Bagot, the oil processing machine, $1,000,000 million in product from Emerald City Cultivation, and other assets Defendant claims to have utilized (a portion of) these funds to purchase, assets provided to Defendant by other "investors," as well as Defendant's interests in Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc., Green Acres Pharms, LLC, and SMRB, LLC, among others, and the distributions he receives from those Companies' assets, in addition to other assets which have been concealed, destroyed, transferred without Plaintiff's knowledge. Plaintiff also asserts that this conduct occurred within 1-year of the petition date (June 26, 2019) as Plaintiff initiated legal proceedings against Defendant in late spring of 2018.

C. §727(a)(3)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor has concealed, destroyed, mutilated, falsified, or failed to keep or preserve any recorded information, including books, documents, records, and papers, from which the debtor's financial condition or business transactions might be ascertained, unless such act or failure to act was justified under all of the circumstances of the case" It is apparent that Plaintiff has adequately made this allegation in the complaint. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges in several places in the complaint the absence of adequate record keeping by Defendant as noted throughout, specifically in regard to Plaintiff's initial investment of $450,000. Plaintiff also alleges the absence of adequate records related to the purchase of the oil-processing machine and the products purchased from Emerald City Cultivation among other assets. Plaintiff also asserts that he has been attempting to obtain such documentation through discovery without success. Thus, it appears that Plaintiff has adequately alleged that Defendant failed to keep relevant records, and there does not appear to be justification for this failure, taking Plaintiff's allegations as true.

D. §727(a)(4)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor knowingly and fraudulently, in or in connection with the case—

- (A) made a false oath or account;
- (B) presented or used a false claim;
- (C) gave, offered, received, or attempted to obtain money, property, or advantage, or a promise of money, property, or advantage, for acting or forbearing to act; or affairs[.]"

Chapter 7

This statute requires that Plaintiff allege: (1) [the debtor] made a statement under oath; (2) the statement was false; (3) [the debtor] knew the statement was false; (4) [the debtor] made the statement with fraudulent intent; and (5) the statement related materially to the bankruptcy case. Matter of Beaubouef, 966 F.2d 174, 178 (5th Cir 1992). False oaths sufficient to justify the denial of discharge include: (1) a false statement or omission in the debtor's schedules or (2) a false statement by the debtor at the examination during the course of the proceedings. Id. at 178; In re Wills, 243 B.R. 58, 62 (B.A.P. 9th Cir.1999). Plaintiff's complaint, including the exhibits, does allege that Defendant made several intentional false statements relating to the bankruptcy case. For example, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has failed to report or disclose several assets, including the hundreds of thousands of dollars he took from Plaintiff and never provided to SMRB, LLC. Plaintiff argues, citing In re Hoblitzell, 223 B.R. 211, 215-16 (Bankr.E.D. Cal. 1998), for the proposition that a false statement or omission is material even if it does not cause direct financial prejudice to creditors. Therefore, although not presented as clearly as it could be, it appears that Plaintiff has sufficiently alleged that Defendant made false statements under oath by failing to disclose several assets known to Defendant in his bankruptcy schedules with an intent to deceive creditors and officers of the court. These specific allegations are likely enough to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements for purposes of Rule 9(b).

E. §727(a)(5)

This section provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor has failed to explain satisfactorily, before determination of denial of discharge under this paragraph, any loss of assets or deficiency of assets to meet the debtor's liabilities[.]" Here, Plaintiff's complaint, including the additional detail in the Exhibit, has sufficiently alleged the disappearance of identifiable assets no longer available to creditors, including the funds provided to him by Plaintiff, the (funds available for) purchase and transfer of the oil processing machine, the $1,000,000 million (per month) in product purchased from Emerald City Cultivation, and other assets Defendant claims to have utilized a portion of these funds to purchase, assets provided to Defendant by other "investors," as well as Defendant's interests in Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc., Green Acres Pharms, LLC, and SMRB, LLC, among others, and the distributions he receives from those Companies' assets, in addition to other assets which have been concealed, destroyed, transferred without Plaintiff's knowledge.

Defendant does not attempt to explain the loss of these assets, but only points out that the WSLCB report makes no such findings as detailed above. The court notes that the report is lengthy, and the complaint does not make reference to any specific page or paragraph numbers where such information can be easily found. However, in sum, Plaintiff's complaint, which incorporates the WSLCB by reference, does appear to sufficiently allege a cause of action under §727(a)(5), but Plaintiff's complaint could benefit from specific pin cites.

F. §727(a)(6)

The statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless—the debtor has refused, in the case—

(A) to obey any lawful order of the court, other than an order to respond to a material question or to testify;

(B) on the ground of privilege against self-incrimination, to respond to a material question approved by the court or to testify, after the debtor has been granted immunity with respect to the matter concerning which such privilege was invoked; or

(C) on a ground other than the properly invoked privilege against self-incrimination, to respond to a material question approved by the court or to testify[.]"

Plaintiff argues that it is undisputed that as stated in the Complaint, in the King County Superior Court litigation, the Honorable Judge McHale entered an Order ordering Defendant-Debtor provide complete responses and documents in response to Mr. Bagot's discovery requests, which were due no later than June 25, 2019, Defendant allegedly failed to comply with this Order. Plaintiff also argues that Defendant did not object on grounds of privilege against self-incrimination or any other ground, Defendant simply refused to comply. Plaintiff asserts that this failure to cooperate resulted in sanctions being imposed, which Defendant apparently has also refused to pay. There is a question whether "the court" as referenced in the statute means the bankruptcy court only, or might it mean another court such as the Kings County Court. But this point is not developed in the papers. Thus, Plaintiff has likely pled sufficient facts to survive the motion to dismiss.

G. §727(a)(7)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless—the debtor has committed any act specified in paragraph (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of this subsection, on or within one year before the date of the filing of the petition, or during the case, in connection with another case, under this title or under the Bankruptcy Act, concerning an insider[.]"

As discussed above, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant committed the acts in (2), (3), and (6) within 1 year of the petition date. Also as discussed above, Plaintiff's complaint alleges various acts of misconduct during the pendency of the bankruptcy case, including knowingly providing false information in his bankruptcy schedules. Again, the question arises whether the malfeasance in another case must be one under Title 11. But the point is not developed so the pleading seems sufficient.

H. §727(a)(12)

This section states: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the court after notice and a hearing held not more than 10 days before the date of the entry of the order granting the discharge finds that there is reasonable cause to believe that—

(A) section 522(q)(1) may be applicable to the debtor; and

(B) there is pending any proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(A) or liable for a debt of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(B)."

As Plaintiff argues, the complaint details the fraudulent sale of unregistered securities by Defendant, an unregistered security broker/dealer, in Defendant's alter ego entities including Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc. and SMRB, LLC (d.b.a. Green Acres Pharms) (and possibly Green Acres Pharms, LLC, from whom the "Distribution" was paid), as well as his improper conduct while acting in a fiduciary capacity with respect to these dealings and entities. Therefore, Plaintiff has sufficiently pled the first element of this claim. With respect to the second element, there must be pending a proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony or liable for a debt of the kind described in §522(q)(1); Plaintiff's complaint provides sufficient details his pending proceeding against Defendant for, among other things, violating State securities laws and relevant disclosure requirements. Thus, this cause of action is likely sufficient to survive the motion.

I. §523(a)(2)(A)

Cir. 1996). Under the relevant test, the Court "may infer the existence of the debtor's intent not to pay if the facts and circumstances of a particular case present a picture of deceptive conduct by the debtor." Id.

As discussed above, the complaint provides ample detail of Defendant's alleged fraudulent misconduct including, allegedly making false statements about his companies' financial situations, matters of ownership, etc. in connection with soliciting investment from Plaintiff. Plaintiff points out that the WSLCB report made several of these findings, all of which are incorporated into the complaint as an exhibit. In sum, there appears to be sufficiently detailed allegations, taken as true, to satisfy the pleading requirements, including those of Rule 9b.

J. §523(a)(4)

This section provides: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny[.]"

For purposes of § 523(a)(4), embezzlement is defined as "the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom such property has been entrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come." Moore v. United States, 160 U.S. 268, 269, 16 S. Ct. 294, 295, (1885). Further, as explained in Murray v. Woodman (In re Woodman), 451 B.R. 31 (Bankr. D.Idaho), "an intent to deprive the rightful owner of funds only temporarily and not permanently [does] not negate the element of [fraudulent] intent." Id. at 43. "To prevail under § 523(a)(4) for larceny, a creditor must prove that "the debtor has wrongfully and with fraudulent intent taken property from its owner. Larceny differs from embezzlement in the fact that the original taking of property was unlawful, and without the consent of the injured person." King v. Lough (In re Lough), 422 B.R. 727, 735-36 (Bankr. D. Id. 2010). (internal citations omitted)

The complaint appears to allege both embezzlement and larceny while Defendant was acting in a fiduciary capacity. Taking Plaintiff's allegations as true, Defendant obtained money from Plaintiff which he was required to – on two different occasions – provide directly to SMRB, LLC (d.b.a. Green Acres Pharms). Plaintiff alleges that Defendant not only obtained these funds unlawfully from Plaintiff, Defendant either never provided Plaintiff's funds to SMRB or improperly removed them and has failed to provide any accounting for these funds or explain their disappearance, without the consent of Plaintiff. Again, taking Plaintiff's allegations as true, Plaintiff does appear to have pled sufficient facts to survive the motion.

K. §523(a)(6)

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for willful and malicious injury by the debtor to another entity or to the property of another entity[.]" Section 523(a)(6)'s willful injury requirement is met when the debtor has a subjective motive to inflict injury or when the debtor believes that injury is substantially certain to result from his own conduct. Carillo v. Su (In re Su), 290 F.3d 1140, 1142 (9th Cir. 2002). Plaintiff's complaint is replete with allegations of knowing misconduct, including fraud, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, unjust enrichment, etc. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges that false statements in certain written materials induced Plaintiff to invest Defendant's ventures. Taken as true, the allegations in the complaint are sufficient to satisfy the willfulness portion of the statute.

Courts treats the malicious injury requirement of § 523(a)(6) as separate from the willful requirement. According to In re Jercich 238 F.3d 1202, 1209 (9th Cir. 2001): "A 'malicious' injury involves '(1) a wrongful act, (2) done intentionally, (3) which necessarily causes injury, and (4) is done without just cause or excuse.'" Carillo v. Su (In re Su), 290 F.3d 1140, 1146-47 (9th Cir. 2002). Plaintiff alleges conduct that, if true, would satisfy the maliciousness portion of the statute. For example, Plaintiff's complaint alleges that Defendant knowingly made material misstatements or omissions the written material provided to Plaintiff, which ultimately allowed Defendant to obtain the hundreds of thousands of dollars from Plaintiff. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant knew that the money acquired from Plaintiff had not gone for the benefit of SMRB or to purchase an oil processing machine, and also knew that significant damage to plaintiff would certainly result if the money could not be returned to Plaintiff. The WSLCB report also concludes on page 9 that it appears that the investors taken in by Defendant (Plaintiff among them) were the victims of a fraudulent "Ponzi Scheme." For these reasons, Plaintiff's complaint has sufficiently stated claim under section 523(a)(6).

L. Attorney's Fees Under §523(d)

This section states: "If a creditor requests a determination of dischargeability of a consumer debt under subsection (a)(2) of this section, and such debt is discharged, the court shall grant judgment in favor of the debtor for the costs of, and a reasonable attorney's fee for, the proceeding if the court finds that the position of the creditor was not substantially justified, except that the court shall not award such costs and fees if special circumstances would make the award unjust." As should be obvious, none of Defendant's debts have been discharged in connection with the section 523(a)(2) claim as we are still at the pleading stages. Thus, this request for attorney's fees by Defendant is premature and is thus denied.

III. Conclusion

The court does not see a failure of subject matter jurisdiction. The court is persuaded Plaintiff's complaint, though it could be made clearer in places by pin citation to the attached WSLCB report and in a few places raise some dubious theories, does appear to have stated enough for relief under every theory alleged. This is not to say that Plaintiff will succeed on every theory alleged, but simply that the basic pleading requirements have been satisfied.

Deny

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant's Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss these three adversary proceedings. Although there are five dismissal motions on calendar in various Griffithe-related adversary proceedings, these three will be addressed in a single memorandum inasmuch as the issues are identical and, unlike the other two, turn on a question of jurisdiction.

Debtor argues for the first time in his Reply that the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 and several cases addressing the intersection of cannabis and bankruptcy, stand for the general proposition that bankruptcy courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims relating to cannabis. Subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, but this does not obviate the overarching concern for due process and the court notes that the Plaintiffs have had no effective opportunity to address this fundamental issue. Moreover, the court would value their input on the question as none of the cases cited by Defendant deal directly with the issue before the court and the court is not persuaded that the cited authorities can be read quite so broadly as Defendant argues. The issue here can be framed as whether the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction in an adversary proceeding where the Plaintiffs seek to have Defendant/Debtor's debts, incurred through alleged malfeasance, adjudicated as nondischargeable despite the underlying cannabis business venture being simultaneously legal under state law and illegal under federal law.

Even though cannabis sale has now been legal in several states for several years (while the federal law remains against) the only case cited by Defendant that comes close to addressing this precise issue is Northbay Wellness Group v. Beyries, 789 F.3d 956 (9th Cir. 2015). There, an attorney stole money from his client, a legal medical marijuana dispensary, and subsequently filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Id. at 958 The dispensary instituted an adversary proceeding seeking to except its claim from discharge, but the bankruptcy court dismissed the adversary complaint under the "unclean hands" doctrine. Id. at 959 The Ninth Circuit reversed and remanded, explaining that the bankruptcy court failed to balance the parties' respective wrongdoings as required under that doctrine:

"The Supreme Court has emphasized, however, that the doctrine of unclean hands 'does not mean that courts must always permit a defendant wrongdoer to retain the profits of his wrongdoing merely because the plaintiff himself is possibly guilty of transgressing the law.' [Johnson v. Yellow Cab [Transit Co.], 321 U.S. [383, 387, 64 S. Ct. 622, 88 L. Ed. 814 (1944)]. Rather, determining whether the doctrine of unclean hands precludes relief requires balancing the alleged wrongdoing of the plaintiff against that of the defendant, and 'weigh[ing] the substance of the right asserted by [the] plaintiff against the transgression which, it is contended, serves to foreclose that right.'

Republic Molding Corp. v. B.W. Photo Utils., 319 F.2d 347, 350 (9th Cir. 1963). In addition, the 'clean hands doctrine should not be strictly enforced when to do so would frustrate a substantial public interest.' EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753 (9th Cir. 1991)." Id. at 960.

The Ninth Circuit in Northbay did not analyze the issue of whether the bankruptcy court had subject matter jurisdiction over the exception to discharge action. Neither the cases cited in the briefs nor any that the court has been able to find analyze and/or expressly settle the jurisdiction issue. The closest possible exception that the court has found occurred near the end of the bankruptcy court's original opinion in Northbay where the court borrowed the reasoning in a dissenting opinion written by Judge Noonan in another case. The bankruptcy court stated in pertinent part:

"It is very unseemly for the court to be asked to grant relief to a plaintiff which claims it lost its cash from illegal drug sales by shoving it into envelopes and then delivering it to its attorney, uncounted and undocumented. This is hardly the behavior of a legitimate business. While the conduct of the parties may have been legal under state law, in the eyes of a federal court they were conspiring to sell contraband. They were in pari delicto, and the funds plaintiffs gave to Beyries were the actual proceeds of illegal drug sales. This is not the sort of case which is supposed to darken the doors of a federal court. See Adler v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 219 F.3d 869, 882 (9th Cir. 2000) (Noonan, Circuit Judge, dissenting)." In Re Beyries, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4710, *1, *5 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. Nov. 28, 2011)

In another case, Olson v. Van Meter (In re Olson), 2018 WL 989263 *1 (9th Cir. BAP Feb. 5, 2018), the debtor's estate included commercial property that was partially being rented out to a cannabis dispensary. The issue before the court was whether such an estate could confirm a plan under chapter 13. The bankruptcy court dismissed the entire case sua sponte on grounds that the debtor had been accepting post-petition rent payments from a cannabis dispensary, and therefore, the debtor was involved in ongoing criminal activity that precluded her from seeking bankruptcy relief. On appeal, the BAP vacated the dismissal on grounds that the bankruptcy court had not made specific findings in connection with the dismissal, and remanded the case for such findings. In a concurring opinion, Judge Tighe stated, "[a]lthough debtors connected to marijuana distribution cannot expect to violate federal law in their bankruptcy case, the presence of marijuana near the case should not cause mandatory dismissal." Id. at *7.

The court takes the above language to imply that in the canvassing of available case law, and contrary to Debtor's suggestion, the Olson court could find no blanket rule that categorically obliterates the bankruptcy court's subject matter jurisdiction simply because cannabis may be involved on some level.

The authorities cited above raise several concerns. The court is uncertain about whether it has subject matter jurisdiction and requires further briefing from the parties; this should be the case in any event given the late raising of the issue. The court is also concerned that if, as Debtor argues, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the dischargeability issue, then Debtor is effectively able to hide behind the bankruptcy process and frustrate the creditors he may have defrauded. Worse still, it is at least conceivable that Debtor could even get his debts discharged despite his own purported wrongful conduct creating those debts. On its face, this result seems to offend the fundamental notions of equity that the bankruptcy court is charged with upholding. Stated differently, perhaps the more applicable maxims of equity here are not only unclean hands but: 'one that seeks equity must do equity', or 'equity will not allow a statute to be used as a cloak for fraud.'

Plaintiffs argue that the relief afforded by bankruptcy law is intended to give a fresh start to the honest but unfortunate Debtor. Plaintiffs argue, therefore, that it would be contrary to bankruptcy policy to allow Debtor to discharge his debts to the extent they were incurred by fraud, misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty, or some other unsavory means. The court may well agree. Thus, the doctrine of in pari delicto seems inapposite in this specific context. In the court's view, gross inequity would result if Debtor could defeat Plaintiffs' complaints based on this court's purported lack of subject matter jurisdiction caused by the underlying illicit activity of both Plaintiffs and Debtor, but still avail himself of the protections and benefits of the Bankruptcy Code.

Perhaps the better questions are, should only part of the court's jurisdiction be jeopardized and if so, what part? Consistent with the above, maybe the proper role of equity is to deny discharge entirely on grounds of unclean hands allowing neither side of the illegal transactions to benefit? The problem here is that no adequate briefing has been received on this central question for which authority is apparently sparse.

Continue about 45 days to allow further briefing.

#17.10 Motion For Temporary Abstention

Docket 29

Courtroom Deputy:

- NONE LISTED -

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/5/20:

This is the Plaintiff's motion for "Temporary Abstention" and for stay of the pending litigation in favor of a proceeding in Washington State Court. Oddly, the motion is not brought for permissive abstention under 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c) but rather under the court's "inherent power to regulate their dockets and should use it to stay litigation pending resolution of another case or arbitration proceeding where it will dispose of or narrow the issues to be resolved in that litigation." In re Barney's Inc., 206 B.R. 336, 343-44 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1997). As near as the court can determine, the standards are largely the same.

It is well established that a federal court has "broad discretion to stay proceedings as an incident to its power to control its own docket." Clinton v. Jones, 520 U.S. 681, 706-707, 117 S. Ct. 1636 (1997); see also Landis v. North American Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254-255, 57 S. Ct. 163, 166 (1936) ("[T]he power to stay proceedings is incidental to the power inherent in every court to control the disposition of the causes on its docket with economy of time and effort for itself, for counsel, and for litigants. How this can best be done calls for the exercise of judgment, which must weigh competing interests and maintain an even balance."); O'Dean v. Tropicana Cruises International, Inc., 1999 WL 335381, *4 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (federal court suspended action pending disposition of arbitration proceeding); *Evergreen Marine Corp. v. (authorized stay in federal proceedings pending disposition of related foreign action).

The Ninth Circuit has enumerated factors a bankruptcy court should weigh when it considers whether to permissively abstain from hearing a matter before it. See Christiansen v. Tucson Estates, Inc. (In re Tucson Estates, Inc.), 912 F.2d 1162, 1167 (9th Cir. 1990). Those factors include: (1) the effect or lack thereof on the efficient administration of the estate if a Court recommends abstention, (2) the extent to which state law issues predominate over bankruptcy issues, (3) the difficulty or unsettled nature of the applicable law, (4) the presence of a related proceeding commenced in state court or other non-bankruptcy court, (5) the jurisdictional basis, if any, other than 28 U.S.C. § 1334, (6) the degree of relatedness or remoteness of the proceeding to the main bankruptcy case, (7) the substance rather than form of an asserted core proceeding, (8) the feasibility of severing state law claims from core bankruptcy matters to allow judgments to be entered in state court with enforcement left to the bankruptcy court, (9) the burden of the bankruptcy court's docket, (10) the likelihood that the commencement of the proceeding in bankruptcy court involves forum shopping by one of the parties, (11) the existence of a right to a jury trial, and (12) the presence in the proceeding of non-debtor parties.

Plaintiff cites a less exhaustive five factor analysis for suspending or staying a nondischargeability action as follows: (1) The burden of the proceeding on the defendant; (2) The interest of the plaintiff in expeditiously pursuing the action and prejudice resulting from any delay; (3) The convenience of the court in the management of its cases and the efficient use of judicial resources; (4) The interests of non-parties to the litigation; and (5) The interest of the public in the pending civil and criminal litigation. In re Government Securities Corp., 81 B.R. 692, 694 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1987). See also, Southwest Marine, Inc. v. Triple A Mach. Shop, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 805, 809 (N.D. Cal. 1989).

Although the parties do not agree on which set of factors is correct, the parties do agree that not all of the above factors are applicable nor are they of equal weight. Plaintiff's most persuasive argument for abstention from this court, and one that Defendant does not dispute, is that Plaintiff and Defendant are already heavily engaged in an action in Washington state court. According to Plaintiff, the allegations in the state court action mirror those of the allegations made in this adversary proceeding. Defendant argues that this is a false assertion as there is no mention of anything in the Washington state court action that mirror Plaintiff's §727 claims, although Defendant does concede that Plaintiff's §523 claims are mirrored by the allegations in the Washington state court action. The Washington state court action was filed over a year ago and is reportedly set for trial in April of 2020. Consequently, it seems feasible for the Washington matter to proceed to trial and judgment on the issues underlying the §523(a) claims (and certain of the §727 theories involving pre-petition behavior). Provided that Plaintiff is careful in obtaining detailed and clear findings, Plaintiff can then resolve this adversary proceeding under collateral estoppel theories by Rule 56 motion. To the extent that Defendant is correct in his assertion that Plaintiff's §727 claims are not mirrored in the state court action, Plaintiff asserts that he will simply drop those claims as they will likely be unnecessary after the state court rules on the underlying claims. Plaintiff has already obtained relief from stay. Considering the resources that the parties have already expended in Washington, including pre-trial motions, discovery, etc., the parties should likely finish what they started up there. This approach would conserve resources here and would not likely result in duplication of effort.

Concerning the administrative law claims and SEC claims pending in Washington State against Defendant, Plaintiff argues that resolution of these claims will help narrow the issues even further or could even provide additional probative details, which Plaintiff argues is a proper justification for abstention. Defendant argues that these other cases should not be considered for purposes of abstention because they do not directly involve

Plaintiff, but this argument is less compelling because Defendant does not attempt to argue that such litigation would not serve to narrow the issues or provide useful additional background. Defendants other arguments against abstention, including the recent withdrawal of Defendant's counsel and a vague argument regarding the purported untimeliness of this motion, do not really move the needle in Defendant's favor. Related to the purported untimeliness of this motion is Defendant's argument that this motion is premature because if Defendant's dismissal motion is granted, then this motion becomes essentially moot. Plaintiff notes that Defendant cites no authority for the proposition that dismissal of the complaint would also end the Washington state court action. Defendant's argument also ignores that complaints after Rule 12 motions can be (and very likely would be) amended if they are found to be defective.

In sum, Plaintiff has made a persuasive case for staying proceedings in this court and allowing the parties to litigate what are largely matters of state law in Washington state court, especially since the parties are on the doorstep of trial. Thus, as Plaintiff urges, the court should use its power under §105(a) to temporarily abstain or stay this adversary proceeding pending resolution in Washington state court. Plaintiff is cautioned to obtain clear and dispositive findings on the operative issues such that collateral estoppel can govern in subsequent Rule 56 motion.

Grant abstention. This adversary proceeding is stayed until Plaintiff seeks to return for a Rule 56 motion. The court will schedule a status conference approximately 180 days out for evaluation.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/10/20:

The timing in this case is muddled because two summons were issued and the deadline to respond to the reissued summons is after the hearing on the status conference in this case. It might be best to continue this status conference to March 17, 2020 at 10:00 a.m. so that the court can evaluate any response that is filed. If no response is received, the order for relief should be entered.

#12.00 Application to Employ Shulman Bastian LLP as Special Counsel (Application to Expand the Scope of Employment) retroactive to May 10, 2017

Docket 2731

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/10/20:

This is the Trustee's Application to Expand the Scope of Employment of applicant's special litigation counsel, Shulman & Bastian, retroactive to May 10, 2017. The application is opposed by Scott Gladstone, one of the named defendants in the subject adversary proceeding. The court will start by saying this is bad practice, and a surprising and disappointing lapse from that which the court has come to expect given the long experience of both Trustee and the Shulman firm. The question presented is whether it is (or should be) fatal to the application. There is also an issue of conflict of interest.

As the court understands it, the following are the important background facts:

1. The Shulman firm was initially engaged by order entered October 27, 2016 on an hourly basis for the limited purpose of analyzing D&O coverage regarding Mr. Gladstone and potentially other officers and directors. The fees were capped at $25,000 unless discovery were required, in which case the cap would move to $50,000. The application made clear that if an adversary proceeding were to commence, a new and additional application would be required. The $25,000 has already been paid to the Shulman firm on the initial engagement.
2. This investigation was animated at least in part by the filing of adversary proceeding 8:15-ap-01293TA against the estate under the WARN Act. Apparently, the Shulman firm has since advised that if liability is fixed under the WARN Act this would justify moving forward under an adversary proceeding against officers and directors. The current status of the WARN Act proceeding is left unclear in the papers as is the conclusion of the Shulman firm on whether D&O coverage exists. The court does read that the Trustee has engaged new D&O coverage counsel [see motion p. 18, lines1-2]

3. Despite the promise referenced above in the previous employment application that if litigation were undertaken there would be a new application for employment of the Shulman firm specifying new terms, without such an application the Shulman firm filed an adversary proceeding for breach of fiduciary duty and negligence on June 14, 2017 17:ap-01105TA on behalf of the Trustee. Allegedly, this was filed to preserve a statute of limitations about to expire. Since this application for expanded employment is now filed over 30 months later, some analysis is required of the circumstances. While certainly not blowing a statute of limitations is an important consideration, the court is surprised to learn that the Shulman firm has already accrued $30,000 in fees and costs for which it apparently also will seek allowance on a nunc pro tunc basis. To prepare and file a complaint?
4. Another issue arises over whether the Shuman firm has a disqualifying conflict under §327(c).
5. Apparently, the parties have been postponing activity on the subject adversary proceeding by continuing stipulation for these last 30 months. It looks like this was done so that other matters, such as resolution of certain Vendor claims and maybe the WARN Act lawsuit, could be first resolved, but that is left largely unclear in the papers.

Chapter 7

A. Conflict of Interest?

Both sides appear to concede that if the Shulman firm has an actual conflict of interest, that is fatal to the employment. See 11 U.S.C. §327(c) Gladstone also argues for a more expansive interpretation of "adverse interest" within the meaning of §327(e) which has been defined to include "any interest or relationship, however slight, that would even faintly color the independence and impartial attitude required by the Code and Bankruptcy Rules." In re Granite Partners, L.P., 219 B.R. 22, 33 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998). Gladstone argues that 11 U.S.C. §327(a) is intended to hold professionals performing duties for the estate to strict fiduciary standards and is concerned with a professional's divided loyalties and ensuring that professionals employed by the estate have no conflicts of interest with the estate. See In re Envirodyne Indus., Ind., 150 B.R. 1008, 1016 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1993).

The Shulman firm has represented a list of persons, catalogued at ¶18 of Mr. Bastian's Declaration, reportedly in connection with evaluating those persons' rights as participants in the debtor's Deferred Compensation Plan. Mr. Bastian offers his view that it was a limited engagement and in no way could create a conflict in the adversary proceeding. He even proclaims that these creditors (and the Trustee) are prepared to waive any conflict (but nothing concrete is offered). He also argues that this engagement was disclosed in the initial employment application but, since no one objected at that time, it must be of little consequence. The court is not so sure. The big difference here is that litigation has now been initiated, and so now it is not about investigation of D&O coverage but about fixing liability for alleged breaches; Mr. Gladstone alleges that several of these persons were officers and managers of the debtor. So, even if the Trustee does not sue these creditors directly it is alleged that cross complaints against these persons by Mr. Gladstone for indemnity should be expected. This is a cause for concern. Can the Trustee and the court rest assured that the Shulman firm will vigorously prosecute if these former clients are now cross-defendants? Were confidences about these parties' role in management imparted to the Shulman firm?

B. Is nunc pro tunc employment appropriate?

Gladstone is correct that nunc pro tunc employment of professionals starts with analysis of an initial two prongs: (1) whether the applicant has satisfactorily explained its failure to apply for court approval on a timely basis and (2) whether the applicant's services have benefitted the estate. In re Atkins, 69 F. 3d 970,976 (9th Cir. 1995). Only if those two initial conditions are satisfied then the court may consider the additional factors in cases like In re Twinton Properties Partnership, 27 B.R. 817, 819-20 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn.1983) in its discretion. Value was conferred by the filing of the complaint, presumably, but we may have to revisit whether $30,000 is a reasonable fee for filing a complaint. But the first factor, i.e. satisfactory explanation of the delay, is not so clear.

First, as the court has said above, this was an appallingly long delay and so the necessity to adequately explain is consequently higher. But the question is made closer by the Declaration of Nanette Sanders whose firm served as Trustee's general counsel. She cryptically references "acrimonious" discussions with other counsel (Brutkus Gubner?) who apparently also wanted a hand in prosecuting Mr. Gladstone. In the meantime, there was an attempt mentioned at ¶¶ 6-8 to negotiate a broader settlement to include Mr. Gladstone. Most importantly, at ¶ 6, lines 16-20, Ms. Sanders admits the Trustee specifically asked the applicant to "hold off on filing the application to expand the firm's employment so that issues with her other counsel could be resolved." This goes a long way to explaining the delay, but it is less clear that the explanation is "adequate." It would have been helpful if the court could understand the competing concerns motivating the Trustee to hold back on employment in an adversary proceeding where apparently applicant was already $30,000 in, and then why other approaches such as employment but with a follow-on stipulation to moratorium, were not used. Was this just going soft on feelings of counsel or was something more fundamental at work? But to simply delay for 30 months really stretches adequacy of the explanation for nunc pro tunc treatment.

The court will hear argument on these points.

#5.00 Motion To Dismiss Complaint To Determine Dischargeability Of Debt [11 USC § 523(a)(2)(A) and (a)(4)

A.M. PER ORDER APPROVING STIPULATION TO CONTINUE HEARING DATE AND FURTHER BRIEFING SCHEDULE FOR HEARING ON MOTION TO DISMISS COMPLAINT ENTERED 3/3/2020

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant's Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss these three adversary proceedings. Although there are five dismissal motions on calendar in various Griffithe-related adversary proceedings, these three will be addressed in a single memorandum inasmuch as the issues are identical and, unlike the other two, turn on a question of jurisdiction.

Debtor argues for the first time in his Reply that the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 and several cases addressing the intersection of cannabis and bankruptcy, stand for the general proposition that bankruptcy courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims relating to cannabis. Subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, but this does not obviate the overarching concern for due process and the court notes that the Plaintiffs have had no effective opportunity to address this fundamental issue. Moreover, the court would value their input on the question as none of the cases cited by Defendant deal directly with the issue before the court and the court is not persuaded that the cited authorities can be read quite so broadly as Defendant argues. The issue here can be framed as whether the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction in an adversary proceeding where the Plaintiffs seek to have Defendant/Debtor's debts, incurred through alleged malfeasance, adjudicated as nondischargeable despite the underlying cannabis business venture being simultaneously legal under state law and illegal under federal law.

Even though cannabis sale has now been legal in several states for several years (while the federal law remains against) the only case cited by Defendant that comes close to addressing this precise issue is Northbay Wellness Group v. Beyries, 789 F.3d 956 (9th Cir. 2015). There, an attorney stole money from his client, a legal medical marijuana dispensary, and subsequently filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Id. at 958 The dispensary instituted an adversary proceeding seeking to except its claim from discharge, but the bankruptcy court dismissed the adversary complaint under the "unclean hands" doctrine. Id. at 959 The Ninth Circuit reversed and remanded, explaining that the bankruptcy court failed to balance the parties' respective wrongdoings as required under that doctrine:

"The Supreme Court has emphasized, however, that the doctrine of unclean hands 'does not mean that courts must always permit a defendant wrongdoer to retain the profits of his wrongdoing merely because the plaintiff himself is possibly guilty of transgressing the law.' [Johnson v. Yellow Cab [Transit Co.], 321 U.S. [383, 387, 64 S. Ct. 622, 88 L. Ed. 814 (1944)]. Rather, determining whether the doctrine of unclean hands precludes relief requires balancing the alleged wrongdoing of the plaintiff against that of the defendant, and 'weigh[ing] the substance of the right asserted by [the] plaintiff against the transgression which, it is contended, serves to foreclose that right.' Republic Molding Corp. v. B.W. Photo Utils., 319 F.2d 347, 350 (9th Cir. 1963). In addition, the 'clean hands doctrine should not be strictly enforced when to do so would frustrate a substantial public interest.' EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753 (9th Cir. 1991)." Id. at 960.

The Ninth Circuit in Northbay did not analyze the issue of whether the bankruptcy court had subject matter jurisdiction over the exception to discharge action. Neither the cases cited in the briefs nor any that the court has been able to find analyze and/or expressly settle the jurisdiction issue. The closest possible exception that the court has found occurred near the end of the bankruptcy court's original opinion in Northbay where the court borrowed the reasoning in a dissenting opinion written by Judge Noonan in another case. The bankruptcy court stated in pertinent part:

"It is very unseemly for the court to be asked to grant relief to a plaintiff which claims it lost its cash from illegal drug sales by shoving it into envelopes and then delivering it to its attorney, uncounted and undocumented. This is hardly the behavior of a legitimate business. While the conduct of the parties may have been legal under state law, in the eyes of a federal court they were conspiring to sell contraband. They were in pari delicto, and the funds plaintiffs gave to Beyries were the actual proceeds of illegal drug sales. This is not the sort of case which is supposed to darken the doors of a federal court. See Adler v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 219 F.3d 869, 882 (9th Cir. 2000) (Noonan, Circuit Judge, dissenting)." In Re Beyries, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4710, *1, *5 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. Nov. 28, 2011) debtors connected to marijuana distribution cannot expect to violate federal law in their bankruptcy case, the presence of marijuana near the case should not cause mandatory dismissal." Id. at *7.

In another case, Olson v. Van Meter (In re Olson), 2018 WL 989263 *1 (9th Cir. BAP Feb. 5, 2018), the debtor's estate included commercial property that was partially being rented out to a cannabis dispensary. The issue before the court was whether such an estate could confirm a plan under chapter 13. The bankruptcy court dismissed the entire case sua sponte on grounds that the debtor had been accepting post-petition rent payments from a cannabis dispensary, and therefore, the debtor was involved in ongoing criminal activity that precluded her from seeking bankruptcy relief. On appeal, the BAP vacated the dismissal on grounds that the bankruptcy court had not made specific findings in connection with the dismissal, and remanded the case for such findings. In a concurring opinion, Judge Tighe stated, "[a]lthough

The court takes the above language to imply that in the canvassing of available case law, and contrary to Debtor's suggestion, the Olson court could find no blanket rule that categorically obliterates the bankruptcy court's subject matter jurisdiction simply because cannabis may be involved on some level.

The authorities cited above raise several concerns. The court is uncertain about whether it has subject matter jurisdiction and requires further briefing from the parties; this should be the case in any event given the late raising of the issue. The court is also concerned that if, as Debtor argues, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the dischargeability issue, then Debtor is effectively able to hide behind the bankruptcy process and frustrate the creditors he may have defrauded. Worse still, it is at least conceivable that Debtor could even get his debts discharged despite his own purported wrongful conduct creating those debts. On its face, this result seems to offend the fundamental notions of equity that the bankruptcy court is charged with upholding. Stated differently, perhaps the more applicable maxims of equity here are not only unclean hands but: 'one that seeks equity must do equity', or 'equity will not allow a statute to be used as a cloak for fraud.'

Plaintiffs argue that the relief afforded by bankruptcy law is intended to give a fresh start to the honest but unfortunate Debtor. Plaintiffs argue, therefore, that it would be contrary to bankruptcy policy to allow Debtor to discharge his debts to the extent they were incurred by fraud, misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty, or some other unsavory means. The court may well agree. Thus, the doctrine of in pari delicto seems inapposite in this specific context. In the court's view, gross inequity would result if Debtor could defeat Plaintiffs' complaints based on this court's purported lack of subject matter jurisdiction caused by the underlying illicit activity of both Plaintiffs and Debtor, but still avail himself of the protections and benefits of the Bankruptcy Code.

Perhaps the better questions are, should only part of the court's jurisdiction be jeopardized and if so, what part? Consistent with the above, maybe the proper role of equity is to deny discharge entirely on grounds of unclean hands allowing neither side of the illegal transactions to benefit? The problem here is that no adequate briefing has been received on this central question for which authority is apparently sparse.

Continue about 45 days to allow further briefing.

#7.00 Plaintiff's Motion For Temporary Abstention

Docket 38

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/12/20:

This motion is largely indistinguishable from Bagot v. Griffithe; 8:19-ap-01201. The adopted tentative ruling from that case, incorporated below, also finds application here, and the motion should be granted. See below.

"Tentative for 3/5/20:

This is the Plaintiff's motion for "Temporary Abstention" and for stay of the pending litigation in favor of a proceeding in Washington State Court. Oddly, the motion is not brought for permissive abstention under 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c) but rather under the court's "inherent power to regulate their dockets and should use it to stay litigation pending resolution of another case or arbitration proceeding where it will dispose of or narrow the issues to be resolved in that litigation." In re Barney's Inc., 206 B.R. 336, 343-44 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1997). As near as the court can determine, the standards are largely the same.

It is well established that a federal court has "broad discretion to stay proceedings as an incident to its power to control its own docket." Clinton v. Jones, 520 U.S. 681, 706-707, 117 S. Ct. 1636 (1997); see also Landis v. North American Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254-255, 57 S. Ct. 163, 166 (1936) ("[T]he power to stay proceedings is incidental to the power inherent in every court to control the disposition of the causes on its docket with economy of time and effort for itself, for counsel, and for litigants. How this can best be done calls for the exercise of judgment, which must weigh competing interests and maintain an even balance."); *O'Dean v. pending disposition of arbitration proceeding); Evergreen Marine Corp. v. Welgrow International, Inc., 954 F.Supp. 101, 103-105 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (authorized stay in federal proceedings pending disposition of related foreign action).

The Ninth Circuit has enumerated factors a bankruptcy court should weigh when it considers whether to permissively abstain from hearing a matter before it. See Christiansen v. Tucson Estates, Inc. (In re Tucson Estates, Inc.), 912 F.2d 1162, 1167 (9th Cir. 1990). Those factors include: (1) the effect or lack thereof on the efficient administration of the estate if a Court recommends abstention,(2) the extent to which state law issues predominate over bankruptcy issues, (3) the difficulty or unsettled nature of the applicable law, (4) the presence of a related proceeding commenced in state court or other non-bankruptcy court, (5) the jurisdictional basis, if any, other than 28 U.S.C. § 1334,(6) the degree of relatedness or remoteness of the proceeding to the main bankruptcy case, (7) the substance rather than form of an asserted core proceeding, (8) the feasibility of severing state law claims from core bankruptcy matters to allow judgments to be entered in state court with enforcement left to the bankruptcy court, (9) the burden of the bankruptcy court's docket, (10) the likelihood that the commencement of the proceeding in bankruptcy court involves forum shopping by one of the parties, (11) the existence of a right to a jury trial, and (12) the presence in the proceeding of non-debtor parties.

Plaintiff cites a less exhaustive five factor analysis for suspending or staying a nondischargeability action as follows: (1) The burden of the proceeding on the defendant; (2)The interest of the plaintiff in expeditiously pursuing the action and prejudice resulting from any delay;(3) The convenience of the court in the management of its cases and the efficient use of judicial resources; (4) The interests of non-parties to the litigation; and (5) The interest of the public in the pending civil and criminal litigation. In re Government Securities Corp., 81 B.R. 692, 694 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1987). See also, Southwest Marine, Inc. v. Triple A Mach. Shop, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 805,

Although the parties do not agree on which set of factors is correct, the parties do agree that not all of the above factors are applicable nor are they of equal weight. Plaintiff's most persuasive argument for abstention from this court, and one that Defendant does not dispute, is that Plaintiff and Defendant are already heavily engaged in an action in Washington state court. According to Plaintiff, the allegations in the state court action mirror those of the allegations made in this adversary proceeding. Defendant argues that this is a false assertion as there is no mention of anything in the Washington state court action that mirror Plaintiff's §727 claims, although Defendant does concede that Plaintiff's §523 claims are mirrored by the allegations in the Washington state court action. The Washington state court action was filed over a year ago and is reportedly set for trial in April of 2020. Consequently, it seems feasible for the Washington matter to proceed to trial and judgment on the issues underlying the §523(a) claims (and certain of the §727 theories involving pre-petition behavior). Provided that Plaintiff is careful in obtaining detailed and clear findings, Plaintiff can then resolve this adversary proceeding under collateral estoppel theories by Rule 56 motion. To the extent that Defendant is correct in his assertion that Plaintiff's §727 claims are not mirrored in the state court action, Plaintiff asserts that he will simply drop those claims as they will likely be unnecessary after the state court rules on the underlying claims. Plaintiff has already obtained relief from stay. Considering the resources that the parties have already expended in Washington, including pre-trial motions, discovery, etc., the parties should likely finish what they started up there. This approach would conserve resources here and would not likely result in duplication of effort.

Concerning the administrative law claims and SEC claims pending in Washington State against Defendant, Plaintiff argues that resolution of these claims will help narrow the issues even further or could even provide additional probative details, which Plaintiff argues is a proper justification for abstention. Defendant argues that these other cases should not be considered for purposes of abstention because they do not directly involve Plaintiff, but this argument is less compelling because Defendant does not attempt to argue that such litigation would not serve to narrow the issues or provide useful additional background. Defendants other arguments against abstention, including the recent withdrawal of Defendant's counsel and a vague argument regarding the purported untimeliness of this motion, do not really move the needle in Defendant's favor. Related to the purported untimeliness of this motion is Defendant's argument that this motion is premature because if Defendant's dismissal motion is granted, then this motion becomes essentially moot. Plaintiff notes that Defendant cites no authority for the proposition that dismissal of the complaint would also end the Washington state court action. Defendant's argument also ignores that complaints after Rule 12 motions can be (and very likely would be) amended if they are found to be defective.

In sum, Plaintiff has made a persuasive case for staying proceedings in this court and allowing the parties to litigate what are largely matters of state law in Washington state court, especially since the parties are on the doorstep of trial. Thus, as Plaintiff urges, the court should use its power under §105(a) to temporarily abstain or stay this adversary proceeding pending resolution in Washington state court. Plaintiff is cautioned to obtain clear and dispositive findings on the operative issues such that collateral estoppel can govern in subsequent Rule 56 motion.

Grant abstention. This adversary proceeding is stayed until Plaintiff seeks to return for a Rule 56 motion. The court will schedule a status conference approximately 180 days out for evaluation."

(cont'd from 1-16-20)

Docket 8

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/12/20:

This seems largely paralleded to Bagot v. Griffithe; 8:19-ap-1201. The adopted tentative ruling in that case is incorporated below. For the same reasons, the motion should be denied. See below.

"Tentative for 3/5/20:

This is the continued hearing on the Defendant's Rule 12(b) Motion to Dismiss. This analysis is divided into two sections. The first section deals with the subject matter jurisdiction issue. The second deals with whether claims for relief have been plausibly stated, sufficient to survive the motion.

I. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

At the hearing on January 16, 2020, because there was only sparse authority on the subject, the court requested supplemental briefing regarding whether this court had subject matter jurisdiction over this adversary proceeding in view of the parties' various connections to the cannabis industry (in violation of the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 ("CSA")). In its tentative ruling, the court summarized and excerpted portions of relevant case law and provided its own initial ideas on this narrow issue. That tentative ruling is incorporated herein by reference. Both sides have filed supplemental briefs on the narrow issue identified by the court.

Unfortunately, the supplemental briefing has not provided a definitive answer. Instead, Defendant has, again, cited the case of Northbay Wellness Group, Inc. v. Beyries, 2011 WL 5975445 (Bankr.N.D.Cal. 2011), where the bankruptcy court dismissed the debtor's case based on the equitable doctrine of in pari delicto. However, as this court noted in its earlier tentative ruling, the Ninth Circuit expressly overruled the bankruptcy court's application of the unclean hands doctrine on grounds that the bankruptcy court failed to properly balance the parties' respective wrongdoings.

In the interim, the court's own research has located case law within the Ninth Circuit that may be useful. In Mann v. Gullickson, 2016 WL 6473215 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 2, 2016), the court had to decide whether a contract related to the medical marijuana industry in California was enforceable. The court undertook a comprehensive analysis of the enforceability of contracts containing illegal subject matter. The court noted the specific prohibitions placed on marijuana by the CSA, but also noted that enforcement of contracts containing illegal subject matter resists hard and fast rules. Indeed, the Mann court observed that "[s]ometimes the forfeiture resulting from unenforceability is disproportionately harsh considering the nature of the illegality." Id. at *6. The court, citing the Ninth Circuit Case of Bassidji v. Goe, 413 F.3d 928 (9th Cir. 2005), devised a test of sorts for determining when contracts regarding illegal subject matter may nevertheless be enforceable:

"The Ninth Circuit analyzed federal case law and California precedents... to investigate '[n]uanced approaches to the illegal contract defense, taking into account such considerations as the avoidance of windfalls or forfeitures, deterrence of illegal conduct, and relative moral culpability,' and those considerations 'remain viable in federal court and represent no departure from [federal precedent] . . . [so] long as the relief ordered does not mandate illegal conduct.' Id. at

The Mann court also noted that "[t]he federal government's concern over the CSA's medical marijuana prohibition has waned in recent years, and the underlying policy purporting to support this prohibition has been undermined." Id. at *9. Noting that several states have legalized marijuana in one form or another, the Mann court held:

Given the federal government's wavering policy on medical marijuana in states that regulate this substance, and California's expressed policy interest in allowing qualified patients to obtain medical marijuana, the purported illegality here is not one the Court finds to mandate non-enforcement of the parties' contract. Id.

Here, the plaintiff is alleging breach of contract (among other related causes of action) against Defendant in connection with a marijuana concern. The court has already opined on the gross unfairness that would result if Defendant were allowed to use the bankruptcy system as a shield from his alleged misdeeds. The court also notes that, in the event Plaintiff prevails against Defendant in this adversary proceeding, this court would not be forcing either party to engage in illegal conduct. This was a major point raised in Mann, i.e. the issuance of a remedy would not necessarily entail a resort to unlawful conduct. Not only does this approach properly involve the balancing of relative wrongdoings as required by the Circuit in Northbay, it also harmonizes with the various cases where federal courts refused to become involved at all such as In re Arenas, 514 B.R. 887 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2012), because to do so would necessarily require someone to accommodate ongoing breach of the CSA, such as by selling contraband as assets of the estate.

Defendant argues that accepting jurisdiction would require the court to intervene proactively and thus improperly in what otherwise would have been Defendant's carte blanche ride to discharge. Implicit in this is the argument that the court should leave the wrongdoers where it finds them and only unusual action by the court offensive to the CSA would interrupt Defendant's ride to discharge. But this argument is unpersuasive because it could as easily be looked at another way, i.e. the court would be issuing a change in the status quo by granting the discharge, which is not a right but a privilege, and this action is to determine whether, balancing acts on both sides, that can or should be done consistent with justice. The court is thus persuaded that it does have subject matter jurisdiction, or at least that there is no compelling reason on these facts to decide otherwise.

II. Are Claims for Relief Adequately Stated?

Plaintiff's complaint alleges claims for relief under 11 U.S.C. §727(a) (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), (7) and (12), as well as under 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(2), (4), and (6) (10 causes of action in total). By this motion, Defendant seeks dismissal of all causes of action.

A. FRCP 12(b)(6) Standards

When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). B. Alleged Factual Background

Defendant-Debtor Guy S. Griffithe is an individual who, at all times pertinent hereto, owed a fiduciary duty to Plaintiff Steven Bagot, among others, who "invested" in his companies. Defendant-Debtor allegedly made fraudulent verbal and written statements to solicit "investments" into SMRB, LLC, a Washington State licensed marijuana producer/processor business, and was a signatory to allegedly fraudulent documents underlying the non-bankruptcy litigation in Skagit County Superior Court Case No. 18-2-00544-29 and King County Superior Court Case No. 19-2-00772-9 SEA. Plaintiff provided no less than $650,000.00 to the Defendant through his alter-ego entity (Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc. ("RTSI")) for the benefit of SMRB, LLC. When Plaintiff sued to recover his "investment" and damages for Defendant-Debtor's alleged wrongful conduct, the Defendant-Debtor filed the relevant bankruptcy action as well as this motion to dismiss.

On January 9, 2019, Mr. Bagot filed a complaint with the King County Superior Court Case No. 19-2-00772-9 SEA alleging causes of action against Defendant-Debtor for fraud, negligent misrepresentation, civil conspiracy, breach of contract, unjust enrichment, conversion, promissory estoppel, breach of the fiduciary duties, breach of the duties of good faith and fair dealing, violations of Washington's LLC disclosure requirements and violations of securities laws. The trial is set for April 6, 2020. The complaint is accompanied by Ex. "A", a report by the Washington State Liquor and Cannabis Board ("WSLCB report"), which provides details of Defendant's alleged misconduct and is heavily referenced in both the complaint and the opposition to this motion. Below the court analyzes how each of the alleged claims for relief fit with this background.

B. §727(a)(2)(A)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor, with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor or an officer of the estate charged with custody of property under this title, has transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed, or has permitted to be transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed— property of the debtor, within one year before the date of the filing of the petition[.]" Plaintiff has sufficiently pled this cause of action in the complaint. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges, with the aid of Exhibit A, that Defendant intentionally transferred valuable property belonging to him which reduced the assets available to the creditors and which was made with fraudulent intent. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has transferred (to his alter ego entities, Robert Russell, entities owned by Russell, and other entities not known to Plaintiff), removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed his property, including the funds provided to him by Mr. Bagot, the oil processing machine, $1,000,000 million in product from Emerald City Cultivation, and other assets Defendant claims to have utilized (a portion of) these funds to purchase, assets provided to Defendant by other "investors," as well as Defendant's interests in Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc., Green Acres Pharms, LLC, and SMRB, LLC, among others, and the distributions he receives from those Companies' assets, in addition to other assets which have been concealed, destroyed, transferred without Plaintiff's knowledge. Plaintiff also asserts that this conduct occurred within 1-year of the petition date (June 26, 2019) as Plaintiff

C. §727(a)(3)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor has concealed, destroyed, mutilated, falsified, or failed to keep or preserve any recorded information, including books, documents, records, and papers, from which the debtor's financial condition or business transactions might be ascertained, unless such act or failure to act was justified under all of the circumstances of the case" It is apparent that Plaintiff has adequately made this allegation in the complaint. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges in several places in the complaint the absence of adequate record keeping by Defendant as noted throughout, specifically in regard to Plaintiff's initial investment of $450,000. Plaintiff also alleges the absence of adequate records related to the purchase of the oil-processing machine and the products purchased from Emerald City Cultivation among other assets. Plaintiff also asserts that he has been attempting to obtain such documentation through discovery without success. Thus, it appears that Plaintiff has adequately alleged that Defendant failed to keep relevant records, and there does not appear to be justification for this failure, taking Plaintiff's allegations as true.

D. §727(a)(4)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor knowingly and fraudulently, in or in connection with the case—

(B) presented or used a false claim;

(C) gave, offered, received, or attempted to obtain money, property, or advantage, or a promise of money, property, or advantage, for acting or forbearing to act; or

(D) withheld from an officer of the estate entitled to possession under this title, any recorded information, including books, documents, records, and papers, relating to the debtor's property or financial affairs[.]"

This statute requires that Plaintiff allege: (1) [the debtor] made a statement under oath; (2) the statement was false; (3) [the debtor] knew the statement was false; (4) [the debtor] made the statement with fraudulent intent; and (5) the statement related materially to the bankruptcy case. Matter of Beaubouef, 966 F.2d 174, 178 (5th Cir 1992). False oaths sufficient to justify the denial of discharge include: (1) a false statement or omission in the debtor's schedules or (2) a false statement by the debtor at the examination during the course of the proceedings. Id. at 178; In re Wills, 243 B.R. 58, 62 (B.A.P. 9th Cir.1999). Plaintiff's complaint, including the exhibits, does allege that Defendant made several intentional false statements relating to the bankruptcy case. For example, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has failed to report or disclose several assets, including the hundreds of thousands of dollars he took from Plaintiff and never provided to SMRB, LLC. Plaintiff argues, citing In re Hoblitzell, 223 B.R. 211, 215-16 (Bankr.E.D. Cal. 1998), for the proposition that a false statement or omission is material even if it does not cause direct financial prejudice to creditors. Therefore, although not presented as clearly as it could be, it appears that Plaintiff has sufficiently alleged that Defendant made false statements under oath by failing to disclose several assets known to Defendant in his bankruptcy schedules with an intent to deceive creditors and officers of the court. These specific allegations are likely enough to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements for purposes of Rule 9(b).

This section provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor has failed to explain satisfactorily, before determination of denial of discharge under this paragraph, any loss of assets or deficiency of assets to meet the debtor's liabilities[.]" Here, Plaintiff's complaint, including the additional detail in the Exhibit, has sufficiently alleged the disappearance of identifiable assets no longer available to creditors, including the funds provided to him by Plaintiff, the (funds available for) purchase and transfer of the oil processing machine, the $1,000,000 million (per month) in product purchased from Emerald City Cultivation, and other assets Defendant claims to have utilized a portion of these funds to purchase, assets provided to Defendant by other "investors," as well as Defendant's interests in Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc., Green Acres Pharms, LLC, and SMRB, LLC, among others, and the distributions he receives from those Companies' assets, in addition to other assets which have been concealed, destroyed, transferred without Plaintiff's knowledge.

Defendant does not attempt to explain the loss of these assets, but only points out that the WSLCB report makes no such findings as detailed above. The court notes that the report is lengthy, and the complaint does not make reference to any specific page or paragraph numbers where such information can be easily found. However, in sum, Plaintiff's complaint, which incorporates the WSLCB by reference, does appear to sufficiently allege a cause of action under §727(a)(5), but Plaintiff's complaint could benefit from specific pin cites.

The statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless—the debtor has refused, in the case—

- (A) to obey any lawful order of the court, other than an order to respond to a material question or to testify;
- (B) on the ground of privilege against self-incrimination, to respond to a material question approved by the court or to testify, after the debtor has been granted immunity with respect to the matter concerning which such privilege was invoked; or
- (C) on a ground other than the properly invoked privilege against self-incrimination, to respond to a material question approved by the court or to testify[.]"

Plaintiff argues that it is undisputed that as stated in the Complaint, in the King County Superior Court litigation, the Honorable Judge McHale entered an Order ordering Defendant-Debtor provide complete responses and documents in response to Mr. Bagot's discovery requests, which were due no later than June 25, 2019, Defendant allegedly failed to comply with this Order. Plaintiff also argues that Defendant did not object on grounds of privilege against self-incrimination or any other ground, Defendant simply refused to comply. Plaintiff asserts that this failure to cooperate resulted in sanctions being imposed, which Defendant apparently has also refused to pay. There is a question whether "the court" as referenced in the statute means the bankruptcy court only, or might it mean another court such as the Kings County Court. But this point is not developed in the papers. Thus, Plaintiff has likely pled sufficient facts to survive the motion to dismiss.

G. §727(a)(7)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless—the debtor has committed any act specified in paragraph (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of this subsection, on or within one year before the date of the filing of the petition, or during the case, in connection with another case, under this title or under the Bankruptcy Act, concerning an insider[.]"

As discussed above, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant committed the acts in (2), (3), and (6) within 1 year of the petition date. Also as discussed above, Plaintiff's complaint alleges various acts of misconduct during the pendency of the bankruptcy case, including knowingly providing false information in his bankruptcy schedules. Again, the question arises whether the malfeasance in another case must be one under Title 11. But the point is not developed so the pleading seems sufficient.

H. §727(a)(12)

This section states: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the court after notice and a hearing held not more than 10 days before the date of the entry of the order granting the discharge finds that there is reasonable cause to believe that—

(A) section 522(q)(1) may be applicable to the debtor; and

As Plaintiff argues, the complaint details the fraudulent sale of unregistered securities by Defendant, an unregistered security broker/dealer, in Defendant's alter ego entities including Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc. and SMRB, LLC (d.b.a. Green Acres Pharms) (and possibly Green Acres Pharms, LLC, from whom the "Distribution" was paid), as well as his improper conduct while acting in a fiduciary capacity with respect to these dealings and entities. Therefore, Plaintiff has sufficiently pled the first element of this claim. With respect to the second element, there must be pending a proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony or liable for a debt of the kind described in §522(q)(1); Plaintiff's complaint provides sufficient details his pending proceeding against Defendant for, among other things, violating State securities laws and relevant disclosure requirements. Thus, this cause of action is likely sufficient to survive the motion.

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for money, property, services, or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit, to the extent obtained by— false pretenses, a false representation, or actual fraud, other than a statement respecting the debtor's or an insider's financial condition[.]" The debtor's intent to deceive may be inferred by circumstantial evidence under the 'totality of the circumstances' test. In re Eashai, 87 F.3d 1082, 1087 (9th. Cir. 1996). Under the relevant test, the Court "may infer the existence of the debtor's intent not to pay if the facts and circumstances of a particular case present a picture of deceptive conduct by the debtor." Id.

As discussed above, the complaint provides ample detail of Defendant's alleged fraudulent misconduct including, allegedly making false statements about his companies' financial situations, matters of ownership, etc. in connection with soliciting investment from Plaintiff. Plaintiff points out that the WSLCB report made several of these findings, all of which are incorporated into the complaint as an exhibit. In sum, there appears to be sufficiently detailed allegations, taken as true, to satisfy the pleading requirements, including those of Rule 9b.

1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny[.]”

For purposes of § 523(a)(4), embezzlement is defined as “the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom such property has been entrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come.” Moore v. United States, 160 U.S. 268, 269, 16 S. Ct. 294, 295, (1885). Further, as explained in Murray v. Woodman (In re Woodman), 451 B.R. 31 (Bankr. D.Idaho), “an intent to deprive the rightful owner of funds only temporarily and not permanently [does] not negate the element of [fraudulent] intent.” Id. at 43. “To prevail under § 523(a)(4) for larceny, a creditor must prove that “the debtor has wrongfully and with fraudulent intent taken property from its owner. Larceny differs from embezzlement in the fact that the original taking of property was unlawful, and without the consent of the injured person.” King v. Lough (In re Lough), 422 B.R. 727, 735-36 (Bankr. D. Id. 2010). (internal citations omitted)

The complaint appears to allege both embezzlement and larceny while Defendant was acting in a fiduciary capacity. Taking Plaintiff’s allegations as true, Defendant obtained money from Plaintiff which he was required to – on two different occasions – provide directly to SMRB, LLC (d.b.a. Green Acres Pharms). Plaintiff alleges that Defendant not only obtained these funds unlawfully from Plaintiff, Defendant either never provided Plaintiff’s funds to SMRB or improperly removed them and has failed to provide any accounting for these funds or explain their disappearance, without the consent of Plaintiff. Again, taking Plaintiff’s allegations as true, Plaintiff does appear to have pled sufficient facts to survive the motion.

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for willful and malicious injury by the debtor to another entity or to the property of another entity[.]" Section 523(a)(6)'s willful injury requirement is met when the debtor has a subjective motive to inflict injury or when the debtor believes that injury is substantially certain to result from his own conduct. Carillo v. Su (In re Su), 290 F.3d 1140, 1142 (9th Cir. 2002). Plaintiff's complaint is replete with allegations of knowing misconduct, including fraud, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, unjust enrichment, etc. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges that false statements in certain written materials induced Plaintiff to invest Defendant's ventures. Taken as true, the allegations in the complaint are sufficient to satisfy the willfulness portion of the statute.

Courts treat the malicious injury requirement of § 523(a)(6) as separate from the willful requirement. According to In re Jercich 238 F.3d 1202, 1209 (9th Cir. 2001): "A 'malicious' injury involves '(1) a wrongful act, (2) done intentionally, (3) which necessarily causes injury, and (4) is done without just cause or excuse.'" Carillo v. Su (In re Su), 290 F.3d 1140, 1146-47 (9th Cir. 2002). Plaintiff alleges conduct that, if true, would satisfy the maliciousness portion of the statute. For example, Plaintiff's complaint alleges that Defendant knowingly made material misstatements or omissions the written material provided to Plaintiff, which ultimately allowed Defendant to obtain the hundreds of thousands of dollars from Plaintiff. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant knew that the money acquired from Plaintiff had not gone for the benefit of SMRB or to purchase an oil processing machine, and also knew that significant damage to plaintiff would certainly result if the money could not be returned to Plaintiff. The WSLCB report also concludes on page 9 that it appears that the investors taken in by Defendant (Plaintiff among them) were the victims of a fraudulent "Ponzi Scheme." For these reasons, Plaintiff's complaint has sufficiently stated claim under section 523(a)(6).

This section states: "If a creditor requests a determination of dischargeability of a consumer debt under subsection (a)(2) of this section, and such debt is discharged, the court shall grant judgment in favor of the debtor for the costs of, and a reasonable attorney's fee for, the proceeding if the court finds that the position of the creditor was not substantially justified, except that the court shall not award such costs and fees if special circumstances would make the award unjust." As should be obvious, none of Defendant's debts have been discharged in connection with the section 523(a)(2) claim as we are still at the pleading stages. Thus, this request for attorney's fees by Defendant is premature and is thus denied.

III. Conclusion

The court does not see a failure of subject matter jurisdiction. The court is persuaded Plaintiff's complaint, though it could be made clearer in places by pin citation to the attached WSLCB report and in a few places raise some dubious theories, does appear to have stated enough for relief under every theory alleged. This is not to say that Plaintiff will succeed on every theory alleged, but simply that the basic pleading requirements have been satisfied.

in a single memorandum inasmuch as the issues are identical and, unlike the other two, turn on a question of jurisdiction.

Debtor argues for the first time in his Reply that the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 and several cases addressing the intersection of cannabis and bankruptcy, stand for the general proposition that bankruptcy courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims relating to cannabis. Subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, but this does not obviate the overarching concern for due process and the court notes that the Plaintiffs have had no effective opportunity to address this fundamental issue. Moreover, the court would value their input on the question as none of the cases cited by Defendant deal directly with the issue before the court and the court is not persuaded that the cited authorities can be read quite so broadly as Defendant argues. The issue here can be framed as whether the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction in an adversary proceeding where the Plaintiffs seek to have Defendant/Debtor's debts, incurred through alleged malfeasance, adjudicated as nondischargeable despite the underlying cannabis business venture being simultaneously legal under state law and illegal under federal law.

Even though cannabis sale has now been legal in several states for several years (while the federal law remains against) the only case cited by Defendant that comes close to addressing this precise issue is Northbay Wellness Group v. Beyries, 789 F.3d 956 (9th Cir. 2015). There, an attorney stole money from his client, a legal medical marijuana dispensary, and subsequently filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Id. at 958 The dispensary instituted an adversary proceeding seeking to except its claim from discharge, but the bankruptcy court dismissed the adversary complaint under the "unclean hands" doctrine. Id. at 959 The Ninth Circuit reversed and remanded, explaining that the bankruptcy court failed to balance the parties' respective wrongdoings as required under that doctrine:

"The Supreme Court has emphasized, however, that the doctrine of unclean hands 'does not mean that courts must always permit a defendant wrongdoer to retain the profits of his wrongdoing merely because the plaintiff himself is possibly guilty of transgressing the law.' [Johnson v. Yellow Cab [Transit Co.], 321 U.S. [383, 387, 64 S. Ct. 622, 88 L. Ed. 814 (1944)]. Rather, determining whether the doctrine of unclean hands precludes relief requires balancing the alleged wrongdoing of the plaintiff against that of the defendant, and 'weigh[ing] the substance of the right asserted by [the] plaintiff against the transgression which, it is contended, serves to foreclose that right.' Republic Molding Corp. v. B.W. Photo Utils., 319 F.2d 347, 350 (9th Cir. 1963). In addition, the 'clean hands doctrine should not be strictly enforced when to do so would frustrate a substantial public interest.' EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753 (9th Cir. 1991)." Id. at 960.

The Ninth Circuit in Northbay did not analyze the issue of whether the bankruptcy court had subject matter jurisdiction over the exception to discharge action. Neither the cases cited in the briefs nor any that the court has been able to find analyze and/or expressly settle the jurisdiction issue. The closest possible exception that the court has found occurred near the end of the bankruptcy court's original opinion in Northbay where the court borrowed the reasoning in a dissenting opinion written by Judge Noonan in another case. The bankruptcy court stated in pertinent part:

"It is very unseemly for the court to be asked to grant relief to a plaintiff which claims it lost its cash from illegal drug sales by shoving it into envelopes and then delivering it to its attorney, uncounted and undocumented. This is hardly the behavior of a legitimate business. While the conduct of the parties may have been legal under state law, in the eyes of a federal court they were conspiring to sell contraband. They were in pari delicto, and the funds plaintiffs gave to Beyries were the actual proceeds of illegal drug sales. This is not the sort of case which is supposed to darken the doors of a federal court. See Adler v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 219 F.3d 869, 882 (9th Cir. 2000) (Noonan, Circuit Judge, dissenting)." In Re Beyries, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4710, *1, *5 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. Nov. 28, 2011)

In another case, Olson v. Van Meter (In re Olson), 2018 WL 989263 *1 (9th Cir. BAP Feb. 5, 2018), the debtor's estate included commercial property that was partially being rented out to a cannabis dispensary. The issue before the court was whether such an estate could confirm a plan under chapter 13. The bankruptcy court dismissed the entire case sua sponte on grounds that the debtor had been accepting post-petition rent payments from a cannabis dispensary, and therefore, the debtor was involved in ongoing criminal activity that precluded her from seeking bankruptcy relief. On appeal, the BAP vacated the dismissal on grounds that the bankruptcy court had not made specific findings in connection with the dismissal, and remanded the case for such findings. In a concurring opinion, Judge Tighe stated, "[a]lthough debtors connected to marijuana distribution cannot expect to violate federal law in their bankruptcy case, the presence of marijuana near the case should not cause mandatory dismissal." Id. at *7.

The court takes the above language to imply that in the canvassing of available case law, and contrary to Debtor's suggestion, the Olson court could find no blanket rule that categorically obliterates the bankruptcy court's subject matter jurisdiction simply because cannabis may be involved on some level.

The authorities cited above raise several concerns. The court is uncertain about whether it has subject matter jurisdiction and requires further briefing from the parties; this should be the case in any event given the late raising of the issue. The court is also concerned that if, as Debtor argues, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the dischargeability issue, then Debtor is effectively able to hide behind the bankruptcy process and frustrate the creditors he may have defrauded. Worse still, it is at least conceivable that Debtor could even get his debts discharged despite his own purported wrongful conduct creating those debts. On its face, this result seems to offend the fundamental notions of equity that the bankruptcy court is charged with upholding. Stated differently, perhaps the more applicable maxims of equity here are not only unclean hands but: 'one that seeks equity must do equity', or 'equity will not allow a statute to be used as a cloak for fraud.'

Plaintiffs argue that the relief afforded by bankruptcy law is intended to give a fresh start to the honest but unfortunate Debtor. Plaintiffs argue, therefore, that it would be contrary to bankruptcy policy to allow Debtor to discharge his debts to the extent they were incurred by fraud, misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty, or some other unsavory means. The court may well agree. Thus, the doctrine of in pari delicto seems inapposite in this specific context. In the court's view, gross inequity would result if Debtor could defeat Plaintiffs' complaints based on this court's purported lack of subject matter jurisdiction caused by the underlying illicit activity of both Plaintiffs and Debtor, but still avail himself of the protections and benefits of the Bankruptcy Code.

Perhaps the better questions are, should only part of the court's jurisdiction be jeopardized and if so, what part? Consistent with the above, maybe the proper role of equity is to deny discharge entirely on grounds of unclean hands allowing neither side of the illegal transactions to benefit? The problem here is that no adequate briefing has been received on this central question for which authority is apparently sparse.

Continue about 45 days to allow further briefing.

(cont'd from 1-16-20)

Docket 3

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/12/20:

No amendment? Will there be an abstention request similar to the other adversary proceedings?

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant/Debtor, Guy Griffithe's ("Defendant's") motion to dismiss the complaint of Plaintiff/Creditor, Gregory Wick (Plaintiff). This tentative ruling was originally written for the Samec v Griffithe matter (19-01195) but the Wick complaint shares many of the same infirmities. Thus, a separate tentative ruling is unnecessary.

Plaintiff's complaint is styled such that he is essentially requesting a determination that Defendant's conduct, if proven, would constitute non-a dischargeable debt pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(2)(A) [actual fraud] and (a) (4) [defalcation while acting in fiduciary capacity, embezzlement or larceny]. It is not clear whether Plaintiff intends to have the case tried in this court or in state court, and there is a question of abstention but not before the court at this moment.

When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). "While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556 (2007) A complaint must contain enough factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id.

2. Alleged Facts

Plaintiff in his complaint alleges that, in exchange for a 90-day loan from Plaintiff in the amount of $100,000, Defendant signed a promissory note on March 30, 2017 on behalf of Bridgegate Picture Corp. ("Bridgegate") and signed also as a personal guarantor. The promissory note was delivered by Plaintiff's then financial advisor, Maartin Rossouw ("Rossouw"). Plaintiff claims that Rossouw acted as a dual agent for both Plaintiff and Defendant. When debt on the promissory note became due, Plaintiff attempted to collect through Rossouw, but to no avail. This went on for several months. To date, Plaintiff has received only $25,000, but apparently received other checks returned for insufficient funds. It is noteworthy what the complaint does not contain. There are few if any alleged representations attributed to the Defendant, or even to Rossouw. In short, very little is given that would separate this case from a simple breach of contract case. It should come as no surprise that all bankruptcies are filled with breach of contract claims, and it is only those few where the debt was procured through one or more of the "bad acts" described in §523(a) that discharge is correctly challenged.

3. Plaintiff's Claim Under §523(a)(2)(A)

Plaintiff claims that Defendant's alleged misconduct requires a finding that the debt he has incurred with respect to the unpaid loan is not dischargeable pursuant to §523(a)(2)(A). To establish a claim under §523(a)(2)(A), a plaintiff must establish: (1) a representation of fact by the debtor; (2) that was material; (3) that the debtor knew at the time to be false; (4) that the debtor made with the intention of deceiving the creditor; (5) upon which the creditor relied; (6) and that the creditor's reliance was reasonable; (7) that damage proximately resulted from the misrepresentation. See Rubin v. West (In re Rubin), 875 F.2d 755, 759 (9th Cir. 1989); see also, Britton v. Price (In re Britton), 950 F.2d 602, 604 (9th Cir. 1991). A claim under this "fraud" exception requires that the claim satisfy the heightened pleading requirements for fraud pursuant to F.R.C.P. 9(b). See In re Jacobs, 403 B.R. 565, 574 (Bankr. N. D. Ill. 2009) (citations omitted).

F.R.C.P. 9(b) and F.R.B.P. 7009 provide: "In alleging fraud, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally." While intent or knowledge may be averred generally, however, the plaintiff must still plead the events claimed to give rise to an inference of intent or knowledge Devaney v. Chester, 813 F.2d 566, 568 (2d Cir. 1987), which may be accomplished by pleading facts consistent with certain well established "badges of fraud." In re Sharp Int'l Corp., 403 F.3d 43, 56 (2d Cir. 2004).

Here, Plaintiff in his complaint alleges that at the time of the loan, Defendant knew that Bridgegate was severely undercapitalized and did not have the resources to fulfill the terms of the promissory note or Defendant's personal guarantee. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has entered into similar agreements with other investors, and that those promissory notes too are in default. Plaintiff alleges that he detrimentally relied on Defendant's personal guarantee of the loan in making his decision and that had he known Bridgegate's true financial condition, he would never have invested. As a result of Defendant's default, which Plaintiff argues was intentional, Plaintiff has been damaged in an amount not less than the remaining balance of the loan.

But, are the facts alleged in Plaintiff's complaint, taken as true, even close to meeting the minimal pleading standards set forth above? No allegation is made that Defendant represented anything to Plaintiff, whether about his own financial position, that of Bridgegate, or otherwise. There is no specific allegation that Rossouw made representations either. As Iqbal and Twombly make clear, there must be enough factual detail to support a claim under §523(a)(2)(A), especially given the heightened pleading standards under Rule 9(b). Merely reciting the elements of fraud is insufficient; there must be corresponding facts alleged supporting each of the elements. What was said, by whom, when, etc. Was it oral or in writing?

Surely, not every promissory note supported by a personal guarantee amounts to fraud, false pretenses, or intentional misrepresentation when the promisor and guarantor cannot fulfill those obligations. Even considering the other notes allegedly made to other investors on similar terms, the court remains unpersuaded that fraudulent conduct has been pled with enough specificity for Rule 9. Even shaky borrowers are entitled to borrow money, and eventual default does not necessarily mean this was a foregone conclusion. In opposition to this motion, Plaintiff argues that Defendant has had over 20 lawsuits filed against him for nonpayment of debt going back over a decade. Unfortunately, this was not raised in the actual complaint. Moreover, we cannot rely on mere inference. While widespread and prolonged giving of bad promissory notes might suggest that the issuer was making them intentionally without the ability or inclination to repay, all the specifics need to be provided and Plaintiff must be able to allege specifically that these were an intentional device to obtain funds under false pretenses. The Complaint as it stands is very short of this standard.

4. Plaintiff's Claim Under §523(a)(4)

11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4) provides an exception to discharge "for fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny[.]"

Here, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant, as President of Bridgegate, owed fiduciary duties to his investors, including Plaintiff. Plaintiff then alleges that Defendant breached those duties by:

- (1) failing to honor the personal guarantee;
- (2) failing to pay the note by the dates set forth in the note;
- (3) failing to pay court costs;
- (4) failing to pay late fees;

(5) misrepresenting the financial status of the company;

(6) Engaging in criminal activity, which put the company in peril;

(7) Gross mismanagement;

(8) Theft and conversion of company assets;

(9) failure to disclose money to Plaintiff, which he was entitled to receive;

(10) Diverting assets so as to put them beyond the reach of Plaintiff;

(11) Paying himself excessive and/or non-disclosed salaries.

This is quite a list. But unfortunately, like the first claim for relief, this one suffers from the same lack of detailed factual allegations enough to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements under Rule 9(b). The above listed allegations appear to be nothing more than legal conclusions that are either insufficiently supported or not supported at all by the facts as alleged. For example, it is not at all clear how or why Plaintiff regards himself as an "investor" rather than merely a lender. A factual example for each of the 11 subparts would also add some substance to the complaint and possibly supply some support for the necessary allegation that Defendant was as to Plaintiff a fiduciary. Merely being a lender does not alone create a fiduciary relationship. It is also not clear whether Plaintiff is alleging embezzlement and/or larceny in the Complaint. In short, this cause of action is not supported by enough facts to state a claim that is plausible on its face.

The court notes that Plaintiff is proceeding in pro se and encourages Plaintiff to retain counsel. The Complaint involves issues that can be quite subtle and more complex than they may seem to a lay person. This is especially true when the opponent is represented by counsel. The court also notes that Plaintiff is a plaintiff, along with his wife, in another adversary proceeding involving some of the same issues. Retaining counsel could be of significant benefit to Plaintiff. Thus, since the Ninth Circuit has routinely held that leave to amend should be liberally granted, so it will be in this case. Morongo Band of Mission Indians v. Rose, 893 F.2d 1074, 1079 (9th Cir. 1990).

5. Jurisdiction Issue

The Reply also curiously argues that the court does not have jurisdiction over this adversary proceeding because the debt at issue was incurred in connection with a cannabis business. The court needs clarification on whether Bridgegate Picture Corp. is a cannabis concern or, as its name would suggest, a motion picture company, or the like. The court is aware that the other adversary proceedings do relate to loans made primarily for investment in a cannabis business, including one adversary proceeding where Mr. Samec is also a Plaintiff (along with his wife), which adds a layer of confusion that requires clarification.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/12/20:

This is the Chapter 7 Trustee ("Trustee's") motion to bifurcate the trial concerning the transfer of the property located at 28192 Las Brisas Del Mar, San Juan Capistrano, CA 92675 ("the Property") from debtor, Luminance Health Group, Inc. ("Debtor") to Defendant Michael Castanon ("Castanon") to, among other things, establish certain critical dates. The motion has drawn opposition from Castanon, and a separate conditional opposition from Defendants, BeachPointe Investments, Inc., Bawuah, Jerry Bolnick, Joseph Bolnick, Jonathan Blau, Kenneth Miller, Peter Van Petten, Raymond Midley, and Veronica Marfori (collectively "other Defendants").

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure ("FRCP") 42(b) provides that "the court may order a separate trial of one or more separate issues, claims..." for "convenience, to avoid prejudice, or to expedite and economize[.]" "A court might bifurcate a trial to 'avoid[] a difficult question by first dealing with an easier, dispositive issue[.]'" Estate of Diaz v. City of Anaheim, 840 F.3d 592, 601 (9th Cir. 2016) citing Danjaq LLC v. Sony Corp., 263 F.3d 942, 961 (9th Cir. 2001). Other courts have considered the following: (1) whether issues sought to be tried separately are significantly different from one another, (2) whether separable issues require testimony of different witnesses and different documentary proof, (3) whether party opposing the severance will be prejudiced if it is granted, and (4) whether party requesting severance will be prejudiced if it is not granted. Cashman v. Montefiore Medical Center, 191 B.R. 558 (S.D.N.Y.1996).

Trustee urges the court to bifurcate the trial or else the estate will suffer prejudice because, although Castanon is still residing at the Property, he is not making the monthly mortgage payments and the mortgage has since gone into default. Thus, Trustee argues, with each passing month, the estate's equity in the Property is eroding. The Trustee seeks to avoid the transfer of the Property as an intentional fraudulent transfer, a constructively fraudulent transfer, and a preferential transfer. These causes of action implicate issues other than insolvency and involve only Castanon. Therefore, Trustee believes that a bifurcated trial is in the best interests of the estate because the trial regarding the transfer of the Property will be focused on one defendant, Castanon, and the single transfer at a particular point in time, January 27, 2018, a mere two months before the Debtors ceased operations and filed bankruptcy petitions. As added efficiency, Trustee notes that the parties have already briefed many of the issues concerning the Las Brisas Property in connection with the Trustee's motion for partial summary judgment.

Castanon opposes the motion because he believes that Trustee is not acting for the benefit of the estate, but simply trying to divide the defendants to place more pressure on Castanon. Castanon also asserts that there will be significant duplication of efforts, including repeated witnesses being called to testify about the same evidence. For example, Castanon asserts that both phases of the bifurcated trial would require the same witness, Debtor's former CEO Anthony Arnaudy, to appear and testify about financial reports, accounts receivable, purchase agreements, etc. that will be the same in both phases. As a result of bifurcation, Castanon asserts that he will be prejudiced by having to pay for two separate trials at great cost. Other Defendants do not oppose the motion to the extent that the first part of the bifurcated trial will address only the issue of solvency as of January 2018, the date of the transfer of the Property. However, Defendants oppose the motion if Trustee intends for the bifurcated trial to address solvency issues for earlier time periods relevant to the Trustee's claims against Defendants (that is, from 2016 through December 2017). If that occurs, Defendants argue, the bifurcated trial will necessarily involve duplicative litigation and will not be an efficient use of resources because Defendants will have to participate to protect their rights, and then still go through a second trial on other issues unique to Other Defendants.

Trustee insists that there will be no duplication on the issue of insolvency. Even though both phases of the bifurcated trial will involve the issue, insolvency will relate to different pinpoints in time. Trustee asserts that the difference in the time periods will impact the information, facts and circumstances, witnesses, and evidence considered by the court and the analyses of insolvency. Bifurcation, Trustee asserts, will simply take what will already be a multi-day trial and break it into two distinct phases. Trustee concludes that by allowing the parties and the court to focus on particular issues among the relevant parties in each phase, overall, bifurcation will be more efficient and economical.

This trial should be bifurcated. Using the elements cited by Castanon, it appears that the issues in the two proposed phases of the trial would be significantly different. Contrary to Castanon's assertion, Debtor's insolvency is not the only issue to be litigated in this trial. Trustee is not only alleging that the transfer of the Property to Castanon was constructively fraudulent (and preferential), it was also actually fraudulent, which means issues of intent, among possibly others, will be implicated. These issues will be unique to Trustee's claims against Castanon. To that end, it is likely that the evidence and witness testimony will not necessarily be duplicative as the issues are sufficiently distinct. To the extent that both phases involve issues of insolvency, Castanon concedes that the issue of insolvency will come up in different time periods, and thus, different contexts that will not have significant overlap. For these reasons, it is likely that little, if any, prejudice will accrue to Castanon if the trial is bifurcated. By contrast, the court is persuaded that not bifurcating the trial will prejudice Trustee. The court is troubled by Castanon's failure to pay the mortgage on the Property he accepted and for which he took responsibility. Castanon does not dispute that he has failed to pay the monthly mortgage and that the mortgage is now in default, which is eroding the equity Debtor had built. As this is undisputed, the balance of prejudice favors granting Trustee's motion. By doing so, Trustee will obtain a judgment on his claims against Castanon without having to wait for adjudication on the balance of the case. This conclusion is bolstered by Defendants limited opposition.

Trustee also requests a modification in the scheduling order. Trustee suggests that the parties continue to abide by the dates already set by the court in its Scheduling Order (Doc. 123):

1. The pre-trial conference is set for May 7, 2020 at 10:00 a.m.;
2. The joint pre-trial stipulation must be submitted on April 23, 2020, per Local Bankruptcy Rule 7016-1(b)(1)(B);
3. The discovery cutoff date is March 30, 2020; and
4. The motion cutoff date is April 17, 2020 (including all discovery motions).

In addition, the Trustee proposes that the court set the following dates related to the identification of experts and discovery related thereto: (1) the parties shall designate their expert(s) and serve by email the expert's report to counsel by no later than April 15, 2020; (2) each party shall make their designated expert(s) available to any party for deposition during the twenty-one (21) days following designation of their expert witness(es); and (3) the report of any rebuttal expert(s) must be submitted thirty (30) days after expert designations pursuant to Rule 26(a)(2)(D)(ii). The Trustee proposes that the trial on the Trustee's claims to avoid and recover the Las Brisas Property and the value related thereto be set in late May or early June 2020. The court will

#20.00 Defendants' Motion To Dismiss Plaintiff Richard Ross' First Amended Complaint To Determine Dischargeability Of Debts Under Sections 523(A)(2) And 523(A)(6) Of The Bankruptcy Code

Docket 15

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/12/20:

This is Defendants/Debtors, Ralph and Shelley Burnett's ("Defendants" or "Debtors") motion to dismiss Plaintiff, Richard Ross' ("Plaintiff's") first amended complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Plaintiff opposes the motion.

1. Brief Factual and Procedural Background

Debtors were the owners of the real property located in the City of Santa Ana, County of Orange, State of California, commonly known as 13341 Sandhurst Place ("Property"). On or about July 2, 2019, Plaintiff entered into an agreement for the purchase and sale of the Property and executed Escrow Instructions ("Escrow Instructions") with the Debtors in which the Debtors agreed to sell and Plaintiff agreed to buy the Property for the sum of $950,000, including a down payment of $190,000, and financing in the amount of $760,000. Debtors were in dire financial straits at the time of the agreement and facing foreclosure. The agreement would allow Debtors to stay on the property while paying fair market rent to Plaintiff.

Plaintiff deposited $10,000 into escrow account number 5870190794 with Chicago Title Company as an earnest money deposit towards the purchase price. The Escrow Instructions provided that escrow was to close by August 15, 2019. At the time of the execution of the Escrow Instructions, the Property had a reasonable value of $1,229,000, as evidenced by the asking price indicated on a recent listing for the Property on the Multiple Listing Services. Plaintiff experienced a delay in obtaining financing, and requested an extension from the Debtors to September 3, 2019, to which the Debtors agreed. Plaintiff's lender cleared the purchase price for closing on August 26, 2019. On August 29, 2019 Plaintiff was informed by the escrow agent that the Debtors refused to sign the documentation for the extension, preventing the closing of the transaction.

Defendants filed their voluntary chapter 11 petition on September 9, 2019. On or about December 10, 2019, Plaintiff Richard Ross ("Plaintiff") filed an adversary complaint to determine dischargeability of debt under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2) and 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6) of the Bankruptcy Code. This complaint was dismissed pursuant to a motion brought under Rule 12(b)(6), but the Court did give the Plaintiff leave to amend. On or about January 9, 2020, Plaintiff filed a First Amended Complaint (the "First Amended Complaint").

2. Motion to Dismiss Standards

FRCP 12(b)(6) requires a court to consider whether a complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). There are cases that justify, or compel, granting a motion to dismiss. The line between totally unmeritorious claims and others must be carved out case by case by the judgment of trial judges, and that judgment should be exercised cautiously on such a motion. Id.

"While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-65 (2007) A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, _ U.S._, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id. Threadbare recitals of elements supported by conclusory statements is not sufficient. Id.

3. Plaintiff's §523(a)(2)(A) Claim

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for money, property, services, or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit, to the extent obtained by— false pretenses, a false representation, or actual fraud, other than a statement respecting the debtor's or an insider's financial condition[.]" Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint must allege (1) the debtor made the representations; (2) at the time he knew they were false; (3) he made them with the intention and purpose of deceiving the creditor; (4) the creditor relied on such representations; and (5) the creditor sustained the alleged loss and damage as the proximate result of the representations have been made, In re Britton, 950 F. 2d 602, 604 (9th Cir. 1991).

Plaintiff argues that the First Amended Complaint adequately pleads facts sufficient to survive the motion. Specifically, Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint alleges on page 5, ¶¶21 the following:

- "a) Debtors continually represented to Plaintiff their intent to complete the sale of the Property to the Plaintiff;
- b) Despite Debtors' representation that they would perform their contractual obligations to sell the Property to the Plaintiff, all such representations were knowingly false;
- c) Debtors' knowingly false representations to Plaintiff that they would complete the sale of the Property was in fact a material aspect of the contractual relationship between the Plaintiff and Debtors;
- d) Plaintiff alleges that at all times the Debtors were completely aware and fully knew they did not intend to complete the sale of the Property to the Plaintiff;
- e) Plaintiff alleges that it was clearly the Debtors' knowing intent that Plaintiff would rely on Debtors' knowingly false and repeated representations yet they in fact had no intention to complete the sale of the Property to Plaintiff; and
- f) Plaintiff suffered damages in an amount no less than $400,000 due to Debtors' initial and ongoing knowing fraudulent conduct concerning the purported sale of the Property to Plaintiff."

Defendant argues that these are merely threadbare recitals of the required elements, but, without more, fail to satisfy the Twombly/Iqbal standard. Defendants also note that the allegations quoted above are insufficient to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements under Rule 9(b).

The court disagrees. Although the First Amended Complaint is somewhat thin, there is enough detail to allow both Defendants and the court to understand what the allegations are and the basis for those allegations. To be clear, this does not mean that Plaintiff will necessarily succeed on any of these claims, but they have met the minimal plausibility standards. Likewise, Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint includes just enough specificity to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements of Rule 9(b). Defendants attempt to argue issues of plausibility ("why would defendants do this..."), perhaps inspired by language from Twombly/Iqbal. While it is true that the complaint must recite facts from which a court can see a path to liability, that is done here. Whether it can be sustained by evidence is another matter. But even after Twombly/Iqbal it is not the province of Rule 12 motions to determine disputed facts, so long as they rise above a very minimal level of plausibility.

4. 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(6)

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for willful and malicious injury by the debtor to another entity or to the property of another entity[.]" "[A] simple breach of contract is not the type of injury addressed by § 523(a)(6)... an intentional breach of contract is excepted from discharge under § 523(a)(6) only when it is accompanied by malicious and willful tortious conduct." Petralia v. Jercich (In re Jercich), 238 F.3d 1202, 1205 (9th Cir. 2001) (internal quotations omitted). "[A] wrongful act that is voluntarily committed with knowledge that the act is wrongful and will necessarily cause injury meets the 'willful and malicious' standard of § 523(a)(6). Similarly, the Restatement definition of intent... requires the actor either to desire the consequences of an act or to know the consequences are substantially certain to result. Under this definition, the actor's deliberate act with knowledge that the act is substantially certain to cause injury is sufficient to establish willful intent." Id. at 1208.

Plaintiff again points to the above quoted portion of the First Amended Complaint and argues that the willfulness and maliciousness have been adequately pled. Again, Plaintiff's complaint is light on detail, but is enough to survive this motion. The court notes that exactly how Plaintiff knows that Defendants intended to deceive and economically harm him is left somewhat vague. As far as the court can tell, Plaintiff alleges that because Defendants had gone so far toward completing the sale only to back out at the last minute, the inescapable inference is that Defendants intentionally deceived Plaintiff and intended to harm him economically in the amount of no less than $400,000. The court is skeptical that such an inference is wholly warranted by the facts as pleaded; the court also wonders what Defendants stood to gain by going so far toward an agreed sale that was designed to keep them in their residence only to pull out at the last moment. Not every breach of contract is a tort. Nevertheless, at this early stage, the court is obliged to take all factual allegations as true and view the allegations in the light most favorable to Plaintiff as the nonmoving party. And while plausibility is obviously stretched the court cannot say at this juncture (where the threshold is very low) it is altogether lacking. Therefore, Plaintiff's complaint just barely satisfies the pleading standards.

#8.00 Motion For Adequate Protection Or In The Alternative, Relief from Automatic Stay

Vs.
DEBTORS

Docket 86

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO APRIL 28, 2020 AT 10:30 A.M., PER STIPULATION ORDER ENTERED 3-16-20.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/17/20:

This is the motion for relief of stay brought by JP Morgan Chase Bank. It is alternatively characterized as a request for adequate protection. The debtors are almost 4 years into their five-year plan. But for reasons never explained in the papers, the debtors have not paid property taxes on the subject property commonly known as 16317 Filbert Street, Fountain Valley, CA. for either 2018 or 2019. With penalties and fees according to the bank this is now a $5942.16 obligation and climbing owed to the County. Both sides at various points characterize the question solely as one of "adequate protection." From this premise debtors argue that the bank can't complain since it is in first position securing about $245,000 on a property worth, according to debtor, $650,000. So, as the argument goes, the debtors could continue not paying their property taxes for several years to come and still not threaten, at least mathematically, to put the bank into an unsecured position even though by statute all liens are junior to County taxes. So, one supposes, under this argument the bank must simply lump it?

The court suggests many of the premises behind these arguments are wrong or wrong-headed. First, 11 U.S.C. §362(d)(1) provides relief of stay "for cause including lack of adequate protection..." In other words, "cause" can be based on things other than a narrow calculation of whether the complaining creditor is adequately protected. "Cause" can also go the behavior of the debtors including issues of bad faith. The court presumes that there is a covenant in the trust deed requiring the debtors to keep current on property taxes. The court also presumes that the confirmed plan required that debtors perform ongoing obligations under the deed of trust without modification. So, what we have in effect are both breaches of those covenants and post-petition plan defaults. That is consequently very much a "cause" question, and the possibly lackadaisical tone emanating from debtors on this point is very concerning. It should be well-known by now that this court takes a very dim view of post-confirmation plan defaults. Moreover, relief of stay on account of a Chapter 13 plan default may just the sort of situation for which the deliberately broad and flexible "for cause" provision was designed. See In re Carona, 254 B.R. 364, 367 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2000).

Of course, the court would prefer debtors complete their plan and keep their home. A large step in that direction, however, will have to be an attitude adjustment and recognition that remedial steps must be taken immediately as that goal is in some jeopardy. The court will hear argument on the points raised.

#41.00 Motion Under Local Bankruptcy Rule 3015-1 (n) And (w) To Modify Plan Or Suspend Plan Payments

Docket 122

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/18/20:

The court cannot reconcile the Trustee's comments about amounts overdue with the Debtor's declaration.

Moreover, the tactic of deliberately defaulting under a plan so as to accumulate funds, and then "asking forgiveness instead of permission" is dubious.

No tentative.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, the court encourages telephonic appearances through CourtCall on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. Telephonic appearances may be arranged by calling (866) 582-6878.

Chapter 13

#56.00 Objection To Claim filed by Exeter Finance LLC c/o AIS Portfolio Services LLC

Docket 27

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/18/20:

1. There is a question about proper service inasmuch as the address requested by the creditor 4515 N. Santa Fe Ave, Oklahoma City... was not used in favor of addresses in Texas.
2. There is little or no admissible evidence.
3. The debtor engages in supposition such as:
 - a. because she did not take possession, she cannot be responsible... really is that what co-signing or guaranty means?
 - b. the creditor "wrote off" the debt. What, this means the debt is erased?
 - c. the value of the vehicle was more than the balance owed, ergo creditor got paid in full. Really? While this might be true it would be more illuminating if we knew what the foreclosure sale yielded, rather than rely on debtor's hearsay speculations. For example, what was the condition of the auto when it was repossessed? Continue to fix notice.

#7.00 Amended Motion for relief from automatic stay ACTION IN NON-BANKRUPTCY FORUM

JONATHAN BALL
Vs
DEBTOR

Docket 481

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/24/20:

The movant wants to proceed with trial in New Jersey although he has filed a proof of claim which, absent objection, would be allowed as a matter of course. Complicating matters is a reported affirmative defense / cross-claim. Trustee is uncertain whether there will be a dividend in the case making engagement of counsel likely a waste of resources. The problem arises in that Trustee does not want to take a definitive position, and that is problematic as we cannot detain the other parties indefinitely or unnecessarily.

Grant effective 60 days from entry of this order unless the Trustee affirmatively seeks an extension of the stay. Only liquidation of claims is allowed in any case, no levies absent further order.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/25/20:

The failure to make any adequate protection payments to Wells Fargo should sound alarm bells for everyone, particularly debtor's counsel. Obviously the debtor is suffering severe cash flow issues, which brings into question why the court should allow fees since the whole premise of the case is now subject to re-examination, whether fees were part of a cash collateral stipulation or not.

No allowance at this time absent a better explanation of where we're going and how we're likely to get there.

#7.00 Motion of Creditor Richard Ross for Order Re: Estimate Claim for Purposes of Voting on Debtors Chapter 11 Plan Pursuant to Section 502(c) of the Bankruptcy Code and Rule 3018 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/25/20:

This is Creditor, Richard Ross' ("Creditor's") motion for order estimating his claim for purposes of voting on debtors' chapter 11 plan pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §502(c) and FRBP 3018. The motion is opposed by Debtors, Ralph and Shelley Burnett ("Debtors").

Allowance of claims or interests is governed by 11 U.S.C. § 502, which states in pertinent part:

"(a) A claim or interest, proof of which is filed under section 501 of this title, is deemed allowed, unless a party in interest... objects[...]

(c) There shall be estimated for purpose of allowance under this section—

(1) any contingent or unliquidated claim, the fixing or liquidation of which, as the case may be, would unduly delay the administration of the case; or

(2) any right to payment arising from a right to an equitable remedy for breach of performance."

Creditor argues that the court should grant the motion and estimate his aggregate unsecured claim against the Debtors and their bankruptcy estate for no less than $450,000 or as much as approximately $478,000. According to Creditor, he was in a written fully binding contractual relationship with the Debtors to purchase their residence located at 13341 Sandhurst Place, Santa Ana, CA 92705 ("Sandhurst Property"), which such purchase would have allowed Debtors to remain in their home despite the Debtors' dire financial straits, including the eve of a pending foreclosure sale. Creditor asserts that it was always agreed as expressly provided for in the written and signed Escrow Instructions that Creditor would purchase Debtors' Sandhurst Property for a below market price of $950,000. However, both Creditor Ross and the Debtors fully were aware that the Sandhurst Property was worth approximately $1,350,000 in July/August 2019. Nonetheless, Creditor asserts, totally unbeknownst to him, Debtors had no intention of following through on their contractual relationship to sell the Sandhurst Property to Creditor. Consequently, Creditor argues that he is entitled to his reliance and general expectation damages as provided under applicable non-bankruptcy law (i.e. Section 3300 et seq. of the California Civil Code).

Additionally, Creditor asserts that Debtors do not legitimately dispute Creditor's entitlement to no less than $28,350 for the Debtors' August 2018 Promissory Note. Thus, the aggregate amount of Creditor's claim against the Debtors' estate is no less than $478,350 ($450,000 damages re: Sandhurst Place Property, along with the $28,350 unpaid August 2018 Promissory Note).

Debtors dispute the legitimacy of Creditor's claim and argue that the value of his claim is zero. Debtors point out that on October 10, 2019, Creditor filed a proof of claim, on the claims register in the Debtors' Main Bankruptcy Case as Claim Number 4, for $500,000, with the basis for the claim being described as "promissory note, money loaned, and real estate purchase contract" (referred to herein as "the Ross Claim"). Crucially, Debtors argue, although the Official Form 410 Proof of Claim specifically instructs the claimant to "attach redacted copies of any documents supporting the claim required by Bankruptcy Rule 3001(c)", no supporting documents were attached to the Creditor's claim.

Rule 3001(c)(1) requires written support to be attached to a proof of claim, to wit:

Claim Based on a Writing. Except for a claim governed by paragraph (3) of this subdivision, when a claim, or an interest in property of the debtor securing the claim, is based on a writing, a copy of the writing shall be filed with the proof of claim. If the writing has been lost or destroyed, a statement of the circumstances of the loss or destruction shall be filed with the claim.

The consequence of not attaching documentary evidence in support of a Proof of Claim, Debtors argue, is that alleged documentation will not be admitted later. In support of this assertion, Debtors argue that according to Rule 3001(c)(2)(D)(i) provides that after notice and hearing, the court should not admit evidence in support of the claim in any form (which would presumably include testimony) if the creditor did not attach the documents to the Proof of Claim:

If the holder of a claim fails to provide any information required by this subdivision (c), the court may, after notice and hearing, take either or both of the following actions: (i) preclude the holder from presenting the omitted information, in any form, as evidence in any contested matter or adversary proceeding in the case, unless the court determines that the failure was substantially justified or is harmless; or (ii) award other appropriate relief, including reasonable expenses and attorney's fees caused by the failure.

Debtors argue that Creditor has not attempted to explain or justify his failure to attach supporting documentation to his proof of claim despite the claim being filed six months ago. By contrast, Debtors argue that the court has the testimony of the Debtors. Debtors attached Exhibit A to their opposition, which is the declaration of the Debtor that establishes that the Debtors never agreed to any extension to close the escrow on the sale of the real estate at issue. Moreover, Debtors argue that the same declaration states that there is no balance due on any loan or promissory note allegedly owed to Creditor. The declaration also states that it was Creditor, not the Debtors, that failed to close the escrow by the deadline of August 15, 2019. The admissible evidence before the court, Debtors argue, is that it was Creditor, not the Debtors, that failed to perform under the terms of the escrow instruction. Further, Debtors assert, the evidence also shows that the Debtors owe Ross nothing. Debtors therefore conclude, if the Court ascribes an estimated value to the Ross claim, the estimated value should be $0.00.

Debtors then argue that if the contested claim is allowed in the requested estimated amount, it is still subject to offset by the Debtors' claim against Creditor, which would result in a net estimated value of $0.00. Debtors assert that Creditor's claim is prima facie evidence that he intended to exploit his access to confidential information of the Debtors to enable him to obtain a $500,000 benefit to the detriment of his own client—the Debtors. Therefore, after applying the setoff, Creditor's claim would still have a value of negative $50,000, or effectively $0.00.

Debtors also point out that there is a pending claim objection to Creditor's filed claim and as a result the claim is not an allowed claim under 11 U.S.C. §502(a). The claim objection is on the docket for the adversary proceeding Ross v. Burnett, case number 8:19-ap-01230-TA, Document Number 7, as a compulsory counterclaim and as specifically permitted under Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure Rule 3007(b). Debtors argue that if there has been an objection to the claim, the claim holder will not be able to vote on the plan, unless that claim holder has received temporary allowance of his claim from the court or the court has settled the claim in the claimholder's favor. 767, 769 (Where the debtor objected to two claims and neither claimholder sought temporary allowance; the creditors were not allowed to accept or reject the plan); In re M. Long Arabians, 103 B.R. 211, 215 (9th Cir. BAP 1989) (The debtor objected to the claims of a creditor "Bell Road." Bell Road did not seek temporary allowance of its claims; thus, the court held that Bell Road did not hold an allowed claim and had no right to accept or reject the plan.); In re General Homes Corp., 134 B.R. 853, 860 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1991) (A creditor is not entitled to vote where its claim is subject to a filed objection for which no temporary allowance for voting purposes had been sought.). However, Debtors concede that the law allows that temporary allowance of a claim may be gained pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. Rule 3018(a). This rule states that, notwithstanding objection to a claim or interest, the court may temporarily allow a claim or interest in an amount the court deems proper for the purpose of accepting or rejecting a plan. However, in this case, it does not appear that Creditor ever sought temporary allowance of his claims until after the voting deadline had passed, which Debtors argue in the 9th Circuit is a fatal error.

In support of this argument, Debtors cite In re M. Long Arabians, 103 B.R. 211 (9th Cir. BAP 1989), which Debtors argue directly addresses the question of when a creditor gets to vote for or against a plan—"Until a party is deemed to have an 'allowed' claim, or actually as an allowed claim, it has no right to accept or reject a plan." Id., at 215. Thus, Debtors conclude, a creditor only gets to cast a vote once it has an allowed claim. Debtors argue further that it is the court that establishes the balloting period during which votes may be timely cast. FRBP 3017(c)—"the court shall fix a time within which the holders of claims and interests may accept or reject the plan." Thus, Debtors assert, on 13 January 2020 when Creditor cast his ballot, he was not actually allowed to vote, and therefore his vote did not and should not count under the controlling law of FRBP Rule 3018(a) and Arabians.

Creditor does not dispute the language of FRBP 3018 or the holding of Arabians. Instead, he argues that Arabians is distinguishable from the present case because Debtors are, according to Creditor, obviously acting in bad faith since they know that the documents supporting his claim both exist and are admissible. Creditor offers no explanation as to how or why the court should overlook his deficient proof of claim, which is what requires resolution; that documents might exist in the abstract obviously does not cure the problem presented by the Rule.

The court very recently ruled that Creditor had filed a complaint that satisfied the pleading standards, albeit just barely. The subject matter of that complaint derived from the same underlying alleged misconduct by Debtors. Debtors have made a persuasive case that Creditor, presently, does not hold a valid proof of claim for want of supporting documentation because it has been objected to. Nor has Creditor remedied the documentation deficiency even after the Rule 12 motion. Nor has Creditor sought permission from this court to have his clearly disputed claim temporarily allowed for purposes of voting on a plan. So, it is not clear that surviving a Rule 12 motion to dismiss in the adversary proceeding by itself resuscitates Creditor's right to vote given the above authorities, particularly absent a Rule 3018(a) motion.

On the issue of voting, In re M. Long Arabians is instructive and is controlling authority. In that case, a creditor who's claim faced an objection, was held not to have had a claim for purposes of voting. "Section 502(a) provides that a claim is 'deemed allowed, unless a party in interest . . . objects.' Accordingly, until a party is deemed to have an 'allowed' claim, or actually has an allowed claim, it has no right to accept or reject a plan." Id. at 215. The only way the claimant in Arabians could have exercised a vote was if they had sought temporary permission under FRBP 3018(a), which it did not. Thus, the BAP affirmed the bankruptcy court's decision that Claimant's votes were invalid and should not be counted.

Here, it appears that Creditor did not have an allowable claim initially due to want of supporting documentation. The court appears to have discretion as to whether it will accept other forms of writing as a supplement if it determines that the failure to attach such documentation was justified or harmless. However, for purposes of voting, it appears that Debtors did object to Creditor's proof of claim, albeit in a counterclaim (8:19-ap-01230; dkt. #7, p. 9-10). This would have put Creditor on clear notice that his claim was disputed and thus not allowed. As such, pursuant to Arabians, Creditor should have sought temporary permission of this court to be allowed to vote pending adjudication of the disputed claim. Creditor failed to do this and, therefore, cannot have his vote counted.

Regarding Debtors' assertion of offset, the court observes that this argument appears to be highly speculative and, notably, not supported by any authority. Thus, the court is not persuaded that this is a colorable argument requiring further analysis and is unnecessary to reach the result below in any event.

Thus, it appears that Creditor does not currently possess an allowed claim for purposes of voting on Debtors' plan (it being objected to which objection is not resolved). Critically, Creditor has also not sought temporary permission to vote on such a plan. The court is also not persuaded that Debtors have engaged in any bad faith. The fact that Debtors may have prosecuted objection to the claim in unorthodox manner (through a counterclaim in the adversary proceeding) does not in and of itself equate to bad faith and does not excuse Creditor's failure to properly support his proof of claim nor the failure to seek Rule 3018(a) authority, and the voting period has passed.

Tax Consequences: No adverse tax consequences are anticipated from the sale

Section 363(b) provides that after notice and a hearing, a trustee may sell property of the estate out of the ordinary course of business. Courts have held that in order to approve a sale, a court must find that the trustee demonstrates a valid business justification, and that the sale is in the best interest of the estate. In re 240 North Brand Partners, Ltd., 200 B.R. 653 (9th Cir. BAP 1996); In re Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. 830, 841-42 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991). A sale is in the best interest of the estate when it is fair and reasonable, it has been given adequate marketing, it has been advertised and negotiated in good faith, the purchaser is proceeding in good faith, and it is an arm's length transaction. Wilde Horse Enterprises, Inc., 136 B.R. at 841. The Wilde Horse court goes on to explain that good faith encompasses fair value and further speaks to the integrity of the transaction. Bad faith would include collusion between the seller and buyer or any attempt to take unfair advantage of any potential purchasers. Id. at 842.

2. Bibby's Opposition

Bibby's main opposition to this motion stems from Bibby's concerns that Debtor intends to sell all of its accounts receivable to the successful buyer even though there is already a true factoring agreement in place that vests Bibby the rights to Debtor's accounts receivable. Bibby also has a first and prior lien as to substantially all of Debtor's assets, which cross-collateralizes Debtor's pre-petition and post-petition obligations to the factor. Bibby is concerned that through the Sale Motion, Debtor proposes to transfer all of its assets, without satisfaction of the obligations due Bibby. The Sale Motion appears to contemplate a transfer of the estate's assets subject to Bibby's priority lien, but that is left unclear.

In response to these concerns, Debtor asserts and acknowledges that it does not consider the accounts receivable already factored and sold to Bibby to be property of Debtor's bankruptcy estate. Therefore, Debtor asserts that it does not intend or seek court approval to re-sell such accounts to the Buyers under the Motion. Instead, the Motion contemplates that Debtor's business will be sold as a going concern and that the sale will close not later than 120 days after entry of a court order approving the sale. (The 120-day escrow period is required for the Buyers to obtain all regulatory approvals, licenses, permits, insurance, etc. before continuing operations.) To that end, Debtor will propose a sale order that expressly excludes all cash and accounts receivable from the property sold, which apparently resolves Bibby's objection.

Regarding Bibby's concern over its lien, Debtor argues that the concern is due to an overstatement of the relief requested in the Motion, which seeks to sell the Assets subject to Bibby's lien. Debtor believes that Bibby is over secured by (1) its continued collection on the factored accounts from SeaLogix; (2) the prepetition and post-petition reserve accounts (which totaled $24,924 as of February 29, 2020), and (3) its senior lien against Debtor's bankruptcy estate (including the sale proceeds). Thus, per its request, Debtor states that it will work with Bibby "on a plan for satisfaction of the remaining obligations under the [DIP Financing Order] in connection with the proposed sale." Debtor expects Bibby to continue factoring Debtor's accounts receivable until the sale closing. Debtor will fully cooperate with Bibby towards the ending of the factoring relationship and ensure that Bibby receives full payment of its secured claim. But what the court is supposed to do with that is left very unclear.

3. Superior Driver's Opposition

Superior Drivers essentially object on the basis that the sale contemplated by the motion is conclusory and unfair because it would sell off all of the assets of Debtor to two companies affiliated with Debtor (or its principal) but leave Debtor and its principals free to conduct the business with no regard for or chance to vote by the creditors, concluding that the motion should not be approved. As an alternative, Superior Drivers requests that a ruling on the motion be postponed until Debtor proposes a plan of reorganization. Superior Drivers also points out that each of the Creditors has each filed a Proof of Claim based on their judgment collectively for over $3 million in unpaid wages, unreimbursed expenses, penalties and interest against Debtor as the successor in interest Superior Dispatch, Inc. One of the proposed buyers is co-owned by Michael Noles, the Debtor's owner and the son of Melinda Melgar, who co-owned Superior Dispatch, Inc. with her husband Cesar Melgar. Superior Dispatch, Inc. is the company that owed the Creditors $3 million in unpaid wages etc., which is the entity that that the Debtor was found at trial to be successor in interest.

As argued by Debtor, it is generally well settled, however, that § 363 sales may be conducted prior to plan confirmation so long as there is a good business reason for the sale. See e.g., In re Lionel Corp., 722 F.2d 1063 (2d Cir. 1983). "Neither the Code nor the caselaw ... requires waiting for the plan confirmation process to take its course when the inevitable consequence would be a liquidation. Bankruptcy courts have the power to authorize sales of assets at a time where there still is value to preserve—to prevent the death of the patient on the operating table." In re GMC, 407 B.R. 463, 474 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Section 363 provides that a trustee or debtor in possession "after notice and a hearing, may use, sell, or lease, other than in the ordinary course of business, property of the estate." 11 U.S.C. § 363(b). "Notably, section 363 has no carveouts from its grant of authority when applied in cases under chapter 11 for dispositions of property exceeding any particular size, or where the property is of such importance that it should alternatively be disposed of under a plan. Nor does any other provision of the Code so provide." GMC, 407 B.R. at 486. Instead, "section 363 sales of major assets may be effected before confirmation." Id. at 488; see also Fla. Dep't of Revenue v. Piccadilly Cafeterias, Inc., 554 U.S. 33, 37 n.2 (2008) ("Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings ordinarily culminate in the confirmation of a reorganization plan. But in some cases, as here, a debtor sells all or substantially all its assets under § 363(b)(1) before seeking or receiving plan confirmation.").

Further, when determining whether there is a good business reason for a §363(b) sale before confirmation, a bankruptcy court should consider all of the "salient factors pertaining to the proceeding," including:

- (a) the proportionate value of the asset to the estate as a whole;
- (b) the amount of elapsed time since the filing;
- (c) the likelihood that a plan of reorganization will be proposed and confirmed in the near future;
- (d) the effect of the proposed disposition on future plans of reorganization;
- (e) the proceeds to be obtained from the disposition vis-a-vis any appraisals of the property;
- (f) which of the alternatives of use, sale or lease the proposal envisions; and "most importantly perhaps,"
- (g) whether the asset is increasing or decreasing in value. GMC, 407 B.R. at 490 (citing Lionel, 722 F.2d at 1071).

Importantly, however, the bankruptcy court must also consider if those opposing the sale produced some evidence that the sale was not justified. Id.; see also Lionel, 722 F.2d at 1071 ("[W]e must consider whether [sale opponents] produced evidence before the bankruptcy court that such sale was not justified. While a debtor applying under § 363(b) carries the burden of demonstrating that a use, sale or lease out of the ordinary course of business will aid the debtor's reorganization, an objectant ... is required to produce some evidence respecting its objections.").

Here, Debtor argues that abundant evidence of sound business justification exists to approve this sale, and Superior Drivers has not come forward with any contrary evidence. For example, Debtor asserts that its proposed sale of office furniture, equipment and fixtures will be sold above market value for a total of $69,000. Debtor also asserts that since the petition date, Debtor has been operating on essentially a break-even basis, which makes a sale preferable to a reorganization. Debtor also foresees several obstacles toward a reorganization including: (1) the additional administrative expenses incurred to propose and confirm a chapter 11 plan (which would impede payment to other creditors), (2) operational uncertainties given the changing regulatory landscape described in the Motion (i.e., AB-5), and (3) certain obstacles to plan confirmation such as obtaining a consenting class of impaired creditors. Debtor further states that after the sale is consummated, it intends to convert its case to Chapter 7. The appointed chapter 7 trustee will have the discretion as to how proceeds of the sale will be distributed to creditors. Thus, Debtor argues that Superior Drivers' assertion that Debtor is attempting a sub rosa plan is simply incorrect. Debtor does concede that it has not yet obtained an appraisal on its assets but asserts that this should be overlooked because the sale is subject to overbidding and that, so far anyway, it has been unable to garner any interest in bidding aside from the proposed buyers despite advertisement.

Debtor also asserts that the assets it proposes to sell are subject to diminishing value due to certain regulatory changes. For example, Debtor asserts that AB-5 may soon prevent Debtor, a motor freight carrier, from using subcontractor drivers to haul its loads. If the enforcement stay of AB-5 is lifted, then Debtor could not operate without hiring the drivers as employees, which would fundamentally change the structure of Debtor's current business model and may require it to shut down. This, together with the uncertainty caused by the current coronavirus pandemic adds additional urgency to the sale. Debtor argues that the sooner the sale is approved and completed, the sooner there will be payouts to creditors. These considerations, Debtor argues, demonstrate a sound business justification for approving the sale.

The court agrees that there appears to be a sound business justification for approving the sale. However, the court is not certain about whether the buyers, as insiders of Debtor, are good faith purchasers. The motion is quite vague and mostly conclusory as to why Buyers should be approved as good faith purchasers, especially given the concerns voiced by Superior Drivers. On the other hand, a sale is likely the best chance to get something to these creditors, whereas the prospects of a successful reorganization, given the current economic climate, are highly speculative at best, non-existent at worst. Moreover, the price is so modest that, after administrative and priority claims, it seems unlikely that general unsecured creditors will get anything. Debtor also asserts that Superior Drivers' ORAP lien is subject to bona fide dispute pursuant to a present adversary proceeding (8:19-ap-01223). In that case, Debtor is seeking to avoid the ORAP lien and Assignment Order as preferential transfers. There is a motion for summary judgment that is set for hearing on April 1, 2020 at 11:00 a.m.

4. Conclusion

A few points emerge clearly. First, this motion represents a big ask, i.e. a very small price, unsupported by an appraisal, to entities affiliated with an insider, of substantially all the assets, which will likely result in little or no recovery by the unsecured creditors who are objecting. The resulting question is, is there an alternative? There might well not be, realistically. It is also clear that this case does not belong in Chapter 11 as it has been on its deathbed for months now, and its prospects for reorganization are nil. Debtor admits as much. So, what to do? The court will convert the case to Chapter 7 sua sponte and have the Chapter 7 trustee evaluate the advisability of the sale before a continued hearing on the sale.

Convert to Chapter 7 and continue sale hearing for 30 days to allow a review by the Chapter 7 trustee. An operating order pending the sale may be obtained upon request. The appointed trustee is requested to provide a short evaluation report on the sale as soon as possible before the hearing.

Docket 1

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/26/20:
Status?

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. Tentative for 3/12/20:

So what is status? At earlier conferences there was discussion about a Rule 56 motion, but nothing appears to be on file. Continue to coincide with pre-trial conference on March 26, 2020 at 10:00AM.

Tentative for 6/6/19:

While waiting for a Rule 56 motion a dispute has arisen re: real party in interest.

Continue status conference 90 days with expectation that a substitution motion, and maybe Rule 56, will be filed in the meantime.

Tentative for 3/7/19:

It would seem that the areas still subject to reasonable dispute all go to whether the Fus committed fraud between the inception of the credit in May of 2008 and the onset of the admitted fraud commencing October of 2008. Another issue would be the usual predicates to fraud such as reasonable reliance by bank personnel or auditors on statements made and materials given during that period. On damages, it might also.

While the court can identify the window of time that is relevant, it has no inclination to limit the means of discovery which can include all of the normal tools: depositions, subpoenas, including to third parties, and interrogatories and/or requests for admission.

#9.00 Debtor's Objection To Proof Of Claim of LVNV Funding, LLC, Resurgent Capital Services

Docket 52

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/26/20:

Debtor's claim objection appears to have merit. The account is quite old at this point and collection would likely be barred by the 4 year statute of limitations imposed by section 337 of the California Code of Civil Procedure. However, as the opposition points out, the notice of the claim objection is likely deficient because Debtor input the incorrect claim number. Of greater consequence is that Debtor did not attach a sworn declaration to her claim objection, which is required under LRBP 3007-1(c)(1).

Debtor is be advised to amend her claim objection to include a sworn declaration and ensure that all interested parties are properly noticed and served.

Docket 51

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/26/20:

Debtor is pro se and her claim objection is missing a few key documents, mainly a declaration and a proof of claim for the amended claim objection. Also, Debtor should be instructed to use the claim number as it appears in the claim register in her case, not the much longer number she provided.

#11.00 Debtor's Notice Of Objection To Proof Of Claim

Docket 53

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/26/20:

It is clear that this claim should not be resolved in a summary claims proceeding. Rather, the likely path will be resolution either through the pending arbitration proceeding or the pending dischargeability adversary proceeding. Continue to coincide with relief of stay motion, and if stay is relieved, further continue for a long enough period so that arbitration be allowed to finish.

#12.00 Debtor Richard P Herman's Motion To Alter, Modify Or Set Aside This Courts Orders And Judgment Listed Rules 59, 60

Docket 167

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/26/20:

The identical motion is brought by the Debtor to alter, modify or set aside pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 59 and 60 in both his main case [#12] and in the adversary proceeding Foothill Financial v. Herman, 8:19-ap-01075 [#14]. Consequently, both motions are addressed in this single memorandum.

As the court understands it, the Debtor in his motion seeks relief from the following:

- 1) The court's Order Converting Case to Chapter 7 entered in the Bankruptcy Case on February 15, 2019 [Bankr. Docket No. 83];
- 2) The court's Order Granting Plaintiff's Motion for Preliminary Injunction and Temporarily Staying State Court Action entered in the Adversary Proceeding on June 6, 2019 [Adv. Docket No. 25];
- 3) The court's Order Granting Motions to Dismiss (the "Second Dismissal Order") entered in the Adversary Proceeding on October 22, 2019 [Adv. Docket No. 73];
- 4) The court's Order Denying Motion of Defendant/Debtor Richard P. Herman to Compel the Trustee to Abandon Trustee's Interest in State Court and Adversary Litigation and for the Court to Abstain from all Adversary Litigation entered in the Adversary Proceeding on December 17, 2019 [Adv. Docket No. 88];
- 5) The court's Order Granting Motion to Approve Settlement and

Compromise between Chapter 7 Trustee and Foothill Financial, L.P. entered in the Bankruptcy Case on December 26, 2019 [Bankr. Docket 157]; and

6) The court's Judgment entered in the Adversary Proceeding on January 8, 2020 [Adv. Docket No. 91].

Unfortunately, the motion is not covering any new ground. The arguments advanced by Debtor are repackaged arguments from the recent past and, unsurprisingly, the same problems for Debtor persist.

For example, Debtor is attempting to bring this motion under FRCP 59(e), but again, as in the past, Debtor has not timely sought this relief. FRCP 59(e) provides that a "motion to alter or amend a judgment must be filed no later than 28 days after the entry of the judgment." FRBP 9028 adopts Rule 59(e) but shortens the time period, providing that a "motion for a new trial or to alter or amend a judgment shall be filed, and a court may on its own order a new trial, no later than 14 days after entry of judgment." Here, the Judgment was entered January 8, 2020. The Motion was filed January 29, 2020, outside the 14-day period. The lateness problem is of course even more obvious regarding all the other earlier orders. Consequently, the Motion under Rule 59 is late, and any relief sought thereunder must be denied.

Similarly, as in the past when Debtor has sought relief under FRCP 60, he has once again failed to fulfill the basic requirements. FRCP 60(b) provides:

"On motion and just terms, the court may relieve a party or its legal representative from a final judgment, order, or proceeding for the following reasons:
(1) mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect;
(2) newly discovered evidence that, with reasonable diligence, could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial under Rule 59(b);

(3) fraud (whether previously called intrinsic or extrinsic), misrepresentation, or misconduct by an opposing party;
(4) the judgment is void;
(5) the judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged; it is based on an earlier judgment that has been reversed or vacated; or applying it prospectively is no longer equitable; or
(6) any other reason that justifies relief."

Debtor is not specific upon which portion of Rule 60 the motion relies. Debtor again argues that there has been a sea change in the law in the case of Magic Carpet Ride LLC v. Rugged Investment Group, LLC, 41 Cal. App. 5th 357 (2019). However, this court has thoroughly analyzed Magic Carpet on more than one previous occasion and has held in clearest terms that this case did not have the "magic" Debtor believes it had; in fact, Magic Carpet is well within preexisting law and is, in any event, fundamentally distinguishable both legally and factually from the case at bar. But Debtor persists. See Adopted Tentative Ruling from 12/17/19.

Trustee also notes, and the court agrees, that nowhere in Debtor's motion does he argue or present any evidence (or even argument) as to the other bases for Rule 60 relief: mistake, newly discovered evidence, fraud, a void judgment, or a satisfied judgment. The sole basis for the Motion appears to be the Magic Carpet decision. The court is not persuaded that it has misread Magic Carpet the first time, or the second, or that it is in error finding it distinguishable, and nothing in this latest motion moves that needle.

Persistence is an admirable quality in many contexts. However, in others, as here, persistence eventually shades into contumacy. The court is weary of repackaged arguments that, when viewed historically, are devoid of any substance, contain nothing new and appear to be nothing more than the same thing brought again and again in the vain hope that if asked enough times the answer will change without any reason for so doing but solely out of weariness. Further motions that are poorly disguised attempts at seeking Defendant/Debtor Richard P. Herman and his non-debtor spouse, Sabina C. Herman (collectively, Defendants) against Plaintiff and its individual partners. The motion seeks to stay the state court proceeding until such time as this court makes a determination as to whether: (a) the claims in the pending state court action are property of the debtor's estate; (b) the post-conversion, duly appointed and acting Chapter 7 trustee is the real party in interest with standing to prosecute or otherwise dispose of those claims; and (c) the claims in the pending state court action have been released pursuant to a settlement agreement previously approved by this court. Plaintiff is joined by the Chapter 7 trustee in requesting this preliminary injunction.

For his part, Defendant does not directly contest that Plaintiff can meet its burden of establishing the need for a preliminary injunction. Defendant does not believe his state court claims are property of the bankruptcy estate and believes that this motion is nothing more than a disguised motion to dismiss his state court claims. Defendant suggests that this court abstain from this current action because the state court action is far along. Defendant characterizes Plaintiff as a "predatory lender" and claims that Plaintiff procured the release in the Settlement Agreement by fraud.

I. Preliminary Injunction Standards

"A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish that [1] he is likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4] that an injunction is in the public interest." Winter v. NRDC, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). The Ninth Circuit has held, "a 'likelihood' of success per se is not an absolute requirement." Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1085 (9th Cir. 2014). Instead, "serious questions going to the merits' and a hardship balance that tips sharply toward the plaintiff can support issuance of an injunction, assuming the other two elements of the Winter test are also met." Id.

A. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

Plaintiff believes that it can show that Debtor and Sabina lack standing to prosecute the state court claims because they are property of the estate and, therefore, belong to the trustee of the estate. Further, even if Debtor and Sabina did have proper standing, Plaintiff asserts that the release clause in the Settlement Agreement, which was approved by this court, would defeat their causes of action.

1. Lack of Standing

Both federal and California law require actions to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 367 ("[e]very action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest"). "Because the bankruptcy trustee controls the bankruptcy estate, [he or she] is the real party in interest in the suits that belong to the estate." Griffin v. Allstate Ins. Co., 920 F. Supp. 127, 130 (C.D. Cal. 1996). "After appointment of a trustee, a Chapter 7 debtor no longer has standing to pursue a cause of action which existed at the time the Chapter 7 petition was filed. Only the trustee, as representative of the estate, has the authority to prosecute and/or settle such causes of action." Harris v. St. Louis University, 114 B.R. 647, 648 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1990) (internal quotations and alternations omitted). Further, a Chapter 7 debtor may not prosecute on his or her own a cause of action belonging to the estate unless the claim has been abandoned by the trustee. Bostanian v. Liberty Savings Bank, 52 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1081 (1997) ("absent abandonment of the claim by the trustee, a debtor out of possession has no standing to prosecute a cause of action which has passed to the bankruptcy estate").

Plaintiff persuasively argues that the six causes of action making up the pending state court action, assuming Defendants retained or acquired any rights after signing the Settlement Agreement, are property of the bankruptcy estate, and thus, passed to the trustee when the case was converted from Chapter 11 to Chapter 7. Further, Plaintiffs also persuasively argue that the causes of action in the state court action relating to damaged personal property such as plants, antique furniture, artwork, etc., are also property of the bankruptcy estate. To the extent that it is argued by Defendants that these items of personal property were the non-debtor spouse's separate property, no evidence supporting this argument is proffered that would rebut the community property presumption. In short, Plaintiff has persuasively argued that it has at least a fair likelihood of prevailing on the argument that the claims set forth in Defendants' Second Amended Complaint in state court are property of the bankruptcy estate, which belong to the Chapter 7 trustee.

2. The Release Clause in the Settlement Agreement

Plaintiff persuasively argues that, even if the Defendants had proper standing to pursue their claims in state court, the claims would still likely be defeated by the general release and covenant not to sue contained in the Settlement Agreement approved by this court. Indeed, the language in the Settlement Agreement cited by Plaintiff does appear to waive any potential claims Defendants may have had or might still have against Plaintiff.

Plaintiff cites Gregory v. Hamilton, 77 Cal. App. 3d 213, (1978) for the proposition that under California law, specific performance is an appropriate remedy for enforcing a release. There, the court noted, "[i]t is indisputable that money damages could not provide the relief which respondent seeks, i.e., release from liability. Therefore, the breach complained of must be remedied in equity by compelling performance." Id. at 219. However, there is also Cal. Civ. Code §526(a) (6), which states:

"(a) An injunction may be granted in the following cases:

(6) Where the restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings."

Plaintiff also persuasively argues that the Settlement Agreement, signed by Debtor post-petition in his capacity as debtor-in-possession, is binding on the Chapter 7 trustee. "[I]t is axiomatic that the Trustee is bound by the acts of the debtor-in-possession[.]" Armstrong v. Norwest Bank, Minneapolis, N.A., 964 F.2d 797, 801 (8th Cir. 1992). Thus, it appears likely that a court would find the unambiguous language in the Settlement Agreement both binding and enforceable.

Defendants do not challenge the language of the Settlement Agreement.

Chapter 7

However, Defendants do argue that the Settlement Agreement is invalid because Plaintiff allegedly procured the Settlement through fraud. In support of this contention, Defendants cite Cal. Civ. Code §1668, which states:

"All contracts which have for their object, directly or indirectly, to exempt any one from responsibility for his own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law."

The problem with Defendants' contention is that it is critically lacking in evidentiary support and assumes a finding of fraud as the precondition. Further, Defendants' argument does not address the standing issue raised by Plaintiff. Thus, Plaintiff has shown a sufficient likelihood of success on the merits of its arguments regarding both Defendants' lack of standing and the enforceability of the Settlement Agreement.

B. Irreparable Harm

Plaintiff argues that if the injunctive relief does not issue, Plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury. For example, Plaintiff argues that if the state action can proceed, there is a significant risk of inconsistent rulings based on multiple actions in different courts. Plaintiff persuasively argues that this is particularly problematic in this case because Debtor is taking inconsistent positions in the state court action and before this court. For example, in the state court action, Debtor and his wife are claiming that valuable personal property such as antiques, and artwork were damaged by Plaintiff as a result of their eviction of Debtor and his wife. However, Plaintiff points out that none of these valuables were listed in Debtor's schedules in the bankruptcy case.

Further, Plaintiff argues that Defendants are attempting to gain a favorable judgment in their fraud/misrepresentation claims regarding the Settlement Agreement in order to chill Plaintiff's participation in the bankruptcy case. Plaintiff argues that the bankruptcy court is the only forum in which it can pursue claims against the Defendants, making the inequity plain.

Finally, if Defendants are permitted to continue prosecuting the state court action, the estate will continue to be depleted of resources, thereby injuring the interests of Plaintiff and other creditors. Plaintiff will also have to continue expending resources to defend against Defendants' claims. Plaintiff argues that it has no adequate remedy at law because neither the Defendants nor the Estate have enough resources to compensate Plaintiff for the continuing harm it would suffer if the state court action proceeds. In support of this argument, Plaintiff cites Philip Morris USA Inc., v. Scott, 561 U.S. 1301, 1304 (2010) for the proposition that "[i]f expenditures cannot be recouped, the resulting loss may be irreparable."

Of the arguments put forth by Plaintiffs regarding irreparable harm, the danger of inconsistent rulings leading to the necessity of disentangling those rulings, which would almost certainly further deplete the finite resources of the bankruptcy estate, is the most compelling and persuasive argument. This element is not addressed by Defendants. Therefore, there is a risk of irreparable injury to Plaintiff if the state court action is allowed to proceed.

C. Balance of Hardships

Plaintiff again persuasively argues that this factor weighs in favor of granting the injunction because: (1) the state court action should not have been filed in the first place without permission of this court; (2) Defendants claims in the state court action are baseless because the provisions the Settlement Agreement is valid and enforceable; (3) Plaintiffs are being forced to spend substantial sums of money mounting a defense to the state court action, which is especially harmful to Plaintiffs given that Defendants' standing to pursue those claims is suspect at best; (4) there is a risk of inconsistent judgments across courts in different jurisdictions; (5) the prosecution of the state court actions will further deplete the bankruptcy estate's limited resources.

Defendants do not address this point. However, there is not an obvious legitimate hardship to Defendants if the state court action is temporarily stayed. Therefore, this consideration weighs in Plaintiff's favor as well.

D. The Public Interest

Plaintiff argues that issuing the injunction is supported by public policy principles that are fundamental to the bankruptcy system. For example, Plaintiff cites In re Richmond Paramedical Servs., Inc., 94 B.R. 881, 885 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1988) for the general proposition that a paramount public interest is "protecting the estate of debtors for the benefit of creditors." This includes a public interest in maintaining the status quo by not dissipating potential assets of the debtor's estate. In re OGA Charters, LLC, 554 B.R. 415, 432 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) In addition, as noted in In re Chiron Equities, 552 B.R. 674, 701, (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) "[i]t is in the public interest for bankruptcy courts to enforce their own orders and to ensure that the integrity of the bankruptcy system is upheld." Plaintiff argues, and the court agrees, that issuing a preliminary injunction to stay the state court proceedings until the ambiguities identified by Plaintiff are resolved, serves these public interests. Thus, this factor also weighs in favor of granting a preliminary injunction.

II. Abstention

Defendants argue that this court should exercise its discretion to abstain from deciding in this matter. Defendants appears to be arguing that since the state court action is nearly to the jury trial stage (i.e., much further along than the proceedings in this court?), this court should abstain, pending resolution in the state court action. However, considering the issues discussed above, abstention does not seem appropriate. Both Plaintiff and the Chapter 7 trustee are requesting that this court issue a preliminary injunction so as to allow a determination on these threshold issues. Moreover, considering the dubious way the state court matter was initiated (by a DIP without leave of court) there are transcendent questions that must be sorted out by the bankruptcy court before the lawsuit can or should continue.

#14.00 Motion by Debtors to Dismiss Case Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. Section 707 (con't from 3-31-2020 per court)

Docket 212

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/1/20:

This is Debtors Dale and Cheryl Knox's ("Debtors") motion to voluntarily dismiss their chapter 7 case pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §707. The motion has drawn limited opposition from creditors Warren Deutsch and Allen Weingarten (holders of a second deed of trust on 857 Avenida Acapulco, San Clemente, CA 92672), creditor TSC Restoration, Inc. and from the Internal Revenue Service. The chapter 7 Trustee, Karen Sue Naylor, does not oppose the motion.

The parties agree that dismissal is permissible but disagree on the terms. Debtors want to dismiss the case with no bar to re-filing, but creditors Deutsch and Weingarten argue that a bar of 180 days is warranted under 11 U.S.C. §109(g)(2), although they concede that imposition of such a bar is discretionary in the Ninth Circuit. Creditor TSC Restoration asks the court to include in any dismissal order language that would preclude Debtors from receiving the standard chapter 7 discharge in the case. TSC argues that Debtors have been enjoying the protections provided by the code while spending lavishly to support their lifestyle, all at the expense of creditors like TSC.

Finally, the IRS's objects to dismissal because it has been investigating certain tax issues with Debtors and would like the case to remain open to resolve those matters. These matters will likely be resolved through an evidentiary hearing that is currently set for July 16, 2020. The IRS argues that it has spent many months preparing its case against Debtor and considerations of judicial economy support leaving the case open for the limited purpose of allowing the IRS to finish its portion of the case. In support of this argument, the IRS cites In re Bartee, 317 B.R. 362 (9th Cir. BAP 2004) for the proposition that in the Ninth Circuit, "a voluntary Chapter 7 debtor is entitled to dismissal of his case so long as such dismissal will cause no 'legal prejudice' to interested parties. (citing from In re Leach, 130 B.R. 855, 857 n.5 (9 Cir. BAP 1991)). Debtors have the burden of showing that there will be no legal prejudice to any party if dismissal is granted. Id. IRS argues that Debtors have not demonstrated that no legal prejudice would accrue to the IRS if the case is dismissed. Debtors do suggest in their motion that the IRS issue can likely be resolved outside of the bankruptcy court or even later if and when Debtors re-file, but particulars are left very vague.

The oppositions raise some legitimate points. It should not need stating that bankruptcy proceedings are not to be viewed as an "on/off" switch flipped at the discretion of debtors, nor are bankruptcy proceedings only about the interests of debtors; creditors matter too. Any potential dismissal order will include specific language prohibiting a Chapter 7 discharge (or vacating one if inadvertently already entered), which appears to be what TSC is mainly concerned about. The bar on re-filing is a closer question even though other circuits make a 180-day bar mandatory in cases such as this. Creditors Deutsch and Weingarten assert that they have only received 4 post-petition deed of trust payments even though this case has been pending almost two years. The court does recall that the issue of lavish payments to maintain lifestyle reported in the MORs has been raised before which makes the question focused as one of balancing and fairness. Stated sternly, why should the debtors enjoy the protection of the stay for a period of two years, making little tangible progress toward the stated resolution of the IRS claim, not pay their secured creditors all the while enjoying an unimpeded lifestyle? What's past is past now, but that does not mean the court should welcome an

The question of equitable balance also ties to the last question. Given the reported active involvement of the IRS in this case so far, and the uncertainty surrounding the availability of courts generally in the current COVID-19 crisis, this court is likely as good a place as any to maintain jurisdiction over the tax claims, especially to conserve judicial resources and avoid concerns over legal prejudice. Moreover, resolution of the IRS claim has always been stated as the main point of the entire proceeding (and likely of any repeat filing). IRS says it is ready or nearly so to present its case July 16, 2020 concerning the disputed exemptions in order to achieve a final number. Thus, the case should remain open for the limited purpose of adjudicating the IRS tax claim and then, following an order allowing the claim in the portion adjudicated as correct, dismiss with a bar to refile for a period of 180 days (absent a showing of urgency by separate motion). That approach appears a better balance of interests and less of an offense against equity.

Grant on modified terms, reserving jurisdiction for adjudication of the IRS claim and with 180-day bar which can be relaxed upon motion showing justification and emergency.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/1/20:

The court is left very unclear on the status of the claim for professional fees of Pedersen Law. There appears to have been $842,000 paid. But if a final allowance is being sought here, no showing is made justifying this amount. Moreover, reference is made in Trustee's report over a disagreement.

Chapter 7

The court is mindful of its order of January 7, 2020 allowing interim fees, but one presumes that final allowance is now being sought. It looks like the $842,000 was part of a settlement of which the estate netted $75,000 after a $25,000 fee award was deducted. But the court should not be left with the task of combing the record trying to determine what happened in a final report and allowance request.

No tentative as to Marshack and Pedersen. Hahn Fife fees and costs allowed as prayed.

Chapter 11

#12.00 Motion For Order Approving Chapter 11 Disclosure Statement As Containing Adequate Information Pursuant To Bankruptcy Code Section 1125(A)(1)(B).

Docket 66

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/8/20:

The purpose of a disclosure statement is "to give all creditors a source of information which allows them to make an informed choice regarding the approval or rejection of a plan." Duff v. U.S. Trustee (In re California Fidelity, Inc.), 198 B.R. 567, 571 (9th Cir. BAP 1996). "Adequate information" is defined under 11 U.S.C. Sec. 1125(a)(1) as "information of a kind, and in sufficient detail, as far as is reasonably practicable in light of the nature and history of the debtor and the condition of the debtor's books and records, that would enable a hypothetical reasonable investor typical of holders of claims or interest of the relevant class to make an informed judgment about the plan, but adequate information need not include such information about any other possible or proposed plan."

Bryson's objections notwithstanding (though feasibility seems questionable), the DS appears to provide adequate information. It is also worth noting that the DS has not drawn any other opposition. The plan may ultimately not be confirmable if feasibility proves too speculative, as it very well might be given the current economic climate, or if cramdown is attempted and the value of the rental properties is too low as Bryson has alleged, suggesting that creditors will do better in a liquidation (the so-called best interest of creditors test). Debtor will have the burden on these issues in order to achieve confirmation, but at this stage, the DS does not appear deficient from an information standpoint, especially with the detailed risk factors analysis.

Grant. Set confirmation date and deadlines.

(cont'd from 3-24-20)

Vs
DEBTOR

Docket 481

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/8/20:

Status? As stated in earlier hearings the court is inclined to remove the stay 60 days out (now down to 45) unless the Trustee articulates a compelling reason to continue the delay. If there is to be no or minimal dividend anyway, the court fails to see the waste of resources argument. In any event, the Trustee cannot expect to hold everyone else up while he makes up his mind. The parties were reportedly exploring a stipulation; so, where are we?

Chapter 7

Tentative for 3/24/20:

The movant wants to proceed with trial in New Jersey although he has filed a proof of claim which, absent objection, would be allowed as a matter of course. Complicating matters is a reported affirmative defense / cross-claim. Trustee is uncertain whether there will be a dividend in the case making engagement of counsel likely a waste of resources. The problem arises in that Trustee does not want to take a definitive position, and that is problematic as we cannot detain the other parties indefinitely or unnecessarily.

Grant effective 60 days from entry of this order unless the Trustee affirmatively seeks an extension of the stay. Only liquidation of claims is allowed in any case, no levies absent further order.

#13.20 Notice of Removal of Civil Action to United States Bankruptcy Court

Docket 1

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/8/20:

If the court understands correctly, it is Plaintiff's wish to remain in the Bankruptcy Court and proceed to default and default prove-up. There appears to be no reason not to do this since, unlike contested matters where the court is deferential to sister courts, especially when the proceedings are well-advanced and other non-debtor parties are actively involved, none of those issues pertain here. But there is a large standing issue. Such matters as these belong not to the prosecuting plaintiff alone but to the estate once a bankruptcy is filed. Consequently, the court expects the Plaintiff to contact the Trustee and make suitable arrangements about matters including: (1) continued representation and employment of counsel; (2) substitution of real party in interest and (3) language of the default judgment, findings and evidence to be submitted in support.

The OSC is satisfied and discharged, and the matter will be continued about 60 days as a status conference.

ENTERED 3-20-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 10/23/19:

The court would ask for clarification as to whether Schools First's limited objection is met or not? Assuming there is no objection to confirmation, confirm.

Tentative for 9/4/19:

Set confirmation dates, etc.

Tentative for 8/7/19:

Debtor seeks a continuance for purposes of reading agreement with Schools First. One more extension will be granted to September 4, 2019. Further extensions should not be expected.

The Disclosure is lacking in one important detail. Regarding treatment of SchoolsFirst Class 2D claim, the description is of interest only payments for ten years and then a balloon of $500,470. But no description is given of how this obligation will be met. Refinance? Sale of the property? These issues will likely implicate feasibility questions, but creditors have a right to know as this will impact their vote on the plan.

#17.00 Debtor's Emergency Motion For An Order Authorizing Interim Use Of Cash Collateral Pursuant To 11 USC Section 363
(cont'd from 1-22-20)

Docket 7

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/8/20:

Debtor filed an amended motion for use of cash collateral on 4/1/20. Unfortunately, this amended motion is likely untimely because there is nearly no time for any other party to respond before the hearing date on 4/8. In any case, the new amended motion does not appear to address Banc of California's objections to continued use of cash collateral. Therefore, the amended motion should be continued to allow creditors, including Banc of California, adequate time to respond. In the meantime, Debtor should answer Banc of California's allegations of misusing cash collateral.

Continue for about two weeks on same terms. Debtor to address Banc Of California's points. Appearance is optional.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

#21.00 United States Trustee's Motion for Denial of Discharge Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. Section 727(a)(8)
(cont'd from 4-7-20)

Docket 72

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/8/20:

Here, the Debtor filed her 2018 Chapter 13 Case on September 10, 2018 which then converted to a Chapter 7 Case on February 20, 2020. Under section 348(a) of the Bankruptcy Code the conversion of a case does not effect a change in the date of the filing of the petition. Thus, the filing date of the current chapter 7 case is September 10, 2018. Previously, the Debtor filed a Chapter 7 case on September 9, 2011, and in that Chapter 7 case received a discharge on December 27, 2011. The present case was filed on September 10, 2018 well within the prohibited eight-year period. Therefore, the Debtor is precluded from obtaining a discharge in her current bankruptcy case. Accordingly, the Court should deny Debtor's discharge in the 2018 Case pursuant to §727(a)(8).

Grant. Appearance is optional.

#22.00 Motion for Approval of Compromise Between the Trustee, United States Fire Insurance Company and Kevin Ogar
(cont'd from 4-7-20)

Docket 107

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/8/20:

This is the Motion for Approval of Compromise Between the Trustee, Richard Marshack, United States Fire Insurance Company, and Kevin Ogar brought pursuant to FRBP 9019(a). The motion was initially opposed by Jeffrey R. Wilson and WIBA Insurance Agency, Inc., but the opposition has been apparently resolved by a stipulation filed on March 30, 2020, which is still pending approval.

The salient terms of the proposed compromise agreement are as follows:

1. The Agreement is conditioned upon Bankruptcy Court approval. See Ex. 1 at 10, § 9.
2. US Fire shall pay the Estate Five Thousand ($5,000) within fourteen (14) business days after the "Settlement Effective Date" (as defined in the Agreement). See Ex. 1 at 8-9, § 3.
3. US Fire shall pay Ogar Seven Hundred Fifty Thousand ($750,000) within fourteen (14) business days after the Settlement Effective Date. See Ex. 1 at 8, § 3.
4. The Trustee and Ogar covenant, represent and warrant that any and all alleged claims against US Fire were abandoned, were property of McGuire at the time of the settlement between McGuire and US Fire, and were released by such settlement. The Trustee, Ogar, and any party claiming by or through the Estate will not seek to set aside the abandonment of any alleged claims against US Fire or to set aside or disturb the settlement between US Fire and McGuire. See Ex. 1 at 7-8, § 2.

5. Ogar's proof of claim in this case shall be reduced on a dollar-for-dollar basis by the amounts he is to receive from US Fire in connection with the Agreement. See Ex. 1 at 8, § 3.

6. The Trustee will use his best efforts to prosecute the Debtor's claims against Jeffrey R. Wilson, WIBA Insurance Agency, and all other claims that could have been brought against them in the Coverage Action (and excluding any claims alleged against US Fire). The Trustee has also agreed to consider seeking the authority to employ Taylor-Copeland Law to prosecute any such claims. See Ex. 1 at 9, § 5.

7. As described in the Agreement and subject to the express exceptions in the Agreement, the Trustee and Ogar are releasing claims against US Fire, Ogar is releasing claims against the Trustee, and the Trustee and US Fire are releasing claims against Ogar. See Ex. 1 at 4-7, § 1.

8. Without limiting any exceptions to the releases in the Agreement, the Agreement does not release claims against the Brokers or McGuire and does not have any effect on US Fire's rights against the Brokers. See Ex. 1 at 9-10, §§ 4, 6 & 7.

The compromise agreement appears to be fair and equitable. The motion's analysis of the A&C Properties factors is detailed and well-reasoned. Even before the stipulation resolving the opposition was filed, the opposition stated that it did not disagree with the motion's analysis of the A&C Properties factors. There is no opposition by any other interested party. Therefore, the compromise agreement should be approved, and the motion granted, pending approval of the stipulation filed March 30 (dkt. #116), which approval seems very likely.

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO 5-27-20 AT 11:00 A.M.
PER ORDER APPROVING CLAIM NO, 32-2 AND CLAIM NO 70
ENTERED 4-06-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/25/20:

These nominally are characterized as claims objections. The main disputed issue common to Calendar #s 11, 25, and 28 (which are discussed in a single memorandum because they overlap) are the amounts of the allowable portions of the claims as it appears these claims include accrued interest (and perhaps fees) to which they may not be entitled. Lexington National Insurance Corporation ("Lexington"), one of several surety companies that provided Foreclosure Bonds for foreclosure sales conducted by Debtor in Maryland and Washington D.C. has filed numerous objections to claims against Debtor's estate. The curiosity arises from the fact that several of the claimants have agreed to continue the hearing scheduled for February 25, out to April 7, which explains why so many matters are vacated in this case. However, three creditors, HMC Assets, LLC, as Trustee of the CAM XV Trust (Claim# 32-2), Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc. (Claim #67), and Carrington Mortgage Services (Claim #70) have decided to press ahead in defending their claims, arguing that they are entitled to the entirety of their claims, even though Lexington has made a fairly compelling argument that they are only entitled to a portion of them, as will be discussed further below.

The BP Fisher Law Group, LLP ("Debtor") was a law firm that was primarily in the business of handling residential foreclosures in the Mid-Atlantic region. The Trust Fund Claims (as defined below) that are the subject of the Trust Fund (as defined below) and payment by the Chapter 7 Trustee pursuant to the Trust Fund Settlement (as defined below) arise out of foreclosures conducted by Debtor which allegedly resulted in Debtor receiving monies in trust that it allegedly failed to remit to the appropriate parties.

In connection with the foreclosure sales that were handled by Debtor, there are two types of parties who may possess claims arising out of the alleged misappropriation of foreclosure sale trust fund monies that were held by Debtor: (A) a Buyer who provided a Buyer Deposit to Debtor when the closing on the foreclosure sale did not actually take place for reasons not related to the Buyer's default (i.e., the Buyer Deposit was not returned to them); and (B) a lender in connection with foreclosures sales where a closing took place, an Auditor's Report was ratified, and Debtor did not disburse the net foreclosure sale trust fund monies as required by the ratified Auditor's Report.

Lexington's argues that the trust fund claims are limited to actual trust fund monies that were remitted to Debtor but not paid to rightful claimants. The Buyers are only entitled to a trust fund claim in the exact amount of the Buyer Deposit that was not returned and a lender is only entitled to a trust fund claim in the exact amount of trust fund monies that were not paid to it as set forth in the Foreclosure Court's order ratifying the Auditor's Report. Claimants are not entitled to trust fund claims for any other alleged damages or claims (i.e., no interest, attorney's fees, etc.) – their trust fund claims are limited to the exact amount of trust fund monies that were received by Debtor and later were supposed to be delivered to them. In other words, there is a difference between a genuine trust fund claim, which by its definition is limited to a certain fund misappropriation, and consequential damages claims against the Debtor.

On July 19, 2019, several months after Debtor filed its petition, the Chapter 7 Trustee (formerly Chapter 11 Trustee (the "Trustee") filed his Motion to Approve Compromise Under FRBP 9019 and attached memorandum (the "Trust Fund Motion") (Docket Entry # 146) seeking approval of a settlement (the "Settlement") with Debtor's principal and his related entity Plutos Sama Holdings, Inc. Pursuant to the Trust Fund Motion, $3,412,000 that was held in one of BP's bank accounts were characterized as trust fund monies arising out of various foreclosure sales. As part of the Settlement, BP's principal and related entity delivered $4,000,000 to the Trustee and ultimately the $3,412,000 of trust fund monies (the "Trust Fund") will be used to only pay trust fund claims, i.e., claims arising out of missing foreclosure sale proceeds that were delivered to BP in trust but never delivered to the beneficiary (i.e., a lender, Buyer, junior lienholder, or borrower, as appropriate) (the "Trust Fund Claims"). As the court reads it, this fund was never designed to be a comprehensive payment of all that victims qua creditors might be entitled to as consequential damages; it was designed purely to refund that which were never truly Debtor's monies. On August 14, 2019, the court entered the Order Granting Motion to Approve Compromise Under Rule 9019 (Docket Entry # 195) (the "Settlement Order") establishing the procedure for filing a trust fund proof of claim. Pursuant to the Settlement Order, the trust fund claim bar date was set as September 16, 2019.

Lexington persuasively argues that the Trust Fund Agreement put into place a claim process solely for Trust Fund Claims that permitted creditors whose money was being held in trust by the Debtor (but not remitted to such creditor) to file a Trust Fund Claim in the amount of the trust fund money that the Debtor held, but failed to remit to such creditor. In effect, Lexington asserts, Trust Fund Creditors are being treated differently than general unsecured creditors by way of the Trust Fund Settlement vis a vis the Trust Fund because trust fund money is not property of the bankruptcy estate. See In re Lopez Roman, 599 B.R. 87, 94 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2019) ("funds that are deposited into an escrow account by a debtor, for the benefit of others cannot be characterized as property of the estate"). Therefore, Trust Fund Claimants have a senior interest in trust fund money, but only in the actual amount of trust fund money that the Debtor was holding for Trust Fund Claimants. As such, Lexington argues, Creditors are free to assert that they have suffered additional damages as a result of the failure of the Debtor to timely remit trust fund money, but these additional damages will be nothing more than general unsecured claims against property of the estate.

As the docket for February 25, 2020 shows, there were many hearings on objections to claims scheduled. However, Lexington asserts that it has been successful in resolving many of its objections and will be filing stipulations confirming the actual claim amounts, the three creditors mentioned above being the exceptions.

As to the claims of these three creditors, Lexington argues that they are attempting to include general unsecured damage claims (e.g. interest) as part of their Trust Fund Claims in violation of the Trust Fund Settlement. Further, Lexington argues that some of these creditors are attempting to assert Trust Fund Claims for monies that do not belong to them, and that these creditors do not even know how much of their trust fund monies Debtor received and allegedly failed to remit to them. Select Portfolio (Claim #67) and Carrington (Claim #70) have not been able to confirm the exact amounts or provide adequate documentation to support their claims, which is highly problematic. Lexington has propounded discovery to fill in this missing information.

Obviously, there is a great deal more going on here than can readily be resolved in a summary proceeding like a claims objection. Lexington requests that these hearings be treated as status conferences pursuant to LBR 3007-1(b)(5), which gives the court discretion to "treat the initial hearing as a status conference." This will allow the parties to hash out any additional discovery and evidentiary issues that should be addressed prior to an evidentiary hearing scheduled for April 7, 2020. This does seem to be an appropriate suggestion, as in a case like this, more clarity and more information is preferable. All parties involved would likely benefit from treating these hearings as status conferences in contested proceedings. If the parties are unable to agree, at the continued status conference deadlines for discovery and law and motion will be set, possible referral to mediation discussed and a pretrial conference scheduled.

Continue as status conference.

Docket 10

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/15/20:

This is Defendant, Guy Griffithe's ("Defendant's") motion to dismiss the complaint of Plaintiffs Rebecca Joan Joseph, Jonathan Joseph, Steven Kramer, and Jason Joseph ("Plaintiffs") for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Plaintiffs' complaint contains two causes of action both seeking exception to discharge under 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(2)(A) and (4).

It should also be noted that in the reply brief Defendant raised the issue of subject matter jurisdiction based on this case's connection to the marijuana industry. The issue has been determined in another related adversary proceeding, with the court finding that it did have subject matter jurisdiction over this and the other related adversary proceedings. (For example, see adopted tentative ruling from 3/5/20 in Bagot v. Griffithe, 8:19-ap-01201, incorporated herein by reference.)

1. Motion to Dismiss Standards

When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). "While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556 (2007).

A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id.

2. Factual and Procedural Background

Defendant allegedly induced Plaintiffs to invest $400,000 into Green Acres Pharm, LLC, a marijuana growing venture. Defendant was allegedly the managing member of Green Acres Pharm, LLC and therefore allegedly had knowledge of Green Acres Pharm, LLC's operation, debts and profit. Plaintiffs allege that despite knowing that Green Acres Pharm, LLC was being operated by an inexperienced team, had significant debt and was not profitable, Defendant knowingly made false representations to the contrary to Plaintiffs as part of an elaborate fraudulent scheme to take money from purported investors. According to Plaintiffs, Defendant had no intention of making good on any of his promises to Plaintiffs and went to great lengths to conceal his misrepresentations to continue his fraudulent scheme for as long as possible.

On or about October 29, 2018, Plaintiffs filed a lawsuit entitled Joseph, et al. v. Renewable Technologies Solution, Inc., et al., in San Bernardino County Superior Court Case No. CIVDS 1828143 against Defendant for (1) Securities Fraud (Violation of California Corporations Code Section 25102, et

In response, Defendant filed a chapter 7 petition June 26, 2019. Plaintiffs obtained relief from the automatic stay on September 12, 2019 (to pursue the state court matter) and filed a Complaint to Determine the Dischargeability of Debt against Defendant (the "Adversary Complaint") on September 26, 2019.

3. 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(2)(A) [Actual fraud]

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for money, property, services, or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit, to the extent obtained by— false pretenses, a false representation, or actual fraud, other than a statement respecting the debtor's or an insider's financial condition[.]" The debtor's intent to deceive may be inferred by circumstantial evidence under the 'totality of the circumstances' test. In re Eashai, 87 F.3d 1082, 1087 (9th Cir. 1996). Under the relevant test, the Court "may infer the existence of the debtor's intent not to pay if the facts and circumstances of a particular case present a picture of deceptive conduct by the debtor." Id.

To establish a claim under §523(a)(2)(A), a plaintiff must establish: (1) a representation of fact by the debtor; (2) that was material; (3) that the debtor knew at the time to be false; (4) that the debtor made with the intention of deceiving the creditor; (5) upon which the creditor relied; (6) that the creditor's reliance was reasonable; (7) that damage proximately resulted from the misrepresentation. See Rubin v. West (In re Rubin), 875 F.2d 755, 759 (9th Cir. 1989); see also, Britton v. Price (In re Britton), 950 F.2d 602, 604 (9th Cir. 1991). A claim under this "fraud" exception requires that the claim satisfy the heightened pleading requirements for fraud pursuant to F.R.C.P. 9(b). See In re Jacobs, 403 B.R. 565, 574 (Bankr. N.D.Ill. 2009) (citations

F.R.C.P. 9(b) and F.R.B.P. 7009 state: "In alleging fraud, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally." While intent or knowledge may be averred generally, however, the plaintiff must still plead the events claimed to give rise to an inference of intent or knowledge Devaney v. Chester, 813 F.2d 566, 568 (2d Cir. 1987), which may be accomplished by pleading facts consistent with certain well established "badges of fraud." In re Sharp Int'l Corp., 403F.3d 43, 56 (2d Cir. 2004).

Here, Plaintiffs in their complaint allege in paragraph 30 respecting Defendant's representations:

"b. Green Acres Pharm, LLC was already operating profitable as a company and would be finishing a buildout to expand operations with their investments by the end of 2016; . . . f. Green Acres Pharm, LLC was fully licensed to legally grow marijuana in Washington State and was prepared to immediately prepare and sell oils; g. Green Acres Pharm, LLC had a significant inventory of marijuana plants in cultivation; h. Green Acres Pharm, LLC did not have any debt and owned the buildings on its property; i. Green Acres Pharm, LLC was financially sound and had a market value of over $20M; j. Defendant had a substantial net worth and would back Plaintiffs' investment; . . . l. Green Acres Pharm, LLC was operated by an experienced team of honest people; m. Defendant had extensive experience in running marijuana grow operations; . . . p. Brooks Bailey was also investing in Green Acres Pharm, LLC."

Plaintiffs allege that these were false representations and Defendant knew they were false when they were made. Plaintiffs also allege that these representations were made with intent to induce reliance upon them, which would, in turn, lead Plaintiffs to invest their money. These allegations, taken as true, are enough to both state a claim upon which relief can be granted under §523(a)(2)(A) and to satisfy the heightened specificity requirements

4. 11 U.S.C. 523(a)(4) [breach of fiduciary duty, embezzlement or larceny]

This section provides: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny[.]"

For purposes of § 523(a)(4), embezzlement is defined as "the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom such property has been entrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come." Moore v. United States, 160 U.S. 268, 269, 16 S. Ct. 294, 295, (1885). Further, as explained in Murray v. Woodman (In re Woodman), 451 B.R. 31 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2011), "an intent to deprive the rightful owner of funds only temporarily and not permanently [does] not negate the element of [fraudulent] intent." Id. at 43. "To prevail under § 523(a)(4) for larceny, a creditor must prove that 'the debtor has wrongfully and with fraudulent intent taken property from its owner. Larceny differs from embezzlement in the fact that the original taking of property was unlawful, and without the consent of the injured person.'" King v. Lough (In re Lough), 422 B.R. 727, 735-36 (Bankr. D. Id. 2010). (internal citations omitted)

Here, Plaintiffs' Complaint alleges that Defendant was a managing member of Green Acres Pharm, LLC and CEO, Secretary, CFO and Director of Renewable Technologies Solution, Inc. (Complaint ¶¶ 40-41.) In those capacities, Plaintiffs' complaint alleges that Defendant was in rightfully possession of Plaintiffs' investment money for Green Acres Pharm, LLC and Renewable Technologies Solution, Inc. The Plaintiffs in the complaint then allege that Defendant promised Plaintiffs that all their investment money would be "used to expand the marijuana oil production of Green Acres, and that the build out would be done by the end of 2016." (Adversary Complaint ¶¶ 7, 30b.) However, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant "did not use the Plaintiffs' investment money to finish the build out nor did [Defendant] finish the build out in 2016." (Adversary Complaint ¶ 31b.) Further, in the complaint it is alleged that there is no indication that the investment funds were used in the business at all. Plaintiffs conclude that the investment funds were used by Defendant for a purpose other than the use for which he was entrusted to use said funds. Lastly, as already discussed above, Plaintiffs believe that the circumstances surrounding Plaintiffs' investment funds and Defendant's use of said funds was all part of a fraudulent scheme to bilk investors. Thus, Plaintiffs plead plausible facts to support the elements of embezzlement for purposes of surviving a motion to dismiss.

5. Conclusion

Plaintiffs' complaint does contain sufficiently specific allegations to conform to the basic pleading standards and to inform both the Defendant and the court as to the nature of the action. Again, this is simply a motion to determine whether the complaint has alleged sufficient facts to plausibly support the causes of action, the court makes no determination as to liability based upon these allegations at this time which is beyond the province of Rule 12.

Chapter 7

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant's Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss these three adversary proceedings. Although there are five dismissal motions on calendar in various Griffithe-related adversary proceedings, these three will be addressed in a single memorandum inasmuch as the issues are identical and, unlike the other two, turn on a question of jurisdiction.

Debtor argues for the first time in his Reply that the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 and several cases addressing the intersection of cannabis and bankruptcy, stand for the general proposition that bankruptcy courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims relating to cannabis. Subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, but this does not obviate the overarching concern for due process and the court notes that the Plaintiffs have had no effective opportunity to address this fundamental issue. Moreover, the court would value their input on the question as none of the cases cited by Defendant deal directly with the issue before the court and the court is not persuaded that the cited authorities can be read quite so broadly as Defendant argues. The issue here can be framed as whether the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction in an adversary proceeding where the Plaintiffs seek to have Defendant/Debtor's debts, incurred through alleged malfeasance, adjudicated as nondischargeable despite the underlying cannabis business venture being simultaneously legal under state law and illegal under federal law.

Even though cannabis sale has now been legal in several states for several years (while the federal law remains against) the only case cited by Defendant that comes close to addressing this precise issue is Northbay Wellness Group v. Beyries, 789 F.3d 956 (9th Cir. 2015). There, an attorney stole money from his client, a legal medical marijuana dispensary, and subsequently filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Id. at 958 The dispensary instituted an adversary proceeding seeking to except its claim from discharge, but the bankruptcy court dismissed the adversary complaint under the "unclean hands" doctrine. Id. at 959 The Ninth Circuit reversed and remanded, explaining that the bankruptcy court failed to balance the parties' respective wrongdoings as required under that doctrine:

"The Supreme Court has emphasized, however, that the doctrine of unclean hands 'does not mean that courts must always permit a defendant wrongdoer to retain the profits of his wrongdoing merely because the plaintiff himself is possibly guilty of transgressing the law.' [Johnson v. Yellow Cab [Transit Co.], 321 U.S. [383, 387, 64 S. Ct. 622, 88 L. Ed. 814 (1944)]. Rather, determining whether the doctrine of unclean hands precludes relief requires balancing the alleged wrongdoing of the plaintiff against that of the defendant, and 'weigh[ing] the substance of the right asserted by [the] plaintiff against the transgression which, it is contended, serves to foreclose that right.' Republic Molding Corp. v. B.W. Photo Utils., 319 F.2d 347, 350 (9th Cir. 1963). In addition, the 'clean hands doctrine should not be strictly enforced when to do so would frustrate a substantial public interest.' EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753 (9th Cir. 1991)." Id. at 960.

The Ninth Circuit in Northbay did not analyze the issue of whether the bankruptcy court had subject matter jurisdiction over the exception to discharge action. Neither the cases cited in the briefs nor any that the court has been able to find analyze and/or expressly settle the jurisdiction issue. The closest possible exception that the court has found occurred near the end of the bankruptcy court's original opinion in Northbay where the court borrowed the reasoning in a dissenting opinion written by Judge Noonan in another case. The bankruptcy court stated in pertinent part:

"It is very unseemly for the court to be asked to grant relief to a plaintiff which claims it lost its cash from illegal drug sales by shoving it into envelopes and then delivering it to its attorney, uncounted and undocumented. This is hardly the behavior of a legitimate business. While the conduct of the parties may have been legal under state law, in the eyes of a federal court they were conspiring to sell contraband. They were in pari delicto, and the funds plaintiffs gave to Beyries were the actual proceeds of illegal drug sales. This is not the sort of case which is supposed to darken the doors of a federal court. See Adler v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 219 F.3d 869, 882 (9th Cir. 2000) (Noonan, Circuit Judge, dissenting)." In Re Beyries, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4710, *1, *5 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. Nov. 28, 2011)

In another case, Olson v. Van Meter (In re Olson), 2018 WL 989263 *1 (9th Cir. BAP Feb. 5, 2018), the debtor's estate included commercial property that was partially being rented out to a cannabis dispensary. The issue before the court was whether such an estate could confirm a plan under chapter 13. The bankruptcy court dismissed the entire case sua sponte on grounds that the debtor had been accepting post-petition rent payments from a cannabis dispensary, and therefore, the debtor was involved in ongoing criminal activity that precluded her from seeking bankruptcy relief. On appeal, the BAP vacated the dismissal on grounds that the bankruptcy court had not made specific findings in connection with the dismissal, and remanded the case for such findings. In a concurring opinion, Judge Tighe stated, "[a]lthough debtors connected to marijuana distribution cannot expect to violate federal law in their bankruptcy case, the presence of marijuana near the case should not cause mandatory dismissal." Id. at *7.

The court takes the above language to imply that in the canvassing of available case law, and contrary to Debtor's suggestion, the Olson court could find no blanket rule that categorically obliterates the bankruptcy court's subject matter jurisdiction simply because cannabis may be involved on some level.

The authorities cited above raise several concerns. The court is uncertain about whether it has subject matter jurisdiction and requires further briefing from the parties; this should be the case in any event given the late raising of the issue. The court is also concerned that if, as Debtor argues, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the dischargeability issue, then Debtor is effectively able to hide behind the bankruptcy process and frustrate the creditors he may have defrauded. Worse still, it is at least conceivable that Debtor could even get his debts discharged despite his own purported wrongful conduct creating those debts. On its face, this result seems to offend the fundamental notions of equity that the bankruptcy court is charged with upholding. Stated differently, perhaps the more applicable maxims of equity here are not only unclean hands but: ‘one that seeks equity must do equity’, or ‘equity will not allow a statute to be used as a cloak for fraud.’

Plaintiffs argue that the relief afforded by bankruptcy law is intended to give a fresh start to the honest but unfortunate Debtor. Plaintiffs argue, therefore, that it would be contrary to bankruptcy policy to allow Debtor to discharge his debts to the extent they were incurred by fraud, misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty, or some other unsavory means. The court may well agree. Thus, the doctrine of in pari delicto seems inapposite in this specific context. In the court’s view, gross inequity would result if Debtor could defeat Plaintiffs’ complaints based on this court’s purported lack of subject matter jurisdiction caused by the underlying illicit activity of both Plaintiffs and Debtor, but still avail himself of the protections and benefits of the Bankruptcy Code.

Perhaps the better questions are, should only part of the court’s jurisdiction be jeopardized and if so, what part? Consistent with the above, maybe the proper role of equity is to deny discharge entirely on grounds of unclean hands allowing neither side of the illegal transactions to benefit? The problem here is that no adequate briefing has been received on this central

Tentative for 4/1/20:

The court is left very unclear on the status of the claim for professional fees of Pedersen Law. There appears to have been $842,000 paid. But if a final allowance is being sought here, no showing is made justifying this amount. Moreover, reference is made in Trustee's report over a disagreement.

The court is mindful of its order of January 7, 2020 allowing interim fees, but one presumes that final allowance is now being sought. It looks like the $842,000 was part of a settlement of which the estate netted $75,000 after a $25,000 fee award was deducted. But the court should not be left with the task of combing the record trying to determine what happened in a final report and allowance request.

(cont'd from 1-15-20)

Docket 63

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/15/20:

As the court understands it, the Trustee seeks to modify the plan payments to $3112 effective 12/19 and to increase the base to $4668 plus whatever unremitted tax refunds are discovered for the period of the plan. The upward adjustment is allegedly justified since the debtors are no longer paying on a junior lien. Presumably, this modification is offered as an alternative to dismissal outright for failure to remit tax refunds. The court views this as generous since failure to remit promised tax refunds would itself be grounds for dismissal as a material default. The court will give the debtors the choice: either grant this motion or dismiss unless all tax refunds due are paid as of the hearing. If all missing refunds are paid as of the hearing then the court will continue the hearing to provide an opportunity to explain why there never was any effective increase in disposable income justifying a modification.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

#3.00 Trustee's Motion To Dismiss Case Failure To Complete The Plan Within Its Terms.
(cont'd from 3-18-20)

Docket 77

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/15/20:

The court is unclear why the Trustee believes $34,300 is currently due under the plan. Is this because we have reached (or nearly so) the 5 year mark with this sum needed to complete a percentage? If that is true, how can this deficiency be cured by modification? Further, what's the argument for a last-minute modification? How can it be argued that debtors failed to see this end of the road coming? See #4. No tentative.

Chapter 13

#4.00 Motion under Local Bankruptcy Rule 3015-1 (n) and (w) to modify plan or suspend plan payments

Docket 86

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/15/20:

The debtors propose to modify their plan from 100% to 83%. First, any modification is out of the question without having given the Trustee all of the returns he requests, by the time of the hearing. Second, a better explanation is needed as to why the debtors would wait until the figurative "end of the road" to argue for a downward adjustment on the percentage. Certainly, it cannot be argued that no one saw this coming? If there was some unforeseeable calamity, what was it and when did it become known? Absent this, why the wait? While the percentage actually paid is laudable that cannot by itself justify such a departure from the plan. Otherwise confirmed plans are mere suggestions which everyone will then adjust as the 58th month approaches to conform to what was actually done. No tentative.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

PER ORDER TO CONTINUE EVIDENTIARY HEARING ON DEBTOR'S OBJECTION TO PROOF OF CLAIM OF SHELLPOINT MORTGAGE SERVICING ENTERED 4-13-20

Tentative Ruling:

Debtor, Diane Weinsheimer ("Debtor") disputes a $415,142.08 prepetition arrearage – which includes escrow deficiency for funds advanced of $67,598.15 and projected escrow shortage of $5,787.37. However, because Shellpoint's claim is prima facie valid, the burden shifts to the objector to produce evidence that would negate at least one of the elements essential to the claim's legal sufficiency. In re Consol. Pioneer Mortgage, 178 B.R. 222, 226 (9th Cir. BAP 1995); In re Pugh, 157 B.R. 898, 901 (9th Cir. BAP 1993). Debtor does not reach this threshold. Debtor allegedly misinterprets a Statement regarding alleged surplus, but does not offer evidence to refute an essential claim made by Shellpoint – that Debtor has not been making payments required by the Note and Deed of Trust which is the foundation for that number. The court cannot tell on this record which set of assertions is correct, but because the prima facie validity in consequence is not overcome, the motion as a summary proceeding can only be denied. The court will hear argument whether a further evidentiary hearing in contested proceeding is required.

(cont'd from 2-19-20)

Docket 69

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/15/20:
Same as 2/19/20.

Tentative for 2/19/20:

This is the Trustee's objection to the debtor's enhanced claim of homestead under CCP §704.730(a)(3)(B) against the property commonly known as 80 Gingerwood, Irvine, CA.

The Debtor filed a voluntary chapter 7 petition on January 17, 2019. On the filing date, Debtor indicated on his Schedule I that he was employed but temporarily disabled and that he was receiving State Disability Income (SDI) in the amount of $1,026.29 per month. He indicated that he did not expect an increase or a decrease in income within the year after filing. On

According to Debtor's testimony, he returned to work in mid-May. In the beginning of October, he amended his Schedules I and J and disclosed that he was no longer receiving disability, that he was employed as a chain store merchandizer, and that he had a monthly net income of $835.21. On the same day he amended his Schedules, Debtor filed a motion to convert the case to chapter 13, which went uncontested. There is an underlying implication that the conversion was self-serving inasmuch as the Chapter 7 trustee reportedly showed some signs of interest in selling the Gingerwood property. But we have no real evidence of improper motive such as in Marrama v. Citizens Bank, 549 U.S. 365 (2007).

In early December, Debtor amended his Schedules I and J again. On his amended Schedule I, Debtor indicated that he was still employed but added that he was again temporarily disabled and recorded income only from state disability. On his amended Schedule J, he disclosed that he had a negative net monthly income of $292.80. A few weeks after amending his Schedules I and J, Peyton amended his Schedules A, B, and C. He indicated that the value of his property increased, and he changed his homestead exemption to $175,000. Debtor claimed this increased exemption under CCP § 704.730(a)(3)(B), which requires that a Debtor must be mentally or physically disabled and unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. The Trustee has filed a timely objection.

1. The Debtor Was Permitted to Amend His Schedules

First, we must determine if the Debtor was even able to amend his Schedules. A debtor may amend his petition, list, schedule or statement at any time before the case is closed. FRBP. 1009(a). This is liberally construed, and a debtor does not need court approval before amending his schedules. In re Michael, 163 F.3d 526, 529 (9th Cir. 1998). There does not seem to be any dispute whether Debtor was entitled to amend his Schedules, the conflict is whether he can claim this enhanced homestead exemption.

There is confusion in the papers over who has the burden of proof when a debtor claims an exemption. Debtor argues that the Trustee bears the burden of proving the homestead exemption was not properly claimed. This argument is consistent with FRBP 4003(c). The rule in the Ninth Circuit had been that a debtor's claimed exemption is presumptively valid and the party objecting to a debtor's exemption has the burden of proving that the claimed exemption is improper. In re Carter, 182 F.3d 1027 (9th Cir. 1999).

However, new authority has shifted this burden. The Supreme Court has held, after the ruling in Carter, that state law governs substance claims and burden of proof is substantive given its importance to the outcome of cases. Raleigh v. Ill. Dep't of Revenue, 530 U.S. 15 (2000). The Ninth Circuit, interpreting the ruling of Raleigh, found that the burden of proving state law exemptions should be governed by the appropriate state law. In re Diaz, 547 B.R. 329 (9th Cir. BAP 2016). The court in Diaz acknowledged the holding in Carter, that the burden of proof for claiming exemptions was dictated by federal rule 4003(c), but Raleigh was decided after Carter. The authority now appears to be that when a state law exemption statute specifically allocates the burden of proof to the debtor, Rule 4003(c) does not change that allocation. Id. See also In re Tallerico, 532 B.R. 774, 788 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2015); In re Pashenee, 531 B.R. 834, 837 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2015); In re Barnes, 275 B.R. 889, 898 n.2 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 2002).

This court adopts the burden of proof outlined in Diaz and in accordance with California state law, which dictates the burden of proof is on the party claiming the exemption. Cal Code Civ Proc §703.580. Therefore, Debtor has the burden of proving that the homestead exemption he claimed under CCP §704.730(a)(3)(B) is valid. But is that burden carried?

3. The Preponderance of Evidence Suggests Debtor is Entitled to the Homestead Exemption.

To claim the exemption under CCP §704.730(a)(3)(B) a debtor must be: (1) physically or mentally disabled and (2) unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. A debtor's entitlement to this exemption is determined based on the facts that existed at the time the bankruptcy was filed. Debtor has provided enough evidence to establish that he does have a mental illness. First, at the time he filed his petition he was on temporary disability and was receiving temporary state disability income. Being on disability suggests that he indeed had some mental or physical illness.

Second, Debtor provided testimony from Dr. Boerlin who claims that Debtor suffered and continues to suffer from a psychiatric illness. Debtor has been a patient of Dr. Boerlin for several years and Dr. Boerlin's certification as a Diplomate in psychiatry by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology seems to qualify him to make this determination. Further, Debtor testified that in January 2019 he was discharged from Northbound, an addiction rehabilitation center, due to the severity of his mental health problems. The Trustee has not provided any evidence indicating that Debtor was not deserving of the state disability income or evidence that Dr. Boerlin's testimony is not credible. Therefore, Debtor has met his burden of proof that he did have a mental disability on the petition date.

The more difficult question is whether Debtor has met his burden of proving the second element, that when the bankruptcy was filed, he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. Gainful employment is substantial if it involves significant physical or mental activity and is gainful if it is done for pay or profit, whether or not a profit is realized. In re Rostler, 169 B.R. 408 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1994). The debtor must be physically, mentally, and emotionally able to work enough hours, at a high enough net wage, to contribute materially to his support. In re Neff, No. BAP CC-12-1664-KITAD, 2014 WL 448885 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2014).

The Trustee argues that by filing an amended Schedule I asserting employment income in conjunction with the motion to convert, the Debtor is judicially estopped from arguing that he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment (as of the petition date). These actions are suspicious, and it is possible that he is trying to take advantage of the court by claiming an ability to work at one point and an inability to work at another, whenever it is convenient for him. However, it is also possible that Debtor suffered from a mental illness at the time he filed his petition, attempted to return to work, but was ultimately unable to do so successfully because of his mental illness. The court's concern is to determine Debtor's condition at the time of filing. Returning to work and converting the case to chapter 13, several months after the petition date, is not determinative that Debtor was trying to take advantage of the court or that he was able to engage in substantial gainful employment at the time of filing. Subsequent recovery from a mental illness does not indicate that someone never suffered from a mental illness that prevented them from engaging in substantial gainful employment, particularly as here where relapse seems to have occurred.

It should be said that Debtor's arguments are not totally convincing. Debtor argues that because he was on disability at the time that he filed for bankruptcy he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment. Being on disability may indicate that Debtor was not able to work at Southern Glazers Wine & Spirits however, it does not necessarily indicate that he was not able to engage in any type of substantial gainful employment. Receiving disability from one job is not determinative that he cannot have substantial gainful employment elsewhere.

But Debtor also presents Dr. Boerlin's testimony where he claims that Debtor was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment at the date of filing, which is convincing and is largely not rebutted. The timeline of Debtor's and Dr. Boerlin's relationship is concerning. The court is concerned over what Debtor's condition was on the petition date, and although he has been Dr. Boerlin's patient for several years, we are unsure of when Dr. Boerlin last saw Debtor to diagnose him. Dr. Boerlin testifies that since January 2019, Debtor has been suffering from a disability that prevents him from engaging in substantial gainful employment, but when did Dr. Boerlin make this determination? Debtor became Dr. Boerlin's patient most recently starting on February 20, 2019, which is a month after the petition. Considering Debtor was able to return to substantial gainful employment, albeit shortly, only five months after the petition was filed, it would have been helpful to know when Dr. Boerlin last saw Debtor to form his diagnosis.

Further, according to Debtor's testimony, he was a patient at Northbound rehabilitation center in January 2019, where he was supposedly discharged due to his mental illness. Why did Debtor not include any testimony from employees at the rehabilitation center to corroborate his claim?

Neither party's arguments give a clear indication of Debtor's condition on the date of filing, but the facts preponderate in the Debtor's favor. While being on disability does not prove definitively that Debtor was unable to engage in any substantial gainful employment, it does suggest mental illness prevented him from doing so. Further, while we do not have the exact timeline, Debtor was under Dr. Boerlin's psychiatric care intermittently for several years and met with him only a month after the filing. The court will defer to Dr. Boerlin's medical expertise as he indicates that Debtor was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment at the filing date because of his mental illness. The Trustee's only real argument is that Debtor is trying to take advantage of the court by claiming at one point he could work so he could get his case converted to chapter 13, but is now claiming that he was unable to work so he can claim this homestead exemption. While this inconsistency is noteworthy, it not enough to overcome Debtor's evidence. It is not inconceivable that he was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment on the date of the petition, attempted to go back to work and converted his case to chapter 13, but ultimately had to go back on disability as his relapsed illness overtook him. Evidence of being on disability at the time of filing and the testimony from the seemingly qualified Dr. Boerlin persuades the court, on balance, that at the date of filing Debtor was unable to engage in substantial gainful employment, thus fulfilling the second element of the exemption.

#27.00 Emergency Motion On Kenneth Gharib's Motion For Release

Docket 808

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/15/20:

This is a continued hearing on the motion of contemnor, Kenneth Gharib (sometimes "contemnor"), for immediate release from his confinement at the Santa Ana jail. Mr. Gharib is approaching his fifth year in confinement under this court's order of May 12, 2015 which was entered after he was found in contempt of the court's previous order requiring him to turnover certain monies on deposit constituting proceeds of property of the estate. The court has since the beginning of Mr. Gharib's confinement conducted some twelve or more status conferences. At each such status conference Mr. Gharib has alternatively argued that the money was invested in Iran (and lost there) or that it was for other reasons impossible to return. One recent reason offered via letter to the court by the contemnor's brother, Mr. Rashtabadi, was altogether different, i.e. that the money had all been lost on some vaguely described movie venture, and so could not be returned. None of the varying excuses offered were the least credible and so the court until now has found that Mr. Gharib continues in his contempt and continues to possess the proverbial keys to the jail cell. Consequently, the confinement order, in the court's view, continued to have its proper coercive effect. The confinement order has also thus far withstood several appeals filed by Mr. Gharib. In the recent several status hearings, the argument has changed from impossibility of purging the contempt to denial of due process by reason of the very length of the confinement as no longer "coercive." Until now the court has held the view, and still holds the view, that permissible coercion still applies justifying continued confinement.

But the calculus may have changed in the present motion. The court is vividly aware that Mr. Gharib has not, in these proceedings, been convicted of any crime. He has been held in contempt, a purely civil matter. The only legitimate purpose of the continued confinement is coercion, not punishment. The court does not doubt the point made by the Public Defender on behalf of contemnor, i.e. that 5th and 14th Amendment Due Process governs these proceedings, not the 8th Amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. In that regard, the court also accepts that the court must be even more solicitous that confinement does not pose any increased danger to the contemnor's health for to do so is to add sub rosa a punishment component to the proper coercion component of the confinement order. The court is influenced in these conclusions by Judge Hatter's decisions in Castillo v. Barr, CV 20-00605TJH (AFMx)) citing Smith v. Washington 781 F. App'x 595, 597-98 (9th Cir. 2019) [see Movant's Exhibit "J"] and the similar Fraihat v. Wolf et al., ED CV 20-00590TJH (KSx)(C.D. Cal. March 30, 2020. But the court does accept also the Trustee's argument that none of these authorities are squarely on point as these all dealt with some other form of civil confinement, not the contempt we have here. But the question remains: does Mr. Gharib's continued confinement in Santa Ana jail impose any additional risk beyond the minimum required to continue a proper coercion?

The record is not entirely clear. The Trustee has offered a declaration from the jail manager, Jaime Manriquez. Mr. Manriquez testifies that the jail is well-run, the guards exercise reasonable precautions by wearing gloves, the guards and employees are subject to medical screening, all inmates over 60 (some 6-7), including contemnor, are housed together and contact with Mr. Gharib is minimal. Mr. Manriquez offers the opinion that the jail is a "safe place." All of this may well be true, but no one can deny that COVID-19 is a deadly disease, is highly contagious and has killed over 119,000 people worldwide, with the count rising daily. Contemnor, of course, provides a flood of anecdotal evidence, articles regarding problems with the incarcerated population elsewhere and the alarming statistics we have all become used to in the media. The problem is that although none at the Santa Ana jail at present may exhibit any symptoms, nobody can speak for what tomorrow will bring. This virus has shown an ability to cut down any rosy predictions about our meager barriers to infection. The court must be concerned with whether its order raises the chances of infection on an involuntary basis. If released on furlough, Mr. Gharib, of course, might still become infected. But it will be because of his lack of precaution or his own bad luck, not upon what the court has imposed.

Since coercion is the only legitimate purpose of continued confinement, the court must consider whether alternative means to that end exist until the pandemic has passed. Judging from the papers filed by the Public Defender on his behalf, contemnor is willing to assume certain duties imposed by order as an alternative to continued confinement for a period of 90 days, but subject to an order to return for re-confinement at the end of this period (absent a purging of the contempt in meantime). These furlough duties, if obeyed, will not be easy or comfortable and represent a continued form of coercion; perhaps not as much as a jail cell but not convenient either. Both sides have at the court's request stated the terms of furlough they would accept. Unsurprisingly, each side proposes certain terms that are either too draconian, unworkable, transparently ineffective, or entirely inconsistent with the overall purpose to be accomplished. Comparisons to terms of post-conviction or even pretrial detention in criminal matters such as the Avenatti case are only of marginal assistance. Some points from each side are adopted below but the court has added its own. It is indeed unfortunate that, according to the April 13 email from Douglas Bys of U.S. Pretrial and Probations Services, his agency is not available at all to assist in a monitoring function for the furlough. But the court does the best it can.

Therefore, the court will order a release on furlough to July 30 on the following terms and conditions:

1. This is a furlough, not a determination that the contempt has been purged. Consequently, the liberty granted hereunder is temporary and timed to coincide with likely passing of the most virulent period of the pandemic. It can be withdrawn at any time. The contemnor will present himself back for possible re-incarceration July 30, 2020 at Courtroom 5B at 2:00 p.m., at which time he will be remanded again to custody of the U.S. Marshals, absent other order.
2. Mr. Gharib is remanded to the custody of his son, Aryan Gharib (sometimes "custodian"), who is to undertake all reasonable efforts to see that the terms and conditions of this furlough are implemented. The custodian is to file a document with assistance of the Public Defender, under penalty of perjury, submitting to the jurisdiction of this court, accepting that an order of contempt may be a consequence of violation of this order and specifically acknowledging the terms of this furlough order. Such submission in suitable format is a pre-condition to release of the contemnor on furlough.
3. Since Pretrial and Probation Services is not available, the court seeks the assistance of a neutral to undertake certain monitoring functions required under this order. The Trustee in his sole discretion shall hire an "adjustor" or "agent" such as Independent Management Services, any retired peace officer, or similar person of unquestioned reliability and discretion, to perform the certain limited duties of monitoring specified hereunder. Such hired person or agency shall hereinafter be referred to as "the Monitor." The Monitor shall have the right, by written pre-consent of Mr. Gharib and Aryan Gharib (to be documented by Public Defender), and by reason of this order, to call upon the contemnor at any time, day or night, without prior notice, in person or via telephone, for the sole purpose of verifying the contemnor's presence at the places of confinement as described hereinbelow. Check-in via telephone can occur as often as once per day and in-person visit not more than once per 72-hour period, or as seldomly as the Trustee decides in his discretion. As a "wild card", however, the Monitor may conduct during the period of this furlough up to three unscheduled visits not complying with the 72-hour restriction. The Monitor need not preschedule with either the contemnor or the custodian as the very purpose of this provision is to monitor contemnor's whereabouts. The Trustee will report by filing with this court, copy to the contemnor, any violation reported by the Monitor. It is not desired nor anticipated that the Monitor challenge anyone, nor seek forcible entry, nor in any way disturb the peace. The monitor is to observe all COVID-19 "physical distancing" guidelines such as six foot separation, use of masks and gloves, etc. The function is solely to monitor the presence of the contemnor in the places required by this order. A report that the doorbell went unanswered after repeated attempts, or that contemnor failed to come to the door after request, shall be reported by the Monitor as a probable violation. The cost of the Monitor shall be borne by the Trustee and, after review by the court, is allowable as an administrative claim. Contemnor and Aryan Gharib shall extend every cooperation and courtesy to the Monitor, and any lack of cooperation will be reported to the court.

4. Each covenant and condition in paragraphs 1-16 of "Kenneth Gharib's Proposed Conditions of Temporary Furlough in Light of COVID-19..." filed herein April 10, 2020 are adopted and made part of this Order and will be separately stated in the form of Order resulting from this hearing. However, the 90-day period mentioned at paragraph 16 of that document is modified to coincide with the July 30, 2020 date mentioned at paragraph 1 of this Order, even though that period is

5. Contemnor shall comply with national, state and local public-health orders regarding COVID-19, including California's Executive Order N-33-20 (March 19, 2020) and, if applicable, the Los Angeles "Safer at Home" Order, Public Order Under City of Los Angeles Emergency Authority (March 19, 2020) and/or the Public Health Order issued by the Orange County Health Officer of March 17, 2020, as amended. Indeed, nothing in the order shall be construed as requiring or encouraging anyone to violate applicable health directives.
6. If the contemnor should leave the places of confinement specified in this order for medical visit (the only permissible reason) he is to notify the Monitor and Trustee 24 hours in advance, unless it is a true emergency, in which case contemnor and the custodian shall notify Trustee and the Monitor of the medical visit, the places and times, telephone contact for the medical office, and the nature of the emergency as soon as possible but not later than 8 hours after the visit.
7. In addition to the agreed provisions in Kenneth Gharib's Proposed Conditions..." and consistent therewith, at no time during the period of this furlough shall the contemnor possess or have access to any device allowing access to the internet. He may only use a non-internet connected telephone, one that has been examined and approved by either the Trustee or the Monitor. The Trustee and/or Monitor will be temporarily (for the period of this furlough) added as a party with full access to all calls initiated or received on the said device in addition to (or consistent with) the provisions of ¶11 of contemnor's "Proposed Conditions."

transfer or withdraw, but also not to observe or communicate in any manner with a financial institution nor to any third party regarding access to the financial system nor to execute any transaction on his behalf or at his behest.

9. In the "Kenneth Gharib's Proposed Conditions..." mention is made that custodian intends to obtain a new residence in near future, to which contemnor will travel and reside after the initial COVID-19 quarantine period. Custodian is to inform the Trustee of the address before the lapse of the quarantine period and Trustee and/or the Monitor will be given access on reasonable notice to inspect this location (observing COVID-19 physical distancing directives) before contemnor takes up residence, and, aside from the Monitor's duties mentioned above, on reasonable notice after his residence commences. The court expects that such location will have a separate room for contemnor to reside, and entrance and exit only via a common door, such that contemnor's exit should be observed by the custodian. If the custodian should observe a violation of this order by contemnor, custodian has the duty to immediately contact the Trustee and Monitor. Failure to do so will be construed as a violation of this order by custodian.
10. The parties will exchange all telephone numbers, addresses, email addresses and contact means as necessary to comply with this order.

The court harbors no illusion that these terms are foolproof. They will require a degree of cooperation and good faith. Any violation or suspected violation can be reported by the Trustee and an emergency hearing scheduled on minimal or, if the proper showing is made, no notice to contemnor. A violation found by the court may result in immediate arrest and re-incarceration and/or further order of contempt. The parties are invited to comment on each of the above, and/or to

#3.10 Amended Motion for Default Judgment

Docket 25

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/22/20:

There is an adequate showing in prove-up of a monetary sum owed under a breach of contract theory to Plaintiff of $61,127.61. There is virtually no showing of why this sum is non-dischargeable in bankruptcy under any provision of §523(a)(2), (4) or (6). Moreover, the form of judgment submitted ignores this issue as well. If all that is desired at this point is allowance of a claim against the estate, that sum can be allowed. But since this complaint was drafted as a non-dischargeability complaint, and not merely as a breach of contract action (which is normally dischargeable), the court suspects something more is requested. Plaintiff should resubmit with evidence supporting the non-dischargeable nature of the obligation. Because this is a default, Plaintiff need not submit anything elaborate as it is aided by the doctrine of "deemed admitted". But at least something would assist the court in finding in favor of Plaintiff and in the interest of justice. A further hearing is not necessarily required as supporting evidence may be submitted in chambers.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/10/20:

The timing in this case is muddled because two summons were issued and the deadline to respond to the reissued summons is after the hearing on the status conference in this case. It might be best to continue this status conference to March 17, 2020 at 10:00 a.m. so that the court can evaluate any response that is filed. If no response is received, the order for relief should be entered.

#8.00 Emergency Motion On Kenneth Gharib's Motion For Release
(cont' from 4-15-30)

Docket 808

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/22/20:

This is a continued hearing on the contemnor's motion for a lifting of the incarceration order that this court has had in place for nearing five years. As is oft repeated, this is not a criminal proceeding, but rather a question of civil contempt. Combined with the onslaught of COVID-19 and all that it implies, the court finds itself in uncharted territory. The court incorporates its tentative decision from last Wednesday, April 15, and repeats it here verbatim. To be clear, nothing in this tentative should be read to suggest that anything in the court's prior tentative is overruled or otherwise altered. So, it is with considerable disappointment that, rather than considering the wording of an agreed order for immediate entry, as expected, the court reads briefs from both sides arguing yet new issues, seeming to go off on tangents never contemplated in the earlier decision and seeming to again dispute the whole idea of a furlough. As the court earlier stated, the solution is not perfect. It may not even be very good. But it's the best we can do. The court will address the major points raised this time around, in hope that an actual order will result.

1. Mr. Richards is not a prosecutor. Of course he represents an interested party with a pecuniary interest, the Trustee. That is so obvious that it needs no re-stating. That might have some relevance were there any valid comparison to the role of prosecutor. But the court's furlough order does not and never has envisioned any prosecutorial role for Mr. Richards. The court supposes the argument is raised because under the proposed order some minor discretion is afforded to the Trustee acting through Mr. Richards. But the discretion is only within strict parameters set by the court and only applies in evaluating information to be presented but not yet present in the record. There is nothing nefarious or even unusual about this. So, the comparison to a prosecutor is very wide of the mark.

2. An issue is raised over whether the Trustee must see the lease of the new premises being rented by the custodian and inspect same, rather than rely upon a "virtual tour" video or contemnor's or custodian's description. The court was clear; the trustee has a right to inspect before contemnor is released. The layout and suitability are too important to the overall success of this furlough to do otherwise. On the question of whether Mr. Richards or the Trustee have some sinister motive thereby to sabotage or interfere with the lease, the court cannot imagine such a motive and, should such unprofessional behavior occur, there would be literal hell to pay. The Trustee knows this.
3. The parties regrettably either could not agree to the identity of a monitor, or the contemnor or custodian declined to pay half. Fine. Mr. Ni Castro is confirmed as "monitor" and his fees and expenses will be at the sole expense of the estate. Yes, the contemnor is correct; the monitor is a neutral and shall file any and all reports directly with the court, with copies sent to both sides. Mr. Ni Castro is known to the court and is a prominent member of the insolvency bar. The court has every confidence he would discharge his duties as a neutral as called for in the furlough order.
4. There is a dispute, apparently, over contemnor's driver's license and passport. Simple. The driver's license will be turned over to the custody of Public Defender pending further order. The court cannot see a reason for contemnor to have this in his possession pending conclusion of this furlough in any event. The passport is treated the same. If the passport is lost, which seems to be implied in the papers, written attestation of such loss under penalty of perjury will be filed and contemnor will obtain a certificate of cancellation from the Secretary of State.

5. A new issue has been raised about an ankle monitor. This was only obliquely raised before in the context of Pretrial Services possibly being involved. We now know that agency will not be involved; yet, it seems to the court a good idea. As such, the court will hear argument as to whether the wearing of an ankle monitor should be mandatory. It would be at the expense of the estate. As a "bargaining chip" to maintain symmetry, and as an incentive to consent, the "in person" check ins by the monitor would be reduced from once per 72 hours to once per week (measured Sunday 12:00 a.m. to Sunday 11:59 p.m.) but saving the three "wild cards" mentioned in the last tentative. Contemnor is advised that an ankle monitor may still be imposed without his consent, in which case the original protocol will govern.
6. Contemnor repeats his argument that the furlough order would be in some ways even more oppressive than detention orders imposed on criminal defendants awaiting trial or sentencing. While that might be true in some respects, contemnor misses that this is his request for a furlough, which the court has reluctantly considered despite some glaring risks. If he thinks the conditions are too oppressive, he can withdraw his motion and ride out the pandemic in Santa Ana jail.

The court will hear arguments over whether any of these conditions are for some reason unjust or unworkable. Given the delays, it now regrettably appears that actual implementation of the order is still some days away. Certain documents, inspections and details still need to be accomplished/reviewed. The court will hear argument as to whether each point must be resolved before furlough is granted and whether an agreed time and place can be now established, as coordination with the Marshals and Santa Ana jail must still be undertaken. Alternatively, another week's delay may occur to Wednesday the 29th.

Tentative as above.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Tentative for 4/15/20:

This is a continued hearing on the motion of contemnor, Kenneth Gharib (sometimes "contemnor"), for immediate release from his confinement at the Santa Ana jail. Mr. Gharib is approaching his fifth year in confinement under this court's order of May 12, 2015 which was entered after he was found in contempt of the court's previous order requiring him to turnover certain monies on deposit constituting proceeds of property of the estate. The court has since the beginning of Mr. Gharib's confinement conducted some twelve or more status conferences. At each such status conference Mr. Gharib has alternatively argued that the money was invested in Iran (and lost there) or that it was for other reasons impossible to return. One recent reason offered via letter to the court by the contemnor's brother, Mr. Rashtabadi, was altogether different, i.e. that the money had all been lost on some vaguely described movie venture, and so could not be returned. None of the varying excuses offered were the least credible and so the court until now has found that Mr. Gharib continues in his contempt and continues to possess the proverbial keys to the jail cell. Consequently, the confinement order, in the court's view, continued to have its proper coercive effect. The confinement order has also thus far withstood several appeals filed by Mr. Gharib. In the recent several status hearings, the argument has changed from impossibility of purging the contempt to denial of due process by reason of the very length of the confinement as no longer "coercive." Until now the court has held the view, and still holds the view, that permissible coercion still applies justifying continued confinement.

But the calculus may have changed in the present motion. The court is vividly aware that Mr. Gharib has not, in these proceedings, been convicted of any crime. He has been held in contempt, a purely civil matter. The only legitimate purpose of the continued confinement is coercion, not punishment. The court does not doubt the point made by the Public Defender on behalf of contemnor, i.e. that 5th and 14th Amendment Due Process governs these proceedings, not the 8th Amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. In that regard, the court also accepts that the court must be even more solicitous that confinement does not pose any increased danger to the contemnor's health for to do so is to add sub rosa a punishment component to the proper coercion component of the confinement order. The court is influenced in these conclusions by Judge Hatter's decisions in Castillo v. Barr, CV 20-00605TJH (AFMx)) citing Smith v. Washington 781 F. App'x 595, 597-98 (9th Cir. 2019) [see Movant's Exhibit "J"] and the similar Fraihat v. Wolf et al., ED CV 20-00590TJH (KSx)(C.D. Cal. March 30, 2020. But the court does accept also the Trustee's argument that none of these authorities are squarely on point as these all dealt with some other form of civil confinement, not the contempt we have here. But the question remains: does Mr. Gharib's continued confinement in Santa Ana jail impose any additional risk beyond the minimum required to continue a proper coercion?

The record is not entirely clear. The Trustee has offered a declaration from the jail manager, Jaime Manriquez. Mr. Manriquez testifies that the jail is well-run, the guards exercise reasonable precautions by wearing gloves, the guards and employees are subject to medical screening, all inmates over 60 (some 6-7), including contemnor, are housed together and contact with Mr. Gharib is minimal. Mr. Manriquez offers the opinion that the jail is a "safe place." All of this may well be true, but no one can deny that COVID-19 is a deadly disease, is highly contagious and has killed over 119,000 people worldwide, with the count rising daily. Contemnor, of course, provides a flood of anecdotal evidence, articles regarding problems with the incarcerated population elsewhere and the alarming statistics we have all become used to in the media. The problem is that although none at the Santa Ana jail at present may exhibit any symptoms, nobody can speak for what tomorrow will bring. This virus has shown an ability to cut down any rosy predictions about our meager barriers to infection. The court must be concerned with whether its order raises the chances of infection on an involuntary basis. If released on furlough, Mr. Gharib, of course, might still become infected. But it will be because of his lack of precaution or his own bad luck, not upon what the court has imposed.

Since coercion is the only legitimate purpose of continued confinement, the court must consider whether alternative means to that end exist until the pandemic has passed. Judging from the papers filed by the Public Defender on his behalf, contemnor is willing to assume certain duties imposed by order as an alternative to continued confinement for a period of 90 days, but subject to an order to return for re-confinement at the end of this period (absent a purging of the contempt in meantime). These furlough duties, if obeyed, will not be easy or comfortable and represent a continued form of coercion; perhaps not as much as a jail cell but not convenient either. Both sides have at the court's request stated the terms of furlough they would accept. Unsurprisingly, each side proposes certain terms that are either too draconian, unworkable, transparently ineffective, or entirely inconsistent with the overall purpose to be accomplished. Comparisons to terms of post-conviction or even pretrial detention in criminal matters such as the Avenatti case are only of marginal assistance. Some points from each side are adopted below but the court has added its own. It is indeed unfortunate that, according to the April 13 email from Douglas Bys of U.S. Pretrial and Probations Services, his agency is not available at all to assist in a monitoring function for the furlough. But the court does the best it can.

Therefore, the court will order a release on furlough to July 30 on the following terms and conditions:

1. This is a furlough, not a determination that the contempt has been purged. Consequently, the liberty granted hereunder is temporary and timed to coincide with likely passing of the most virulent period of the pandemic. It can be withdrawn at any time. The contemnor will present himself back for possible re-incarceration July 30, 2020 at Courtroom 5B at 2:00 p.m., at which time he will be remanded again to custody of the U.S. Marshals, absent other order.
2. Mr. Gharib is remanded to the custody of his son, Aryan Gharib (sometimes "custodian"), who is to undertake all reasonable efforts to see that the terms and conditions of this furlough are implemented. The custodian is to file a document with assistance of the Public Defender, under penalty of perjury, submitting to the jurisdiction of this court, accepting that an order of contempt may be a consequence of violation of this order and specifically acknowledging the terms of this furlough order. Such submission in suitable format is a pre-condition to release of the contemnor on furlough.
3. Since Pretrial and Probation Services is not available, the court seeks the assistance of a neutral to undertake certain monitoring functions required under this order. The Trustee in his sole discretion shall hire an "adjustor" or "agent" such as Independent Management Services, any retired peace officer, or similar person of unquestioned reliability and discretion, to perform the certain limited duties of monitoring specified hereunder. Such hired person or agency shall hereinafter be referred to as "the Monitor." The Monitor shall have the right, by written pre-consent of Mr. Gharib and Aryan Gharib (to be documented by Public Defender), and by reason of this order, to call upon the contemnor at any time, day or night, without prior notice, in person or via telephone, for the sole purpose of verifying the contemnor's presence at the places of confinement as described hereinbelow. Check-in via telephone can occur as often as once per day and in-person visit not more than once per 72-hour period, or as seldomly as the Trustee decides in his discretion. As a "wild card", however, the Monitor may conduct during the period of this furlough up to three unscheduled visits not complying with the 72-hour restriction. The Monitor need not preschedule with either the contemnor or the custodian as the very purpose of this provision is to monitor contemnor's whereabouts. The Trustee will report by filing with this court, copy to the contemnor, any violation reported by the Monitor. It is not desired nor anticipated that the Monitor challenge anyone, nor seek forcible entry, nor in any way disturb the peace. The monitor is to observe all COVID-19 "physical distancing" guidelines such as six foot separation, use of masks and gloves, etc. The function is solely to monitor the presence of the contemnor in the places required by this order. A report that the doorbell went unanswered after repeated attempts, or that contemnor failed to come to the door after request, shall be reported by the Monitor as a probable violation. The cost of the Monitor shall be borne by the Trustee and, after review by the court, is allowable as an administrative claim. and any lack of cooperation will be reported to the court.

4. Each covenant and condition in paragraphs 1-16 of "Kenneth Gharib's Proposed Conditions of Temporary Furlough in Light of COVID-19..." filed herein April 10, 2020 are adopted and made part of this Order and will be separately stated in the form of Order resulting from this hearing. However, the 90-day period mentioned at paragraph 16 of that document is modified to coincide with the July 30, 2020 date mentioned at paragraph 1 of this Order, even though that period is slightly more than 90 days.
5. Contemnor shall comply with national, state and local public-health orders regarding COVID-19, including California's Executive Order N-33-20 (March 19, 2020) and, if applicable, the Los Angeles "Safer at Home" Order, Public Order Under City of Los Angeles Emergency Authority (March 19, 2020) and/or the Public Health Order issued by the Orange County Health Officer of March 17, 2020, as amended. Indeed, nothing in the order shall be construed as requiring or encouraging anyone to violate applicable health directives.
6. If the contemnor should leave the places of confinement specified in this order for medical visit (the only permissible reason) he is to notify the Monitor and Trustee 24 hours in advance, unless it is a true emergency, in which case contemnor and the custodian shall notify Trustee and the Monitor of the medical visit, the places and times, telephone contact for the medical office, and the nature of the emergency as soon as possible but not later than 8 hours after the visit.
7. either the Trustee or the Monitor. The Trustee and/or Monitor will be temporarily (for the period of this furlough) added as a party with full access to all calls initiated or received on the said device in addition to (or consistent with) the provisions of ¶11 of contemnor's "Proposed Conditions."

8. At no time during the period of this furlough shall the contemnor have access in any manner to the banking system, not only to not deposit, transfer or withdraw, but also not to observe or communicate in any manner with a financial institution nor to any third party regarding access to the financial system nor to execute any transaction on his behalf or at his behest.
9. In the "Kenneth Gharib's Proposed Conditions..." mention is made that custodian intends to obtain a new residence in near future, to which contemnor will travel and reside after the initial COVID-19 quarantine period. Custodian is to inform the Trustee of the address before the lapse of the quarantine period and Trustee and/or the Monitor will be given access on reasonable notice to inspect this location (observing COVID-19 physical distancing directives) before contemnor takes up residence, and, aside from the Monitor's duties mentioned above, on reasonable notice after his residence commences. The court expects that such location will have a separate room for contemnor to reside, and entrance and exit only via a common door, such that contemnor's exit should be observed by the custodian. If the custodian should observe a violation of this order by contemnor, custodian has the duty to immediately contact the Trustee and Monitor. Failure to do so will be construed as a violation of this order by custodian.
10. The parties will exchange all telephone numbers, addresses, email addresses and contact means as necessary to comply with this order.

The court harbors no illusion that these terms are foolproof. They will require a degree of cooperation and good faith. Any violation or the court fails to see the waste of resources argument. In any event, the Trustee cannot expect to hold everyone else up while he makes up his mind. The parties were reportedly exploring a stipulation; so, where are we?

Appearance is optional.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 3/24/20:

The movant wants to proceed with trial in New Jersey although he has filed a proof of claim which, absent objection, would be allowed as a matter of course. Complicating matters is a reported affirmative defense / cross-claim. Trustee is uncertain whether there will be a dividend in the case making engagement of counsel likely a waste of resources. The problem arises in that Trustee does not want to take a definitive position, and that is problematic as we cannot detain the other parties indefinitely or unnecessarily.

Grant effective 60 days from entry of this order unless the Trustee affirmatively seeks an extension of the stay. Only liquidation of claims is allowed in any case, no levies absent further order.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters other than evidentiary hearings. Chapter 13

This is the motion for relief of stay brought by JP Morgan Chase Bank.

It is alternatively characterized as a request for adequate protection. The debtors are almost 4 years into their five-year plan. But for reasons never explained in the papers, the debtors have not paid property taxes on the subject property commonly known as 16317 Filbert Street, Fountain Valley, CA. for either 2018 or 2019. With penalties and fees according to the bank this is now a $5942.16 obligation and climbing owed to the County. Both sides at various points characterize the question solely as one of "adequate protection." From this premise debtors argue that the bank can't complain since it is in first position securing about $245,000 on a property worth, according to debtor, $650,000. So, as the argument goes, the debtors could continue not paying their property taxes for several years to come and still not threaten, at least mathematically, to put the bank into an unsecured position even though by statute all liens are junior to County taxes. So, one supposes, under this argument the bank must simply lump it?

The court suggests many of the premises behind these arguments are wrong or wrong-headed. First, 11 U.S.C. §362(d)(1) provides relief of stay "for cause including lack of adequate protection..." In other words, "cause" can be based on things other than a narrow calculation of whether the complaining creditor is adequately protected. "Cause" can also go the behavior of the debtors including issues of bad faith. The court presumes that there is a covenant in the trust deed requiring the debtors to keep current on property taxes. The court also presumes that the confirmed plan required that debtors perform ongoing obligations under the deed of trust without modification. So, what we have in effect are both breaches of those covenants and post-petition plan defaults. That is consequently very much a "cause" question, and the possibly lackadaisical tone emanating from debtors on this point is very concerning. It should be well-known by now that this court takes a very dim view of post-confirmation plan defaults. Moreover, relief of stay on account of a Chapter 13 plan default may just the sort of situation for which the deliberately broad and flexible "for cause" provision

Of course, the court would prefer debtors complete their plan and keep their home. A large step in that direction, however, will have to be an attitude adjustment and recognition that remedial steps must be taken immediately as that goal is in some jeopardy. The court will hear argument on the points raised.

#17.00 Confirmation of Chapter 11 Plan (set from disclosure stmt hrg held 2-26-20)

Docket 87

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/29/20:

This plan is likely confirmable. Debtor notes that the absolute priority rule likely finds unusual cation here: mainly due to the fact that there is no dissenting class of unsecured creditors. Is this true as to Class 2A, which did not vote? Thus, Debtor concludes that the absolute priority rule is probably inapplicable in the usual sense. Instead: Debtor asserts that he will be providing "new value" in the amount of $5,000. By doing so, Debtor argues, the present equity owner may fully retain his equity interests in the reorganized debtor even though there is no real "dissenting class" to accommodate. (See Debtor's confirmation brief at pp. 24-26).

Although Debtor's plan is likely confirmable, it must be amended to take out subsection (D) from section III of the plan. This subsection, entitled "Termination of Obligations In The Event of Unprocessed Payments" states:

"Any cash, checks or other property which is distributed pursuant to the Plan which is: a) returned as undeliverable without a proper forwarding address; b) which was not mailed or delivered because of the absence of a proper address to which to mail or deliver; c) any payment which is not negotiated within 60 days of the date of such check shall be paid over to Reorganized Debtor and Reorganized Debtor shall have no further obligations to such creditor. If the obligation of the creditor is secured against collateral and terminated under this provision, the lien securing the obligation shall also be void and terminated." (Plan: pp. 18-19)

This provision has created problems when it has surfaced in other cases. Debtor's counsel should be reminded that such a provision has previously been found to be offensive to equity (as counsel should remember). As such,

Employment in near future is the lynchpin to continued presence in Chapter 11. Without that, it appears liquid assets will continue to dwindle. 9 months is given as the horizon, but this is excessive. 90 days is more likely. Continue once more to October 30, 2019.

The UST's comments are all well taken and each should be addressed. Further, while unemployed the court cannot see how feasibility can be shown. The court will hear argument as to what might be an appropriate hiatus until the court converts the case for lack of reasonable prospect of reorganization.

P.S. The hiatus suggested at the end of debtor's response is acceptable for at least the first 90 days. Continue to a date near then.

The U.S. Trustee's comments are well-taken and must be addressed before this version of the disclosure could be approved. Indeed, references are made to the Plan to accompany the disclosure, but the plan itself was not amended and references to the plan in the amended disclosure make the whole confusing. (cont'd from 2-26-20)

Docket 54

 VACATED  REASON: CONTINUED TO 7-22-20 AT 11:00 A.M.
PER ORDER APPROVING STIPULATION TO CONTINUE HEARINGS
ENTERED 4-23-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the motion of Judgment Creditor, Placentia Development Company, LLC ("PDC") to dismiss Bridgemark Corporation, LLC's ("Debtor's") Chapter 11 case pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §1112(b) and/or motion for relief from the automatic stay pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §362 (action in nonbankruptcy forum). The motion is opposed by Debtor. No other party has filed any responsive papers.

1. Basic Background Facts

Debtor filed its Petition on January 14, 2020. PDC is the primary creditor owed approximately $42.5 million on account of a state court judgment entered after years of litigation over Debtor's unauthorized use of PDC's land for purposes of extracting oil. Debtor's principal, Robert J. Hall, testified under oath that the company does not have the ability to pay the judgment debt because Debtor's business involves a finite resource of constantly diminishing value. Debtor's second largest non-insider creditor is owed less than $25,000, and all of Debtor's other debts combined add up, at most, to a few hundred thousand. PDC reports that it is offering to acquire all such legitimate, non-insider debts at par. In other words, the judgment owed to PDC accounts for approximately 99.8% of the estate's debt. There do not appear to be any other debts listed as disputed, contingent, or unliquidated. The authorizing resolution appended to Debtor's Petition admits that the purpose of this chapter 11 filing is to allow Debtor a stay pending appeal because the Debtor (and one presumes, its principals) cannot afford a supersedeas bond. During the punitive damages portion of the state court trial this testimony was elicited:

"We cannot pay the 27 million We have no ability to pay any of this. ... I don't care how you do it. There's just no way around that. We don't have the ability to pay it and operate a business. It's done." Trial Tr. (Ex. B to Kibler Declaration) at 3125:9-13."

Mr. Hall also testified that at best, Bridgemark might theoretically be able to pay the $27 million in compensatory damages at $1 million per year, interest-free, over 27 years. See Id. at 3156:20-23 ["We can't pay it. ... If they would let us pay a million dollars a year for 27 years with no interest, we might be able to work it out."] But as Mr. Hall also testified, Bridgemark is built on "an asset that's declining in value every year.... It just goes down and down and down." Id. at 3113:8-12.

By prior motion the court was informed that Debtor will attempt post judgment motions to reduce the judgment and/or obtain a new trial. No information is provided as to the status of any of those.

The court is also informed that PDC has filed a state court lawsuit against members of the Hall family, who are 100% equity holders of Debtor, alleging, among other things, that the Halls used Debtor as a vehicle to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars to affiliated entities in the form of "management fees" or "consulting fees," which the affiliated entities then – through non-arms' length "loans" to the Halls – used to purchase multi-million-dollar homes, extravagant cars and furnishings, valuable pieces of art, and luxury yachts for personal use and benefit.

Section 1112(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides:

"[O]n request of a party in interest, and after notice and a hearing, the court shall convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 or dismiss a case under this chapter, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate, for cause unless the court determines that the appointment under section 1104(a) of a trustee or an examiner is in the best interests of creditors and the estate."

The statute includes a non-exhaustive list of certain types of "cause," including "substantial or continuing loss to or diminution of the estate and the absence of a reasonable likelihood of rehabilitation," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(A), and "gross mismanagement of the estate," Id. § 1112(b)(4)(B).

Similarly, section 362(d) provides that "[o]n request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, the court shall grant relief from the stay provided under subsection (a) of this section ... for cause," and also provides the non-exhaustive example of "lack of adequate protection."

Given the non-exhaustive nature of "cause" referenced in both sections of the Code, courts have read the term "cause" to include bankruptcy filings that are not appropriate invocations of federal bankruptcy jurisdiction – such as filings in which the avowed purpose of the bankruptcy petition is to avoid posting an appellate bond, or where the petition seeks merely to move what is essentially a two-party dispute from a state court to a federal bankruptcy court. As a matter of shorthand, the case law interpreting §§362(d)(1) and 1112(b) often refer to these types of cause as dismissals for "bad faith" or for lack of "good faith." See generally Marsch v. Marsch (In re Marsch), 36 F.3d 825, 828 (9th Cir. 1994) [employing this terminology, but cautioning that it is misleading: "While the case law refers to these dismissals as dismissals for 'bad faith' filing, it is probably more accurate in light of the precise language of section 1112(b) to call them dismissals 'for cause.'"]. Thus, the shorthand phrase "good faith" (which does not appear in the statute) does not turn on an inquiry into subjective motivations, thoughts, or feelings. Instead, the question is whether a particular bankruptcy filing transgresses "several, distinct equitable limitations that courts have placed on Chapter 11 filings" in order to "deter filings that seek to achieve objectives outside the legitimate scope of the bankruptcy laws." Id.

In this context, whether there is "cause" for dismissal or relief from stay "depends on an amalgam of factors and not upon a specific fact." In re Mense, 509 B.R. 269, 277 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2014). Four pertinent factors include whether the debtor has unsecured creditors, cash flow, or sources of income to sustain a feasible plan of reorganization, and whether the case is "essentially a two-party dispute capable of prompt adjudication in state court." In re St. Paul Self Storage Ltd. P'ship, 185 B.R. 580, 582–83 (9th Cir. BAP 1995). Courts are particularly suspicious of filings in which the express purpose of the chapter 11 petition is to stay execution of a judgment without an appellate bond. See e.g., In re Integrated Telecom Express, Inc., 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004) ("[I]f there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court."). In such cases, courts consider some or all of the following factors to determine whether bankruptcy jurisdiction is being properly invoked:

- "Whether the debtor had financial problems on the petition date, other than the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor has relatively few unsecured creditors, other than the holder of the adverse judgment";
- "Whether the debtor intends to pursue an effective reorganization within a reasonable period of time, or whether the debtor is unwilling or unable to propose a meaningful plan until the conclusion of the litigation"; and
- "Whether assets of the estate are being diminished by the combined ongoing expenses of the debtor, the chapter 11 proceedings, and prosecution of the appeal." In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 280 (footnotes and citations omitted).

"The bankruptcy court is not required to find that each factor is satisfied or even to weigh each factor equally. Rather, the ... factors are simply tools that the bankruptcy court employs in considering the totality of the circumstances." In re Prometheus Health Imaging, Inc., 2015 WL 6719804, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Nov. 2, 2015) (citations, internal quotation marks, and brackets omitted). Indeed, "[a] bankruptcy court may find one factor dispositive or may find bad faith even if none of the factors are present." In re Greenberg, 2017 WL 3816042, at *5 (9th Cir. BAP Aug. 31, 2017) (citing Mahmood v. Khatib (In re Mahmood), 2017 WL 1032569, at *4 (9th Cir. BAP Mar. 17, 2017)).

3. Was Debtor's Petition Filed for a Proper Purpose?

PDC argues that Debtor's petition is a textbook bad faith filing. In support PDC cites In re Integrated Telecom Express, 384 F.3d 108, 128 (3d Cir. 2004), where the court stated bluntly: "if there is a 'classic' bad faith petition, it may be one in which the petitioner's only goal is to use the automatic stay provision to avoid posting an appeal bond in another court." PDC also cites In re Casey, 198 B.R. 910, 917–18 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1996) for the proposition that the "use [of] bankruptcy to defeat the state law appeal bond requirement" is not a "legitimate bankruptcy purpose."

In response Debtor argues that at least some courts have held that a chapter 11 filing can properly substitute for posting an appeal bond. For example, Debtor cites Marshall v. Marshall (In re Marshall), 721 F.3d 1032, 1048 (9th Cir. 2013) where the court found:

Here, unlike in Marsch and Boynton, the record suggests that Howard and Ilene's liquid assets were probably insufficient to satisfy the judgment or cover the cost of a supersedeas bond. The bankruptcy court found that the Fraud Judgment amounted to over $12 million plus interest, that the "custom" in Texas was to set appeal bonds at 150% of the judgment, and that Howard did not have sufficient liquid assets to post a bond of that size. Although the record does not invariably indicate that the Debtors could not finance a supersedeas bond, we cannot say that the bankruptcy court's determination was clearly erroneous. Moreover, notwithstanding their ability to finance a bond, Howard and Ilene's inclusion of the Fraud Judgment in their initial Plan suggests that they filed their bankruptcy petition for the proper purpose of reorganization, not as a mere ploy to avoid posting the bond.

Debtor argues that the language quoted above, and others expressing similar sentiment, is applicable to our case. Debtor also points out that it is not attempting to avoid posting an appeal bond, it simply cannot do so, which Debtor argues is a critical distinction.

PDC argues that the cases cited by Defendant must be viewed according to their unique factual context, rather than relying solely on the ultimate result. For example, PDC points out that in Marshall, the judgment creditor who moved to dismiss the case as a bad faith filing had already missed the claims bar date (which was November 15, 2002) when he filed the motion to dismiss (on December 13, 2002). See In re Marshall, 298 B.R. 670, 674 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2003). At the time the motion to dismiss was filed, the debtors had already proposed a plan that would pay every other creditor with timely claims in full. Id. It was in this context that the Circuit court held that the bankruptcy court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to dismiss for bad faith. Indeed, the Marshall Circuit court stated, "we agree with the bankruptcy court that '[p]erhaps the most compelling grounds for denying a motion to dismiss grounded on bad faith is the determination that a reorganization plan qualifies for confirmation.'" Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681)). PDC persuasively argues that it would be inappropriate to infer a broader rule from Marshall. PDC argues with some persuasion that the other cases cited by Debtor were ones in which the courts based their holdings on the unique circumstances before them and did not articulate rules of general applicability.

Similarly, on the relief of stay question, Debtor's citation to In re Badax, LLC, 608 B.R. 730 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2019), also appears to be misplaced. Debtor takes a small section of the opinion where the court stated that the conclusion of bad faith was not based solely on the debtor's failure to obtain a bond, but rather based on a totality of the circumstances. Id. at 741. However, PDC points out that the Badax court specifically held that relief from stay was granted because the case had been filed in an attempt to delay execution on an adverse judgment and also because "there [was] no basis to conclude that a speedy, efficient and feasible reorganization [was] realistic." Id.

In contrast PDC argues that the instant case is more similar in substance to several other cases including Windscheffel v. Montebello Unified School District (In re Windscheffel), 2017 WL 1371294 (9th Cir. BAP Apr. 3, 2017). In Windscheffel, the debtor filed an appeal of an approximately $3 million state court judgment, but "claimed that he was unable to post the required supersedeas bond to stay enforcement of the judgment." Id. at *1. "He filed bankruptcy to avoid posting the bond and to stay [the judgment creditor's] collection efforts." Id. The debtor had, at most, four unsecured creditors (including the judgment creditor). The debtor filed a proposed chapter 11 plan that was "a thinly veiled attempt to avoid the state court's award of punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest because it proposed to pay 49.22 percent of [the judgment creditor's] claim, which was (not coincidentally) the approximate amount of the state court judgment without punitive damages, attorneys' fees, and interest." Id. The debtor later amended his plan to provide that if the judgment were upheld on appeal, he would liquidate his assets and give the proceeds to the judgment creditor. Id. The Ninth Circuit BAP affirmed the bankruptcy court's holding that the "totality of the circumstances" warranted dismissal of the case for cause. Id. at *4.

PDC argues that Debtor has admitted in the authorizing resolution attached to its Petition that this case was filed to circumvent the requirement to post a supersedeas bond: "Since the Company lacks the financial resources to post a bond, the only way to protect the interests of all stakeholders [i.e., the Hall family] is to commence a case under chapter 11" Docket No. 1 at PDF page 5 of 101. PDC also points to the First Day Declaration, and specifically the section entitled "Events Leading to the Bankruptcy" which only mentions the judgment debt, and really nothing else, as the major cause of the bankruptcy filing. Therefore, PDC argues with some persuasion that it is obvious that the only purpose served by filing the Chapter 11 petition was to attempt to avoid the posting of an appeal bond. After all, Debtor's entire business model as amplified in Mr. Hall's testimony is built upon extracting a finite and irreplaceable resource, which might be said to make a reorganization over time inherently less feasible than other businesses.

PDC next argues that because the dispute is solely between PDC and Debtor, for purposes of a finding of bad faith, this case is fundamentally a two-party dispute, which is continuing even now. PDC cites In re Murray, 543 B.R. 484, 494–95 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016), aff'd, 565 B.R. 527 (S.D.N.Y. 2017), aff'd, 900 F.3d 53 (2d Cir. 2018), for the proposition that, "Bankruptcy is a collective remedy, with the original purpose – which continues to this day – to address the needs and concerns of creditors with competing demands to debtors' limited assets" As such, PDC argues, "[a] chapter 11 reorganization case has been filed in bad faith when it is an apparent two-party dispute that can be resolved outside of the Bankruptcy Court's jurisdiction." Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC v. Sholes (In re Oasis at Wild Horse Ranch, LLC), 2011 WL 4502102, at *10 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. Aug. 26, 2011).

PDC argues that there is no need for the "collective remedy" of bankruptcy as articulated above because there are no other creditors with competing demands to Debtor's assets. All other claims against Debtor are de minimis relative to the Judgment, and also appear to be undisputed. Cf. In re

Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 (dismissing chapter 11 case where debtors had "few unsecured creditors" other than judgment creditor); In re Windscheffel, 2017 WL 1371294, at *5 (affirming dismissal of case where claims of other unsecured creditors were "negligible" compared to judgment creditor's claim). In fact, if the judgment debt did not exist, it appears Debtor would have more than sufficient cash on hand to pay any other outstanding debts without difficulty. See First Day Decl. ¶¶ 22 (stating that Debtor has unrestricted cash of approximately $4.2 million) & 28–30 (describing secured car loans, royalty obligations, and accounts payable totaling less than $700,000). PDC reminds the court that it also offers to acquire all legitimate, non-insider claims at par value, leaving no reason that such creditors cannot be paid in full.

Finally, PDC argues, citing In re Chu, 253 B.R. 92, 95 (S.D. Cal. 2000) that for purposes of a finding of bad faith, Debtor's prepetition improper conduct provides additional support for dismissing the case outright or granting relief of stay. Thus, use of a debtor's assets to fund the expenses of its principals is one factor indicative of bad faith. See, e.g., In re Mense, 509 B.R. at 281 n.26. PDC argues that Debtor's alleged tortious prepetition conduct, which precipitated the underlying lawsuit that ultimately led to the judgment (which included punitive damages), should be considered by the court. The court should also consider the allegations contained in the litigation PDC has pending against the Hall family, which alleges that family members essentially used Debtor as a piggy bank to mask income from Debtor.

Though perhaps not always perfect analogues, it appears that PDC's characterization of Ninth Circuit jurisprudence is more in line with the current case than those cases cited by Debtor. To be clear, the court is less concerned with Debtor's heated rhetoric impugning PDC's motivation in pursuing this motion (and PDC's allegations of post-petition misconduct by the Debtor and the Hall family) than it is with PDC's arguments that a reorganization is likely not feasible due to the enormous judgment debt and Debtor's ever diminishing product source. The court is also not impressed with Debtor's assertion that allowing PDC to collect on its judgment would amount necessarily to a business fatality. First, it is far from clear that PDC wants to "kill" the Debtor as it would seem far more logical to continue operations, at least until the judgment is paid. Perhaps not so clear is why the Hall family should get to stay in authority. Debtor's principals, as the trial court found, are responsible for this misfortune as indicated by the addition of punitive damages to the judgment.

The court also disagrees with Debtor's premise that simply because Debtor is currently operating a viable business, a successful reorganization is realistic. Even Debtor's authorities suggesting a Chapter 11 to avoid an appeal bond may serve a legitimate purpose do so largely because a reorganization benefitting an array of creditors with divergent interests seemed possible or even likely. See e.g. Marshall, 721 F.3d at 1048-49 (quoting 298 B.R. at 681), citing Marsch, 36 F. 3d at 828 and In re Boynton, 184 B.R. 580, 581, 583 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1995). But little or no effort is made here to show how this Debtor can possibly confirm a non-consensual plan under these circumstances, where 99+% of the debt is in hostile hands. This must particularly be so where PDC has offered to make all other creditors whole either by buying the claims or by filing a competing plan. How does Debtor get away with claiming an impaired consenting class in those circumstances, even if separate classification maneuvers could succeed? Adding to this problem is Mr. Hall's admission that the assets are a diminishing resource, thus calling into question the feasibility of a long-term payout. Debtor may cite to 11 U.S.C. §1129 (c) which requires the court, when two plans are confirmable, to consider the interests of equity. But this assumes that Debtor's plan could in any event be confirmable, a somewhat dubious proposition. A plan that proposes nothing more than delay while the appeals are resolved should be regarded as "dead on arrival."

But the court is willing to give the Debtor a short but reasonable extension to answer these questions about just how probable a reorganization is or can be despite these obstacles. In this the court is uninterested in platitudes; rather, a point by point, connect the dots proposal to reorganization that could be plausibly crammed down is what is needed. Further, PDC may also amplify the record with a more complete evidentiary showing which might support a charge of prepetition fraud or mismanagement as discussed at §§ 1104(a)(1) (or implicated in 1112) thereby strengthening the argument that there is no legitimate reason for maintaining management. Debtor should not expect an extension of exclusivity, however, which will run out on or about May 14, 2020.

#2.00 Debtors Motion for Order Re: Reopen Chapter 7 Bankruptcy to Prosecute Debtors Claims under Section 524 of the Bankruptcy Code Against Creditor Whose Claim Was Discharged

Docket 20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/29/20:

It is somewhat curious that none of the interested parties filed a response of any kind to this motion. A look at the proof of service shows that notice of this motion was only sent out to a few individuals. It is not clear if any of the parties that would be defendants in Debtor's proposed future adversary proceeding were served with copies of this motion. None of the names on the service list match the names or contact information listed in Educap's proof of claim. Similarly, Gaba Law does not appear to have been served a copy of this motion either. It is unclear whether either or both of those entities, as interested parties are due notice of this motion. However, the former Trustee was included in the service list and did not file a response.

As the reopening of the case is simply a ministerial act without any independent legal significance, perhaps the best course of action is grant the motion as it seems that this court would be in the best position to grant or deny the declaratory relief sought. The issue of whether the BofA debt was discharged could very likely be resolved in a summary proceeding. The discharge order in this case (Dkt. 17) does note that most student loan debts are not included in a discharge, but it is unclear whether this particular debt would fit into some narrow exception, but this is not established by Debtor in this motion (and maybe it does not need to be at this point). The only proof of claim filed in this case was the debt in question. But the court would like an explanation of the lack of service.

#3.00 Application to Employ Shulman Bastian LLP as Special Counsel (Application to Expand the Scope of Employment) retroactive to May 10, 2017

Docket 2731

 VACATED  REASON: OFF CALENDAR - NOTICE OF WITHDRAWL OF APPLICATION OF CHSPTR 7 TRUSTE TO EXPAND
THE SCOPE FILED 4-16-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/10/20:

This is the Trustee's Application to Expand the Scope of Employment of applicant's special litigation counsel, Shulman & Bastian, retroactive to May 10, 2017. The application is opposed by Scott Gladstone, one of the named defendants in the subject adversary proceeding. The court will start by saying this is bad practice, and a surprising and disappointing lapse from that which the court has come to expect given the long experience of both Trustee and the Shulman firm. The question presented is whether it is (or should be) fatal to the application. There is also an issue of conflict of interest.

As the court understands it, the following are the important background facts:

1. The Shulman firm was initially engaged by order entered October 27, 2016 on an hourly basis for the limited purpose of analyzing D&O coverage regarding Mr. Gladstone and potentially other officers and directors. The fees were capped at $25,000 unless discovery were required, in which case the cap would move to $50,000. The application made clear that if an adversary proceeding were to commence, a new and additional application would be required. The $25,000 has already been paid to the Shulman firm on the initial engagement.

2. This investigation was animated at least in part by the filing of adversary proceeding 8:15-ap-01293TA against the estate under the WARN Act. Apparently, the Shulman firm has since advised that if liability is fixed under the WARN Act this would justify moving forward under an adversary proceeding against officers and directors. The current status of the WARN Act proceeding is left unclear in the papers as is the conclusion of the Shulman firm on whether D&O coverage exists. The court does read that the Trustee has engaged new D&O coverage counsel [see motion p. 18, lines1-2]
3. Despite the promise referenced above in the previous employment application that if litigation were undertaken there would be a new application for employment of the Shulman firm specifying new terms, without such an application the Shulman firm filed an adversary proceeding for breach of fiduciary duty and negligence on June 14, 2017 17:ap-01105TA on behalf of the Trustee. Allegedly, this was filed to preserve a statute of limitations about to expire. Since this application for expanded employment is now filed over 30 months later, some analysis is required of the circumstances. While certainly not blowing a statute of limitations is an important consideration, the court is surprised to learn that the Shulman firm has already accrued $30,000 in fees and costs for which it apparently also will seek allowance on a nunc pro tunc basis. To prepare and file a complaint?
4. Another issue arises over whether the Shuman firm has a disqualifying conflict under §327(c).
5. Apparently, the parties have been postponing activity on the subject adversary proceeding by continuing stipulation for these last 30 months. It looks like this was done so that other matters, such as resolution of certain Vendor claims and maybe the WARN Act lawsuit, could be first resolved, but that is left largely unclear in the papers.

A. Conflict of Interest?

Both sides appear to concede that if the Shulman firm has an actual conflict of interest, that is fatal to the employment. See 11 U.S.C. §327(c) Gladstone also argues for a more expansive interpretation of "adverse interest" within the meaning of §327(e) which has been defined to include "any interest or relationship, however slight, that would even faintly color the independence and impartial attitude required by the Code and Bankruptcy Rules." In re Granite Partners, L.P., 219 B.R. 22, 33 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1998). Gladstone argues that 11 U.S.C. §327(a) is intended to hold professionals performing duties for the estate to strict fiduciary standards and is concerned with a professional's divided loyalties and ensuring that professionals employed by the estate have no conflicts of interest with the estate. See In re Envirodyne Indus., Ind., 150 B.R. 1008, 1016 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1993).

The Shulman firm has represented a list of persons, catalogued at ¶18 of Mr. Bastian's Declaration, reportedly in connection with evaluating those persons' rights as participants in the debtor's Deferred Compensation Plan. Mr. Bastian offers his view that it was a limited engagement and in no way could create a conflict in the adversary proceeding. He even proclaims that these creditors (and the Trustee) are prepared to waive any conflict (but nothing concrete is offered). He also argues that this engagement was disclosed in the initial employment application but, since no one objected at that time, it must be of little consequence. The court is not so sure. The big difference here is that litigation has now been initiated, and so now it is not about investigation of D&O coverage but about fixing liability for alleged breaches; Mr. Gladstone alleges that several of these persons were officers and managers of the debtor. So, even if the Trustee does not sue these creditors directly it is alleged that cross complaints against these persons by Mr. Gladstone for indemnity should be expected. This is a cause for concern. Can the Trustee and the court rest assured that the Shulman firm will vigorously prosecute if these former clients are now cross-defendants? Were confidences about these parties' role in management imparted to the Shulman firm?

B. Is nunc pro tunc employment appropriate?

Gladstone is correct that nunc pro tunc employment of professionals starts with analysis of an initial two prongs: (1) whether the applicant has satisfactorily explained its failure to apply for court approval on a timely basis and (2) whether the applicant's services have benefitted the estate. In re Atkins, 69 F. 3d 970,976 (9th Cir. 1995). Only if those two initial conditions are satisfied then the court may consider the additional factors in cases like In re Twinton Properties Partnership, 27 B.R. 817, 819-20 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn.1983) in its discretion. Value was conferred by the filing of the complaint, presumably, but we may have to revisit whether $30,000 is a reasonable fee for filing a complaint. But the first factor, i.e. satisfactory explanation of the delay, is not so clear.

First, as the court has said above, this was an appallingly long delay and so the necessity to adequately explain is consequently higher. But the question is made closer by the Declaration of Nanette Sanders whose firm served as Trustee's general counsel. She cryptically references "acrimonious" discussions with other counsel (Brutkus Gubner?) who apparently also wanted a hand in prosecuting Mr. Gladstone. In the meantime, there was an attempt mentioned at ¶¶ 6-8 to negotiate a broader settlement to include Mr. Gladstone. Most importantly, at ¶ 6, lines 16-20, Ms. Sanders admits the Trustee specifically asked the applicant to "hold off on filing the application to expand the firm's employment so that issues with her other counsel could be resolved." This goes a long way to explaining the delay, but it is less clear that the explanation is "adequate." It would have been helpful if the court could understand the competing concerns motivating the Trustee to hold back on employment in an adversary proceeding where apparently applicant was already $30,000 in, and then why other approaches such as employment but with a follow-on stipulation to moratorium, were not used. Was this just going soft on feelings of counsel or was something more fundamental at work? But to simply delay for 30 months really stretches adequacy of the explanation for nunc pro tunc treatment.

The court will hear argument on these points.

Chapter 7

Tentative for 12/3/19:

This is the Chapter 7 Trustee's motion for order to show cause why W. Scott Griffiths, former president of Debtor, Ultimate Brands Inc., should not be held in contempt of court for failing to comply with court orders. Trustee asserts that Mr. Griffiths has failed to heed a court order from August 29, 2019 requiring Debtor to:

"produce all business records including, but not limited to, financial and operational information and documentation, bank statements, all insurance policies including workers compensation and director's and officer's, and all documents evidencing all postpetition revenues and expenses of the Debtor including any royalty and other income received from franchisees to the Trustee." (Order Granting Emergency Motion (1) To Convert Case To Chapter 7; And (2) To Compel Turn Over of Financial Records and the Filing Of Reports After Conversion; Dkt. #98, p. 2-3)

Debtor was also ordered to:

"timely file all reports required by Rule 1019 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure including a reconciliation and accounting of all receipts and disbursements post-petition on a daily and per store basis and all post-petition expenses incurred and whether they have been paid." Id. at 3.

Trustee asserts that Mr. Griffiths has been unwilling to comply with the court's order and now sees no alternative but coercive measures to secure Mr. Griffith's cooperation.

Under 11 U.S.C. §105(a), a bankruptcy court has the authority to "issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title." This authority includes the power to impose sanctions for civil contempt. See In re Lehtinen, 332 B.R. 404, 412 (9th Cir. BAP 2005). A finding of civil contempt is appropriate where the moving party has demonstrated, "by clear and convincing evidence that the contemnors violated a specific and definite order of the court." In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1190-91 (9th Cir. 2003). But "civil contempt 'should not be resorted to where there is a fair ground of doubt as to the wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct.'" Taggart v. Lorenzen, 139 S. Ct. 1795, 1801-02 (2019) (quoting California Artificial Stone Paving Co. v. Molitor, 113 U.S. 609, 618 (1885)) (establishing the objective fair ground of doubt standard in the context of a discharge order).

Additionally, the bankruptcy court has "inherent power" to sanction "bad faith" or "willful misconduct." Lehtinen, 564 F.3d at 1058-59. But the bankruptcy court's inherent powers "must be exercised with restraint and discretion." Id. at 1059 (quoting Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 44 (1991)). To impose sanctions under its inherent authority, the bankruptcy court "must make an explicit finding of bad faith or willful misconduct." Id. at 1058. Civil sanctions "must either be compensatory or designed to coerce compliance." Id. at 1059 (quoting Knupfer v. Lindblade (In re Dyer), 322 F.3d 1178, 1192 (9th Cir. 2003)); Brace v. Speier (In re Brace), 2019 Bankr. LEXIS 80 at *21 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2019).

Mr. Griffiths does not dispute that he, in his capacity as Debtor's former president, is the representative for Debtor and, as such, assumes the duties of ensuring compliance in the bankruptcy process. Mr. Griffiths also does not dispute that he did not timely comply with the court's August 29 order. However, a few considerations warrant staying the sword, at least for now. First, Mr. Griffiths argues that he has not intentionally ignored any court order. Mr. Griffiths states that over the last couple of months he has been dealing with significant personal issues related to the terminal illness of a close friend. Mr. Griffiths maintains that while dealing with this personal issue, he always made himself available via cell phone while he was away from Orange County. Obviously, Mr. Griffiths has a duty to proactively cooperate and participate in the bankruptcy process rather than simply waiting for someone to contact him. However, the court is sympathetic to Mr. Griffith's explanation for his failure to comply with the order. A terminal illness can make something like a corporate bankruptcy proceeding dim in consequence by comparison. This is likely just enough to provide a fair ground for doubt as to the alleged wrongfulness of Mr. Griffith's conduct pursuant to Taggart.

Second, Mr. Griffiths has engaged his own bankruptcy counsel to help guide him through the process and ensure that he complies with both Trustee and this court's orders going forward.

Third, Mr. Griffiths states that on October 22, 2019, he attended the Debtor's continued section 341(a) hearing where he was questioned by Trustee and his counsel regarding his duties as Debtor's former president. On or about that same day, Mr. Griffiths reportedly provided the following financial and operational documents to Trustee:

- i) Franchise Transfer Agreement;
- ii) Trademark Assignment and Notice or Recordation of Trademark Assignment;
- iii) Various 2018 and 2019 payroll and sales tax documents;
- iv) Debtor's 2015, 2016, and 2017 Federal and State Tax Returns;
- v) Lien notices for facilities where Debtor's equipment and business records are stored.

Mr. Griffiths also reportedly furnished contact information for the Debtor's CPA, Vice-President of Operations, franchise counsel, and other information related to Debtor's operations. Mr. Griffith's declaration appears to evidence a genuine commitment to complying with the requirements of the bankruptcy process. Mr. Griffiths has also taken remedial measures to ensure that he furnishes the information necessary for Trustee to perform his duties.

However, should any further credible allegations of noncompliance or misconduct on Mr. Griffith's part arise during the administration of this case, this court would not withhold the sword a second time, absent an extremely compelling explanation. Therefore, Mr. Griffiths will be given a brief grace period to furnish any and all documents not yet produced to come fully compliant with the court's order. The court will continue this hearing for an appropriate interval so that compliance can be evaluated.

No order will issue at this time pending a further hearing in approximately 60 days.

PER ORDER APPROVING THE STIPULATION TO CONTINUE
PRETRIAL CONFERENCE ENTERED 4/16/2020

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 2/27/20:

This is supposed to be a pre-trial conference. Sadly, it is not that and this is hardly the first time in this series of cases where the court has been sorely frustrated.

As required by the LBRs, the parties were to have met and conferred in good faith to narrow the issues so that trial time could be focused on those items truly in dispute. Local Rule 7016-1 sets forth a very specific timeline and list of duties incumbent on each side. At LBR 7016-1(b)(1)(C) Plaintiff was to have initiated a meet and confer at least 28 days before the date set for the pre-trial conference. According to Defendant's papers, this did not occur 28 days before the originally scheduled pretrial conference of Feb. 6, or indeed at all until February 13 when Plaintiff reportedly filed his "Pretrial Stipulation" in which he claims it was Defendants who "refused to participate in the pretrial stipulation process" necessitating what is actually a unilateral stipulation. Defendant on the next day, February 14, filed his Unilateral Pretrial Stipulation. Defendant does acknowledge at his page 2, line1-2 that Plaintiff sent something over to Defendant on January 28, but it was reportedly "not complete in any respect." As to the original date of the Pretrial Conference of February 6, that was very late. Whether that document was anything close to what was later filed unilaterally on Feb. 13 is not clarified. But what is very clear is that these two unilateral "stipulations" are largely worthless in the main goal of narrowing issues inasmuch as the parties seem to be discussing two entirely different complaints. Defendant focuses on what the former trustee (now deceased) may have known about the existence of a loan undisclosed on the schedules made by Frank to WeCosign, Inc., which loan was reportedly worthless in any case, and about how that knowledge should be imputed to Plaintiff Marshack. But why the trustee's knowledge, imputed or otherwise, should justify an alleged misstatement or omission to list assets under oath, is never quite explained. One presumes Defendant will argue materiality. Plaintiff focuses on the alleged use of another corporation, Tara Pacific, as the repository of funds taken from WeCosign as an alleged fraudulent conveyance and then used by Frank and Tara as a piggy bank between 2010 and 2012 and upon alleged misstatements in the schedules about Tara's and Frank's actual average income. While this sounds like a fraudulent conveyance theory the gist seems to be that Tara and Frank were using ill-gotten gains to live on while denying in respective schedules that they had any income (or assets) thus comprising a false oath. There probably are connections between these different stories, but that is not made at all clear (and it must be made clear). Plaintiff's overlong "stipulation" is written more like a 'cut and paste' brief containing long tables with over 59 footnotes inserted. One presumes this represents a good faith compilation of bank records, but even that is left unclear. But the language used reads purely as advocacy, not an attempt to narrow the disputed facts in a way the other side can sign.

Buried in the Defendant's recitations (at page 4, ¶ 13) is the argument that the case should be dismissed as outside the statute of limitation (or statute of repose in Defendant's terms) described at §727(e)(1). Why this was not raised 50+ months ago when the action was filed by Rule 12(b) motion or otherwise is not explained. What the Defendant expects the court to do with this point now is also not explained.

In sum, this case is still a disorganized mess. This is not the first time the court has voiced its utter frustration with this series of cases. Rather than being ready for trial, we are very much still at the drawing board. The court is not happy about it as this is hardly a young case.

What is the remedy? The court could order sanctions against either side, or maybe both sides, and that would be richly deserved. The court could decide that Plaintiff as the party with the initial duty under the LBRs should suffer the brunt of just consequences by a dismissal, as the ultimate sanction. But however tedious and frustrating this has become the court would rather see these cases decided on their merits (if any) if that is possible. But what the court will not do is to further indulge these parties in disobeying the LBRs and generally continuing to shamle along, never getting anywhere. Therefore, it is ordered:

1. The parties will immediately meet and confer about reducing the two unilateral 'stipulations' into an intelligible, single, useful list of items not in dispute and therefore requiring no further litigation;
2. The resulting stipulation will be concise, user-friendly and focused on the actual legal issues to be tried;
3. The stipulation will contain a concise list of exhibits to be offered at trial identified by number for Plaintiff and letter for Defendant;
4. The parties will attempt in good faith to resolve any evidentiary objections to admission of the exhibits, and if agreement cannot be reached, state concisely the reasons for or against admissibility;
5. The stipulation will contain a list of witnesses to be called by each side, with a very brief synopsis of the expected testimony;

6. All factual matters relevant and truly in dispute will be listed, by short paragraph;
7. All legal issues to be decided will be separately listed, by paragraph;
8. Any threshold issues such as Defendants argument about statute of repose will be separately listed along with a suggested means of resolving the issue; and
9. Both sides will estimate expected length of trial, mindful that the court requires all direct testimony by declaration with the witnesses available at trial for live cross and re-direct.

In sum the parties are to do their jobs. If the court's order is not followed in enthusiastic good faith, and completely with the goal of narrowing the issues, and if the resulting product is not a concise, user-friendly joint pretrial stipulation, the offending party or parties will be subject to severe sanctions which may include monetary awards and/or the striking or either the complaint or answer.

Continue about 60 days to accomplish the above.

Docket 113

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/29/20:

This is a hearing on the court's Order to Show Cause why Debtor, Richard P. Herman ("Debtor") should not be held in Contempt of Court for Violating Court Orders and The Automatic Stay. The OSC was issued on March 18, 2020. Specifically, the OSC requires that Debtor demonstrate:

- (a) Why he should not be held in contempt for
- i. his continuing efforts to exercise control over and interfere with the dismissal of the estate's claims in direct violation of the express provisions of this Court's orders and Judgment as well as the provisions of the automatic stay; and
 - ii. his continuing violation of this Court's permanent injunction by continuing to assert and pursue claims in the state court that this Court has enjoined him from asserting or pursuing.
- (b) Why he should not be subjected to the following sanctions:
- i. Imposition of a coercive fine, payable to the Court, for each day that he remains in contempt; and
 - ii. Compensatory damages incurred by Foothill and the Trustee as a result of Mr. Herman's contemptuous conduct, including the attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and appear at the hearing thereon, and any additional attorneys' fees and costs incurred by Foothill and/or the Trustee to respond and appear with respect to Mr. Herman's pleadings filed in the state court in violation of this Court's orders.

Both Debtor and Foothill Financial, L.P. ("Foothill") have filed timely responses.

Debtor's response is not persuasive. The main problem is that Debtor feigns ignorance or misunderstanding of this court's orders. Debtor appears to be arguing that his action(s) in state court are legitimate considering this court's abstention from adjudicating the remaining claims that were not deemed property of the estate. As argued effectively by Foothill in its response, this court has been clear in its delineation between what causes of action are and are not property of the estate. The court has clearly stated in prior adopted tentative rulings, the "surviving claims" are limited to claims for negligent damage to personal property in an amount not to exceed $3,500, and for his wife to pursue the same cause of action provided that she could establish that the damaged property was her separate property. These very narrow categories can have little relationship with what Debtor seems to persist in filing in the State Court.

As argued by Foothill, Mr. Herman is contending, here and in the State Court, that the "abstained claims" include claims other than the surviving claims identified by this court, which Mr. Herman argues are to be "defined in the State Court." Foothill notes that Debtor's response cites no authority or document that could possibly lead Debtor to such an understanding.

To aggravate the problem, Debtor is a licensed attorney of long standing, and so may be reasonably presumed to be able to understand court orders, and importantly, the consequences for ignoring them. Thus, his reported actions, which he does not deny, can be viewed as deliberate

Debtor's citation to Taggart is inapposite as Debtor does not really attempt to draw any parallels between Taggart and the present case, nor could he.

As Foothill correctly notes, unlike in Taggart, neither Foothill nor the Trustee has sought damages under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k), but rather this proceeding involves the court's authority to enforce its orders by imposing civil contempt remedies. Moreover, although there is more than ample basis for this court to find that Debtor's conduct was (and continues to be) "willful," the Supreme Court in Taggart expressly held that, in the civil contempt context, it is error to apply a subjective standard. Id. at 1804; see also In re Dyer, 322 F.3d 1178, 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) (no finding of bad faith or willful misconduct is required as "the focus is not on the subjective beliefs or intent of the contemnors in complying with the order, but whether in fact their conduct complied with the order at issue") (internal quotations omitted). Instead, the Supreme Court held, "[b]ased on the traditional principles that govern civil contempt, the proper standard is an objective one." Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 1804. Thus, Foothill argues, under Taggart, remedies for civil contempt are appropriate where "there is no objectively reasonable basis for concluding that the [contemnor's] conduct might be lawful under the . . . order." Id. at 1801 (rejecting a "good faith" defense and instead establishing an objective reasonableness standard in the context of contempt proceedings arising out of the violation of a discharge order).

The court has patiently entertained Debtor's numerous motions, many of which have been of dubious merit and suspected of being nothing more than attempts to delay enforcement of Foothill's legal rights. Many have been repetitive and do nothing but rehash the same issues. The court is now left with no option but to use its coercive powers to compel Debtor to abide by its orders. Thus, the question then is, what form should the coercive measures take? Foothill suggests the following measures be imposed:

1. Order Debtor to pay to the court a fine in the amount of $1,000 for each day that he remains in contempt, and direct that, in addition to ceasing and desisting from any further contemptuous behavior, Debtor shall cure his existing contempt forthwith by immediately filing with the State Court a notice: (1) withdrawing his motion for reconsideration seeking to set aside the State Court's dismissal of the Estate Claims as requested by the Trustee, and (2) affirming to the State Court that the only cause of action that the Hermans assert is the remaining single cause of action for negligent damage to personal property, which cause of action is limited to (a) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to his tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants) in an amount not to exceed $3,500"; and (b) Debtor's "claim for alleged negligent damage to her tangible personal property (i.e. the urn and the plants), but only to the extent that Mrs. Herman can establish that the tangible personal property alleged to have been damaged was her sole and separate property as of the commencement of the bankruptcy case on October 17, 2017."

2. That the court compensate Foothill for its attorneys' fees and costs incurred to prepare the Motion and this reply, and to appear at the hearing on the Order to Show Cause, by ordering Debtor to pay to Foothill, by no later than May 15, 2020, the amount of $6,000, which is the minimum amount of fees and costs incurred by Foothill as a result of Mr. Herman's contempt.

The court will forbear from the harsher methods, for now. But Debtor must accept that the matter has been decided, and further gainsaying is not only a waste of resources but an affront to the court and to the other parties, and thus a further contempt. Debtor may purge his contempt by promptly filing a withdrawal of the reconsideration motion on the dismissal of the "Estate claim" and affirming that insofar as the State court action will continue, it will be confined to the limited issues as outlined in paragraph 1 above. The court will not rule upon the other suggested sanctions as outlined in paragraph 2, for now, pending a report to be filed at least 14 days before the

Please be advised that CourtCall has announced reduced fees for attorneys to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through April 30, 2020.

Tentative for 10/31/19:

It would appear that yet more events limiting this case are under discussion as Foothill reports that discussions with the trustee are ongoing. If not everything can be resolved through discussions, what would there be left to try? When, approximately?

This is Plaintiff Foothill Financial, L.P.'s (Plaintiff's) motion for a preliminary injunction. The motion seeks to stay proceedings in a state court action brought by Defendant/Debtor Richard P. Herman and his non-debtor spouse, Sabina C. Herman (collectively, Defendants) against Plaintiff and its individual partners. The motion seeks to stay the state court proceeding until such time as this court makes a determination as to whether: (a) the claims in the pending state court action are property of the debtor's estate; (b) the post-conversion, duly appointed and acting Chapter 7 trustee is the real party in interest with standing to prosecute or otherwise dispose of those claims; and (c) the claims in the pending state court action have been released pursuant to a settlement agreement previously approved by this court. Plaintiff is joined by the Chapter 7 trustee in requesting this preliminary injunction.

For his part, Defendant does not directly contest that Plaintiff can meet its burden of establishing the need for a preliminary injunction. Defendant does not believe his state court claims are property of the bankruptcy estate and believes that this motion is nothing more than a disguised motion to dismiss his state court claims. Defendant suggests that this court abstain from this current action because the state court action is far along. Defendant characterizes Plaintiff as a "predatory lender" and claims that Plaintiff procured the release in the Settlement Agreement by fraud.

I. Preliminary Injunction Standards

"A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish that [1] he is likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4] that an injunction is in the public interest." Winter v. NRDC, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). The Ninth Circuit has held, "a 'likelihood' of success per se is not an absolute requirement." Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1085 (9th Cir. 2014) Instead, "'serious questions going to the merits' and a hardship balance that tips sharply toward the plaintiff can support issuance of an injunction, assuming the other two elements of the Winter test are also met." Id.

A. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

Plaintiff believes that it can show that Debtor and Sabina lack standing to prosecute the state court claims because they are property of the estate and, therefore, belong to the trustee of the estate. Further, even if Debtor and Sabina did have proper standing, Plaintiff asserts that the release clause in the Settlement Agreement, which was approved by this court, would defeat their causes of action.

1. Lack of Standing

Both federal and California law require actions to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 367 ("[e]very action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest"). "Because the bankruptcy trustee controls the bankruptcy estate, [he or she] is the real party in interest in the suits that belong to the estate." Griffin v. Allstate Ins. Co., 920 F. Supp. 127, 130 (C.D. Cal. 1996). "After appointment of a trustee, a Chapter 7 debtor no longer has standing to pursue a cause of action which existed at the time the Chapter 7 petition was filed. Only the trustee, as representative of the estate, has the authority to prosecute and/or settle such causes of action." Harris v. St. Louis University, 114 B.R. 647, 648 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1990) (internal quotations and alternations omitted).

Further, a Chapter 7 debtor may not prosecute on his or her own a cause of action belonging to the estate unless the claim has been abandoned by the trustee. Bostanian v. Liberty Savings Bank, 52 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1081 (1997) ("absent abandonment of the claim by the trustee, a debtor out of possession has no standing to prosecute a cause of action which has passed to the bankruptcy estate").

Plaintiff persuasively argues that the six causes of action making up the pending state court action, assuming Defendants retained or acquired any rights after signing the Settlement Agreement, are property of the bankruptcy estate, and thus, passed to the trustee when the case was converted from Chapter 11 to Chapter 7. Further, Plaintiffs also persuasively argue that the causes of action in the state court action relating to damaged personal property such as plants, antique furniture, artwork, etc., are also property of the bankruptcy estate. To the extent that it is argued by Defendants that these items of personal property were the non-debtor spouse's separate property, no evidence supporting this argument is proffered that would rebut the community property presumption. In short, Plaintiff has persuasively argued that it has at least a fair likelihood of prevailing on the argument that the claims set forth in Defendants' Second Amended Complaint in state court are property of the bankruptcy estate, which belong to the Chapter 7 trustee.

2. The Release Clause in the Settlement Agreement

Plaintiff persuasively argues that, even if the Defendants had proper standing to pursue their claims in state court, the claims would still likely be defeated by the general release and covenant not to sue contained in the Settlement Agreement approved by this court. Indeed, the language in the Settlement Agreement cited by Plaintiff does appear to waive any potential claims Defendants may have had or might still have against Plaintiff.

Plaintiff cites Gregory v. Hamilton, 77 Cal. App. 3d 213, (1978) for the proposition that under California law, specific performance is an appropriate remedy for enforcing a release. There, the court noted, "[i]t is indisputable that money damages could not provide the relief which respondent seeks, i.e., release from liability. Therefore, the breach complained of must be remedied in equity by compelling performance." Id. at 219. However, there is also Cal. Civ. Code §526(a)(6), which states:

"(a) An injunction may be granted in the following cases:

(6) Where the restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings."

Plaintiff also persuasively argues that the Settlement Agreement, signed by Debtor post-petition in his capacity as debtor-in-possession, is binding on the Chapter 7 trustee. "[I]t is axiomatic that the Trustee is bound by the acts of the debtor-in-possession[.]" Armstrong v. Norwest Bank, Minneapolis, N.A., 964 F.2d 797, 801 (8th Cir. 1992). Thus, it appears likely that a court would find the unambiguous language in the Settlement Agreement both binding and enforceable.

Defendants do not challenge the language of the Settlement Agreement. However, Defendants do argue that the Settlement Agreement is invalid because Plaintiff allegedly procured the Settlement through fraud. In support of this contention, Defendants cite Cal. Civ. Code §1668, which states:

"All contracts which have for their object, directly or indirectly, to exempt any one from responsibility for his own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law."

The problem with Defendants' contention is that it is critically lacking in evidentiary support and assumes a finding of fraud as the precondition. Further, Defendants' argument does not address the standing issue raised by Plaintiff. Thus, Plaintiff has shown a sufficient likelihood of success on the merits of its arguments regarding both Defendants' lack of standing and the enforceability of the Settlement Agreement.

B. Irreparable Harm

Plaintiff argues that if the injunctive relief does not issue, Plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury. For example, Plaintiff argues that if the state action can proceed, there is a significant risk of inconsistent rulings based on multiple actions in different courts. Plaintiff persuasively argues that this is particularly problematic in this case because Debtor is taking inconsistent positions in the state court action and before this court. For example, in the state court action, Debtor and his wife are claiming that valuable personal property such as antiques, and artwork were damaged by Plaintiff as a result of their eviction of Debtor and his wife. However, Plaintiff points out that none of these valuables were listed in Debtor's schedules in the bankruptcy case.

Further, Plaintiff argues that Defendants are attempting to gain a favorable judgment in their fraud/misrepresentation claims regarding the Settlement Agreement in order to chill Plaintiffs participation in the bankruptcy case. Plaintiff argues that the bankruptcy court is the only forum in which it can pursue claims against the Defendants, making the inequity plain.

Finally, if Defendants are permitted to continue prosecuting the state court action, the estate will continue to be depleted of resources, thereby injuring the interests of Plaintiff and other creditors. Plaintiff will also have to continue expending resources to defend against Defendants' claims. Plaintiff argues that it has no adequate remedy at law because neither the Defendants nor the Estate have enough resources to compensate Plaintiff for the continuing harm it would suffer if the state court action proceeds. In support of this argument, Plaintiff cites Philip Morris USA Inc., v. Scott, 561 U.S. 1301, 1304 (2010) for the proposition that "[i]f expenditures cannot be recouped, the resulting loss may be irreparable."

Of the arguments put forth by Plaintiffs regarding irreparable harm, the danger of inconsistent rulings leading to the necessity of disentangling those rulings, which would almost certainly further deplete the finite resources of the bankruptcy estate, is the most compelling and persuasive argument. This element is not addressed by Defendants. Therefore, there is a risk of irreparable injury to Plaintiff if the state court action is allowed to proceed.

C. Balance of Hardships

Plaintiff again persuasively argues that this factor weighs in favor of granting the injunction because: (1) the state court action should not have been filed in the first place without permission of this court; (2) Defendants claims in the state court action are baseless because the provisions the Settlement Agreement is valid and enforceable; (3) Plaintiffs are being forced to spend substantial sums of money mounting a defense to the state court action, which is especially harmful to Plaintiffs given that Defendants' standing to pursue those claims is suspect at best; (4) there is a risk of inconsistent judgments across courts in different jurisdictions; (5) the prosecution of the state court actions will further deplete the bankruptcy estate's limited resources.

Defendants do not address this point. However, there is not an obvious legitimate hardship to Defendants if the state court action is temporarily stayed. Therefore, this consideration weighs in Plaintiff's favor as well.

D. The Public Interest

Plaintiff argues that issuing the injunction is supported by public policy principles that are fundamental to the bankruptcy system. For example, Plaintiff cites In re Richmond Paramedical Servs., Inc., 94 B.R. 881, 885 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1988) for the general proposition that a paramount public interest is "protecting the estate of debtors for the benefit of creditors." This includes a public interest in maintaining the status quo by not dissipating potential assets of the debtor's estate. In re OGA Charters, LLC, 554 B.R. 415, 432 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) In addition, as noted in In re Chiron Equities, 552 B.R. 674, 701, (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2016) "[i]t is in the public interest for bankruptcy courts to enforce their own orders and to ensure that the integrity of the bankruptcy system is upheld." Plaintiff argues, and the court agrees, that issuing a preliminary injunction to stay the state court proceedings until the ambiguities identified by Plaintiff are resolved, serves these public interests. Thus, this factor also weighs in favor of granting a preliminary injunction.

II. Abstention

Defendants argue that this court should exercise its discretion to abstain from deciding in this matter. Defendants appears to be arguing that since the state court action is nearly to the jury trial stage (i.e., much further along than the proceedings in this court?), this court should abstain, pending resolution in the state court action. However, considering the issues discussed above, abstention does not seem appropriate. Both Plaintiff and the Chapter 7 trustee are requesting that this court issue a preliminary injunction so as to allow a determination on these threshold issues. Moreover, considering the dubious way the state court matter was initiated (by a DIP without leave of court) there are transcendent questions that must be sorted out by the bankruptcy court before the lawsuit can or should continue.

the pending litigation in favor of a proceeding in Washington State Court. Oddly, the motion is not brought for permissive abstention under 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c) but rather under the court's "inherent power to regulate their dockets and should use it to stay litigation pending resolution of another case or arbitration proceeding where it will dispose of or narrow the issues to be resolved in that litigation." In re Barney's Inc., 206 B.R. 336, 343-44 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1997). As near as the court can determine, the standards are largely the same.

It is well established that a federal court has "broad discretion to stay proceedings as an incident to its power to control its own docket." Clinton v. Jones, 520 U.S. 681, 706-707, 117 S. Ct. 1636 (1997); see also Landis v. North American Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254-255, 57 S. Ct. 163, 166 (1936) ("[T]he power to stay proceedings is incidental to the power inherent in every court to control the disposition of the causes on its docket with economy of time and effort for itself, for counsel, and for litigants. How this can best be done calls for the exercise of judgment, which must weigh competing interests and maintain an even balance."); O'Dean v. Tropicana Cruises International, Inc., 1999 WL 335381, *4 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (federal court suspended action pending disposition of arbitration proceeding); Evergreen Marine Corp. v. Welgrow International, Inc., 954 F.Supp. 101, 103-105 (S.D.N.Y.1997) (authorized stay in federal proceedings pending disposition of related foreign action).

The Ninth Circuit has enumerated factors a bankruptcy court should weigh when it considers whether to permissively abstain from hearing a matter before it. See Christiansen v. Tucson Estates, Inc. (In re Tucson Estates, Inc.), 912 F.2d 1162, 1167 (9th Cir. 1990). Those factors include: (1) the effect or lack thereof on the efficient administration of the estate if a Court recommends abstention,(2) the extent to which state law issues predominate over bankruptcy issues, (3) the difficulty or unsettled nature of the applicable law, (4) the presence of a related proceeding commenced in state court or other non-bankruptcy court, (5) the jurisdictional basis, if any, other than 28 U.S.C. § 1334,(6) the degree of relatedness or remoteness of the proceeding to the main bankruptcy case, (7) the substance rather than form of an asserted core proceeding, (8) the feasibility of severing state law claims from core bankruptcy matters to allow judgments to be entered in state court with enforcement left to the bankruptcy court, (9) the burden of the bankruptcy court's docket, (10) the likelihood that the commencement of the proceeding in bankruptcy court involves forum shopping by one of the parties, (11) the existence of a right to a jury trial, and (12) the presence in the proceeding of non-debtor parties.

Plaintiff cites a less exhaustive five factor analysis for suspending or staying a nondischargeability action as follows: (1) The burden of the proceeding on the defendant; (2)The interest of the plaintiff in expeditiously pursuing the action and prejudice resulting from any delay;(3) The convenience of the court in the management of its cases and the efficient use of judicial resources; (4) The interests of non-parties to the litigation; and (5) The interest of the public in the pending civil and criminal litigation. In re Government Securities Corp., 81 B.R. 692, 694 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1987). See also, Southwest Marine, Inc. v. Triple A Mach. Shop, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 805, 809 (N.D. Cal. 1989).

Although the parties do not agree on which set of factors is correct, the parties do agree that not all of the above factors are applicable nor are they of equal weight. Plaintiff's most persuasive argument for abstention from this court, and one that Defendant does not dispute, is that Plaintiff and Defendant are already heavily engaged in an action in Washington state court. According to Plaintiff, the allegations in the state court action mirror those of the allegations made in this adversary proceeding. Defendant argues that this is a false assertion as there is no mention of anything in the Washington state court action that mirror Plaintiff's §727 claims, although Defendant does concede that Plaintiff's §523 claims are mirrored by the allegations in the Washington state court action. The Washington state court action was filed over a year ago and is reportedly set for trial in April of 2020. Consequently, it seems feasible for the Washington matter to proceed to trial and judgment on the issues underlying the §523(a) claims (and certain of the §727 theories involving pre-petition behavior). Provided that Plaintiff is careful in obtaining detailed and clear findings, Plaintiff can then resolve this adversary proceeding under collateral estoppel theories by Rule 56 motion. To the extent that Defendant is correct in his assertion that Plaintiff's §727 claims are not mirrored in the state court action, Plaintiff asserts that he will simply drop those claims as they will likely be unnecessary after the state court rules on the underlying claims. Plaintiff has already obtained relief from stay. Considering the resources that the parties have already expended in Washington, including pre-trial motions, discovery, etc., the parties should likely finish what they started up there. This approach would conserve resources here and would not likely result in duplication of effort.

Concerning the administrative law claims and SEC claims pending in Washington State against Defendant, Plaintiff argues that resolution of these claims will help narrow the issues even further or could even provide additional probative details, which Plaintiff argues is a proper justification for abstention. Defendant argues that these other cases should not be considered for purposes of abstention because they do not directly involve Plaintiff, but this argument is less compelling because Defendant does not attempt to argue that such litigation would not serve to narrow the issues or provide useful additional background. Defendants other arguments against abstention, including the recent withdrawal of Defendant's counsel and a vague argument regarding the purported untimeliness of this motion, do not really move the needle in Defendant's favor. Related to the purported untimeliness of this motion is Defendant's argument that this motion is premature because if Defendant's dismissal motion is granted, then this motion becomes essentially moot. Plaintiff notes that Defendant cites no authority for the proposition that dismissal of the complaint would also end the Washington state court action. Defendant's argument also ignores that complaints after Rule 12 motions can be (and very likely would be) amended if they are found to be defective.

In sum, Plaintiff has made a persuasive case for staying proceedings in this court and allowing the parties to litigate what are largely matters of state law in Washington state court, especially since the parties are on the doorstep of trial. Thus, as Plaintiff urges, the court should use its power under §105(a) to temporarily abstain or stay this adversary proceeding pending resolution in Washington state court. Plaintiff is cautioned to obtain clear and dispositive findings on the operative issues such that collateral estoppel can govern in subsequent Rule 56 motion.

Grant abstention. This adversary proceeding is stayed until Plaintiff seeks to return for a Rule 56 motion. The court will schedule a status conference approximately 180 days out for evaluation."

Chapter 7

This is the continued hearing on the Defendant's Rule 12(b) Motion to Dismiss. This analysis is divided into two sections. The first section deals with the subject matter jurisdiction issue. The second deals with whether claims for relief have been plausibly stated, sufficient to survive the motion.

I. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

At the hearing on January 16, 2020, because there was only sparse authority on the subject, the court requested supplemental briefing regarding whether this court had subject matter jurisdiction over this adversary proceeding in view of the parties' various connections to the cannabis industry (in violation of the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 ("CSA")). In its tentative ruling, the court summarized and excerpted portions of relevant case law and provided its own initial ideas on this narrow issue. That tentative ruling is incorporated herein by reference. Both sides have filed supplemental briefs on the narrow issue identified by the court.

Unfortunately, the supplemental briefing has not provided a definitive answer. Instead, Defendant has, again, cited the case of Northbay Wellness Group, Inc. v. Beyries, 2011 WL 5975445 (Bankr.N.D.Cal. 2011), where the bankruptcy court dismissed the debtor's case based on the equitable doctrine of in pari delicto. However, as this court noted in its earlier tentative ruling, the Ninth Circuit expressly overruled the bankruptcy court's application of the unclean hands doctrine on grounds that the bankruptcy court failed to properly balance the parties' respective wrongdoings.

In the interim, the court's own research has located case law within the Ninth Circuit that may be useful. In Mann v. Gullickson, 2016 WL 6473215 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 2, 2016), the court had to decide whether a contract related to the medical marijuana industry in California was enforceable. The court undertook a comprehensive analysis of the enforceability of contracts containing illegal subject matter. The court noted the specific prohibitions placed on marijuana by the CSA, but also noted that enforcement of contracts containing illegal subject matter resists hard and fast rules. Indeed, the Mann court observed that "[s]ometimes the forfeiture resulting from unenforceability is disproportionately harsh considering the nature of the illegality." Id. at *6. The court, citing the Ninth Circuit Case of Bassidji v. Goe, 413 F.3d 928 (9th Cir. 2005), devised a test of sorts for determining when contracts regarding illegal subject matter may nevertheless be enforceable:

"The Ninth Circuit analyzed federal case law and California precedents... to investigate '[n]uanced approaches to the illegal contract defense, taking into account such considerations as the avoidance of windfalls or forfeitures, deterrence of illegal conduct, and relative moral culpability,' and those considerations 'remain viable in federal court and represent no departure from [federal precedent] . . . [so] long as the relief ordered does not mandate illegal conduct.' Id. at 937-38." Mann, 2016 WL 6473215 at *7.

The Mann court also noted that "[t]he federal government's concern over the CSA's medical marijuana prohibition has waned in recent years, and the underlying policy purporting to support this prohibition has been undermined." Id. at *9. Noting that several states have legalized marijuana in one form or another, the Mann court held:

Given the federal government's wavering policy on medical marijuana in states that regulate this substance, and California's expressed policy interest in allowing qualified patients to obtain medical marijuana, the purported illegality here is not one the Court finds to mandate non-enforcement of the parties' contract. Id.

Here, the plaintiff is alleging breach of contract (among other related causes of action) against Defendant in connection with a marijuana concern. The court has already opined on the gross unfairness that would result if Defendant were allowed to use the bankruptcy system as a shield from his alleged misdeeds. The court also notes that, in the event Plaintiff prevails against Defendant in this adversary proceeding, this court would not be forcing either party to engage in illegal conduct. This was a major point raised in Mann, i.e. the issuance of a remedy would not necessarily entail a resort to unlawful conduct. Not only does this approach properly involve the balancing of relative wrongdoings as required by the Circuit in Northbay, it also harmonizes with the various cases where federal courts refused to become involved at all such as In re Arenas, 514 B.R. 887 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2012), because to do so would necessarily require someone to accommodate ongoing breach of the CSA, such as by selling contraband as assets of the estate.

Defendant argues that accepting jurisdiction would require the court to intervene proactively and thus improperly in what otherwise would have been Defendant's carte blanche ride to discharge. Implicit in this is the argument that the court should leave the wrongdoers where it finds them and only unusual action by the court offensive to the CSA would interrupt Defendant's ride to discharge. But this argument is unpersuasive because it could as easily be looked at another way, i.e. the court would be issuing a change in the status quo by granting the discharge, which is not a right but a privilege, and this action is to determine whether, balancing acts on both sides, that can or should be done consistent with justice. The court is thus persuaded that it does have subject matter jurisdiction, or at least that there is no compelling reason on these facts to decide otherwise.

II. Are Claims for Relief Adequately Stated?

Plaintiff's complaint alleges claims for relief under 11 U.S.C. §727(a) (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), (7) and (12), as well as under 11 U.S.C. §523(a)(2), (4), and (6) (10 causes of action in total). By this motion, Defendant seeks dismissal of all causes of action.

A. FRCP 12(b)(6) Standards

When considering a motion under FRCP 12(b)(6), a court takes all the allegations of material fact as true and construes them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). A complaint should not be dismissed unless a plaintiff could prove no set of facts in support of his claim that would entitle him to relief. Id. Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor in the federal courts because of the basic precept that the primary objective of the law is to obtain a determination of the merits of a claim. Rennie & Laughlin, Inc. v. Chrysler Corporation, 242 F.2d 208, 213 (9th Cir. 1957). "While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 554-556 (2007) A complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) citing Twombly. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. The plausibility standard asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. The tenet that a court must accept as true all factual allegations is not applicable to legal conclusions. Id.

B. Alleged Factual Background

Defendant-Debtor Guy S. Griffithe is an individual who, at all times pertinent hereto, owed a fiduciary duty to Plaintiff Steven Bagot, among others, who "invested" in his companies. Defendant-Debtor allegedly made fraudulent verbal and written statements to solicit "investments" into SMRB, LLC, a Washington State licensed marijuana producer/processor business, and was a signatory to allegedly fraudulent documents underlying the non-bankruptcy litigation in Skagit County Superior Court Case No. 18-2-00544-29 and King County Superior Court Case No. 19-2-00772-9 SEA. Plaintiff provided no less than $650,000.00 to the Defendant through his alter-ego entity (Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc. ("RTSI")) for the benefit of SMRB, LLC. When Plaintiff sued to recover his "investment" and damages for Defendant-Debtor's alleged wrongful conduct, the Defendant-Debtor filed the relevant bankruptcy action as well as this motion to dismiss.

On January 9, 2019, Mr. Bagot filed a complaint with the King County Superior Court Case No. 19-2-00772-9 SEA alleging causes of action against Defendant-Debtor for fraud, negligent misrepresentation, civil conspiracy, breach of contract, unjust enrichment, conversion, promissory estoppel, breach of the fiduciary duties, breach of the duties of good faith and fair dealing, violations of Washington's LLC disclosure requirements and violations of securities laws. The trial is set for April 6, 2020. The complaint is accompanied by Ex. "A", a report by the Washington State Liquor and Cannabis Board ("WSLCB report"), which provides details of Defendant's alleged misconduct and is heavily referenced in both the complaint and the opposition to this motion. Below the court analyzes how each of the alleged claims for relief fit with this background.

B. §727(a)(2)(A)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor, with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor or an officer of the estate charged with custody of property under this title, has transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed, or has permitted to be transferred, removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed— property of the debtor, within one year before the date of the filing of the petition[.]" Plaintiff has sufficiently pled this cause of action in the complaint. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges, with the aid of Exhibit A, that Defendant intentionally transferred valuable property belonging to him which reduced the assets available to the creditors and which was made with fraudulent intent. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has transferred (to his alter ego entities, Robert Russell, entities owned by Russell, and other entities not known to Plaintiff), removed, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed his property, including the funds provided to him by Mr. Bagot, the oil processing machine, $1,000,000 million in product from Emerald City Cultivation, and other assets Defendant claims to have utilized (a portion of) these funds to purchase, assets provided to Defendant by other "investors," as well as Defendant's interests in Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc., Green Acres Pharms, LLC, and SMRB, LLC, among others, and the distributions he receives from those Companies' assets, in addition to other assets which have been concealed, destroyed, transferred without Plaintiff's knowledge. Plaintiff also asserts that this conduct occurred within 1-year of the petition date (June 26, 2019) as Plaintiff initiated legal proceedings against Defendant in late spring of 2018.

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor has concealed, destroyed, mutilated, falsified, or failed to keep or preserve any recorded information, including books, documents, records, and papers, from which the debtor's financial condition or business transactions might be ascertained, unless such act or failure to act was justified under all of the circumstances of the case" It is apparent that Plaintiff has adequately made this allegation in the complaint. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges in several places in the complaint the absence of adequate record keeping by Defendant as noted throughout, specifically in regard to Plaintiff's initial investment of $450,000. Plaintiff also alleges the absence of adequate records related to the purchase of the oil-processing machine and the products purchased from Emerald City Cultivation among other assets. Plaintiff also asserts that he has been attempting to obtain such documentation through discovery without success. Thus, it appears that Plaintiff has adequately alleged that Defendant failed to keep relevant records, and there does not appear to be justification for this failure, taking Plaintiff's allegations as true.

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor knowingly and fraudulently, in or in connection with the case—

- (A) made a false oath or account;
- (B) presented or used a false claim;
- (C) gave, offered, received, or attempted to obtain money, property, or advantage, or a promise of money, property, or advantage, for acting or forbearing to act; or
- (D) withheld from an officer of the estate entitled to possession under this title, any recorded information, including books, documents, records, and papers, relating to the debtor's property or financial affairs[.]"

This statute requires that Plaintiff allege: (1) [the debtor] made a statement under oath; (2) the statement was false; (3) [the debtor] knew the statement was false; (4) [the debtor] made the statement with fraudulent intent; and (5) the statement related materially to the bankruptcy case. Matter of Beaubouef, 966 F.2d 174, 178 (5th Cir 1992). False oaths sufficient to justify the denial of discharge include: (1) a false statement or omission in the debtor's schedules or (2) a false statement by the debtor at the examination during the course of the proceedings. Id. at 178; In re Wills, 243 B.R. 58, 62 (B.A.P. 9th Cir.1999). Plaintiff's complaint, including the exhibits, does allege that Defendant made several intentional false statements relating to the bankruptcy case. For example, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has failed to report or disclose several assets, including the hundreds of thousands of dollars he took from Plaintiff and never provided to SMRB, LLC. Plaintiff argues, citing In re Hoblitzell, 223 B.R. 211, 215-16 (Bankr.E.D. Cal. 1998), for the proposition that a false statement or omission is material even if it does not cause direct financial prejudice to creditors. Therefore, although not presented as clearly as it could be, it appears that Plaintiff has sufficiently alleged that Defendant made false statements under oath by failing to disclose several assets known to Defendant in his bankruptcy schedules with an intent to deceive creditors and officers of the court. These specific allegations are likely enough to satisfy the heightened pleading requirements for purposes of Rule 9(b).

This section provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the debtor has failed to explain satisfactorily, before determination of denial of discharge under this paragraph, any loss of assets or deficiency of assets to meet the debtor's liabilities[.]" Here, Plaintiff's complaint, including the additional detail in the Exhibit, has sufficiently alleged the disappearance of identifiable assets no longer available to creditors, including the funds provided to him by Plaintiff, the (funds available for) purchase and transfer of the oil processing machine, the $1,000,000 million (per month) in product purchased from Emerald City Cultivation, and other assets Defendant claims to have utilized a portion of these funds to purchase, assets provided to Defendant by other "investors," as well as Defendant's interests in Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc., Green Acres Pharms, LLC, and SMRB, LLC, among others, and the distributions he receives from those Companies' assets, in addition to other assets which have been concealed, destroyed, transferred without Plaintiff's knowledge.

Chapter 7

Defendant does not attempt to explain the loss of these assets, but only points out that the WSLCB report makes no such findings as detailed above. The court notes that the report is lengthy, and the complaint does not make reference to any specific page or paragraph numbers where such information can be easily found. However, in sum, Plaintiff's complaint, which incorporates the WSLCB by reference, does appear to sufficiently allege a cause of action under §727(a)(5), but Plaintiff's complaint could benefit from specific pin cites.

F. §727(a)(6)

The statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless—the debtor has refused, in the case—

- (A) to obey any lawful order of the court, other than an order to respond to a material question or to testify;
- (B) on the ground of privilege against self-incrimination, to respond to a material question approved by the court or to testify, after the debtor has been granted immunity with respect to the matter concerning which such privilege was invoked; or
- (C) on a ground other than the properly invoked privilege against self-incrimination, to respond to a material question approved by the court or to testify[.]"

Plaintiff argues that it is undisputed that as stated in the Complaint, in the King County Superior Court litigation, the Honorable Judge McHale entered an Order ordering Defendant-Debtor provide complete responses and documents in response to Mr. Bagot's discovery requests, which were due no later than June 25, 2019, Defendant allegedly failed to comply with this Order. Plaintiff also argues that Defendant did not object on grounds of privilege against self-incrimination or any other ground, Defendant simply refused to comply. Plaintiff asserts that this failure to cooperate resulted in sanctions being imposed, which Defendant apparently has also refused to pay. There is a question whether "the court" as referenced in the statute means the bankruptcy court only, or might it mean another court such as the Kings County Court. But this point is not developed in the papers. Thus, Plaintiff has likely pled sufficient facts to survive the motion to dismiss.

G. §727(a)(7)

This statute provides: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless—the debtor has committed any act specified in paragraph (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of this subsection, on or within one year before the date of the filing of the petition, or during the case, in connection with another case, under this title or under the Bankruptcy Act, concerning an insider[.]"

As discussed above, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant committed the acts in (2), (3), and (6) within 1 year of the petition date. Also as discussed above, Plaintiff's complaint alleges various acts of misconduct during the pendency of the bankruptcy case, including knowingly providing false information in his bankruptcy schedules. Again, the question arises whether the malfeasance in another case must be one under Title 11. But the point is not developed so the pleading seems sufficient.

H. §727(a)(12)

This section states: "The court shall grant the debtor a discharge, unless— the court after notice and a hearing held not more than 10 days before the date of the entry of the order granting the discharge finds that there is reasonable cause to believe that—

(A) section 522(q)(1) may be applicable to the debtor; and

(B) there is pending any proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(A) or liable for a debt of the kind described in section 522(q)(1)(B)."

As Plaintiff argues, the complaint details the fraudulent sale of unregistered securities by Defendant, an unregistered security broker/dealer, in Defendant's alter ego entities including Renewable Technologies Solutions, Inc. and SMRB, LLC (d.b.a. Green Acres Pharms) (and possibly Green Acres Pharms, LLC, from whom the "Distribution" was paid), as well as his improper conduct while acting in a fiduciary capacity with respect to these dealings and entities. Therefore, Plaintiff has sufficiently pled the first element of this claim. With respect to the second element, there must be pending a proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony or liable for a debt of the kind described in §522(q)(1); Plaintiff's complaint provides sufficient details his pending proceeding against Defendant for, among other things, violating State securities laws and relevant disclosure requirements. Thus, this cause of action is likely sufficient to survive the motion.

I. §523(a)(2)(A)

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for money, property, services, or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit, to the extent obtained by— false pretenses, a false representation, or actual fraud, other than a statement respecting the debtor's or an insider's financial condition[.]" The debtor's intent to deceive may be inferred by circumstantial evidence under the 'totality of the circumstances' test. In re Eashai, 87 F.3d 1082, 1087 (9th. Cir. 1996). Under the relevant test, the Court "may infer the existence of the debtor's intent not to pay if the facts and circumstances of a particular case present a picture of deceptive conduct by the debtor." Id.

As discussed above, the complaint provides ample detail of Defendant's alleged fraudulent misconduct including, allegedly making false statements about his companies' financial situations, matters of ownership, etc. in connection with soliciting investment from Plaintiff. Plaintiff points out that the WSLCB report made several of these findings, all of which are incorporated into the complaint as an exhibit. In sum, there appears to be sufficiently detailed allegations, taken as true, to satisfy the pleading requirements, including those of Rule 9b.

J. §523(a)(4)

This section provides: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, embezzlement, or larceny[.]"

For purposes of § 523(a)(4), embezzlement is defined as "the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom such property has been entrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come." Moore v. United States, 160 U.S. 268, 269, 16 S. Ct. 294, 295, (1885). Further, as explained in Murray v. Woodman (In re Woodman), 451 B.R. 31 (Bankr. D.Idaho), "an intent to deprive the rightful owner of funds only temporarily and not permanently [does] not negate the element of [fraudulent] intent." Id. at 43. "To prevail under § 523(a)(4) for larceny, a creditor must prove that "the debtor has wrongfully and with fraudulent intent taken property from its owner. Larceny differs from embezzlement in the fact that the original taking of property was unlawful, and without the consent of the injured person." King v. Lough (In re Lough), 422 B.R. 727, 735-36 (Bankr. D. Id. 2010). (internal citations omitted)

Chapter 7

The complaint appears to allege both embezzlement and larceny while Defendant was acting in a fiduciary capacity. Taking Plaintiff's allegations as true, Defendant obtained money from Plaintiff which he was required to – on two different occasions – provide directly to SMRB, LLC (d.b.a. Green Acres Pharms). Plaintiff alleges that Defendant not only obtained these funds unlawfully from Plaintiff, Defendant either never provided Plaintiff's funds to SMRB or improperly removed them and has failed to provide any accounting for these funds or explain their disappearance, without the consent of Plaintiff. Again, taking Plaintiff's allegations as true, Plaintiff does appear to have pled sufficient facts to survive the motion.

K. §523(a)(6)

This section states: "A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1192 [1] 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(b) of this title does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt— for willful and malicious injury by the debtor to another entity or to the property of another entity[.]" Section 523(a)(6)'s willful injury requirement is met when the debtor has a subjective motive to inflict injury or when the debtor believes that injury is substantially certain to result from his own conduct. Carillo v. Su (In re Su), 290 F.3d 1140, 1142 (9th Cir. 2002). Plaintiff's complaint is replete with allegations of knowing misconduct, including fraud, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, unjust enrichment, etc. Specifically, Plaintiff alleges that false statements in certain written materials induced Plaintiff to invest Defendant's ventures. Taken as true, the allegations in the complaint are sufficient to satisfy the willfulness portion of the statute.

Courts treat the malicious injury requirement of § 523(a)(6) as separate from the willful requirement. According to In re Jercich 238 F.3d 1202, 1209 (9th Cir. 2001): "A 'malicious' injury involves '(1) a wrongful act, (2) done intentionally, (3) which necessarily causes injury, and (4) is done without just cause or excuse.'" ; *Carillo v. 2002). Plaintiff alleges conduct that, if true, would satisfy the maliciousness portion of the statute. For example, Plaintiff's complaint alleges that Defendant knowingly made material misstatements or omissions the written material provided to Plaintiff, which ultimately allowed Defendant to obtain the hundreds of thousands of dollars from Plaintiff. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant knew that the money acquired from Plaintiff had not gone for the benefit of SMRB or to purchase an oil processing machine, and also knew that significant damage to plaintiff would certainly result if the money could not be returned to Plaintiff. The WSLCB report also concludes on page 9 that it appears that the investors taken in by Defendant (Plaintiff among them) were the victims of a fraudulent "Ponzi Scheme." For these reasons, Plaintiff's complaint has sufficiently stated claim under section 523(a)(6).

L. Attorney's Fees Under §523(d)

This section states: "If a creditor requests a determination of dischargeability of a consumer debt under subsection (a)(2) of this section, and such debt is discharged, the court shall grant judgment in favor of the debtor for the costs of, and a reasonable attorney's fee for, the proceeding if the court finds that the position of the creditor was not substantially justified, except that the court shall not award such costs and fees if special circumstances would make the award unjust." As should be obvious, none of Defendant's debts have been discharged in connection with the section 523(a)(2) claim as we are still at the pleading stages. Thus, this request for attorney's fees by Defendant is premature and is thus denied.

III. Conclusion

The court does not see a failure of subject matter jurisdiction. The court is persuaded Plaintiff's complaint, though it could be made clearer in places by pin citation to the attached WSLCB report and in a few places raise

Tentative for 1/16/20:

This is Defendant's Rule 12(b) motion to dismiss these three adversary proceedings. Although there are five dismissal motions on calendar in various Griffithe-related adversary proceedings, these three will be addressed in a single memorandum inasmuch as the issues are identical and, unlike the other two, turn on a question of jurisdiction.

Debtor argues for the first time in his Reply that the Controlled Substances Act of 1970 and several cases addressing the intersection of cannabis and bankruptcy, stand for the general proposition that bankruptcy courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims relating to cannabis. Subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, but this does not obviate the overarching concern for due process and the court notes that the Plaintiffs have had no effective opportunity to address this fundamental issue. Moreover, the court would value their input on the question as none of the cases cited by Defendant deal directly with the issue before the court and the court is not persuaded that the cited authorities can be read quite so broadly as Defendant argues. The issue here can be framed as whether the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction in an adversary proceeding where the Plaintiffs seek to have Defendant/Debtor's debts, incurred through alleged malfeasance, adjudicated as nondischargeable despite the underlying cannabis business venture being simultaneously legal under state law and illegal under federal law.

Even though cannabis sale has now been legal in several states for several years (while the federal law remains against) the only case cited by Defendant that comes close to addressing this precise issue is Northbay Wellness Group v. Beyries, 789 F.3d 956 (9th Cir. 2015). There, an attorney stole money from his client, a legal medical marijuana dispensary, and subsequently filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Id. at 958 The dispensary instituted an adversary proceeding seeking to except its claim from discharge, but the bankruptcy court dismissed the adversary complaint under the "unclean hands" doctrine. Id. at 959 The Ninth Circuit reversed and remanded, explaining that the bankruptcy court failed to balance the parties' respective wrongdoings as required under that doctrine:

"The Supreme Court has emphasized, however, that the doctrine of unclean hands 'does not mean that courts must always permit a defendant wrongdoer to retain the profits of his wrongdoing merely because the plaintiff himself is possibly guilty of transgressing the law.' [Johnson v. Yellow Cab [Transit Co.], 321 U.S. [383, 387, 64 S. Ct. 622, 88 L. Ed. 814 (1944)]. Rather, determining whether the doctrine of unclean hands precludes relief requires balancing the alleged wrongdoing of the plaintiff against that of the defendant, and 'weigh[ing] the substance of the right asserted by [the] plaintiff against the transgression which, it is contended, serves to foreclose that right.' Republic Molding Corp. v. B.W. Photo Utils., 319 F.2d 347, 350 (9th Cir. 1963). In addition, the 'clean hands doctrine should not be strictly enforced when to do so would frustrate a substantial public interest.' EEOC v. Recruit U.S.A., Inc., 939 F.2d 746, 753 (9th Cir. 1991)." Id. at 960.

The Ninth Circuit in Northbay did not analyze the issue of whether the bankruptcy court had subject matter jurisdiction over the exception to discharge action. Neither the cases cited in the briefs nor any that the court has been able to find analyze and/or expressly settle the jurisdiction issue. The closest possible exception that the court has found occurred near the end of the bankruptcy court's original opinion in Northbay where the court borrowed the reasoning in a dissenting opinion written by Judge Noonan in another case. The bankruptcy court stated in pertinent part:

"It is very unseemly for the court to be asked to grant relief to a plaintiff which claims it lost its cash from illegal drug sales by shoving it into envelopes and then delivering it to its attorney, uncounted and undocumented. This is hardly the behavior of a legitimate business. While the conduct of the parties may have been legal under state law, in the eyes of a federal court they were conspiring to sell contraband. They were in pari delicto, and the funds plaintiffs gave to Beyries were the actual proceeds of illegal drug sales. This is not the sort of case which is supposed to darken the doors of a federal court. See Adler v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 219 F.3d 869, 882 (9th Cir. 2000) (Noonan, Circuit Judge, dissenting)." In Re Beyries, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4710, *1, *5 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. Nov. 28, 2011)

In another case, Olson v. Van Meter (In re Olson), 2018 WL 989263 *1 (9th Cir. BAP Feb. 5, 2018), the debtor's estate included commercial property that was partially being rented out to a cannabis dispensary. The issue before the court was whether such an estate could confirm a plan under chapter 13. The bankruptcy court dismissed the entire case sua sponte on grounds that the debtor had been accepting post-petition rent payments from a cannabis dispensary, and therefore, the debtor was involved in ongoing criminal activity that precluded her from seeking bankruptcy relief. On appeal, the BAP vacated the dismissal on grounds that the bankruptcy court had not made specific findings in connection with the dismissal, and remanded the case for such findings. In a concurring opinion, Judge Tighe stated, "[a]lthough debtors connected to marijuana distribution cannot expect to violate federal law in their bankruptcy case, the presence of marijuana near the case should not cause mandatory dismissal." Id. at *7.

The court takes the above language to imply that in the canvassing of available case law, and contrary to Debtor's suggestion, the Olson court could find no blanket rule that categorically obliterates the bankruptcy court's subject matter jurisdiction simply because cannabis may be involved on some level.

The authorities cited above raise several concerns. The court is uncertain about whether it has subject matter jurisdiction and requires further briefing from the parties; this should be the case in any event given the late raising of the issue. The court is also concerned that if, as Debtor argues, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the dischargeability issue, then Debtor is effectively able to hide behind the bankruptcy process and frustrate the creditors he may have defrauded. Worse still, it is at least conceivable that Debtor could even get his debts discharged despite his own purported wrongful conduct creating those debts. On its face, this result seems to offend the fundamental notions of equity that the bankruptcy court is charged with upholding. Stated differently, perhaps the more applicable maxims of equity here are not only unclean hands but: 'one that seeks equity must do equity', or 'equity will not allow a statute to be used as a cloak for fraud.'

Plaintiffs argue that the relief afforded by bankruptcy law is intended to give a fresh start to the honest but unfortunate Debtor. Plaintiffs argue, therefore, that it would be contrary to bankruptcy policy to allow Debtor to discharge his debts to the extent they were incurred by fraud, misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duty, or some other unsavory means. The court may well agree. Thus, the doctrine of in pari delicto seems inapposite in this specific context. In the court's view, gross inequity would result if Debtor could defeat Plaintiffs' complaints based on this court's purported lack of subject matter jurisdiction caused by the underlying illicit activity of both Plaintiffs and Debtor, but still avail himself of the protections and benefits of the Bankruptcy Code.

Perhaps the better questions are, should only part of the court's jurisdiction be jeopardized and if so, what part? Consistent with the above, maybe the proper role of equity is to deny discharge entirely on grounds of unclean hands allowing neither side of the illegal transactions to benefit? The problem here is that no adequate briefing has been received on this central question for which authority is apparently sparse.

Continue about 45 days to allow further briefing.

#22.00 Motion to Reconsider and Vacate Judgment Entered in Removed Action

Docket 10

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/29/20:

See #21. The motion will be granted. The Trustee has identified what may be a conflict between Remares and the estate. What is missing in the respondent's argument is the acknowledgement that as of the moment of the petition the Trustee became the real party in interest of the right of action. The relief of stay in no way changed that conclusion (indeed it was reinforced rather specifically). So, it was no longer the creditor's call to make over the wording of the judgment. The Trustee already has the standing now, as he had then, without need of order, to seek an amendment of the judgment's wording. Since the case was removed, it is this court (one supposes) where such a motion can be heard. In issuing the relief of stay the court expected that counsel would closely coordinate with the Trustee. Indeed, the court recalls being rather clear on the point. By entering the judgment with this particular wording, without consulting with the Trustee, issues about attachment and seasoning of the creditor's prior lien have arisen. 11 U.S.C. Â§551 is sufficiently arcane such that the Superior Court should not be expected to maneuver through the intricacies, or to understand that counsel for Remares has no standing to address the issue as the aggrieved party is the estate.

The court issued its tentative 2/26 pointing out various deficiencies in the disclosure statement, as drafter. Although various events have occurred in the case, such as a sale of real property, the disclosure statement has not changed. Why haven't we seen an amended disclosure statement?

No tentative.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 2/26/20:

This is the debtor's motion to approve as adequate its revised Disclosure Statement to accompany its First Amended Plan. The Disclosure Statement is still not adequate for at least the following reasons:

1. Sale of the real property in San Juan Capistrano, the premises for debtor's business, is promised no later than February 28, 2020. But just how this is to be accomplished without a §363(f) order is not explained and it is obvious that a plan providing for same is not yet possible. This needs better explanation and/or a more realistic timetable.

2. The plan still needs a better discussion as to how the equity interests are being treated. Presumably this belongs in Class 4 and there should be there a discussion about the absolute priority rule and the contribution of $20,000 in new value. Further, some discussion as to how/why that is the proper number is necessary given the requirements of "market testing" found in Bank of America NT & SA v. 203 N. La Salle Street Partnership 526 U.S. 434 (1999) would be in order.
3. The description about discharge at 21:1-3 should be corrected in view of § 1141(d)(3) as suggested by the United States Trustee.
4. As indicated in the opposition of Seacoast Commerce Bank a better job could be done explaining how this plan is feasible if, as Seacoast argues, only about $13,000 is available on a net basis for monthly debt service after costs of operation. Normally, feasibility is a confirmation issue, but this would be the opportunity to explain in simple terms how this works.
5. Some discussion about the alleged $150,000 loan to an insider needs to be discussed and if it is not to be pursued, why.
6. A consistent explanation as to whether Northeast Bank is truly a fully secured creditor at $93,118 including post-petition assets is necessary, in order to evaluate the best interest of creditors test, as Seacoast argues.
7. Some discussion about the pending litigation against Seacoast is also necessary. Is this to be pursued post confirmation? If so, how is the litigation to be funded and what goal is sought? If a judgment were achieved what becomes of the proceeds?

Chapter 11

Tentative for 1/8/20:

This is debtor's motion for approval of disclosure statement as required under §1125(a)(1) as containing "adequate information." An adequacy finding is opposed in oppositions filed by both the UST and Seacoast Commerce Bank. The oppositions are both well taken, and the points raised need not be restated at elaborate length here. The court is primarily concerned about the following fundamental deficiencies:

1. The plan clearly violates the absolute priority rule found at §1129(b)(2)(B) (ii). The plan proposes only 1% to unsecured creditors in installments yet the principals retain governance and stock ownership. Seacoast, which itself may be the largest unsecured creditor, plans to vote against. No new value is mentioned. So, unless something else is true this plan is patently unconfirmable, and distribution of a disclosure statement on such a plan is a waste of time and resources. While the court does not usually prejudge confirmation issues, this one is too fundamental to ignore, and so either amendment or at least explanation is required;
2. The proposed treatment of Seacoast 's secured claim is also very problematic. Debtor proposes either to cramdown a payment over 30 years at 5% or a "consensual sale" of the underlying real estate collateral. But the timing and conditions of the proposed sale are unstated, not made subject to conditions and are, thus, illusory. Can the debtor sell whenever it feels like it? Whenever in future it thinks the market has appreciated enough, even if that takes years, or never? The alternative treatment is also a non-starter. An effective 100% loan to value claim is far riskier than a more conventional loan usually made as a percentage of value. Consequently, the increased risk element must be accommodated (paid for), and anything less is a legally impermissible imposition of the risk upon the lender. See In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010). Although this is usually a confirmation issue, 5% is far too low for a commercial loan under any reasonable economic analysis, i.e. prime rate is 4.75% and must be "built up" from there even under a Till analysis. North Valley Mall is not the only analysis relied upon by courts, but this court happens to believe it is the most appropriate in a business, real estate context. Therefore, the court will not approve dissemination of disclosure upon such a patently unconfirmable plan.

3. Feasibility is very questionable. Again, normally this is judged at confirmation, but the court does not ignore that the MORS show a generally declining cash position, and this is while there has been a 9-month moratorium in debt payments. Had even reduced payments been made the debtor would be by now out of money. What, if anything, is expected to change this outlook?

DEBTOR

Docket 65

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/13/20:

This is the motion for relief of stay of a mobile home park, Huntington Shorecliff, L.P. The debtor has a month to month lease over a rental space within the park. The immediate genesis of the motion was a rent default occurring in December, 2019. Much ink is spent in arguments about whether the 3-day notice was properly served and about the LBR requirement that the debtor also be served with motions for relief of stay. None of that much matters since this court does not pass upon the efficacy of a 3-day notice preliminary to an action in unlawful detainer under state law, and the LBR argument is not persuasive since it is evident counsel has had sufficient opportunity to file both opposition and reply, so lack of notice is at best theoretical. From the papers one learns that this leasehold was not mentioned at all in the confirmed plan, which is surprising given the argument that this lease is now somehow "necessary to an effective reorganization" within the meaning of Â§362(d)(2). But the key point is largely ignored; this is a month to month lease which renders it of small value in any event since it cannot be effectively assumed and assigned even if it "rode through" the bankruptcy proceeding as debtor argues. Also, the court presumes that the plan was implicit that all continuing obligations on such things as rent would be kept current, as due when due. This court takes a very dim view of post confirmation defaults, even as to debts not specifically articulated in the plan. It is not persuasive to argue, as debtor apparently does here, that it would be convenient for the debtor to have time to sell the mobilome which rests upon the disputed site so as to extract maximum value for the personal property enjoying the protection of the bankruptcy court. Had that been something within the province of this court it should have been included within the plan. It cannot be engrafted upon it after the fact, as debtor now suggests. This is a dispute that belongs with the unlawful detainer state court.

NATIONSTAR MORTGAGE LLC
Vs.
DEBTOR

Docket 68

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/13/20:

As stated before, debtor has not really made an argument based upon law but only upon a general appeal to "equity" that she should be given more time to attempt a sale of the house in order to capture some of the equity therein. This would be a more compelling argument had such a sale been part of the plan. Instead, it appears that debtor has defaulted on the plan by not making mortgage payments timely. On the other hand, movant needs to channel its motion on a specific theory for relief: either §§362(d)(1) "cause", or (d)(2) "no equity and not necessary to a reorganization." Apparently (d)(2) does not apply because there is, in fact, "equity" in the property. The question is whether post-petition defaults and failure to come current constitutes "cause" within the meaning of the statute. The answer is "yes" but the court is given some latitude in either terminating or modifying the stay, as justice requires. Presumably there are other creditors with an interest in recovering some of that equity, so the court must be concerned with that issue. In order to fashion a remedy that considers all issues the court will modify the stay to be lifted July 1, 2020 unless that deadline is extended for cause upon the motion of a Chapter 7 trustee.

Docket 26

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/13/20:

This is a close call given the rushed nature of the motion, leaving little to no time for oppositions. The court wonders why the Trustee did not approach the problem by simply avoiding via stipulation the lien as unperfected under strong arm powers of section 544, then preserve the lien for the estate under section 551, and sell the right, title, and interest of the estate in both lien and property, and let the buyer sort it out by foreclosing. One supposes the answer has something to do with landlord demands and the relatively low dollar values involved.

Instead Trustee argues that the motion should be granted under 11 U.S.C. §363(f)(1), (f)(2), and/or (f)(5). Particularly noteworthy is Trustee's interpretation of §363(f)(5), which finds some purchase among courts in this circuit, but the view is still controversial. For example, in Clear Channel Outdoor, Inc. v. Knupfer (In re PW, LLC), 391 B.R. 25 (BAP 9th Cir. 2008), the court narrowly interpreted §363(f)(5) as not requiring payment of junior liens in full because interpreting it otherwise would mirror §363(f)(3), making paragraph (5) superfluous. Id. at 43. Instead, the Clear Channel court noted that, "[u]nder the view that full payment is not necessary, it is not the amount of the payment that is at issue, but whether a 'mechanism exists to address extinguishing the lien or interest without paying such interest in full.' Other courts have required a showing of the basis that could be used to compel acceptance of less than full monetary satisfaction. Id. The court then explained, "[a]lthough this view leads to a relatively small role for paragraph (5), we are not effectively writing it out of the Code. Paragraph (5) remains one of five different justifications for selling free and clear of interests, and its scope need not be expansive or all-encompassing. So long as its breadth complements the other four paragraphs consistent with congressional intent, without overlap, our narrow view is justified." Id.

Other courts in this circuit have also endorsed this view. For example, in In re Jolan, 403 B.R. 866 (Bankr. W.D. Wash. 2009), the court explained, "as in Clear Channel, subsection (f)(5) is the only subsection of § 363 which might here permit the trustee's proposed auction if the proceeds do not cover the debts secured by the collateral sold. But there are legal and equitable proceedings in Washington in which a junior lienholder could be compelled to accept a money satisfaction[.]" Id. at 869. The court explained further, "[b]ecause there are in Washington legal and equitable proceedings by which lienholders may be compelled to accept money satisfactions, § 363(f)(5) here permits a sale free and clear of liens, with the liens attaching to the proceeds, notwithstanding that those proceeds may be insufficient to pay all liens. Id. at 870.

Here, Trustee presumably argues that under Clear Channel and Jolan, if the Buyer foreclosed on its interest outside of bankruptcy, every junior interest in the Assets would be extinguished under California law, notwithstanding that the sale price may or may not pay such extinguished interests in full, or at all. In such a foreclosure, liens junior to the Buyer would be forced to accept the distribution allowed by the resulting foreclosure sale price, in full satisfaction of its released lien. This, Trustee presumably argues, would satisfy §363(f)(5) consistent with the interpretation in Clear Channel and Jolan.

The reality is that this case is one of relatively few dollars and, if Trustee's motion is granted, would likely bring in something modest that could be distributed to the estate's creditors. But the court cannot simply be a rubber stamp, especially when motions are brought on a rush basis. There are limits to what the court can countenance on a "quick and dirty" basis, particularly as in this case, with only limited analysis. In sum, the court would like a better explanation from Trustee, and much may depend on whether there is opposition.

#13.00 Debtor's Emergency Motion For An Order Authorizing Interim Use Of Cash Collateral Pursuant To 11 USC Section 363 (cont'd from 1-22-20)

Docket 7

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/13/20:

This matter is on calendar because permitted use of cash collateral is set to expire as of the hearing per previous order. Nothing further has been filed as of 5/8. Status? The March MOR shows slightly positive cash flow, so, absent objection, the logical order would seem to be continued authority on same terms and conditions for about 60 days.

#15.00 Motion For An Order Authorizing Debtor Assume Certain Executory Contracts And Unexpired Leases Pursuant to Bankruptcy Code Section 365(a)

Docket 168

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/13/20:

This is the Debtor's motion to assume various operating agreements and oil and gas leases under 11 U.S.C. §365. It has drawn only one opposition. That opposition concerns the three leases, with amendments, known collectively as the "Dowling Lease" regarding certain formerly operating oil fields in Anaheim. The opposition was filed by the assignees of the beneficial interest under the Dowling Lease, The Politski Survivors' Trust ("PST").

PST takes issue with the motion for the following reasons:

- (1) It is argued Debtor's assumption of the Dowling Lease does not satisfy the 'Business Judgment Standard' as Debtor is continuing to lose money at an alarming rate as evidenced by Debtor's MORs;
- (2) Debtor has failed to satisfy the requirements for assumption of the Dowling Lease. Debtor has not paid PST its regular payments due under the lease in full or in a timely manner for several months (including owed royalty payments). PST issued a Notice of Default to Debtor April 8, 2020. Debtor has not cured the deficiencies nor demonstrated a future ability to cure the defaults and remain current on its obligations to PST.
- (3) PST argues that the absence of oil production revenue justifies PST's request that, as a condition to assumption, the Debtor must, at a minimum, secure an appropriate surety bond to cover all projected cap and plug costs for each of the four Dowling Wells;

(4) The Dowling Lease remains in default as no royalty payments have been made by Debtor to PST from "Proceeds of all Oil Produced" in the most recent five months. Royalties have not been paid on oil produced on or after January 1, 2020; and

(5) The Dowling Leases remains in default since oil is not being produced in "Paying Quantities". As the court understands this last argument, absence of any production is itself a default under the language of the leases, leading one supposes to termination.

It appears the genesis of these problems was the lawsuit brought by Placentia Development Company ("PDC") prepetition resulting in a judgment that Debtor is unable to pay. To assist collection PDC sued Phillips 66 and PBF Holdings (collectively "customers") prepetition to intercept the revenue otherwise due to the Debtor from customers for extraction of oil on various leases, including the Dowling Lease. These customers have apparently not paid the Debtor for any extracted oil since January 2020, and it was not clear from the papers whether production on the Dowling Wells also ceased since that date. Although Debtor has reportedly paid some amounts on the Dowling Lease post-petition from its other resources, it admittedly has not paid what PST has expected as its normal monthly payments. The customers cancelled their contracts with Debtor as of April 1.

First, a clarification on terms. While the interests in question here are commonly referred to as "oil and gas leases", they could more properly be referred to in legal terminology as "profits à prendre" which simply means the right to enter and take products upon another's land. From what the court can see, this should not change the analysis since they are still executory contracts within the meaning of §365.

On the question of whether the assumption proposed here meets the "business judgment standard" the court does not see the question to be as nearly obvious as argued. Yes, the production to date has been disastrous, with the twin blows of a collapse in the oil market and a worldwide pandemic. The Debtor has lost a lot of money, apparently. No one, including Debtor, apparently, argues that this can be allowed to last much longer. But the court observes that Debtor is apparently in earnest discussions with PDC, and persons far more savvy in oil and gas issues than this court (or PST, for that matter) seem to believe that keeping this portfolio of interests intact, makes strategic sense. Maybe a turnaround is foreseen. Maybe an intact portfolio is a prerequisite to any deal with PDC. We are almost to the point now that any administrative claim that might saddle the estate on account of a post-petition default on an assumed Dowling Lease would yield only pennies on what is likely to be on an enormous steaming hole of a case. Stated differently, it is so bad at this point that maybe hoping the Debtor can make a deal with PDC is the only play that makes any sense. The court is not persuaded that it can, on this record, contradict the Debtor's business judgment.

A somewhat closer question is whether the Dowling Lease is in serious default for the four-month failure to tender lease payments. The court is persuaded that Debtor's reading of the language of ¶ 1 of the Dowling Lease is at least plausible, i.e. that all that is owed is a percentage of revenue actually received from oil production royalties. Since Phillips 66 and PBF Holdings have not paid anything since January, a failure to remit to Debtor a percentage of zero is maybe not a default. A trickier argument still is that continuous production of "paying quantities" of oil is (at least implicitly) the sine qua non of the Dowling Lease under ¶ 8. Here, PST cites various California authorities that have held that in determining the meaning of this and similar language the court examines the ability to show a profit over an extended period, net of operating expenses. See e.g. Transport Oil Co. v. Exeter Oil Co., 84 Cal. App.2d 616 (1948); Lough v. Coal Oil, Inc., 217 Cal. App. 3d 1518 (1990). Notably, as the Lough court observed,

"Paying quantities' is defined to be quantities of oil or gas, the proceeds of which are sufficient to exceed ongoing operating costs. The initial drilling and equipping costs (i.e., 'sunk' costs) are excluded from this calculation. There is no hard-and-fast rule for determining over what period the paying quantities analysis must be made. Obviously, the period cannot be unreasonably short (i.e., a few days or even weeks) or else a lessor could claim that a lease had terminated when in fact it was merely shut-in for repairs or maintenance. On the other hand, using an excessively long period of many years could keep a lease 'alive' long after it had become uneconomic and was no longer producing in 'paying quantities' by using high initial and very short-lived production rates to claim an artificial 'profit' years later through averaging." Id. at 1528.

Therefore, as the Lough court noted, we cannot define "paying quantities" based on too short a period, particularly, as here, where the lease language even contemplates possible suspension based on unforeseen circumstances.

Furthermore, much of the edge is taken off PST's argument in this case because of the language of the Dowling Lease at the end of ¶8 which provides: "Drilling and producing operations hereunder may also be suspended while the price offered generally to producers in the same vicinity from said land is seventy five cents or less per barrel at the well, or when there is no available market for the same at the well." If the court is correctly informed, the price offered for oil recently may be lower than even this threshold. Debtor also points to ¶13 which provides for suspension on account of, among other things "conditions beyond the control of the Lessee, whether similar to the matters or conditions herein specifically enumerated or not." The turmoil encountered in the first and second quarters of this year might well qualify under this provision as well. In any event, as Debtor aptly argues, the authorities cited by PST involved considerably longer periods of unprofitable operations than the five months at issue here.

PST argues for the condition of posting a bond or otherwise providing for capping and plugging costs. But the court sees no provision in the Dowling Lease requiring this.

But the court sees the main obstacle to this motion in the language of section 365(b)(1)(C) which requires not only cure of defaults [and for reasons stated these may be nonexistent or minor] but "adequate assurance of future performance under such contract or lease." Not much appears in the papers as to how all of this is going to work out long term. Is the Debtor going to recommence new operations on the Dowling Wells? When and with what capital? Indeed, this case requires immediate and threshold explanation as to how any of this works and why this court should allow any more months of accumulating losses. Until a clearer picture emerges on this front, the court does not see how it can find adequate assurance of future performance as to the Dowling Lease.

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 3/10/20:

The timing in this case is muddled because two summons were issued and the deadline to respond to the reissued summons is after the hearing on the status conference in this case. It might be best to continue this status conference to March 17, 2020 at 10:00 a.m. so that the court can evaluate any response that is filed. If no response is received, the order for relief should be entered.

The objecting creditor holds a $280,000 secured claim ($397,000 total) that is 100% loan to value. 2% is manifestly too low to yield present value of the claim as required by section 1325(a)(5)(B)(II). Whether a Till prime plus formula is used, or a blended rate as discussed in In re North Valley Mall, 432 B.R. 825 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2010), the rate must be at least 4% plus.

(cont'd from 4-15-20)

Docket 77

 VACATED  REASON: OFF CALENDAR - NOTICE OF WITHDRAWAL FILED 5/18/2020

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 4/15/20:

The court is unclear why the Trustee believes $34,300 is currently due under the plan. Is this because we have reached (or nearly so) the 5 year mark with this sum needed to complete a percentage? If that is true, how can this deficiency be cured by modification? Further, what's the argument for a last-minute modification? How can it be argued that debtors failed to see this end of the road coming? See #4. No tentative.

(cont'd from 4-15-20)

 VACATED  REASON: OFF CALENDAR - NOTICE OF WITHDRAWAL OF MOTION TO MODIFY PLAN FILED 5-19-20

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/20/20:

Status on the missing returns? What if anything has changed since last hearing? Does the debtor believe that recent amendments give it more runway on the plan term question?

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 4/15/20:

The debtors propose to modify their plan from 100% to 83%. First, any modification is out of the question without having given the Trustee all of the returns he requests, by the time of the hearing. Second, a better explanation is needed as to why the debtors would wait until the figurative "end of the road" to argue for a downward adjustment on the percentage. Certainly, it cannot be argued that no one saw this coming? If there was some unforeseeable calamity, what was it and when did it become known? Absent this, why the wait? While the percentage actually paid is laudable that cannot by itself justify such a departure from the plan. Otherwise confirmed plans are mere suggestions which everyone will then adjust as the 58th month approaches to conform to what was actually done. No tentative.

U.S. BANK NATIONAL ASSOCIATION Vs.
DEBTOR

Docket 51

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/27/20:

Continue for about 60 days. The debtor's principal defense is that there is equity and the property is necessary to a reorganization within the meaning of §362(d) (2). While it is true that debtor's burden is to prove that the property is necessary and that something is in prospect, it is movant's burden to prove no equity, and both elements are required. That is a very close question on this record. There is clearly not enough equity to provide "adequate protection" within the meaning of § 362(d)(1). Even if debtor's appraisal could be believed there might be, at best, only a razor thin slice above liens and costs of sale. So, the only solution is for debtor to confirm a plan and quickly. The court is willing to give a brief opportunity to do this, but if by the continued hearing there is not a plausible, confirmable plan on file, there will be no more time given. A word of caution: this does not mean some document that says "plan" on it, it means something that has been thought through and looks like it can actually be confirmed, and that will require supporting evidence. COVID-19 is a tragedy but in the end sympathy does not substitute for hard evidence, as that term does not appear in the statute.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

#3.00 Motion by United States Trustee to Convert Case to Chapter 7 or Dismiss Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. Section 1112(b)
(cont'd from 4-08-20 per order entered 3-25-20)

Docket 31

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/27/20:

See #2. Debtor is coming to the end with this case. Catching up on missing MORS was the absolute requirement as without that there would be no more rope (and future lapses will not be tolerated). The debtor continues to assert the prospect of a turnaround but the hard facts are that we have not seen it yet and this is no longer a young case. As the UST argues, there is a substantial gap between proven income to date and what would be required on a monthly basis to service the mortgage, let alone anything else. We will continue about 60 days and in that time several things must happen: 1. a plan and disclosure statement must be on file; 2. that plan must be plausible and confirmable; 3. the disclosure statement must be accurate and complete, something approvable in the first pass (and not as a last minute bid to get more time); and 4. supporting evidence must be on file explaining how any of this actually works. Continued blaming of COVID-19 may be accurate but will not be availing, largely because this case was in trouble well before that became an issue. Continue approximately 60 days to coincide with #2.

Please note: In light of concerns about COVID-19/Coronavirus and attempts to implement physical distancing, and pursuant to GO 20-02, telephonic appearances are mandatory on all matters. Telephonic appearances may be arranged with CourtCall by calling (866) 582-6878.

Please be advised that CourtCall has announced reduced fees for attorneys to use CourtCall and free access for parties who do not have an attorney – pro se or self-represented litigants through April 30, 2020.

The Parties are reminded to have all relevant filings/information easily accessible during the hearing.

Tentative for 1/22/20:

The court will determine whether, based on timely MORs, there is enough regular income to support a plan. Failure to demonstrate this ability, or any further delinquency on filing of MORs, will likely result in granting the motion.

Continue for 60-75 days per Trustee's suggestion.

Chapter 13

Tentative for 3/17/20:

This is the motion for relief of stay brought by JP Morgan Chase Bank. It is alternatively characterized as a request for adequate protection. The debtors are almost 4 years into their five-year plan. But for reasons never explained in the papers, the debtors have not paid property taxes on the subject property commonly known as 16317 Filbert Street, Fountain Valley, CA. for either 2018 or 2019. With penalties and fees according to the bank this is now a $5942.16 obligation and climbing owed to the County. Both sides at various points characterize the question solely as one of "adequate protection." From this premise debtors argue that the bank can't complain since it is in first position securing about $245,000 on a property worth, according to debtor, $650,000. So, as the argument goes, the debtors could continue not paying their property taxes for several years to come and still not threaten, at least mathematically, to put the bank into an unsecured position even though by statute all liens are junior to County taxes. So, one supposes, under this argument the bank must simply lump it?

The court suggests many of the premises behind these arguments are wrong or wrong-headed. First, 11 U.S.C. §362(d)(1) provides relief of stay "for cause including lack of adequate protection..." In other words, "cause" can be based on things other than a narrow calculation of whether the complaining creditor is adequately protected. "Cause" can also go the behavior of the debtors including issues of bad faith. The court presumes that there is a covenant in the trust deed requiring the debtors to keep current on property taxes. The court also presumes that the confirmed plan required that debtors perform ongoing obligations under the deed of trust without modification. So, what we have in effect are both breaches of those covenants and post-petition plan defaults. That is consequently very much a "cause" question, and the possibly lackadaisical tone emanating from debtors on this point is very concerning. It should be well-known by now that this court takes a very dim view of post-confirmation plan defaults. Moreover, relief of stay on account of a Chapter 13 plan default may just the sort of situation for which the deliberately broad and flexible "for cause" provision was designed. See In re Carona, 254 B.R. 364, 367 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2000).

Of course, the court would prefer debtors complete their plan and keep their home. A large step in that direction, however, will have to be an attitude adjustment and recognition that remedial steps must be taken immediately as that goal is in some jeopardy. The court will hear argument on the points raised.

Docket 1

Tentative Ruling:

Tentative for 5/27/20:

The court's order to mediate was not a suggestion. As the court recollects, the amount in dispute is now down to $5800, is that right? If so, it is madness not to settle this. Since the parties seem not to be cooperating (neither side's position impresses), if a mediator is not agreed within ten days then each side to select a mediator, and those two will choose a single third person to serve as actual mediator for them from the panel. Mediation may occur remotely, but is to be completed within 90 days. The conference will be continued but if a mediation does not occur as ordered within the time allowed you may expect sanctions which could include striking of pleadings. Continue approximately 120 days.

Tentative for 4/8/20:

If the court understands correctly, it is Plaintiff's wish to remain in the Bankruptcy Court and proceed to default and default prove-up. There appears to be no reason not to do this since, unlike contested matters where the court is deferential to sister courts, especially when the proceedings are well-advanced and other non-debtor parties are actively involved, none of those issues pertain here. But there is a large standing issue. Such matters as these belong not to
